A SURE CURE (Feb. 15).—Mr. Stout, fat, is lazy. He refuses to exert himself. Mrs. Stout, thin, directly opposite, and cannot understand his lazy proclivities. Their servant girl, Lizzie, is also lazy. Mrs. Stout procures a bottle of medicine which is called "Vitalo," supposed to make people active. Lizzie is entertaining her beau, the cop, and refuses to move. Mrs. Stout pours some of the "Vitalo" into her milk. Lizzie and the cop drink and immediately become victims of speed. They dance about in whirlwind fashion, until the cop becomes exhausted and leaves. Mrs. Stout, seeing the effect, decides to try it on her husband. She puts a dose in his coffee, and immediately the lazy man becomes a whirlwind of activity. He invites his wife to go for an auto ride. This they do, and in the middle of the road the auto breaks down. Stout, full of the strange "Vitalo," gets out and pulls the auto all the way home. Coming into the house, he joins Lizzie in generally scattering things about, much to Mrs. Stout's discomfiture. Mrs. Stout, after viewing the wreckage, decides that she would rather have her husband lazy.

"THE STAMPEDE" OF FATE

A Wonderful 3-Reel Western Photo Drama

A FEATURE—

With a big punch from start to finish—Full of good action and heart interest—3,000 head of wild, stampeding Western cattle going over a buckboard and crushing it, leaving two people buried in the ruin—Wonderful scene of the escape of a sheep herder—Duel in the river—Plunging horses — Automobile dashing into river—A real runaway of Western horses, plunging away with human freight from oncoming stampede — Great scene of rough house in a Western dance hall—real cowboys—real bronchos — real action and a real feature.

Get busy! If you want a live one and a money getter, wire, write or call for

STATE RIGHTS

Quick action gets you best territory.

PRINTING—Sensational 1 Sheets, 3 Sheets, 6 Sheets, Heralds, Etc., Etc.

GORMAN FILM MFG. CO. Inc.

JACK GORMAN, General Manager

1402 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Telephone 909 Greeley

BISON.

UNJUSTLY ACCUSED (2 parts—Feb. 14).—John Bonner, cattleman, received his son, Tom, back from the East. Tom confides to his younger brother, Frank, that he is heavily involved in debt. They agree that it is best not to tell the father. Frank is engaged to Mary, a sheep-herder's daughter. On hearing of it Frank's father becomes enraged; father and son quarrel bitterly. That night Tom attempts to steal from his father. He is caught in the act; a fight results. Tom kills his father. This is observed by Andy, a cowboy, who was hanging around in the hope of laying his hands on the payroll. Andy compels Tom to divide with him under threat of exposure.

Then follows Frank's arrest and conviction on the strong circumstantial evidence of his quarrel that day with his father, the riding quirt with which he was killed, and his own sudden disappearance.

Mary, determined to prove her lover's innocence, employs a detective and together they establish Tom's guilt. They confront him and his companion with the truth in the presence of the cowboys. In the excitement Andy is killed and Tom escapes with a wounded arm. He is pursued by the cowboys and Mary, but it is Mary who finally meets him alone near a ravine, and in the shots which are exchanged Tom is badly wounded. Mary puts him on his horse and leads him to the courthouse, where the death sentence is just being pronounced upon his mother. Tom addresses the court, confesses his crime, drops into a chair and dies as the others crowd around him.

UNIVERSAL WEEKLY.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 99 (Jan. 28).—Veterans Propose Change in "Old Glory."—United Confederate veterans will urge Congress to pass a measure adding to the flag of the nation the Cross of St. Andrew, Selma, Ala.

Famous Speed Kings Race.—Barney Oldfield and Lincoln Beachey meet at 70 miles an hour in exciting race, San Francisco, Cal. Lincoln Beachey narrowly escapes death as machine is dashed to ground in avoiding collision with automobile.

Boy Scouts in Belgium.—England's Boy Scouts inspected by the British Minister upon their visit to their brother scouts in Brussels.

From the Bottom of the Sea.—Surrounded by a coffer dam the "Zulia," a 10,000-ton vessel, is raised from icy waters of New York harbor.

Elephant Special.—After a strenuous six-day journey from the Pacific Coast elephants are overjoyed upon returning to their home town, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Fashions.—Sport coats and dresses of the new cotton fabrics. Made from Ladies' Home Journal patterns.

Distributing Gifts at Chertsey.—Wealthy members of the Drivers' Harrier Pack meet outside Chertsey Workhouse and distribute gifts to the inmates, London, England.

Department Store Ruined By Fire.—A spectacular fire in zero weather completely destroys one of the largest department stores in Boston, Mass.

Inauguration of Governor Fielder. — President Woodrow Wilson's successor as Governor of New Jersey is inaugurated in the State Capital, Trenton, N. J.

Desperate Outlaw of Chautauqua Hills Captured.—With his wife and nine children as barriers, Edward Beardsley succeeds in holding sheriff and posse at bay for eight days. At the right: Charles F. Bacus, who captured the outlaw. At the left: Nate Fenton, the philanthropist, who took care of the unfortunate children.

Ambrosio

FOR THE QUEEN'S HONOR

COPYRIGHTED

IN THREE REELS

OUR SIX SHEET POSTER

OUR THREE SHEET POSTER

PUBLICITY

One, Three, Six and Eight Sheet Posters—Heralds, Cuts, Photos and Slides

SOME TERRITORY STILL OPEN

THE BELLS OF DEATH

IN THREE REELS

READY

THE SILENT HERO

THE VAMPIRE'S TOWER

TWO REELS

SOCIETA ANONIMA Ambrosio TORINO

AMBROSIO AMERICAN CO.

15 East 26th Street :: :: :: NEW YORK

SOCIETA ANONIMA Ambrosio TORINO

Scenes on the Border.—At a cost of $1,600 per day, Uncle Sam boards the 3,300 Mexican Federal soldiers and 1,000 women refugees who sought safety in the United States after the capture of Ojinaga. General Salizar, one of the only two generals who succeeded in escaping at Ojinaga.

Cartoons by the World Famous Caricaturist, Hy. Mayer.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

PRINCESS.

WHERE PATHS DIVERGE (Feb. 6).—Billy weds Muriel secretly and antagonism of mother prevents him announcing it. Muriel secretly works on garments of expected child, when Mrs. Greg discovers the clothes and marriage certificate. She destroys evidence of alliance and drives Muriel out. She warns Billy if he continues alliance she will cast him adrift. Muriel loses her position and finds work with Boyd, keeping her past a secret. Boyd learns to love her and proposes marriage, but Muriel refuses. She requests a month's vacation, ostensibly to visit her mother, but goes to the hospital where her child is born dead. She returns to Boyd's employment, and he insists upon at least an engagement. She is heart-broken when a letter permits the diverging path to converge towards happiness.

MAJESTIC.

THE VENGEANCE OF NAJERRA (Feb. 1).—Najerra is a young Indian who works in a mine in Southern California, and is in love with Tula, an Indian girl of his own tribe. But Leandro, a dashing young Mexican dandy having tired of his old associates in the little Mexican town, takes a stroll into the country and meets Tula. He admires her greatly and discards his former sweetheart, a Mexican girl, determining to win Tula. This he accomplishes without much delay; he takes her to town and they are married.

Leandro's friends welcome Tula cordially and she seems quite happy, but he soon tires of her and at the end of a year she is broken in heart and body from his neglect and mistreatment. About this time the annual Mexican fiesta occurs, and during it he ignores her completely, but the end of her patience is reached when she discovers him embracing another woman. She starts for her old home. Her father has, meantime, died, so she goes to the home of her old sweetheart, Najerra. Najerra and his mother take her inside, but the long walk has been too much for her and she expires in his arms.

Najerra, who had taken her departure a year before with stoical resignation, now determines to avenge her death and goes to the town for that purpose. As he stands at the street corner watching Leandro smoking at an upper window, he notices that every few minutes Leandro throws out the end of a burnt cigarette. As he passes beneath the window he sees that all of the cigarette ends have fallen within a very small space. He walks thoughtfully away wondering how he can use this information to advantage. A short distance down the street he meets the dray cart from the mine loaded with cans of powder. As the cart passes on he starts as if to take one, but decides that this form of revenge would be too cowardly. As he watches it a can of powder falls off directly under Leandro's window, where the burning cigarette ends fall. Presently there is a terrific explosion, a burning cigarette end has fallen from the window overhead. When the smoke has cleared, the building is in ruins and Leandro is not to be seen. Najerra goes home thankful that God has saved him from staining his soul with blood and at the last we see him kneeling over Tula's grave, his hands uplifted to Heaven in thanksgiving as the scene fades from view.

THANHOUSER.

WHY REGINALD REFORMED (Feb. 1).—Reginald drank, not wisely but too well. He and his wife had many arguments on the subject, which always ended in the same way, that Reginald kept right on drinking. Finally the patience of the wife came to an end, and she determined that she would cure her husband, no matter what she had to do to him. About this time she ran across an ad from the snake-charmer and it gave her an idea. This man claimed he could do anything with snakes and Mrs. Reginald decided that she would make her husband see snakes and convince him that they were only creatures of the imagination. While Reginald was out one evening, the snake charmer and his family were smuggled into the house and they prepared a warm welcome for Reginald when he returned. He found snakes in his bedroom, snakes in the reception room, and a most interesting entertainment going on, in which reptiles played the principal part in another room.

The upshot of the matter was that Reginald was nearly scared to death, decided that he had been hitting it up too strong, and took a flying leap to the water wagon.

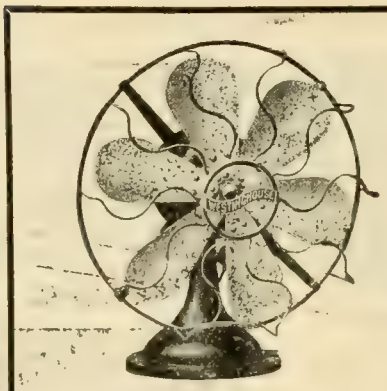
TWINS, AND A STEPMOTHER (Feb. 3).—A young widower had two daughters (twins), he dearly loved and he did his best to provide for them, but being away at business all day, he was unable to look after them as a woman would do. Unknown to him, his servants neglected the little girls and gave them as little attention as they dared. The one woman who showed them love and affection was their Sunday School teacher. The father never told the little girls that he was in love with the Sunday School teacher. One evening he proposed and was accepted. The girls' maid spied upon them and rushed out to the back yard to tell the story to the widower's maid. The widower's maid was angry at the news, and a few minutes later, when one of the little girls asked for some attention, she snapped at her and declared that shortly the twins would have a stepmother who would make them stand around. She did not tell who this stepmother was to be, nor did the twins ask. They were heart-broken over their father's conduct and decided to run away. There was only one place they could run to, and that was the home of their Sunday School teacher, so after leaving a pathetic little note for their father, they trudged out, bag and baggage, to the house next door. The teacher was surprised when they told her, and touched when they urged her to marry their father and keep this other woman, the terrible unknown they dreaded, out of their home. It struck her as a pretty good joke, so she sent for the father, hiding the twins behind a curtain, and told him that his little girls would only be restored to him upon condition that he married the teacher. Of course, he protested more or less violently at first, but at last gave his solemn promise to marry the woman he was already engaged to, and the twins returned home quite happy. In fact, in later years, they frequently mentioned the fact, most confidentially, of course, that it was they who had brought about the marriage between the father they loved and the stepmother they adored.

THE SUCCESS OF SELFISHNESS (Feb. 6).—The heroine was a simple little country girl, but not as simple as she looked. She had two rural swains. Neither one of whom she ever meant to marry, but she found them useful because she flattered them and induced them to instruct her in stenography and bookkeeping. As a result of what she learned from them she secured a position in the office of a daring Wall Street operator and soon became his confidential stenographer. In the course of time the operator found he was likely to have trouble with the U. S. government because of certain business deals in which he had been interested, and he feared that if his little stenographer was called as a witness before the grand jury it might go hard with him. Thereupon he handed the girl a large sum of money and told her to go to Canada and enjoy herself. The little simple country girl did not agree, however, telling him her conscience would not permit her to run away. He protested without avail and finally she played her trump card, telling him that a wife could not testify against her husband.

It was a case of marrying his stenographer or going to jail, and the Wall Street man chose the former alternative. She was a pretty little stenographer, and the kind of a girl who would make a good impression anywhere, so he figured that things might have been worse. Although the girl achieved success, through selfishness, in the end her selfishness was her ruin, for not caring for her husband, she plunged into extravagance, and in the course of time ruined him. Then she was left alone, heavily in debt and often regretted that she had not done like her little sister in the country, who married for love, and although she had little money, was always happy and contented with her lot.

BRONCHO.

YELLOW FLAME (2 parts—Feb. 18).—Jim Condon, the sheriff, receives word that Yellow Flame has been released from prison and is returning to the settlement. Yellow Flame, ill with an incurable disease, has begged to return to his childhood home. When he arrives he takes the trail to the desert and, sitting down beside an Indian grave, falls into a reverie in which he sees himself again as a young man, the favored suitor of Little Fawn. One day while buffalo hunting, he is attacked by Black Feather, also a suitor for the hand of Little Fawn, and Yellow Flame falling in the water, Black Feather reports him drowned. Jim rescues Yellow Flame, takes him to his cabin and cares for him.



Get Ready Now

for the summer season. You will want the best fans because the best are the cheapest.

Westinghouse Electric Six-Blade Fans

are the quietest electric fans you can get. They give the most breeze for the least money. Their construction is so good that you need not touch them from the beginning of the season to the end.

Divide the price by the years they last

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

ISIDOR WENIZ FILMS CO.
Special Features and Regular Service
MACHINES—FILMS—SUPPLIES
PASSION PLAY For Rent—1,3,6 Sheets 12 Styles of Paper
100 REELS FOR SALE WITH POSTERS
Office: 133 N. Gay St. Baltimore, Md.

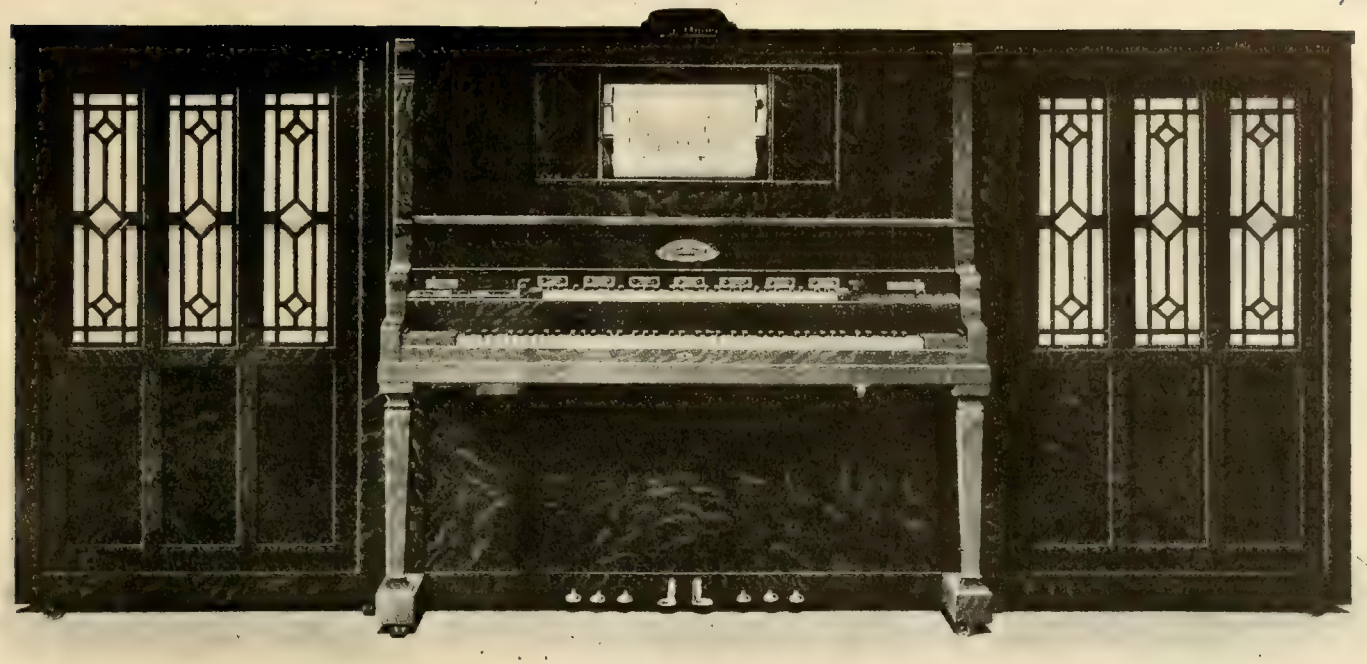
VISCO PICTURE MACHINE OIL
If your dealer will not supply you send us $1.50 and we will send you a 128-ounce can of Visco Picture Machine Oil direct. 6-oz. bottles, 25 cents at your dealer's.
THE VISCO MOTOR OIL CO., Cleveland, O.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176 N. State St., bet. Lake and Randolph, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle before the Camera

Most celebrated exponents of society dancing. 1,000 feet reel showing this world-famous couple in their latest dances. Nothing like it now being exhibited. For terms apply to

WESTERN VAUDEVILLE MANAGERS' ASSOCIATION
Majestic Theatre Building, Department A CHICAGO



The Wonder of Them All

WE revolutionized the automatic piano, and we have now perfected a combination organ and orchestra with all the effects necessary for producing better enjoyment of pictures.

For further particulars write for our new "Art Catalog" and prices.

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.

Manufacturers

SIMPLICITY · RELIABILITY · SEEBURG · ENDURANCE

209 S. State St., Republic Bldg.

CHICAGO, ILL.

SIMPLICITY · RELIABILITY · SEEBURG · ENDURANCE

Scouts report that the Indians are on the war-path and have cut the telegraph wires. Jim sends Yellow Flame with a note to the commander of the nearby fort soliciting his aid. On the trail Yellow Flame is seen by Black Feather, who shoots him, and Yellow Flame, falling unconscious, Black Feather thinks him dead and takes the note. While trying to rejoin the braves, Black Feather is seen by a couple of scouts belonging to the soldiers' provision train. They fire at him, wounding him mortally, but they are unable to find him, as he has retreated to a cave, where he dies. The soldiers, hearing the attack on the settlement, come to their aid. Yellow Flame, recovering consciousness, goes to the settlement and is denounced by Jim. When Yellow Flame comes out of his dream, he hears the call of the happy hunting ground and dies. Jack Hull, one of the settlers, while hunting sees a large snake, which he pursues to the cave, where he finds the skeleton with the note. He returns to the settlement, presents the note to Jim and all start out to find Yellow Flame. When they reach him he is dead and all feel much grieved over their wrong censorship of him.

AMERICAN.

THE LOST TREASURE (Three parts—Feb. 9).—In the frontier days a breath of suspicion was enough to incite the ever-ready mob to violence and the lynch law. It was very remarkable that Amos Brown, a Wells-Fargo Express agent, was allowed to escape with his life when it was discovered that $20,000 worth of bullion had disappeared from the office. The mob quickly gathered and followed him to his home. Bess, a friend of the agent's wife and the stage driver dominated the mob almost at the risk of their own lives and succeeded in saving him from the noose, but he had to leave town within the hour. So, with his sobbing wife, he left the town where a few hours before he had been honored and respected.

The shadow and stigma hung over him and darkened his life for months until chance threw Bess, who was now married to the stage driver and settled on a ranch, on the trail of the real bandits. She immediately got her husband a posse, who captured the bandits with the treasure. End shows agent restored to his position and full restitution made.

THE MONEY LENDER (Feb. 14).—Old Philip Swan, close-fisted, cold-hearted, money lender, had one redeeming quality; he loved and was deeply devoted to his little daughter, Ethel. One of Swan's assets was a mortgage on the property of Edward Gauss, an humble locksmith. Owing to manifold misfortunes, Gauss is unable to keep up the interest and Swan loses no time in foreclosing. Kind-hearted Dr. Ashley, who has tried in vain to make Swan a little merciful, gives Gauss and his family temporary quarters after the old home is lost.

Swan gets a new safe; before he learns the combination he deposits in it the deed for the Gauss property. Ethel while at play locks the safe. That night Ethel is taken ill. A doctor who is summoned, confesses the case is beyond his skill and says Dr. Ashley is the only man who might effect a cure. Swan hates to go to Ashley, but pride yields to love, and Dr. Ashley is called. He says an immediate treatment will save the child, and demands as advance fee the transfer to the Gauss deed. Of course Swan demurs, but he finally yields to terms. He goes to the safe to get the deed, finds the safe has been locked, and realizes he cannot open it. His only salvation is to get Gauss. He appeals to the locksmith, but Gauss refuses to help. At length Gauss's wife persuades her husband to aid their enemy and the safe is opened. Dr. Ashley is given the deed, and Ethel is saved. The next morning Dr. Ashley assigns the deed to the bewildered and thankful locksmith.

KAY-BEE.

DIVORCE (2 parts—Jan. 30).—Anna, the wife of Jim Forbes, is discontented because of his low salary and decides to get a divorce and marry a former lover, Robert White. She leaves her daughter, Mildred, with her husband, who loves her. Forbes does not let the little girl know the truth about her mother. He falls ill and Mildred seeks employment at a department store owned by Robert White. Mrs. Dexter, a neighbor, gives some attention to the sick man during the absence of Mildred, who is employed as an errand girl. Mildred is sent with a package to the White residence and meets her mother. In the meantime Anna has become discontented as the rich man's wife and is glad to meet her daughter. But Mildred on learning the truth denounces her and returns to her father.

LOOK! LOOK!

We just received 400,000 feet of choice Films. Excellent for commercials. Every reel has titles and in good order. No broken sprockets or worn out stock.
Will sell entire lot for $1400.00, or will sell in lots of 10 Reels at $4.00 per Reel.

Feature Exchanges
New Exchanges and Others
HERE'S YOUR CHANCE

Shipped C. O. D., with privilege of examination, upon receipt of 25% deposit.
50 Features, with good paper, very cheap.

International Film Traders
5 West 14th St. New York

$75.00
buys a first-class, excellently constructed
Motion Picture Camera

with 200-foot magazines and Bausch & Lomb Zeiss Teesar F 3.5 lens. Beautifully finished; produces perfect pictures. Send for catalogue.

Motion Picture Camera Co.
5 West 14th Street NEW YORK

Yes: Brass Poster Frames
make your lobby attractive. Before you place your order for lobby displays of any kind, get our catalogue and quotations. They are right. We make lobby and theatre fixtures and brass railings to any specifications. We can prove that our frames are the best in construction and material.

THE THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO
1232 East 3rd Street
CLEVELAND, OHIO
New York Agents: Yorkes - Sound - Effect Co., 42d & Broadway.
Virginia & W. Va. Agt. Theatre Supply Co., Roanoke, Va.

DOMINO.

O MIMI SAN (2 parts—Feb. 5).—The scenes of the story are laid in Japan during the last revolution in the late '60's. The Emperor is growing old and infirm. He has two sons, Yorotomo, the eldest, who will succeed to the throne, and his younger brother, Togowawa, who succeeds to the throne in the event of his elder brother's death. The Emperor, for reasons of state, betroths his eldest son to Sada San, daughter of the Prime Minister. The Chief Shogun, supposedly loyal to the emperor, covets the throne. He realizes the Japanese people would never permit him to ascend the throne himself, and he casts about for a dummy to occupy it. The Shogun calls upon the younger prince and unfolds his plan to kill the elder brother. Togowawa enters into the conspiracy and promises to aid the Shogun. The conspirators are overheard by a spy of the Emperor, who reports the plot. Yorotomo is sent away in disguise. During his sojourn he falls in love with O Mimi San, daughter of the gardener of the summer cottage of the Mikado, who does not know that Yorotomo is a prince. The Mikado dies and Yorotomo is called to take the throne, and he is compelled to leave O Mimi San and marry Sada San.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 57 (Jan. 28).—The Tango Reaches Spain.—Thousands in Barcelona turn out and witness a public exhibition of new style dancing.

Ice-Skating Season Opens.—Winter, long delayed, arrives in Van Cortland Park, New York City.

A New Railroad in Africa.—Line from Kenroussa to Kankan is opened with elaborate ceremonies.

Martin Harvey off for Canada.—Famous English actor given a hearty farewell at Liverpool.

"Movies" Now Teach Religion.—Pastor Russel, famous Brooklyn divine, opens New York theater devoted to Biblical stories.

"Teddy's" Triumphant Pilgrimage.—Ex-President Roosevelt is presented with a horse at Buenos Ayres exposition.

A Torpedo Bicycle.—A new wind-shielded two-wheeler is tried out in Paris.

Off on a Long Journey.—Hamburg-American S. S. "Cleveland" carries 500 passengers from New York to the Orient.

A Florida Terrapin Farm.—Southerners now devoting much time to producing for the Northern markets.

Stone Age Relics Unearthed.—Workmen in Los Angeles uncover stone bowl of prehistoric age.

Great Lumber Yards Destroyed.—E. K. Wood plant, at San Pedro, California, is entirely wiped out by fire.

The Beardsley Siege.—Mayville, N. Y., man holds off law officers for one week.

RELIANCE.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (Third Release—Feb. 2).—Margaret, the Mutual Girl, is found in the first scene of the third release in her boudoir, dressing for the day. Her aunt enters and they plan to again visit Lady Duff Gordon's establishment, the famous Luciles. The aunt tells Margaret that Count D'Orley, whom Margaret met at the Yale-Princeton game, will accompany them on the shopping tour.

At the moment that this conversation is going on, detectives have surrounded the count's home and are waiting for him to emerge, believing him to be the leader of a clever gang of swindlers. Inside of the count's house, he is nervously reading a newspaper which has an account of the theft of the famous D'Rida necklace, which is thought to have been smuggled to America from France. The account states that the French government is co-operating with the American government in tracing the smugglers. The count flings the newspaper aside and hurriedly leaves the house and is followed by detectives. He goes immediately to the center of the white light district, Times Square, where he clandestinely meets two women who had arrived on the steamship several days previously, and as he passes them with scant recognition, one of them hands the stolen necklace to the count. From Times Square, he goes immediately to the home of Margaret, still followed by the detectives, and, in company with the two ladies, he goes shopping. The automobile of Margaret is followed by one containing government inspectors and the country boy. Arriving at Lucile's, the count discovers that he is being followed, and makes an excuse to remain in Margaret's automobile, while they enter the store. As soon, however, as they have gone, he hurriedly leaves the automobile and passes swiftly down the street, still followed by the detectives.

The country boy returns to the dock to find that

FILM TITLES MADE TO ORDER 6c PER FOOT

Negatives Developed FREE
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th Street NEW YORK CITY

PRINTS FROM YOUR NEGATIVE 5c Per Foot

Do you know any one using LUMIERE FILM?

If you do—look him up!

When you get his opinion, I'll get your next order.

Do it to-day!

DAVID HORSLEY

American Agent for Lumiere Films

NEW YORK - - 1600 Broadway
CHICAGO - - Schiller Building
LOS ANGELES - - - Opening

A PHOTO OF A FAVORITE

actor or actress is given away every —— at this theatre. This is an idea for a slide which will bring money to your box office. Tell your public to make a collection as you will eventually give away four hundred different favorites. If you keep it up the public will advertise it to their friends. It's a winner sure. It's being worked successfully in many places—human nature is the same the world over—don't delay; TRY IT OUT.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 350 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 30 of the most popular Association players, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards

For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—30 Association Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 350 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.
Lobby frames to hold 12 pictures with necessary cards—$6.00 each.

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 350 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights and we will send you a remedy.

RENFAX MUSICAL MOTION PICTURES DELIGHT PICTURE PATRONS

RENFAX FILM CO., Inc.
110 WEST 40th ST., N. Y. CITY

BARGAIN-MACHINES-BARGAIN

Order one for Emergency. Slightly used machines, in first-class running condition. Powers No. 6, $135.00; Edison Model B, $150.00; Edison Exhibition Models, $50.00, $60.00 and $75.00. All complete with lenses, rheostats. Ticket Choppers, Mirror Screens, Chairs, etc.

Order at once. First come, first served.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO., Inc.
1301 Race St., Philadelphia

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson Blvd. NEW YORK—505 Fifth Ave.

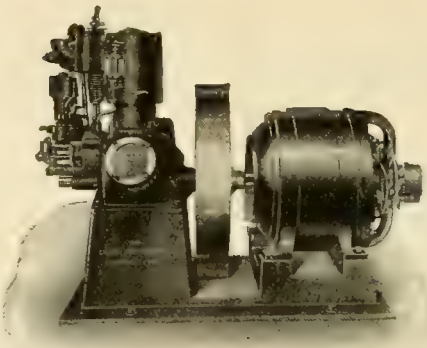
the steamship Mauretania has arrived, and becomes busily engaged in assisting Mme. Tetrazzini, the world-famous songbird, through the customs examination. Surprised at the absence of the count upon their exit from Lucile's, Margaret and her aunt return home after a long drive, during which they pass the homes of Carnegie, Gerry, Rockefeller, and the Vanderbilts. The count manages to elude the detectives by jumping over a fence and disappearing, and returns to his home, where he immediately sends a letter of apology to Margaret for his rudeness.

A day later, Margaret and her aunt, joined by the count, dine at the Hotel Plaza. They are again followed by detectives, and the country boy is directing the shadowing. When Margaret emerges from the Plaza, the country boy races on foot after her automobile, and succeeds in climbing aboard from the back. The count, finding that he is in sudden danger, and still having the necklace in his possession, thrusts the jewels into Margaret's muff without her knowledge. The country boy grabs the count as the car stops and the detectives climb aboard and search him. They find nothing, and in a high state of indignation, the count leaves the automobile, vowing vengeance on the country boy. Margaret and her aunt return home unconscious of the jewels being in their possession.

THE JANITOR (Feb. 4).—Tom, aged seven, and Mary, eighteen, are children of Mrs. Jake Gruber, by a former husband. Jake is a loafer and bum, janitor of a New York flat house, but Mrs. Gruber, a patient slave, does nearly all the work. She is assisted only by her son and daughter, mornings and nights, before going to work, and after coming home, but never, except reluctantly, by Jake, who spends the most of his time at the corner saloon or rushing the growler when the saloon keeper has closed him out. The children, who are getting on in their employment, are arriving at an age when they are ready to rebel from their stepfather's brutal tyranny and shiftless habits. Mary has met a young man, Henry, who is attracted by her, but she is ashamed and afraid to let him call at her home in the janitor's quarters in the basement, so her mother permits her to receive her caller in the apartment of a family on an upper floor, who are away on a visit.

Jake comes home drunk. He wants money, but Tom refuses him. Mother has been with Mary and her caller, but she leaves them temporarily and goes to the cellar where she finds Jake. She has no money for Jake, who follows her to the apartment above and makes a scene, demanding money from Mary and exposing the fact that they are in borrowed quarters, which Mary had tried to conceal. Henry goes, to escape the family quarrel, and Mary believes he is disgusted with her and her people. Mother and daughter return to the basement, followed by Jake, who tries to take money forcibly from Mary, but is prevented by Tom, who fights his father. The next day the landlord notifies Jake he is discharged. Tom and Mary now decide they have enough money to rent a flat for their mother, and they draw their money from the savings bank and prepare to move. When Jake comes in for supper they won't let him eat and Tom throws him out, after showing him their money and declaring they will take care of their mother. Jake seeks consolation with his friends, telling them of the money and the rebellion against his parental authority. They go to the basement to seize the money. Tom barricades the door to their rooms while Jake and his gang try to force their way in with an axe and other weapons and by way of a back window. Meanwhile, Henry has gone to tell Mary he loves her anyway, and he turns the tide of battle at the critical moment. The police drag Jake and his bruised pals away.

FOR HIS MASTER (2 Parts—Feb. 7).—Father Walsh, a rawboned priest, comes to a Western cowtown to preach the gospel. Aside from his calling, his appearance aroused the ridicule of the cowboys and they kid him. A fresh young kid slaps a girl of the underworld and makes his escape on a horse. Father Walsh chases him on another, drags him off the horse and carries him back to the crowd, where he forces him to apologize to the girl and then spanks him, in full view of the crowd, and drops him in the dust, much to the crowd's admiration. Among the lookers-on is a "bad man," who has been concerned with two other men in cattle rustling and stage robbing. He shakes the priest's hand and expresses admiration for him. Walsh sees a streak of good in him and determines to save him, if possible. He follows him into a saloon and prevents him from further drinking. While there the bad man's sister comes to get him to go home and the priest coaxes him to go, thus earning the gratitude of the sister. The priest is the only man that the bad man will listen to and he succeeds in getting him to give up his drinking and is fast molding him into a better man when he is suddenly called away to administer to a miner, who has been hurt up in the hills. During his absence the two pals of the bad man call on him and kid him for allowing the priest to make a good man out of him. Taunted by his pals, he goes to the saloon, gets to drinking and rides away with them on a hold-up expedition. Their plans are overheard by the bad man's sister and when the priest returns she tells him of their scheme. Walsh rides after them, overtakes them in the mountains, overcomes the three of them and takes the bad man back to his home. The two pals go through with the robbery as prearranged, and the next day are captured and strung up. The priest shows the bad man the account of the matter and thus proves to him how lucky it was that he had arrived in time to take him out of such company. The bad man reforms for good and joins the priest in his campaign against the powers of evil.



4 Kilowatt Direct-Connected Outfit

Very many readers of "The Moving Picture World" are using

Brush Electric Lighting Sets

We want everyone to know something about the best and most dependable Electric Generating Set ever placed upon the market—the only one that makes a perfect light.

We now make these Lighting Sets, in sizes 2 to 10 kilowatts, both Direct-Connected and Belted.

Send for catalogue

The Chas. A. Strelinger Co.

Box MP-2

Detroit, Michigan, U. S. A.

KOMIC.

MY WIFE'S AWAY (Feb. 5).—Mrs. Byers takes a trip to the country, leaving her husband at home. The poker sessions Bill Byers has with the boys nightly are something fierce. When wifey notifies Bill by telegram that she is going to return, Bill and the boys put the house in order as best they can. Next morning Bill, on his way to the office, loses his keys, and when he finds them gone returns home and upsets everything looking for them. He has to climb in the front window and is seen by two plain clothes men and promptly arrested, although he strenuously objects. Meanwhile, Bill's wife arrives, and seeing the house all upset, goes to Bill's office to tell him, and is informed by the office boy that Bill had been there and gone in an excited frame of mind. Satisfied that something terrible has happened she at once seeks the police. Dusty Dawkins, a hobo, finds the keys where Bill has lost them and seeing on the key tag that a reward will be given for their return, at once starts for the address to return them, and claim the reward. He finds the door open and no one about, so he enters and makes himself at home. While Dusty is enjoying himself, Mr. and Mrs. Byers return home, she having explained to the police and had Bill released. They seize Dusty and are about to hand him over to the police when he returns the keys and is forgiven. Dusty is about to depart when Mrs. Bill discovers the wine bottles and playing cards that Dusty had taken from their hiding place in the piano. She immediately suspects something and upon making an investigation herself, finds that Bill has been enjoying himself instead of passing the lonely evenings in work at the office as he had informed her in his letters. Enraged she lectures Bill while Dusty makes his escape through the window.

THE SLEEPY HEAD (Feb. 5).—George is a terrible sleepy head. It is a great deal of trouble for his landlady to get him up in the morning. One evening he returns home and informs the landlady that he must be at the office of a certain broker at 9 a. m. sharp the following morning, as he has a package of great importance to deliver. The next morning arrives and after several attempts to get

OVER NIAGARA FALLS

Sterling Camera and Film Co., 145 West 45th St., New York, N. Y.

AN INSTANTANEOUS SUCCESS

THE NEW YORK WEEKLY

Exhibitors from all parts of the United States are demanding bookings on the

NEW YORK WEEKLY

(The Reel of Real Interest)

Containing Metropolitan Events of National Importance

Released on Tuesday of Each Week
Beginning February 3rd

LENGTH 500 FEET PRICE 10c PER FOOT

BEAUTIFUL DESCRIPTIVE POSTERS
WIRE ORDER AND TERRITORY DESIRED

Life Photo Film Corporation

102-104 West 101st Street New York City

NEW YORK and NEW JERSEY EXHIBITORS
PLEASE BOOK DIRECT THROUGH

Loew's Theatrical Enterprises

260 West Forty-Second Street New York City

Poster Mounting Cloth

Headquarters.

Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.

TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY, 62 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

George out of bed, the landlady at last succeeds. Meanwhile George's boss, who gave him the package to deliver, has received a letter telling him not to invest the money and is waiting for George's return to the office. He cannot stand the strain any longer and rushes out to the house where George resides. Arriving there he is just in time to find the landlady throwing George out the front door. George hits the boss and knocks him down. When they both get on their feet George tries to explain why the package of money is still undelivered, but the boss is so overjoyed that the investment has not been made that he gives George a week's salary and a week's vacation to get some sleep.

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION.

GAUMONT.

EXCURSIONS IN OLD PARIS (Jan. 22).—Paris has much that is new and much that is old. The old arenas of Lutece, by way of example, are hardly what the up-to-date visitor would expect to find, for these date back to the second and third centuries. Of the various churches which can be seen, the oldest are those of St. Julian the Poor, St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Notre Dame (one of the wonders of Gothic architecture), and that of St. Nicholas. The Palace of Sens was built by Tristan de Salazar, whilst the ancient Palace of Thermes—once inhabited by Roman Emperors—has been transformed into the beautiful Gothic mansions of Cluny. The Palace of Justice, the Conciergerie, with the Treasure Tower and Cæsar's Tower, are other interesting examples, and the film concludes with a picture of the Court of the Vosges, which is comprised of 26 pavilions of brick and stone on a uniform plan, with vaulted galleries.

CALINO AS A STAGE PROMPTER (Jan. 22).—A stage prompter's job, as everyone knows, is a heart-breaking one—both for the prompter and the prompted. Having perforce to be on the constant look-out for signs of forgetfulness on the part of the actors, and then failing to find the place when they actually do break down, is enough to harass the strongest hearted. Calino, however, overcomes the difficulty by repeating the various speeches with the actors, and the result is that he arouses the wrath of a number of peaceful subscribers in the fifth row of the gallery.

LUX.

BERTIE HAS A FREE RIDE (Jan. 30).—Bertie suddenly becomes rich, but the funny thing about it is that he is not rich enough to pay his railway fare to the place where he is to become rich. The difficulty is overcome by a friend, who packs him into a nice big bundle and sends him off as freight by rail. The bundle proves too big to be taken out of the door and so it is promptly thrown out of the window. Alas, poor Bertie. In the train Bert has a look around and discovers a luncheon basket full of good things. Alas, poor Bertie; he is obliged to get back to his hiding-place before he can make a good meal. The customs officer promptly pierces the bundle with a nice pointed sticker when it does arrive. Alas, poor Bertie; he simply gives a yelp, and rushes through the town in his parcel until he reaches the lawyer's office, where he becomes a man of means PICTURESQUE CORSICA (Jan. 30).—A charming little scenic film, in which the many beauty spots of this picturesque and delightful country are portrayed in a series of finely photographed scenes. The quality throughout is extremely good.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE

Moving Picture World

Domestic $3.00 per Year
Canada $3.50 per Year
Foreign $4.00 per Year

REBUILT PICTURE MACHINES

Power's No. 6	$150.
Edengraph	75.
Power's No. 5	75.
1913 Model Motiograph No. 1-A	175.
1912 Model Motiograph No. 1-A	165.
1911 Model Motiograph No. 1-A	150.
Power's No. 6	160.
No. 2 Motiograph, nearly new	100.

All machines complete with electrical attachments. A-1 condition guaranteed. Time or Cash.

We also have all makes of new machines and supplies. Send for catalog today.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160 North Fifth Avenue, Chicago

PIPE ORGANS FOR THEATRES

Prompt delivery.

Write for illustrated Catalogue or telephone Harrison 1476.

T. D. HUME & CO.

Suite 513-522, 608 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Our Supreme Program Includes

ALL HELEN GARDNER RELEASES

ALL FLORENCE TURNER RELEASES

ALL MARION LEONARD RELEASES

ALL KENNEDY'S FEATURES, INC.

A Feature Every Day or Any Day

GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO., Inc.
POWER'S BLDG. CHICAGO

SAVINGS BY SYSTEM

Now's the Time to Buy a THEATRE RECORD For $2.50

You can put a System in your business next year which saves you money and time. Why not commence Jan. 1st, 1914, with a set of books that you will be proud of? Get some system in your business end of your theatre which you are not ashamed of neither afraid to look at it yourself. Half the moving picture theatre managers today are running their business without a Bookeeping system. I've got the real and only ledger which you can use for all purposes. I don't ask you to keep it unless you want it. Send me today $2.70 (20c for postage) and let me mail you a Theatre Record.

THEATRE RECORD PUB. CO., J. V. Bryson, Pres.
256 Hennepin Street Minneapolis

SHOW THIS TO YOUR EXCHANGE — SENT FROM MY MINNEAPOLIS OFFICE

FEATURE FILM STORIES

VERNON FILM CO.

MASKED MYSTERY (Three Parts).—Leon Dorbier, a rich widower, brings about the engagement of his daughter, Suzanne, to Jacques Clamor. Miss Eddy an American girl befriended by Dorbier, becomes the bosom friend of Suzanne and proves a staunch friend during the outrages that are perpetrated against her. Baronne De Warza, an adventuress, who is deeply in love with Leon Dorbier, finds an obstacle in his daughter, Suzanne. From now on a series of outrages against Suzanne occur, the frustrations of which are largely due to Miss Eddy and Jacques Clamor. On the night that the contract is to be signed, Suzanne's absence causes alarm, but a thorough search finds her in her apartments in a dazed state. The "Masked Mystery" is at work. Dorbier notifies the police, and the detectives are exasperated to find that the "Masked Mystery" had worn gloves so as to hide the finger-prints and render the search more difficult.

Several days later Suzanne and her friend take their daily ride, and the horse, which has been tampered with by the "Masked Mystery," becomes unmanageable and runs away. Suzanne and her friend find it necessary to call the services of a motor car in order to reach home. But fortune seems to be against them. While the chauffeur is repairing his machine the "Masked Mystery" appears and succeeds in kidnapping Suzanne, while her friend, Miss Eddy, escapes and carries the news to Leon Dorbier of his daughter's abduction. The "Masked Mystery" carries Suzanne to a lonely mansion, and when she refuses to sign an agreement that if she is set free she will give up all hope of seeing her father and fiancé, they tie her in a bag and throw her into the river. Suzanne, by means of a penknife which she carries in her bosom, succeeds in opening the sack, and, by a desperate struggle, manages to reach a passing boat upon which she takes refuge. In the meantime, Jacques Clamor and Miss Eddy have left no stone unturned in their effort to rescue Suzanne, and while passing over a bridge in a motor car in pursuit of the abductors of Suzanne, they collide with another car, causing a terrific explosion and a heart-rending scene.

Suzanne is welcomed home by her father, and when she learns of the terrible accident and possibly the death of her lover, she determines to bring the criminals to task. They set a trap for the "Masked Mystery," and at midnight, as he is entering the library window, he is taken by surprise and captured. When the mask is removed the face of Baronne De Warza is revealed. She breaks down and makes a full confession, stating that she is in love with Leon Dorbier, and, wishing to wed him, found an obstacle in the person of Suzanne. After her confession the adventuress makes a break for liberty, but she is closely pursued by the police. Seeing escape impossible, she takes her own life. Suzanne then searches for Jacques who mysteriously disappeared after the motor car accident, and succeeds in locating him in a private sanitarium in a very precarious condition, but by careful nursing he progresses rapidly, and several months later a double wedding takes place, when Suzanne and Jacques are made man and wife and Miss Eddy becomes the bride of Leon Dorbier.

CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO., LTD.

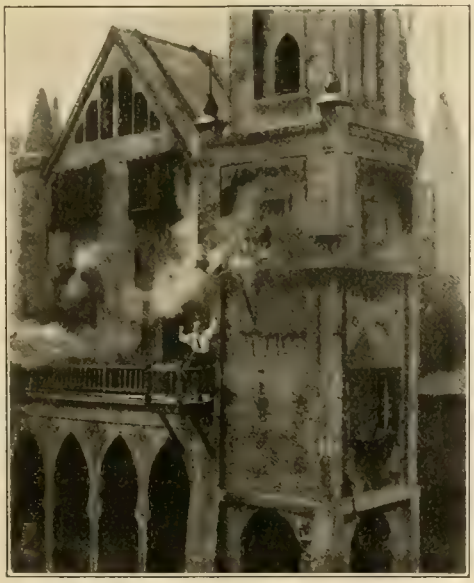
EVANGELINE (Five Parts).—PART I.—Evangeline and Gabriel as children are being taught their lessons by Father Felician, priest and pedagogue. After their lessons they hurry to the forge of Basil, the blacksmith, to watch him at his work.

ERKER

SAYS "IT CAN'T BE DONE"

Some dealers are advertising supplies at cut prices. Did it ever occur to you that there must be a hitch somewhere? You may get what you're paying for, but the goods you buy are dear at any price; you're not getting quality. We are not offering motion picture supplies at cost, but at a fair profit. "Live and let live" is our motto. Send for our catalogue and get on the right track.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO. 608 Olive Street, ST. LOUIS



FIRE! AND SWORD!

A Spectacular International Photo Drama

IN SIX PARTS

500 SCENES—
A Thrilling Story of Love and Daring

GREATEST FEATURE YET MADE IN AMERICA

Biggest Fire Scenes Ever Filmed!

Sensational Line of Paper Ones, Threes, Sixes and Twenty-four Sheet Stands

Photo Enlargements
Heralds
Cuts

An Army of Native Arabs, Artillery, Cavalry, U.S. Marines, and Wireless Telegraphy to Rescue One American Girl!

10 ACRES OF FLAMES!

"The Wonder Film of a Thousand Thrills"

Produced by T. HAYES HUNTER

State Rights Now Selling

KISMET FEATURE FILM CO.

Suite 908 145 W. 45th St., NEW YORK

"Thus passed a few swift years and they no longer were children."

Gabriel, a "valiant youth," helps his father, Basil, at the forge. Evangeline keeps house for Benedict, her father. We see Evangeline carrying a flagon of home brewed ale to the reapers in the fields at noontide. We see the prayerful attitude of the reapers and Father Felican as they hear the Angelus. At eve the flocks return from pastures and "the cows patiently yield their udders unto the milkmaid's hand." "Thus at peace with God and the world, the farmer of Grand-Pre lived on his sunny farm."

PART II.—In part two the Arcadians are still enjoying their happy, peaceful life, but a shadow of gloom is thrown over them at times by the advent of English troops with a proclamation from Governor Lawrence commanding all the men to appear at Church to hear the reading of His Majesty's wishes. Basil believes it threatens disaster. Benedict, however advises patience.

"Now has the season returned when the nights grow colder and longer." We see Benedict by the wide-mouthed fire-place and Evangeline at her spinning wheel. A knock at the door and Basil and Gabriel enter, followed soon by the Notary, who draws the betrothal contract. We next see harvests gathered in, the peasants working on the dikes, and then the betrothal feast spread "under the open sky, in the odorous air of the orchard." After the feast they dance under the orchard trees.

PART III.—"And lo! with a summons sonorous," while they were merrily dancing, "Sounded the bell from its tower" bidding them to come to the church to hear the King's Mandate. "Thronged ere long was the church with men. Without, in the church-yard, waited the women." The English soldiers marched on, and demanding admittance in the King's name, "enter the sacred portal." Colonel Winslow, in front of the chancel, reads the King's Mandate, that inside of five days they must be driven from their homes and their lands be confiscated by the State. Their wives may gather such of their household goods as they can carry with them. The men will be kept prisoners in the church until the day of embarking. After hearing the mandate all is uproar and confusion. High above the others rises Basil's voice crying, "Down with the tyrants." In the midst of the confusion Father Felican enters the door of the chancel and with a gesture, quiets them. Pointing to the figure of the crucified Christ he leads them to repeat His prayer, "O Father, forgive them." Meanwhile, Evangeline listens at the door and window, but in vain. Then, all forgetful of self, she wanders into the village, "cheering with looks and words the mournful hearts of the women."

PART IV.—On the fifth day the women and children are seen carrying their household goods to the seashore, urging on the oxen and looking back sadly at their homes that they may never see again. Late in the afternoon the church doors are opened and the soldiers lead forth the patient Arcadian men. When they reach the shore they find their goods piled in confusion and disorder. "So unto separate ships were Basil and Gabriel carried, while in despair on the shore, Evangeline stood with her father." They lighted fires on the shore and the priest wandered from fire to fire, cheering and consoling, until he approached Evangeline and Benedict. Vainly Evangeline tried to cheer her father. Suddenly there is seen a light, which grows broader and higher and redder. The crowd cry aloud in their anguish: "We shall behold no more our homes in the village of Grand-Pre!" Overwhelmed with the sight the priest and maiden gaze in horror. As they turn to speak to Benedict they find he has fallen, and lies motionless on the ground, his soul departed. Evangeline kneels at her father's side and wails aloud in her sorrow. "Let us bury him here," and the priest said, "Lo, with a mournful sound like the voice of a vast congregation solemnly answered the sea."

PART V.—"Many a weary year has passed since the burning of Grand-Pre." Evangeline commences her endless search for Gabriel, cheered by the faithful Father Felican. Hearing that he is with Basil in the South, they start southward with a few Arcadian boatmen. Evangeline, cheered by a vision of Gabriel beckoning her onward, falls peacefully asleep. "While all are slumbering, through the darkness a light, swift boat draws near and passes on the other shore." It was Gabriel, who goes to the Western wilds seeking "oblivion of self and of sorrow." When they reach Basil's home they find him a prosperous herdsman. Basil goes with Evangeline to pursue Gabriel, leaving Father Felican to rest. Gabriel is always ahead; sometimes they find the ashes of his camp-fire. A Shawnee Indian woman leads them to the Mission of the Black Robe Chief, who tells them Gabriel was there six days before and will return again in the spring. Evangeline remains to wait, while Basil goes back to his home. Gabriel does not return, and at length, discouraged, Evangeline gives up the search, and becomes a Sister of Mercy. "Fair was she, and young, when in hope began the long journey. Faded was she and old, when in disappointment it ended."

After many years a pestilence falls on the city, and Evangeline, in a hospital ward of an almshouse, finds Gabriel, who dies in her arms. "All was ended now, the hope, and the fear, and the sorrow." Meekly she bowed her head and murmured, "Father, I thank thee!"

In an old graveyard are seen two nameless graves, in which the lovers are sleeping, side by side. "Still stands the forest primeval." "Maidens still wear their Norman caps and kirtles of homespun, and by the evening's fire repeat Evangeline's story." "While from its rocky caverns the deep-voiced, neighboring ocean, Speaks, and in accents disconsolate answers the wail of the forest."

GAUMONT.

MARRIAGE BY AEROPLANE (3 Parts).—During the season the arrival of aviators at Stapleton was of such frequent occurrence that their coming and going aroused very little curiosity on the part of the visitors who thronged the front of this delightful seaside resort. It was different, however, when it was announced that the celebrated aviator, Jack Marriott, would arrive on the following Sunday, and during his stay would give a series of sensational flights. The coming visit aroused much speculation as to the class of exhibition the aviator proposed, but few could have prophesied its conclusion.

In addition to being a clever airman, Marriott had a way with him which appealed to the fair sex, and it was not surprising to find Lucy Harding falling in love with him. Although she had paid close attention to the flights which he gave, it was not until several days after his arrival that the two met. Red Cross day gave her an excuse for calling upon him, and after Jack had subscribed a handsome sum to the charity, conversation veered round to aviation, its risks and attractions. Lucy expressed a wish that Jack would fly round her father's villa, and he promised that he would do so on the following day. The next evening we see the aviator taking repeated flights around the villa and still further arousing the admiration of the girl. She confided to her diary that already she loved him and felt rather unhappy because she could not answer her own questions as to whether her feeling was reciprocated.

Following the flight Lucy went to the aerodrome, where she thanked the aviator for the pleasure he had given her, and artlessly expressed the opinion that the girl who shared his life with him would be very happy. When she had gone Jack thought over their conversation, and finding, after searching his own heart, that he loved too, wrote to Lucy asking her if she would share his life. He loved her and humbly placed his life at her feet.

This was what the girl was waiting for, and she replied that he had all her heart and had better come and "ask papa." Jack did not trouble to consider the opinion of papa, and, assuming that the hand of the girl must be given to him, had a betrothal bouquet cut in the garden of his villa and, flying over Lucy's house, contrived to drop it on the terrace. Her father concluded that things were not as they should be and demanded an explanation. Lucy informed him that Jack was going to ask for his consent to their marriage. The old gentleman was enraged and told his daughter that she should only marry a man of his choice, otherwise he would disinherit her.

Such is the unbounding optimism of the present-day young lady that this threat did not trouble her in the least and she immediately wrote to Jack that her father was opposed to the marriage, but that did not matter at all since they loved each other. She suggested an elopement the following morning when her father would have left for the hunting field. Seeing how matters stood, and realizing that the father's consent would be difficult to secure, Jack decided to adopt this suggestion, and the following morning met Lucy. Her father, however, had not yet left for the country, and was quickly on the track when she left the house, but before the enraged parent's motor car could reach the aerodrome the two had started. Underrating the speed of the aeroplane, the irate old gentleman pursued the machine with his car, but it was quite useless. They steered straight for the sea and within an hour had landed in Lakewood. Here they were successful in enlisting the sympathies of a lady who directed them to the house of the nearest clergyman, and the two wayward young people were made man and wife. Immediately after the ceremony they returned to Stapleton, where they met the father. As the machine approached land, we see the anxious parent watching its evolutions from his house, and he is so thankful to have his daughter safely back with him that he overlooks her conduct and makes the best of the situation as it presents itself.

FIDELITY FILM CO.

THE MYSTERY OF ST. MARTIN'S BRIDGE (Five Parts).—Our picture opens with a beautiful mountain scene and Cora, the belle of a mountain tribe, decking herself with garlands of roses. In the evening Lord Martagne, in disguise, appears at the cave of the mountain tribe and is fascinated by Cora's weird dance. They become lovers, but Lord Martagne soon wearies of the mountain girl and discards her. She calls at his home but is repulsed. She enters secretly at a masked ball in fancy costume to kill her unfaithful lover, but is foiled by his having left the city on urgent business. Lord Montagne goes on important business of a diplomatic character, and becomes a guest at the home of Irma, an attractive young woman who is engaged to be married. Irma is fascinated by Lord Montagne. Cora, the mountain girl, starts out in search of her unfaithful lover. She discovers him seated in a box at the theater with Irma. She leaves the theater when he does and follows him to his home.

On account of financial difficulties Lord Martagne writes a letter to Irma, whose father has recently died, leaving her a fortune. He leaves the letter on his desk and Cora, who enters the house, finds it. The note asks Irma to meet him on St. Martin's Bridge the next night and loan him $5,000. Cora meets Lord Martagne on the bridge and forces him to fight a pistol duel with her. She kills him and he falls from the bridge into the river below. Irma comes to keep the appointment and looking over the rail of the bridge sees the body of her lover below. Then she finds the pistol lying on the bridge and her mind gives way. She is crazed and in her delirium she imagines that she committed the murder. At her home, Albert Norton, her fiancé, listens to her story, which is overheard by a maid. He advises her to leave and escape punishment. The maid informs the police and Irma and Norton are arrested. Then Irma recovers her mind and tries to prove her innocence, but fails. She and Norton are condemned to death.

In the meantime, Cora has become a famous dancer. She learns of the conviction of Norton and Irma. It worries her greatly and on account of her high strung nerves, she falls into the fire while executing a wild fire dance and is terribly burned. When lying in bed she reads that the execution is about to take place and she confesses and insists on being taken to the scene of the execution in an automobile. She arrives just in time to prevent the double execution, and after telling her story, dies of excitement and exhaustion.

ECLECTIC.

THE DEATH OF A GEISHA (Three parts—Feb. 10).—Desperately wounded, Boris Danieff is taken prisoner by the Japanese and removed to their military hospital at Sasebo. Hanako, the daughter of a Japanese nobleman, is a trained nurse and spends much of her time ministering to the wounded Russian. He improves rapidly under her tender care, and in about six weeks is able to mingle with the other prisoners of war. About this time peace is declared between the warring nations and an exchange of prisoners is made. Boris is ordered back to his native land. But he has lost his heart to the fair Hanako and pleads with her to marry him. Her father enters and is enraged at the Russian, whom he still considers an enemy. Boris leaves, but is determined not to give up his sweetheart. He sends her a note asking her to elope with him, saying that he will call that night at moon-rise for her. With a comrade he goes to her home that night and signals to her. Softly making her way out to him, they hasten away. As soon as they are married Boris takes his little eastern bride to his home in Moscow. Here for a time they live like two little birds in a nest. But then the influence of the old environment seems to change the Russian's love for the little geisha. He invites a number of his friends to a reception, where he presents to them his Japanese bride. Among the guests is Olga Petroff, a Russian beauty, who openly makes love to Boris. This is most unwelcome to Hanako, who protests to her bold rival. She receives but scant sympathy from either her husband or Olga. This proves to be only the beginning, however, as Boris and Olga find many occasions to be together to the great sorrow of the neglected little bride.

Finally, Hanako decides to make a last appeal to Olga to remain away from her husband. For this purpose she calls on the Russian at her home. But Olga refuses to listen to the geisha and thrusts her roughly aside. Hanako secures a grip on her arm and by means of a jiu-jitsu trick, hurls her rival to a divan. Drawing a poniard, she is about to kill Olga, but is prevented by Boris, who arrives at that moment. Even this attempt fails to sway the Russian beauty, who again is received by Boris in his home. Realizing that her dream of happiness is over and that her husband no longer cares for her, Hanako commits suicide by stabbing herself. Olga and Boris, in the meantime, are drinking in the next room. Boris has spread a mat on the floor on which they sit side by side. In attempting to escape from her lover's embrace, Olga's hand comes in contact with a dark red fluid which seems to issue from beneath the door. Boris opens the door to find out the cause and is staggered by the sight of his little Japanese bride lying dead in a pool of blood. A flood of repentance comes over him as he realizes too late the strength of his little geisha's love.

WARNER'S FEATURES.

THORNS OF THE GAY WHITE WAY (Three parts).—A political boss is the proprietor of a tenement dive. He is, however, large in heart and spirit, and is ever the friend of the ill-treated girl. When he is confronted with the tragedy of his own daughter's misstep, he is overcome with remorse and closes his cafe and seeks consolement and higher ideals by leaving the trail of the bright lights for the cool green fields of rest in the country.

The politician places his motherless daughter in an exclusive seminary when she is quite young. Here, when a grown girl of eighteen, she meets a young man who fascinates her. She finally elopes with him, and her father from that moment loses all trace of his daughter. Her husband is found out to be an escaped life-termer from Sing Sing and is sent back to prison. On the verge of being put out of her boarding-house for back rent,

Made in Annapolis Valley amongst the Actual Scenes Described in the Poem

EVANGELINE

CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO., Ltd.

H. T. OLIVER, Vice-Pres. & Gen. Manager

Presents the Film Classic from Beginning to End

EVANGELINE

(Adapted from Longfellow's Immortal Poem)

FIVE REELS

Tinted and Toned

Stirring

Enthralling

Impressive

Star Cast

Perfect Photography

Natural Scenery

When in the harvest heat she bore to the reapers at noon-tide, flagons of home brewed ale.

Beautiful Paper, 1s, 3s, 6s, 12s Heralds, Photos, Slides

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

Address

1209 Candler Building, 220 West 42d Street, New York City

CLARENCE SCHOTTENFELS, Sales Manager Phone, 3559 Bryant

EVANGELINE

Made in Annapolis Valley amongst the Actual Scenes Described in the Poem

she accepts and from a strange man. He deceives her and uses her as a tool. She is accused of theft and is sent away to the penitentiary for three months. After serving her term she tries to secure a living, but is rebuked and becomes so melancholy over her fight for existence that she is about to plunge into the river and end her strife, but is saved in doing so by a Salvation Army lass, who asks her to accompany her to the man that saved her. She is taken to this same cafe that her father operates and after a few minutes is recognized by him. He is so overcome that he closes up and seeks a cleaner and better life by persuading her to leave the lure of the city.

THE RED SPIDERS (Three parts).—Cassim, a respected Mohammedan, accompanies an American tourist on a treasure hunt for the lost emerald mines, which are said to exist in a remote part of Asia. On the journey back to civilization after discovering the mines the tourist dies, but not before he has entrusted Cassim with the mission of seeking his nephew to deliver over to him his share of the emeralds. About this time The Red Spiders, a notorious gang of thieves with headquarters in New York, send their king and queen to Turkey on an important mission. They kidnap Cassim's beautiful daughter from the harem and bring her back to New York.

CAUGHT IN THE WEB OF INTRIGUE (Three parts).—Farman, a clever rogue, in league with Betty Love, an adventuress, is the trusted secretary of Armor, a wealthy man. Failing to bring about the mock marriage of Betty and Henry, Armor's favorite nephew, Farman dynamites the train in which the uncle and nephew are traveling. They escape unharmed and turn to render help to the injured. One of these is a beautiful girl named Adeline. She promptly falls in love with Henry and in a short time after she recovers they are married.

Armor returns to Paris and is murdered. Henry is told that his uncle committed suicide. A celebrated detective sets to work upon the case. Adeline has a cousin with a criminal record who blackmails her. She is renounced by Henry, who leaves for Paris. There he is kidnapped by Farman's band, who demand a $100,000 check for his release. Adeline, also in the power of the schemers, goes mad and sets fire to the house, in which all the accomplices meet their death. Henry escapes by crawling over the roofs and with the detective's aid rescues his wife from the burning house. By the sea Adeline gradually recovers her reason and her penitent husband.

AMMEX.

HER BROTHER'S PARD (Three parts).—Sam Prior, one of four mining partners, receives a letter telling him that an uncle has died bequeathing to him a fortune. Sam, a black sheep, has not seen his folks for fifteen years. With Jack Norton he obtains from a justice of the peace a letter of identification. Sam becomes drunk in a low dive. In the fight which ensues a gambler is killed. Circumstances point to Jack as being the gambler. When Sam is drowned after an orgy, Jack is arrested, charged with murder. In his pocket is Sam's letter of identification which he was keeping for his friend. He successfully masquerades as Sam.

Jack goes to claim Sam's legacy and meets a girl who is introduced to him as his sister, whom he is supposed not to have seen for fifteen years. Jack learns to love his "sister," who worships her big "brother." Ashamed of his deception he goes away, leaving a note explaining all, and that he loves her—not in a "brotherly way." The girl, realizing her own deep affection for him, follows Jack to the mines. Juan, a Mexican, implicated in the fight in which the gambler had been killed, has become outlawed through his crime and now captains a band of Mexicans. They raid and ransack the miner's camp. They next attack the girl and her miner escort, leaving him for dead and carrying away the girl as a consort for Juan.

The supposedly dead miner revives and gets the news to Jack of Juan's villainy. The miner goes for help while Jack goes to Juan's camp. He acts the part of a boastful desperado and accredits to himself the killing of the gambler. Juan angry, demonstrates how he himself did the killing to settle an old grievance. Juan's scouts tell him of the arrival of the sheriff and his posse. Suspecting Jack he overpowers him and leaves him in a cabin, to which he sets fire. The sheriff dashes in and the girl braves the smoke and fire to rescue Jack. When he emerges carrying her, Juan, fighting desperately, fires his last shot at Jack and misses. The sheriff arrests Jack, who is quickly freed upon the girl's substantiation of Juan's confession.

TRANS-OCEANIC FILMS INC.

THE RACE FOR THE RUBIES (Three parts).—A gang of jewel thieves gain possession of a valuable ruby necklace, cheating the jeweler by a daring ruse. Nat Pinkerton is commissioned to capture the thieves and when pursuing his investigations he receives a mysterious letter advising him that the gang is going to Naples on an evening train. Nat determines to follow up the clue, and missing the train, follows by motor car until he is able to get on board at a wayside station. Maxedo, the leader of the thieves, recognizes Pinkerton and sends a code wire to his confederates at Naples, asking them to stop the train before it reaches that city. By greasing the rails in a tunnel and starting a fire, the thieves hold up the express, and during the confusion that follows Maxedo and his confederates escape. Baffled for the time being, Nat Pinkerton takes up his quarters at Naples and commences a search of that city. He is visited by Danton, a traitorous member of the gang, who tells him that the thieves meet at the Lombardo Tavern. Going to the tavern, Pinkerton learns the plans of the thieves, but unknown to him they learn that he is on their track, and hear him arranging to meet Danton that night. The gang visits Danton's home and attack the traitor, leaving him for dead. One of their number then disguises himself as Danton and keeps the appointment with Pinkerton, giving the detective a letter stating that the rubies are hidden in a certain house. Pinkerton visits the house with his assistant, Dick Sharp, and falling in an ambush is flung into a pit full of bears. Sharp saves his master from the bears, and together they go to Danton's home. There they find the traitor lying dead, but in his final agony the man has scribbled a note stating that his murderers are dining that night at the Palace Restaurant. With a strong force of police, Pinkerton raids the restaurant, and the gang is rounded up. The stolen rubies are being worn by a woman member of the gang, so that Pinkerton's triumph is complete.

AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION.

THE MYSTERY OF THE FATAL PEARL (Five parts).—The mystery surrounding the temple of Buddha which contains many priceless gems attracts the attention of two adventurers. They plan and eventually steal the holy pearl from the head of the idol. Next morning the theft is discovered by the Brahmins, and the high priest curses the thief, calling on Buddha to wreak vengeance on everyone into whose possession the jewel falls. The thieves hasten to Europe to sell their ill-gotten prize and offer it to Degory Priest, a well-known collector of rare gems, for $10,000. Priest invites one of the thieves, a man named Allen, to stay at his home over night and he will buy the pearl and pay for it next morning. The other man, Walker, decides to keep watch and wait in the grounds of the mansion. During the night, the evil influence of the pearl causes Allen to see strange visions. He has a paralytic stroke from which he dies. Priest, who had a motive for inviting Allen to stay the night, visits his room and finding him dead, takes the pearl. Three days later, Priest meets with a fatal accident while hunting. After his death the pearl is handed over to his son and heir, Charles Priest, who has gotten into financial difficulties and is in the power of a money lender named Lewis. Lewis brings pressure to bear on young Priest who, unable to raise the money and under the fatal influences of the pearl, commits suicide, before doing so, telling his wife to rid herself of the pearl which has brought so much misfortune on his family. She consequently sells it to Lewis. Violet Lewis seeing the beautiful gem in her father's possession, asks to be allowed to wear it for one day only at her coming of age reception. He consents, but as a precaution, has it insured for $100,000. At the reception three Hindoo performers give a show in which the famous William Tell shooting act forms one of the items. Instead of shooting the apple, the Hindoo shoots the pearl out of its setting without destroying it. This supposed accident causes a sensation and a scuffle takes place to find the missing pearl. Finally the manager of the insurance brokers, who is at the reception to guard the interests of his firm, finds the pearl, but on close examination discovers it to be a clever imitation of the original stone. And now the question arises, "Who Has the Genuine Pearl."

BELMONT.

CAPTURED BY REDSKINS (Three parts).—Martin Byers, his wife and two children, one boy, Jim, and a daughter, Polly, deciding to make a home for himself and family in the growing West, reaches a place in a western forest. He strikes a location that seems adapted for the building of a new home, not knowing that it is close to an Indian encampment, the savages being in command of Red Dog. An Indian scout sent out to reconnoiter for Red Dog returns with the information that a party of settlers has just pitched camp almost within the Indian encampment. Upon this information he orders an attack.

Martin Byers' daughter, Polly, a child of five, noting the approach of the savages, becomes panic-stricken and strays away. The settlers, realizing their danger, forget about the little one and drive away in haste pursued by redskins. The Indians decide to abandon the chase and "cover" their trail as best they can. They return to their tents and on their way find the child. Red Dog takes her in his arms and returns to his home, where he decides to bring the child up as an Indian. Jim had been given a locket with his sister's photograph in it, and as years roll on she is forgotten by her people and the Indians bring her up to become a squaw for the red man. Martin Byers becomes addicted to gambling. He has in his possession the locket which he has stolen from Jim's sweetheart. He places it on the table as one of the stakes.

Polly is now an Indian squaw, and has been wooed and promised to an Indian chieftain, Red Dawn. She decides she must escape from her captivity and steals away from the encampment. Red Dawn, suspicious, follows her and after confronting her and pleading that she return to his people, which she refuses, he attempts to throttle her and perhaps might have killed her were it not for Jim Byers, who enters upon the scene and at the point of his pistol drives Red Dawn away, picks up Polly, whom he no longer recognizes, and carries her to the cabin of his sweetheart.

Polly is revived and decides to make her escape. Red Dawn makes a captive of Jim and demands of him Polly's hiding-place. Jim tries to guide them to another point, but the redmen follow the trail and reach the cabin before Polly makes her escape. They torture Jim, but threats do not bring Polly's whereabouts from him and the redmen order that the cabin be burned. Red Dawn scales the walls of the cabin, attempting to gain an entrance therein through the chimney, and drops down in the cabin room. The Indians set fire to the cabin, thinking they can drive the inmates out. The cowboys in the vicinity are aroused by the commotion and rush to the rescue. Red Dog has searched in every white man's home for the child, but without success. He enters the gambling den just as Martin Byers decides to play for the value of the locket, but after second thought puts it back in his pocket, thinking that he cannot lose the valued keepsake. Martin, attracted by the rush of the cowboys, enters the chase with them and after a hand-to-hand conflict, the redskins are defeated and made to retire. Polly is brought forth from the cabin unhurt and, after telling her story, the locket is produced and Martin exclaims that this Indian girl is his daughter.

JESSE LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

THE SQUAW MAN (Six parts).—James Wynnegate, an English army officer, is made the guardian of a trust fund raised by the members of his regiment for the relief of the widows of those who die in battle. The Earl of Kerhill, a member of Wynnegate's regiment, by means of a forged check, embezzles the fund.

To save the honor of the family, Wynnegate agrees with the Earl's mother to disappear and let it be understood that he is the embezzler. He leaves England in a trading schooner. The schooner, in mid-ocean, catches afire, and burns to the water's edge, the crew being saved in the lifeboats. The boat containing Wynnegate and others is rescued by a steamer bound for America, and in the garb of an English tourist, he is seen next on the Great White Way.

Wynnegate changes his name to Jim Carston and is instrumental in saving a Westerner from a confidence game. He and the Westerner become friends and at the latter's suggestion, they go West, where Carston buys a ranch. His general good fellowship, manliness and upright dealings incurs for him the jealousy and hatred of a noted bad man, "Cash" Hawkins. Hawkins makes several attempts on Carston which, however, are unsuccessful. Hawkins on the third attempt nearly succeeds, but is shot down from behind by a beautiful Indian girl, who secretly loves Carston. The Indian girl, Nat-U-Rich, later saves Carston from death in the mountains and again from an attack of mountain wolves.

Out of gratitude, Carston marries Nat-U-Rich and a little boy blesses the union.

In the meantime the Earl of Kerhill's mother is advised to seek another climate and locates in the vicinity of Carston's ranch and they meet, after two years. Carston is now known as the Squaw Man, a successful ranchero.

The Earl of Kerhill, injured unto death during a polo game, signs a confession, exonerating Carston.

Carston's friends and relatives in England then endeavor to prevail upon him to return, but realizing that his squaw wife would not endure in English society, remains on his ranch at Green River. He decides, however, to let his little boy return to be educated for his station in life, for the child eventually will be rich and bear the title of Earl.

Nat-U-Rich—the mother—learns her son is to be taken from her and misconstruing the intent, suicides. The widow of the Earl of Kerhill is at the ranch with English friends and as the picture slowly fades away, the Squaw Man turns to her—his first love.

RAMO.

THE GOVERNOR'S GHOST (Three parts).—Stuart Homer, backed by the reform party, runs for the assembly. Rev. Richard Walters and his son, Horace, aid him. Homer wants his sister, Alice, knowing nothing of her love affair with Jefferson Blair, a young lawyer. Helen, Homer's wife, knows, however, and opposes the match and an elopement is planned. Helen finds Blair's note to Alice, reading simply, "Come to my bungalow, I love you. We will go away together. Believe me, sincerely, Jeff."

Determined to prevent this, Helen starts for his bungalow alone, Homer being at the political meeting. Alice, on her way to Blair, crosses an old bridge to avoid being seen by Walters, who happens in that vicinity. The bridge falls, throwing her unconscious in a deep ravine, where she is exposed to the storm until found by strangers and later brought home. Helen is seen by Walters en-

COPYRIGHT

ORIGINALITY

IMPORTANT TO

RENTERS AND EXHIBITORS

YOU WANT SOMETHING NEW AND ORIGINAL TO HANDLE IN ORDER TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF EXHIBITORS TO YOUR OFFICE, SOMETHING THAT WILL MAKE BIG PROFITS FOR YOU AS WELL AS YOUR CUSTOMERS.

WE HAVE THE VERY THING YOU HAVE BEEN SEEKING. IT IS A NOVELTY, CLEVERLY ARRANGED, AS WELL AS A DEEPLY INTERESTING SUBJECT. FOR DETAILS OF THIS UNIQUE SCHEME AND SPECIAL ADVERTISING, APPLY AT ONCE.

AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION, 1018 LONGACRE BUILDING
BROADWAY AT 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

THE MYSTERY OF THE FATAL PEARL

AND

THE SEQUEL

IS THE TITLE OF THE FILM. IT IS RELEASED IN TWO SERIES. THE FIRST IN THREE REELS—THE SECOND IN TWO REELS. EACH PART IS A COMPLETE, ENGROSSING STORY—TOGETHER A FASCINATING PROBLEM WITH AN ASTONISHING SOLUTION IS PRESENTED. IT ALLOWS THE RENTER AND EXHIBITOR UNLIMITED SCOPE FOR BOOSTING AND ADVERTISING AND WILL BRING PROFITS TO BOTH AS SURE AS DAY FOLLOWS NIGHT. BOTH THE PRICE AND IDEA WILL PLEASE AND ASTONISH YOU. BE WELL ADVISED AND GET IN FIRST.

BRINGS SURE PROFITS

FEATURE FILMS

tering Blair's bungalow. Forming an unjust conclusion, Walters hurries to Homer at the meeting. Homer, not knowing of Blair's love for Alice, goes to the bungalow. Meanwhile Helen has surprised Blair, and shown him the note and told him she intends to wait and take Alice home. At this junction, Homer arrives and upon finding the incriminating note, orders Helen to leave his house and her little girl. Helen is caught in the storm and picked up practically out of her mind by an automobile party of questionable character. Alice is brought home only to die. Her story and Blair's grief convince Homer of his terrible mistake. He is agonized at obtaining no clue to Helen's whereabouts. Helen's despondency makes her a ready convert to the fast life of her companions.

After fifteen years, we find Homer as State Governor, his daughter, Mary, away at school, and his wife a leading factor among her associates in their reprehensible career. Fate brings Mary Homer, her daughter, under the consideration of "the Master." Unknowingly she aids in the bringing of Mary into "the Master's" power. Mary's disappearance arouses the Governor's fears, but to avoid the dangers of publicity and disgrace, he puts a detective, Reggie Wilde, on the case. A restaurant is the means of picking the acquaintance of "Crooked Fingers" as Reggie looks easy, and entrance is gained to the house, where "the Master" lives, and Mary is detained. Wilde arrives during an attempted escape of Mary, the result of which is the discovery by Helen of a birthmark on Mary, proving to her that Mary is her own daughter. Helen plans Mary's escape. Meanwhile Wilde, finding the situation with "Crooked Fingers" and his confederates has reached a climax, shows his hand and under forceful "persuasion" the crooks are forced to telephone for the police, and then locked in a closet. "The Master" takes Wilde by surprise, overpowers him in a terrific struggle and stops Helen in her attempt at escaping with Mary. In desperation Helen shoots "the Master" pust as the police arrive. Mary has fainted and Helen is arrested for the murder. Wilde takes Mary to the Governor.

Blair, now a prominent lawyer, is assigned to the defense of Helen "Smith." On conferring with Helen, he recognizes her, but promises to keep her identity a secret. Mary is the chief witness against Helen "Smith," and during her testimony the Governor recognizes his wife. Tortured and powerless, he hears her testimony, which results in a verdict of guilty. The Governor visits Helen's cell and promises her to keep so that their daughter may not suffer disgrace.

Urged by Blair, the Governor decides to pardon Helen, realizing that to do so, he must satisfy the public and get his reasons and thereby bring disgrace on himself and daughter. The decision proves needless, for Helen's weakened condition and refusal of food results in her death before the pardon leaves the Governor's hands. The Governor's Nemesis has disappeared; a Higher Court has assumed jurisdiction; who will be adjudged guilty?

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FILM COMPANY.

A DAUGHTER OF EVE (Three parts).—Claire Esmarck is a woman of charm, but she is headstrong and filled with caprice and brings trouble into the lives of those about her. In the story she is first seen at a reception and here she comes face to face with Jacques Ramm, her first husband, from whom she had been divorced. She scorns him at first, but relents when told of the cunning ways of the child of their union. Ramm grants her permission to see the child, but the couple is observed by Dr. Esmarck, who is jealous and unaware that his wife is a divorced woman. On the following day Claire accompanies Ramm to his home and holds her child in her arms with maternal delight. While she is with Ramm, Dr. Esmarck is visiting his avaricious old uncle, who is making his will, but who declares that he will cut his nephew off unless he repays the money he has borrowed from him.

Next day Ramm's child is taken ill and he hastens to Claire, urging her to plead with her husband to attend the child. Dr. Esmarck is jealous of Ramm and at first refuses, but when Claire drops to her knees and confesses that she is the mother of the child and reveals her past, he relents and visits the little one. This duty performed he sells his wife's favorite horse in order to meet the demands of his greedy old uncle. He leaves the latter's house, but the financial transaction is observed by a tramp. The latter enters the room and the shock of his sudden appearance causes the old man to die of heart failure. The housekeeper finds him on the floor and noting that Dr. Esmarck had been with him a few minutes before, causes his arrest on a charge of murder. By a strange kink of fate, Jacques Ramm, the lawyer, is selected to prosecute the doctor and during the ordeal Claire sits beside her husband and listens to the burning denunciations by the father of her child. The jury returns a verdict of guilty.

Being left thus alone she engages herself as a nurse in a nearby hospital. She is assigned to attend a patient who had been injured in an explosion. It is the tramp who was responsible for the death of the old uncle. During his convalescence he reads of the conviction of Dr. Esmarck on a charge of murder and confesses the truth to Claire. The latter hastens to place the matter before the authorities and in due time her husband is released. Realizing her great devotion, he forgives her for her secret past and they go forth together to enjoy the inheritance which comes to them through the old man's will.

CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION.

GOLDEN GATE WEEKLY, NO. 59 (Jan. 24).—Disastrous Shipwreck Off California Coast.—Pilot schooner "Pathfinder" caught in gale is crushed on rocks. Motion picture camera man on scene to catch craft just before sea swallowed her up.

Quarter Million Dollar Fire at San Pedro.—Conflagration, thought to have been started by I. W. W. agitators, wreaks vengeance on the largest section of southern California city.

Newly Elected President of United Railways.—Jesse Lilienthal, one of the city's most celebrated lawyers and executives, elected to succeed Patrick Calhoun as chief of San Francisco's street car service.

In Monterey County.—Motion picture film testifies to the great scenic beauty of resort section. Cypress tree over 100 years old has odd resemblance to ostrich.

Ocean Makes Assault Upon Land.—Sea, angered by terrific storm, tears away embankment at Cliff House and threatens to destroy old landmarks.

Fighting Captain of San Francisco "Seals."—Del Howard demonstrates the strategies of bat, glove and ball to new recruits on his team.

BRAND NEW Davids' Glassine
Announcement Slide Ink
Put up in boxes containing six one ounce bottles of different colors, viz: Red, Green, Blue, Violet, Black and White. Price per box $1.00. This ink can be used with an ordinary pen and is manufactured by the oldest ink and adhesive concern in America. Established 1825.
THADDEUS DAVIDS CO.
Main Office and Factory
95 Van Dam St., New York
Western Branch and Warehouse
18 West Kinzie St., Chicago, Ill.

Picture Theaters Projected.

New York, N. Y.—Economy Real Property Company are planning to construct an apen air moving picture theater, with seating capacity of 1,800, and to cost about $12,000.

Chelsea, N. J.—William J. Farley, Atlantic City, N. J., has had plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 40 feet, to cost $22,000.

Everett, Mass.—Penn Varney, 25 Exchange street, Lynn, Mass., is preparing plans for a two-story moving picture theater, 53 by 108 feet, to cost $15,000, to be erected here sometime next spring.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—O. K. Borham is planning to have a store property remodeled into a modern moving picture theater, to seat about 300 persons. The improvements are estimated at $5,000.

Cleveland, O.—The United Realty Construction Company, care Louis Abrams, Williamson Building, have awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 47 by 150 feet, with seating capacity of 550, and to cost about $15,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Charles Buchholz, 395 Mitchell street, has let the contract for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 120 feet.

Lyons, Ia.—Miller Ladehoff, 1103 Comanche avenue, Clinton, Ia., has obtained the contract to construct a one-story theater building, 40 by 106 feet, for the Lyons Investment Company. The building will have a concrete foundation.

Washington, D. C.—Beahm & Rice, 615 Fourteenth street, Northwest, have been awarded the contract to build a one-story moving picture theater, 44 by 90 feet, to cost $4,000, for Dr. Louis Kolipinski, 631 First street, Northwest.

Minneapolis, Minn.—American Realty & Building Company, 211 West Lake street, have secured the contract to build a $15,000 moving picture theater, 42 by 128 feet, for the Lake Amusement Company, James P. Agnew, president, 31 West Lake street.

Milwaukee, Wis.—H. C. Hensel, 402 Caswell building, has prepared plans for a one-story theater building, 40 by 100 feet.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—L. B. Mantonya, 74 Columbia Heights, contemplates building early in 1914 a ten-story theater and office building, 100 by 100 feet, to cost $280,00.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Ellen M. Lyons, 857 Prospect place, will have rear exit built to her moving picture theater to cost $4,000.

New York, N. Y.—Theodore W. Myers, 20 New street, is to build a one-story moving picture theater, 36 by 100 feet, to cost $15,000.

Deposit, N. Y.—P. H. Mather, Colport, N. Y., intends to erect a one-story balcony moving picture theater, 30 by 90 feet, to cost $5,000.

New York, N. Y.—The Walter C. Rollins Estate, care Theodore C. Jung, 2 East Fordham road, has had preliminary sketches prepared for a theater and apartment building. The theater will have seating capacity of 1,500 persons. There will also be several stores on the ground floor.

New York, N. Y.—Henry Morgenthau Realty Company, 18 East 42d street, are planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, to seat 600 and cost $10,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Preston & Walker, 1932 Dime Bank building, have prepared plans for a two-story theater, store and flat building, 40 by 95 feet, to seat 400 persons.

Dayton, Ohio.—Theodore C. Lindsay and E. A. Leonard, 916 Reibold building, are to build a six-story moving picture theater and office building, 33 by 125 feet, to cost $90,000.

New York, N. Y.—M. L. White, E. D. Merrill and S. T. Jackson, 59 Wall street, have had plans completed for alterations to a residence building which is to be turned into a modern moving picture theater. It will have seating capacity of 600 persons and will cost about $10,000. Charles Steiner is the lessee.

New York, N. Y.—Louis A. Sheinart, 194 Bowery, has prepared plans and specifications for a $25,000 moving picture theater to seat 1,000 persons.

Dayton, Ohio.—Greater Dayton Amusement Company, care Joseph Montgomery, 210 South Jefferson street, are planning to erect a two-story moving picture theater, 52 by 75 feet, to cost $12,000.

New London, Conn.—E. W. Maynard, 226 Tremont street, Boston, has prepared plans and specifications for a two-story theater building, 50 by 140 feet.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Samuel Pallen, 1683 Pitkin street, will build a one-story moving picture theater, 42 by 100 feet, to cost $15,000.

Hartford, Conn.—John E. Talcott, 1003 Main street, will erect a two-story theater building, 110 by 130 feet.

Birnamwood, Wis.—Village of Birnamwood, Guy Van Doren, clerk, contemplates in spring erecting hall building and opera house, to cost about $10,000.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—B. F. Keith, G. B. Cox and associates, 519 Walnut street, contemplate building the early part of the year a twelve-story theater and office building, 123.2 by 100 feet, to cost $350,000. The theater will be of fireproof construction and contain, besides all modern improvements, a lobby.

Anglo-American Official No. 2--Tour Announcement.

BEFOREHAND, ATTENTION IS RESPECTFULLY CALLED TO THIS PRELIMINARY OBSERVATION:

Upon the heralding of a European masterpiece, whether filmed or dramatic, all business centres immediately swarm with inferior imitations of the approaching ORICINAL, only to deceive and disappoint the expectant public—as in the case of "Quo Vadis?" and other impressive productions.

FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT IS NOW MADE OF THE SPEEDY EXCLUSIVE BOOKINGS IN FIRST CLASS THEATRES IN NEW YORK CITY, AND THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES OF

The Original Masterly Conception
By the Celebrated Film d'Art of Paris

OF ALEXANDRE DUMAS' HEROIC ROMANCE

THE THREE MUSKETEERS

WHICH HAS FOR MONTHS BEEN THE SWEEPING SENSATION OF EUROPE, ASIA AND AFRICA, THE CURRENT SEASON, ALSO AT LAURILLARD AND SEDGER'S RENOWNED NEW GALLERY KINEMA, IN LONDON. PRESENTED IN 7 MIGHTY ACTS AND 279 SCENES WITH SPECIAL MUSIC BY AN AUGMENTED ORCHESTRA AND REALISTIC SOUND EFFECTS ALL DUMAS-INSPIRED. UPON THE TERMINATION OF THE NEW YORK PREMIERE, THE GREAT MASTERPIECE WILL BE GENERALLY RELEASED.

DETAILS OF ABOVE BOOKINGS WILL BE MADE KNOWN IN THE NEXT OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT NO. 3.

TO FOLLOW THE TOUR OF "THE THREE MUSKETEERS," A SIMILAR TOUR WILL BE UNDERTAKEN OF THE OPULENT MAJESTIC FILM-TRIBUTE TO THE LATE BELOVED QUEEN VICTORIA, ENTITLED

Sixty Years a Queen

THE CONSUMMATE WORK OF THE BARKER MOTION COMPANY OF LONDON, DEPICTING, WITH ADORING FIDELITY, THE MOST MOMENTOUS EPISODES OF HER UNSULLIED REIGN, AN AGGREGATE OF NEARLY 10,000 PEOPLE AND HUNDREDS OF HORSES PARTICIPATING IN THE 7 IMMENSE ACTS AND 289 SCENES.

For the first time in Motion Picture Industry the advertising material of this and succeeding Anglo-American exhibitions will be strictly patterned after the standard regular attractions, and the material will emanate from the Morgan lithographic studios in Cleveland under the personal direction of the noted theatrical artist, Mr. Benj. Wells.

Address THE ANGLO-AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION
GEORGE W. LEDERER, Director General
Temporary Offices, 1482 Broadway, New York

YES—ANOTHER NEW BRAND

COSMOS—A WORD WHICH MEANS:—PERTAINING TO THE UNIVERSE AND TO THE LAWS WHICH GOVERN IT. IN OTHER WORDS:—SOMETHING FOR ALL THE WORLD.

OUR FIRST RELEASE

Famous Battles

COSMOS FILM CO.

COSMOS FILM COMPANY
COSMOS
145 W. 45TH ST - NEW YORK

THIS WEEK WE MAKE OUR BOW

AND WE HAVE COME TO STAY. OUR BUSINESS WILL BE TO PROVIDE FILMS OF THE BETTER CLASS TO THOSE WHO ARE PARTICULAR AS TO WHAT THEY EXHIBIT.

of Napoleon

A MAGNIFICENT HISTORICAL SPECTACLE

IN THREE PARTS, BEING A PICTORIAL RESUME OF THE HIGH TIDE IN THE AFFAIRS OF THE EMPEROR, IN THE YEARS OF 1807 TO 9. POSITIVELY THE PEER OF ANY MILITARY PRODUCTION TODAY.

145 W. 45th St.—New York

The Star Who Made the Motion Picture Famous 'Round the World

Marion Leonard

In the Three Part Success

THE AWAKENING OF DONNA ISOLLA

The frenzied, fearful moonlit fight o'er a wounded woman's soul—the deadly duel in the dark of night lit by the flashes of crashing swords

Are just two features of its scene after scene of something startling, something new and something better done. Penciled, produced and promoted by Stanner E. V. Taylor at Miss Leonard's Studio, 423 Classon Ave., Brooklyn.

CHARLES V. BARKER, Inc.

GENERAL SALES REPRESENTATIVE

SUITE 601, WORLD'S TOWER, 110 W. 40th ST.

CHARLES L. GASKILL, Director-Manager
L. J. SLEVIN, Business Representative

THE productions of the Helen Gardner Picture Players will hereafter be sold only through

CHARLES·V·BARKER·Inc.

601 WORLDS TOWER BUILDING
110-112 WEST 40th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

NOTE:—Letters to the Helen Gardner Picture Players should be addressed to the Helen Gardner Studio at Tappan-on-the-Hudson, New York, and not to the business offices

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Everything for Your Theatre

Powers and Simplex Machines.

Carbons, Compensarcs, Cement, Tickets, Photos, etc. Parts for all machines in stock.

Your orders will have prompt attention.

A. & B. MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.
RALEIGH, N. C.

MUSIC — THE VERY LATEST — MUSIC

ORGAN ORCHESTRIONS

PLAYS TWO WAYS

AUTOMATICALLY
AND
BY HAND

MEETS EVERY REQUIREMENT

An instrument of this kind will meet the requirements of any first-class picture theatre. You can play popular, classic, sacred or dance pieces, as the instrument is only limited to the kind of music desired.

BUILT FOR ANY GIVEN SPACE.

THEY REPRODUCE THE PLAYING OF THE GREATEST ORGANISTS

ELIMINATE EXPERIMENTS

When you purchase a WELTE instrument you eliminate experiments. Your value is represented in every detail, as is attested by being in the homes of the wealthiest and most representative people in the world.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

M. WELTE & SONS, Inc., 273 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. City
ESTABLISHED 1832

THE ALL-STARS OF EUROPE

Present

"THE MASTER ROGUE"

A Wonderful Production
In Three Acts

"THE FUGITIVE"

A Savoia Sensation
In Three Acts

If you want these features, quick action is advised. Write for details.

FEATURES IDEAL

227 West 42d Street NEW YORK

THE FAMOUS PLAYERS OF FRANCE

Present

"THE ADVENTURESS"

A Money-Getter
In Three Full Reels

With hypnotizing one, three and six-sheet posters to pull the patrons in. All kinds of advertising.

For further details write or wire

UNION FEATURES

225 West 42d Street NEW YORK

GUNDLACH
Projection Lenses

have proved a revelation to thousands of exhibitors who thought they had a good picture. We improved their pictures.

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

EXHIBITORS everywhere are seeking a screen that will show natural and lifelike pictures and relieve their patrons of the terrible eye-strain that they are now subject to. In the RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN you will find what you are looking for.

The Screen That Will Solve Your Projection Problems

THE RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN is absolutely free from the imperfections of other makes, and shows no veil, halfmoon or cloud effects. The whites and blacks are natural, and the tints and colors show up beautifully. The screen gives a wonderful depth and perspective to the picture. Every detail is perfectly brought out, and although the picture is clear as crystal, brilliant and beautiful, it is also soft and restful to the eye.

ARE YOU A LIVE MANAGER?

Do you want not only to improve your picture but at the same time reduce your electric bill 50%? If you do, write Department 17 for complete information.

G. H. CALLAGHAN
7th Fl., Heidelberg Bldg.
New York Office

F. P. BLOOMFIELD
Suite 9 and 10, Hartley Bldg.
Pittsburg Office

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Co.
NÜLSEN BLDG., 6th and Olive Streets ST. LOUIS, MO.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW JERSEY

EXHIBITORS:

In addition to controlling the productions of the

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.

We now offer the entire output of the

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

FIRST RELEASES:

"THE SQUAW MAN"
WITH
DUSTIN FARNUM
AND SUPERB CAST

"BREWSTER'S MILLIONS"
WITH
EDWARD ABELES
AND ALL STAR CAST

FAMOUS PLAYERS EXCHANGE

No. 1331 VINE ST., Telephone Walnut, 527 PHILADELPHIA

No. 71 W. 23rd ST., Telephone Gramercy 6865 NEW YORK

WHICH?

WEIGH THEM IN YOUR MIND AND DECIDE—
Get our large free samples—let us show you the evidence of your own eyes

SURELY SEEING IS BELIEVING

35,000 square feet of floor surface. A complete screen regardless of size every 30 minutes. We guarantee shipment within ten hours after order is received. We guarantee MIRROROIDE for five years against oxidation, cracking, peeling or in any way deteriorating. Will any other manufacturer of screens give you this guarantee?

Talk isn't everything—it isn't one-half of everything—

RESULTS COUNT

Will any other screen manufacturer give you the same kind of guarantee? Ask them.

33⅓c A SQUARE FOOT 33⅓c
FOR MIRROROIDE

Why can we sell you the world's best screen at this price? Simply because we can turn out more screens in one day than our competitors can in two weeks. Because this is a factory. We have machinery, the capital, the factory, the competent employees that know.

OVER 7000 MIRROROIDE SCREENS IN USE

Over 4,000 endorsements. Weekly shipments made to England, China, Japan, Canada and all over the States. Exhibitors who want results, who obtain results, have installed

MIRROROIDE

Why don't you do likewise? Your own film exchange, your own dealer can supply you. Do you realize that we have MIRROROIDE agencies in every important city in the world?

THE J. H. GENTER CO.,
Gentlemen: Newburgh, N. Y.

I wish to advise you that we have received the curtain, and it is now in use in our Grand Theatre, and certainly is a beauty. We cannot speak loud enough in our praise of this curtain. Our patrons—and they are numbered by the thousands daily—are simply delighted with the improvement of this curtain, and we would be more than pleased to use our name as reference in case anyone in this territory, or any other for that matter, that is in the market for the best in the curtain line.

Wishing you continued success, we beg to remain, Yours very truly,

GRAND AMUSEMENT CO.,
Johnstown, Pa. GEO. C. KNOX.

Wake up if possible. Come and see the largest screen factory in the world

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc., Newburgh, N. Y.

The Battle of Waterloo

FIVE REELS

THE BIGGEST MONEY GETTER EVER RELEASED

ONLY THESE FEW STATES LEFT!

Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Indiana, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas

WIRE YOUR OFFERS IMMEDIATELY TO

Waterloo Film Company, 145 West 45th Street NEW YORK

P. P. CRAFT, Mgr.

PASQUALI AMERICAN CO. Inc.

110 W. 40th St.
2004 World's Tower Building
New York City

G. ALBERT AMATO, Pres.
WILLIAM J. LEE, Mgr.

STATE RIGHT BUYERS, HERE ARE THREE PICTURES WORTHY OF YOUR ATTENTION

A SOUL'S TEMPEST

A PSYCHOLOGICAL DRAMA IN THREE PARTS

The GAMBLER'S REVENGE

IN FOUR PARTS

UNDER SUSPICION

A SENTIMENTAL DRAMA IN THREE PARTS

TO BE RELEASED THE LATTER PART OF FEBRUARY

ALL HAVE 1-3-6 POSTERS. PHOTOS, HERALDS AND SLIDES

ALL PASQUALI PICTURES COPYRIGHTED

ANNOUNCEMENT
TO FILM MANUFACTURERS

WE have just opened our large, newly equipped poster department to fulfill your poster requirements.

Quick, reliable service and really artistic posters of the highest quality at a reasonable charge is what we think you want.

RIGHT NOW we are at your service with our excellent organization of detail artists and our modernly equipped plant under the most experienced management in the Poster Lithograph business.

POSTERS FURNISHED WITH UNION LABEL IF YOU WISH

For prices and information Phone Tremont 3485. F. J. WALKER, JR., New York Representative

ERIE LITHOGRAPH COMPANY
12th and Parade Streets Erie, Pennsylvania

The BUNNY THEATRE, New York City, recently completed, with the finest equipment throughout, seating Nine Hundred, USES THE AUTOMATIC.

Features—
RAPID, SAFE and CONVENIENT.
ISSUES, COUNTS, REGISTERS and PROTECTS.

1500
Moving Picture Theatres in the United States and Canada use
OUR AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTERS
WHY NOT YOU?

If you are interested in

Amusement Parks
Baseball Parks
Dancing and Bathing Pavilions
Moving Picture Houses
Railways and Ferries
Soda Fountains

Write for Prices and New Booklet which explains fully

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK
THIRD NAT'L BANK BLDG., ST. LOUIS

"The Mexican Rebellion"

Thrilling Adventures of an American in Mexico

A sensational story of romance and war, showing how an American soldier of fortune joined the Mexican rebel army and had many narrow escapes from death.

A timely subject, right up to the minute, regarding which columns and columns are being written in the daily papers. The title alone will draw the public.

THREE PARTS

BIG PUBLICITY. One, three and six sheet lithographs in four colors, heralds, photos and slides.

STATE RIGHTS are now selling. Wire territory desired.

Ammex M. P. Mfg. Co.

Candler Bldg., New York City

Tenth Floor H. J. Streyckmans, Sales Mgr.

RAMO Features

First January Feature

The Governor's Ghost

IN THREE EXCITING ACTS

This photo feature will make you hold your breath with excitement

IOWA, NEBRASKA, MINNESOTA, COLORADO, THE NORTHWEST AND THE ENTIRE SOUTH OPEN

COMMUNICATE DIRECT WITH
C. LANG COBB, JR.
Manager Sales and Publicity

RAMO FILMS, Inc.

Columbia Theatre Building
47th STREET and SEVENTH AVENUE
NEW YORK

Canadian Representatives:
INTERNATIONAL FEATURE FILM CO., Ltd.
New Birks Bldg., Montreal

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

TALENT FURNISHED—Male and female musicians, singers, etc., furnished by THOMAS J. HAMLIN, INC., Phoenix Building, Minneapolis, Minnesota. We book everything for theaters, celebrations, etc., also buy and sell theaters. Licensed, incorporated and established 1912.

A NO. 1 MOVING PICTURE.—Operator and machine repair man. Years of experience. Gilt edge references and now working. Been with this house three years. Want a change of climate. Address O. A. R., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

SUCCESSFUL MANAGER.—Wants position. Will take full charge for proprietor, accept partnership, or lease theater. Send full particulars to MEREDITH F. DAVY, Rutherford, N. J.

OPERATOR—And electrician, first class man, 3 years' experience on all machines. Mass. license. Will go anywhere. E. E. SHINDLER, 99 Leverett St., Boston, Mass.

MANAGER—For photoplay house, experienced, best references, salary reasonable. A. C. KREBS, 1422 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ill.

CAMERAMAN—Open for position with or without camera. Experienced studio and topical photographing. Address CAMERAMAN A, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

A MANUFACTURER—Of moving pictures, with own cameras, can take entire charge of a new company, organizing and managing it. Wide experience in factory and studios, advanced ideas, executive ability. Employed, but want larger field. My modern, business-like methods will save money for any company. EXPERT, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

OPERATOR—Wants position. Familiar with Power's and Edison machines. Will work for $12.50 per week. Sober and reliable. Good references. Will go anywhere. Write or wire. THOS. J. NEATHERY, care Bijou Theater, Danville, Va.

M. P. OPERATOR—Steady worker, Conn. license. Wishes position in Conn. State. Address STEADY, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

MANAGER—Open for engagement. Ten years' experience; successful, good advertiser. Salary, or salary and commission preferred. Security. If I can't show results in a reasonable time all I ask is legitimate expenses. Address SUCCESSFUL MANAGER, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

EXPERT CAMERAMAN—Desires position, knows the moving picture work thoroughly. Has done successful work in most of the European states, India, the Balkan War, etc. Speaks four principal languages. Address A. R. M., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Operator in each town to demonstrate our indestructible slides; something new. DOUBLE METAL SPOTLIGHT SLIDE CO., 1208 Holmes St., Kansas City, Mo.

CAMERA MEN—Owning camera, everywhere, to join animated weekly news service. Confidential. M-M COMPANY, 929 Tribune Building, N. Y.

A NUMBER ONE CAMERAMAN WITH CAMERA, IN VICINITY OF TEXAS. MUST BE CAPABLE. COMMUNICATE QUICKLY WITH OSKAR KORN, BAY CITY, TEXAS.

GOOD EXPERIENCED OPERATOR—Wanted at once. Address GRAND THEATER, Menominee, Mich.

CAMERAMAN WANTED—Good pay. State experience and salary wanted. Confidential. H. B. B., MOTION PICTURE CO. OF PHILA., 2233 Vine St., Phila., Pa.

WANTED—Film solicitors for city of Chicago, thoroughly familiar with territory. Must be business getters and have clean records. Apply in writing to E. H. B., care Moving Picture World, 169 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

A CHANCE OF A LIFETIME—Entirely new and novel theatrical moving picture proposition, just patented; wants capitalist or promoter to enlist capital on ground floor basis. Big inducement to right party. Address FINANCIAL OPPORTUNITY, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE—Motion picture laboratory, capacity, 75,000 ft., 20 minutes from Times Square, good bargain. Address LABORATORY, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANTED—Picture show in Nebr., Iowa, Mo., or Western state. Price must be right. State all in first letter. K. & R. PICTURE SHOW, Alexandria, Nebr.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Seating capacity 800 to 1,200—some suitable for vaudeville—guaranteed O. K., with Chicago Ventilation ordinance. HUMM, Room 513, 608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

THEATER—300 seats, family patronage in growing Chicago neighborhood. Clearing $75 week, no competition, good lease, $5,000. Open to rigid investigation. P. S., 428 So. Harvey Ave., Oak Park, Ill.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in town of 700. A bargain if taken at once. Address BESSIER V. KING, Wakefield, Kan.

FOR SALE—2 moving picture theaters, side by side, large show seats 300, small one 160. Have my own light plant, which lights both houses. 2 machines in each house, everything in A-1 shape. City 7,500 population. Do a Sunday business. Reason for selling, have other business to look after. C. C. HADDOX, Kenton, Ohio.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER—For Sale. Best town in eastern Okla. Address BOX 315, McAlester, Okla.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER—For sale, seats 287, Main St., location good, population 12,000, good public theater goers. Owner must leave on account of failing health. Price right. Address JURMA, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—250 to 600 theater seats. Address PEERLESS THEATER, 5612 5th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

WE WANT—A good lantern (stereoscope), also spot light, suitable for lecture work. HIAWATHA THEATER, Willoughby, Ohio.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

NEW AND SECOND HAND CHAIRS.—At cut prices. Equipments bought and sold. We save you money on outfits. Designs and plans free. REDINGTON CO., Scranton, Pa.

NEW PHANTOSCOPE—Last month cost $75, sell for $50 cash. 10 dozen carbons and 2 lenses. F. A. HOLMES, Brewster, N. Y.

POWER'S NO. 5—Motion-head. Perfect condition. For sale very cheap. OLSEN, 830 70th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

TRIPOD—Panoram and Tilt, $25, with 7-foot legs, solid aluminum, double brass clamps, steel points. HOOVER, 10 E. 14th St., New York City.

FOR SALE—All or part of 375 Hardesty opera chairs. Finished green, all in first class shape, 60c each, F. O. B. Conneaut. One flaming arc light, $7. Two Regina music boxes, cost $300 each, $25 each. Two Power's picture machines complete, in first class shape (No. 6), $90 each. Above all cash. Or what have you to trade. EDWARD C. SAKS, Conneaut, Ohio.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

PROFESSIONAL MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS.—Two sizes. Tripods, Zeiss-Tessar 50 m. lenses, $150, $225. Special cameras to order. Repairing all makes. R. W. PITTMAN, 59 West St., N. Y. CITY.

ERNEMAN MOTION PICTURE CAMERA.—Two extra 200-feet magazines, with 50mm and 75mm lenses. Anastigmatic focusing attachment, tilting and panoram Erneman tripod top. Plain tripod. Four cypress developing tanks, 400 feet capacity each. Wooden drying reel, 800 feet capacity. Schneider step printer, with motor and stand. $350 cash for whole outfit. ROBERT L. FARISH, New Orleans, La.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED—$1,000 worth good films for western Pennsylvania. What have you? Full particulars. Fakirs save stamps. FILMS, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—To buy, films, features and single reels. Must be in good condition and cheap. Describe paper accompanying reels. IND. FILM CO., 202 Book Bldg., San Antonio, Texas.

FILMS FOR SALE.

GREATEST BARGAINS—Ever offered in feature films. Perfect condition, with elaborate advertising. NATIONAL SALES CO., Janelew, West Va.

FOUR-REEL FEATURE—80 Million Women Want? featuring Emmeline Pankhurst, for Minnesoat, Wisconsin, N. Dakota and S. Dakota. Full line of paper, herald slides. Bargain. Quick action. Address F., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE—Cheap, Dalton Boys, Secret Service Steve, St. George and the Dragon, Garden of Allah, Victim of the Mormons, Titanic, Calgary Stampede. Reels practically new. Plenty billing. CARMAN, Walden, N. Y.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

PIPE ORGANS—Specially constructed for moving picture theaters, with all modern accessories, by Henry Pilcher's Sons, Louisville, Ky. Recent installations: Hippodrome Theater, Dallas, Texas; Queen Theater, Galveston, Texas; Vaudette Theater, Atlanta, Ga.; Newsome Theater, Birmingham, Ala.; Queen Theater, Houston, Texas; Hippodrome Theater, Waco, Texas; Tivoli Theater, Beaumont, Texas. Correspondence solicited.

FOR SALE—Cheap if sold soon, Wurlitzer style Orchestra, six-roll device automatic, list price $1,550. A. E. HARDEN, Lorain, Ohio. 400 B'way.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AGENTS WANTED—Flame arc lamp. Our new enclosed, long-burning lamp is ready. Superior to any now on the market. Longer life, more candle power, better distribution, lower price. Attractive proposition to responsible agents in position to properly push the sale of this lamp. Write for exclusive territory. HELIOS, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WOULD LIKE TO RENT.—Exhibitors camera and film making outfit for several months, with privilege of buying. THOS. RATIGAN, 1022 No. 26th St., So. Omaha, Neb.

FEATURE BUYERS.—Get on our mailing list. Brand new two and three-reel features, also second-hand features in perfect condition. 8,000 feet of comedies, brand new. We will act as your representative and save you time and money. 20th CENTURY FEATURE FILM CO., 248 West 35th St., N. Y. City.

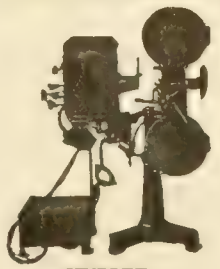
CAN ACT—As New York representative for exchanges. Know the feature market well. References given. Address S, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE—Economizer and arc lamps for sale. Operator wishes position, with or without machine. OPERATOR, 692 Flushing Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

POWERS

Just Plain Facts

You, Mr. Up-to-date Exhibitor, must produce results on the screen. We have the proper articles to help you get results.



SIMPLEX

WE'LL REPLACE THAT OLD MACHINE

Headquarters for the MIRROROIDE 5 Year Guarantee Screen

Send for Sample

OPERATING ROOM SUPPLIES

Fire Appliances

Economizers All Makes

Genuine Machine Parts

The WAGNER CONVERTER

CHANGES A. C. TO D. C.

Let Us Convince You Write or Call for Particulars

MOTIOGRAPH

WE CARRY THE LARGEST STOCK OF THEATRE SUPPLIES IN AMERICA

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 East 14th Street New York City

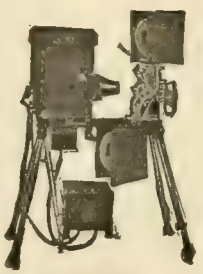
DID YOU SEE OUR SALESROOMS?



EDISON

Mr. Exhibitor!!

The Fotoplayer brings new patrons and pleases your old ones.

If your theatre is not already equipped with this musical marvel you can increase your business twofold by installing one immediately.

The Fotoplayer is a genuine musical instrument with wonderful tone qualities.

The Fotoplayer is equipped to fill every want of the motion picture theatre. Full orchestral effects with piano, violin, flute, bass viol, cello, and drums with all the drummer's traps. The Fotoplayer also contains a church organ to be used for sacred scenes.

The Fotoplayer uses standard 88-note player music, or can be played manually.

One Operator controls the entire instrument, and when the roll music is being used you do not burden your audience with mechanical music, for the interpretation of the compositions can be perfectly rendered.

The interior as well as the exterior of the Fotoplayer is of the finest materials obtainable and the highest grade workmanship.

Exclusive Features

The Fotoplayer is equipped with the wonderful Double Tracker Device (patented), which allows the operator to play continuous and appropriate music to the pictures. The music rendered by the Fotoplayer does not detract from the picture, but is secondary to the picture and emphasizes the different phases as shown on the screen. By means of the Double Tracker Device, one roll can be rewound while the other one is playing. The changing from one composition to another is instantaneous and absolutely without discord.

The Fotoplayer is the only instrument on the market today that uses roll music and can absolutely follow the picture with proper effects.

The Fotoplayer is built to fit the orchestra pit and does not interfere with your seating capacity, being the height of an ordinary piano.

The Fotoplayer contains many other wonderful features

WRITE FOR DESCRIPTIVE CATALOG

American Photo Player Company

OFFICE AND FACTORY
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.....668
ANDREW CARNEGIE BEFORE THE CAMERA.655
AT THE SIGN OF THE FLAMING ARCS.....679
"BEHIND COMEDY'S MASK" (Pathe).....685
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....694
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES....692
"CAPTURED BY REDSKINS" (Belmont).....685
CAMERAMAN, THE 664
CHICAGO LETTER 660
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).....676
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)....677
"DOCK DISASTER, THE" (Apex).....685
"DRAMA OF HEYVILLE, THE" (Edison).....656
EVANGELINE 662
FACTS AND COMMENTS.....647
FAMOUS BATTLES OF NAPOLEON (Cosmos)..657
FEATURE FILM STORIES.....726
FIVE REELS 652
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES.....666
FOURTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF OHIO....681
GEORGE ALBERT SMITH WINS.....663
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....716
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....748
INTERVIEW WITH A. C. BROMHEAD.....656
INQUIRIES 671
"LION AND THE MOUSE, THE" (Lubin).....659
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....704
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....750
"MAN'S SHADOW, A" (Eclectic).....654
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.....686
"MARRIAGE OF FIGARO, THE" (Kleine-Ambrosio) 655
MEXICAN WAR PICTURES.....657
"MILLION BID, A" (Vitagraph).....658
MISSOURI STATE MEETING.....683
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE....681
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR.....665
"MYSTERY OF ST. MARTIN'S BRIDGE" (Fidelity) 684
NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING 682
NEW YORK OPERATORS' BALL.....680
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN.....667
PASSING OF A MANIA, THE.....653
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 670
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 672
"QUO VADIS?" AT THE REGENT.....680
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....704
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....716
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features).....726

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, CHARLES L., & CO.....751
REISINGER, HUGO 695
ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. 726
BELL & HOWELL 753
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO. 723
DEARBORN NOVELTY CO. 755
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO. 753
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.....708
FULTON, F. E. 754
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO. 708
HALLBERG, J. H. 706
HOKE, GEO. M., SUPPLY CO.....720
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO. 756
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO. 745
PREDDY, WILLIAM G. 753
STRELINGER, CHARLES A., & CO. 724
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MANUFACTURING CO. 720
MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.....642
AMBROSIO AMERICAN CO. 719
AMERICAN KINETO CO. 731
AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO. 755
AMMEX MOTION PICTURE MANUFACTURER CO. 743
ANGLO-AMERICAN FILM CO. 733
APEX FILM CO 709
BELMONT FILM CO. 711
BLINKHORN, ALBERT 637
BRADY, WILLIAM A. 696-97
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS 713
CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO. 729
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO. 755
COSMOS FILM CO. 734-35
CRITERION FEATURE FILM CO 703
ECLECTIC FILM CO 641
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....638-39
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. 717
GENERAL FILM CO 644-45
GENERAL SPECIAL FILM CO. 726
GORMAN FILM CO 718
HELGAR CORPORATION 737
INTER-CONTINENT FILM CO. 747
ITALA FILM CO. 747
JUNGLE FILM CO. 707
KENNEDY FEATURES 691-700
KISMET FEATURE FILM CO. 727
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURES. 636
LIFE PHOTO FILM CO. 725
MAR-LEON FILM CO. 736
MUNDSTUCK FEATURES 710
PASQUALI AMERICAN CO. 741
RAMO FILM CO. 743
RENFAX FILM CO. 723
SCHILLER FEATURE FILM CO. 708
STERLING CAMERA & FILM CO. 724
TRUE FEATURES 712
UNION FEATURES 739
VICTORY FILM CO. 752
WARNER'S FEATURES 715
WATERLOO FILM CO. 741
WORLD SPECIAL FILM CORP. 698-99
FILM BROKERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 722
LAKE ERIE FILM BROKERS. 753
FILM EXCHANGES.
A. & B. MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY CO. 738
BRANDENBURG, G. W. 753
CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE CO. 757
FAMOUS PLAYERS EX. 740
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO. ..750
KINETO FILM TRADERS 753
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE 757
LIBERTY FILM RENTAL CO. 757
MAGNET FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 708
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION 705
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM SERVICE 755
INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO. 749
GAUMONT FILM CO. 702
MAJESTIC FILM CO. 758
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION 701
THANHOUSER FILM CORP. 630
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO..634-35
LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN CO. 739
LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON, THOMAS A. 647
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 631
KALEM FILM CO. 650
KLEINE, GEORGE 643
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 648
MELIES FILM CO. 640
PATHE FRERES 632-33-46
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. 759
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA 649
MISCELLANEOUS.
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING CO. 742
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 744
EASTMAN KODAK CO. 738
ERIE LITHOGRAPH CO. 742
FIELDING, ROMAINE 690
GENERAL SPECIALTY CO. 714
GUNBY BROTHERS 722
HEUSLER & MILLER 752
HORSLEY, DAVID 723
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO. 723
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 748
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO. 723
ONE DROP OIL CO. 757
PHOTOPLAY, INC. 757
REESE TICKET CO. 753
SARGENT, EPES W. 757
THADDEUS DAVIDS CO. 744
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE 755
THEATER RECORD LEDGER CO. 726
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO. 753
TURNER, HALSEY 726
VERO EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY 690
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO. 720
WENIZ, ISIDOR, CO. 720
WESTERN VAUDEVILLE MANAGER 720
MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO. 708
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO. 722
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD 708
MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO. 745
DEAGAN, J. C. 755
HUME, T. D., CO. 726
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO. 721
SINN, CLARENCE E. 755
WELTE, N., & SONS 738
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 757
OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
A. H. ANDREWS CO. 757
BENNETT SEATING CO. 757
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO. 757
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 757
WISCONSIN SEATING CO. 757
POSTERS AND FRAMES.
A. B. C. CO. 746
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. 694
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO. 700
THEATER SPECIALTY CO. 722
PROJECTION MACHINES.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 754
PHANTOSCOPE CO. 756
POWERS, NICHOLAS 760
PRECISION MACHINE CO. 693
PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO.....739
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO.....754
GENTER, J. H.....740
MIRROR SCREEN CO.....753
SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROS.....726
NIAGARA SLIDE CO.....753
SONG SLIDE SERVICE CO.....708
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.....753
THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.....755

ONE, THREE and SIX SHEETS

NOW READY, on the following Multiples:

KALEM'S - - - - - Monday, Feb. 9th, THE COUNTY SEAT WAR
Wednesday, Feb. 11th, INDIAN FATE

LUBIN'S - - - - - - FITZHUGH'S RIDE, Released February 12th

Beginning with next week, we will have One, Three and Six Sheets for TWO LUBIN MULTIPLE RELEASES, each week. Be sure to place your order early for the first one.

A. B. C. COMPANY Cleveland, Ohio

ITALA FEATURES

produced by the pioneer manufacturers of feature photoplays, all containing big casts in perfect photography, presenting the star actors of Europe in great dramatic masterpieces.

"Out of Darkness"

A three-part drama showing the self-sacrifice of a famous physician, who becomes terribly scarred in a laboratory explosion. His wife is blinded, but recovers her sight through an operation. He disappears, leaving evidence that he has been drowned. Their meeting in later years and the reunion form a beautiful story with a heart-gripping touch of pathos.

"The Burning Train"

A two-part circus story with many big scenes and ending with a runaway train on fire.

"Death's Door"

In two parts. A story of mother love, in which a woman risks her life to see her child. Her great devotion reconciles her to her husband and his haughty mother, who has separated the young couple.

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

ITALA CO. of AMERICA

HARRY R. RAVER, Director General

CANDLER BUILDING · NEW YORK CITY

INTERFILM

INTERFILM

INTERFILM

INTERFILM

INTERFILM

INTERFILM

Succes Extraordinaire!! Twenty-five Copies of our First Production Sold in the Eastern Territory in Two Weeks--Probably an Unsurpassed Record. Second Edition ready February 10th or a Little Earlier.

Her Life for Liberty

In 3 Parts
3100 Feet

The Following Review is from The Dramatic Mirror:

This play is a distinct success for several reasons. Its greatest value is as a photographic achievement, in which the camera effects, aided materially by the developer's art, have achieved an unusually beautiful background for the cycle of pictures which the touching plot of the story reveals. As another phase of its distinctiveness, the story tells of the Italian struggle for liberty, always a sympathetic subject, and is acted by Italians, and comes to us with all the breadth of the Italian emotionalism, excitement, patriotism and atmospheric picturing that would be hard to surpass. It also shows the almost continuous fighting between the two factions, but not the hit or miss sky-high shooting that is common with most of our offerings of this ilk, but carefully coached aiming, realistic shooting that lends the conflicts the last word in realism. These are the principal points. There are numerous others worthy of praise. Among these are the excellent scenes at the church, the large and effective use of tints, and the acting by Signora De Leonardis, and Signor Cattaneo.

FEATURING

G. Cattaneo

Of "Quo Vadis" Fame and

Signora De Leonardis

The Distinguished Italian Actress

Watch for our Release Date Announcements on Five Wonderful Features in Three and Four Thousand Feet.

Interfilm Features Represent the Highest Standard of Excellence—Our Reputation rests on this Assurance.

INTER-CONTINENT FILM CO., Inc.

Executive Offices: World's Tower Bldg. 110-112 West 40th St., New York City

BRANCH OFFICES: Philadelphia, Real Estate Trust Bldg.; Dallas, Texas, 213 Andrews Bldg.; Boston, 665 Washington St.; Scranton, Pa., opening next week. FOREIGN OFFICES: Rome, Italy, 4 Piazza della Liberta; Tokio, Japan, 16 Kita Dai Monctto, Shitayaku. Other Branches Opening.

INTERFILM

INTERFILM

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Jan. 24—At the Potter's Wheel (Indus.).....1000
Jan. 26—A Blowout at Santa Banana (2 parts—Comedy-Drama).....2000
Jan. 31—Calamity Anne In Society (Comedy)..1000
Feb. 2—The Hermit (2 parts—Drama).....2000
Feb. 7—True Western Hearts (Drama).....1000
Feb. 9—The Lost Treasure (3 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 14—The Money Lender (Drama).....

AMBROSIO.

Jan. 10—The Silent Hero (2 parts—Drama)...

APOLLO.

Dec. 14—The Portola Festival.....
Dec. 14—Los Angeles Police Parade (Topical)
Jan. 21—Fred's I. O. U. (Comedy).....
Jan. 4—The Tale of a Shirt (Comedy).....

BEAUTY FILM.

Jan. 21—Fooling Uncle (Comedy).....
Jan. 28—Bess, the Outcast (Drama).....1000
Feb. 4—Sally's Elopement (Comedy).....1000

101 BISON.

Dec. 27—The Water War (2 parts—Drama)..
Jan. 10—The Eleventh Hour (2 parts—Drama)
Jan. 17—The Flash of Fate (2 parts—Drama)..
Jan. 24—For the Freedom of Cuba (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 31—The Mad Hermit (Three parts—Drama)
Jan. 31—In the Dolomite Alps (Scenic).....
Feb. 7—The Vagabond Soldier (3 parts—Dr.)
Feb. 14—Unjustly Accused (2 parts—Drama)...

BRONCHO.

Jan. 21—Conscience (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 28—Romance of Sunshine Alley (Drama)..
Feb. 4—New England Idyl (Drama).....
Feb. 11—Romance of the Sea (Drama).....
Feb. 18—Yellow Flame (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 25—Repaid (2 parts—Drama).....

CRYSTAL.

Jan. 27—Oh! You Puppy (Comedy).....
Jan. 27—His Vacation (Comedy).....
Feb. 1—A Grateful Outcast (Drama).....
Feb. 3—What Didn't Happen to Mary (Com.)
Feb. 3—Gee, But It's Great To Be Stung! (Comedy) .....
Feb. 8—For a Woman (Drama).....
Feb. 10—Getting Reuben Back (Comedy).....
Feb. 10—Baldy Belmont Picks a Peach (Com.).
Feb. 15—A Sure Cure (Comedy).....

DOMINO.

Jan. 23—The Informer (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 30—Heart of a Woman (3 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 5—O Mimi San (Drama).....
Feb. 12—The Mystery Lady (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Play's the Thing (Drama).....

ECLAIR

Jan. 28—Just Kids (2 parts—Comedy-Drama)..
Feb. 1—At the Crossing (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—Into the Wilderness (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 8—Valentine's Day (Comedy) .....
Feb. 8—The Black Sea (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—The Good in the Worst of Us (2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 15—The Legend of the Lilacs (Drama)....

FRONTIER.

Jan. 22—Slim and the Indian (Comedy).....
Jan. 24—Abide With Me (Drama).....
Jan. 29—Slim and the Dynamiters (Comedy)..
Jan. 31—The Turning Point (Drama).....
Feb. 5—Slim Becomes An Editor (Comedy)..
Feb. 7—Put Yourself In His Place (Drama)
Feb. 12—Slim to the Rescue (Comedy).....
Feb. 14—The Heart of Smiling Joe (Drama)....

GAUMONT.

Jan. 1—Tiny Tim Frightens His Mother (Com.)
Jan. 1—The Suffragette's Revenge (Comedy)..
Jan. 6—An Amateur Sportsman (Comedy)....
Jan. 8—Tiny Tim's Sweetheart (Comedy)....
Jan. 13—Mother-in-Law Pays a Visit (Comedy).
Jan. 15—Simple Simon's Honeymoon (Comedy).
Jan. 15—Tiny Tim the Fisherman (Comedy)....
Jan. 20—The Lawyer's Courtship (Drama).....
Jan. 22—Oscar's Heroic Poses (Comedy).....
Jan. 27—Calino As a Stage Prompter (Com.)..
Jan. 27—Excursion in Old Paris.....
Jan. 29—Miss America .....
Feb. 3—The Obsession (Drama).....
Feb. 5—Oscar Wins the Shopgirl (Comedy)...

GOLD SEAL.

Jan. 6—The Lie (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 13—A War Time Reformation (2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 20—The Unsigned Agreement (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 27—One of the Bravest (2 parts—Drama)
Feb. 3—In the Fall of '64 (2 parts—Drama).
Feb. 10—The Bride of Mystery (3 parts—Dr.).

IMP.

Dec. 20—King the Detective in the Jarvis Case (2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 1—The Trials of Alexander (Comedy)..
Jan. 5—Sam Slam'em Slammed (Comedy)....
Jan. 8—The Watch Dog of the Deep (3 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 12—The Militant (3 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 15—Percy Needed a Rest (Comedy).....
Jan. 19—Getting Rid of His Mother-in-law (Comedy).....
Jan. 22—Absinthe (Drama).....
Jan. 26—A Doctor's Deceit (2 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 2—A Hot Finish (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—King the Detective in Formula 879..
Feb. 9—Jane Eyre (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 12—The Elixir of Love (Comedy).....

JOKER.

Jan. 21—Mike and Jake Join the Army (Comedy)
Jan. 24—Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl (Comedy).....
Jan. 28—A Freak Temperance Wave (Comedy)..
Jan. 31—In the Year 2014 (Comedy).....
Jan. 31—Historic Bremen (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—Love and Politics (Comedy).....
Feb. 7—The Midnight Alarm (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—Universal Ike's Wooing (Comedy)....
Feb. 14—The Chicken Chasers (Comedy).....

KAY-BEE.

Jan. 23—A Kentucky Romance (Drama).....
Jan. 27—For Her Brother's Sake (Drama)....
Jan. 30—Divorce (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 6—Secret Lode (Drama).....
Feb. 10—Colonel's Adopted Daughter (Drama)..
Feb. 13—Arrow Maker's Daughter (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 20—The Raiders (2 parts—Drama).....

KEYSTONE.

Jan. 22—Women In a Closet (Comedy).....
Jan. 24—Rebecca's Wedding Day (Comedy).....
Jan. 26—Double Crossed (Comedy).....
Jan. 29—Little Billie's Triumphs (Comedy)....
Jan. 31—Mabel's Bare Escape (Comedy).....
Feb. 2—Making a Living (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—Little Billy's Strategy (Comedy).....
Feb. 7—Kid Auto Races at Venice (Juvenile)..
Feb. 7—Olives and Their Oil.....
Feb. 9—Mabel's Strange Predicament (Comedy)
Feb. 12—A Robust Romeo (Comedy).....

KOMIC.

Jan. 1—The Bad Man from the East (Com.)
Jan. 1—Levi's Luck (Comedy).....
Jan. 8—Chasing Gloom (Comedy).....
Jan. 8—The Servant Question (Comedy).....
Jan. 15—Walt's Photo (Comedy).....
Jan. 15—The Vapor Bath (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—My Wife's Away (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—The Sleepy Head (Comedy).....

LUX.

Jan. 2—His Twin Soul (Comedy)..... 855
Jan. 9—Bill and the Compass (Comedy)..... 560
Jan. 9—From Nice to Monte Carlo (Scenic).. 350
Jan. 16—Bill, the Electrician (Comedy)...)... 585
Jan. 16—A Sticky Proposition (Comedy)..... 380
Jan. 23—An Alarming Dinner Party (Comedy). 670
Jan. 23—Winter Scenes in Switzerland (Scen.). 300
Jan. 30—Bertie Has a Free Ride (Comedy).... 600
Jan. 30—Picturesque Corsica (Scenic)..... 350

MAJESTIC.

Jan. 13—Jake's Hoodoo (Comedy).....
Jan. 17—The Lackey (Drama).....
Jan. 18—What the Crystal Told (Drama).....
Jan. 20—The Power of the Mind (Drama)....
Jan. 24—The Thief and the Book (2 parts—Dr.)
Jan. 27—(No Release This Date).
Jan. 31—A Riot in Rubeville (Comedy).....
Feb. 1—The Vengeance of Najerra (Drama)..
Feb. 3—The Portrait of Anita (2 parts—Dr.)..

NESTOR.

Jan. 14—The Intruder (Drama).....
Jan. 16—Cupid's Close Shave (Comedy).....
Jan. 21—Countess Betty's Mine (Drama).....
Jan. 23—Snobbery (Drama).....
Jan. 28—The Wheel of Life (Drama).....
Jan. 30—When Billy Proposed (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—Fires of Conscience (Drama).....
Feb. 6—Twixt Love and Flour (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—The Greater Devotion (Drama).....
Feb. 13—His Royal Pants (Comedy).....

POWERS.

Jan. 23—A Deuce and Two Pair (Comedy).....
Jan. 26—The Saint and the Singer (Comedy)..
Jan. 30—A Coincidental Bridegroom (Drama)..
Feb. 2—The Germ in the Kiss (Comedy)....
Feb. 6—Into the Lion's Pit (2 parts—Drama)
Feb. 9—An Academy Romance (Comedy).....
Feb. 13—Withered Hands (Drama).....

PRINCESS.

Dec. 19—The Law of Humanity (Drama).....
Dec. 26—Cupid's Lieutenant (Comedy-Drama).
Jan. 2—A Rural Free Delivery Romance (Dr.)
Jan. 9—A Circumstantial Nurse (Drama).....
Jan. 16—When the Cat Came Back (Com.-Dr.)..
Jan. 23—The Vacant Chair.....
Jan. 30—The Loser Wins (Comedy-Drama)....
Feb. 6—Where Paths Diverge (Drama).....

RELIANCE.

Jan. 10—The Sacrifice (Drama).....
Jan. 12—Slim Hogan's Getaway (Drama).....
Jan. 14—The Two Slaves (Drama).....
Jan. 17—The Faith of Her Fathers (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 19—Our Mutual Girl (First Release (Dr.)
Jan. 21—The Man (Drama).....
Jan. 24—The Hidden Clue (Drama).....
Jan. 26—Our Mutual Girl (Second Release—Drama) .....
Jan. 28—Tricked By a Photo (Drama).....
Jan. 31—Too Proud to Beg (Drama).....
Feb. 2—Our Mutual Girl (Third Release—Dr.)
Feb. 4—The Janitor (Drama).....
Feb. 7—For His Master (2 parts—Drama)....

RAMO.

Nov. 5—Wives (5 parts—Drama).....
Nov. 26—The Fangs of Hate (3 parts—Dr.)..
Dec. 10—The Devil Within (3 parts—Drama)..

REX.

Jan. 25—The Leper's Coat (Drama).....
Jan. 29—From Father to Son (2 parts—Drama)
Feb. 1—The Fourth Proposal (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—A Race With Death (Drama).....
Feb. 8—The Coward Hater (Drama).....
Feb. 12—The Law of His Kind (2 parts—Dr.)..
Feb. 15—An Old Locket (Drama).....

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 13—Adrift In a Great City (Drama).....
Jan. 16—Coals of Fire (Drama).....
Jan. 18—Turkey Trot Town (Comedy).....
Jan. 20—Her Love Letters (Drama).....
Jan. 23—The Elusive Diamond (Drama).....
Jan. 25—The Elevator Man (3 parts—Drama)...
Jan. 27—The Woman Pays (3 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 1—Why Reginald Reformed (Comedy)....
Feb. 3—Twins and a Stepmother (Com. Dr.)..
Feb. 6—The Success of Selfishness (Drama)....

VICTOR.

Jan. 16—The Romance of a Photograph (3 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 19—The Man Who Lied (2 parts—Drama)
Jan. 26—A Dangerous Experiment (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 26—Dances of To-day (Topical).....
Jan. 30—The False Bride (Drama).....
Feb. 2—U. S. Government Inspection of Beef (Educational) .....
Feb. 6—Irene the Onion Eater's Daughter (Comedy) .....
Feb. 9—The Man Who Slept (Drama).....
Feb. 13—The Law's Decree (2 parts—Drama)..

FEATURES— (A. Blinkhorn).

Jan. 5—The Vicar of Wakefield (Hepworth Mfg. Co.) 4 parts (Drama).....
Jan. 8—The Younger Sister (Florence Turner, Ltd.) (Drama).....
Jan. 12—Jean's Evidence (Florence Turner, Ltd.) 2 parts (Drama).....
Jan. 19—Motherhood or Politics (Hepworth Mfg. Co.) 2 parts (Comedy-Drama).....

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand - -	$1.25
Ten Thousand - -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand - -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand -	$5.50
Fifty Thousand - -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand -	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

See Americans First -

FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

The LOST TREASURE

THREE PARTS

One, Three and Six Sheet Posters, Photos, Slides and Heralds -

Replete with suspense and thrills. A Western Melodrama of the highest order

Release Monday, February 9, 1914

"THE MONEY LENDER"

An apt application of the Golden Rule. An excellent drama. One and three sheet lithos. Release Saturday, February 14, 1914.

THE VAUDETTE THEATRE, Lansing, Mich., writes: "There is not one manufacturer that has kept pace with the American."

H. F. FOWSER, Manager.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Pathe, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 24—The Husband's Experiment (Drama)..
Jan. 26—His Fireman's Conscience (Drama)...
Jan. 29—Buy Wool (Comedy).....
Jan. 29—Out of Sight, Out of Mind (Comedy).
Jan. 31—The Fallen Angel (Drama).....
Feb. 2—If It Were Not For Polly (Drama)..
Feb. 5—The Dilemma (Drama).....
Feb. 7—Beating Their Board Bill (Comedy)..
Feb. 7—The Faddists (Comedy).....
Feb. 9—One Thousand to One Shot (Comedy)..
Feb. 9—Skelley Buys a Hotel (Comedy).....
Feb. 12—As It Might Have Been (Com.-Drama)
Feb. 14—A Nest Unfeathered (Drama).....

EDISON.

Jan. 23—The Necklace of Rameses (Special—3 parts—Drama) 3000
Jan. 24—United in Danger (Drama).....1000
Jan. 26—The Lovely Senorita (Second of the Wood B. Wedd series—Comedy)...1000
Jan. 27—The Mystery of the Talking Wire (Third of the Cleek series—Drama).1000
Jan. 28—How Bobby Called Her Bluff (Comedy)
Jan. 28—The Call of the Footlights (Comedy)..
Jan. 30—The Silent Death (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Jan. 31—The Perfect Truth—First of the "Dolly of the Dailies" series (Drama).....1000
Feb. 2—How the Earth Was Carpeted (Com.).1000
Feb. 3—A Treacherous Rival (Drama).....1000
Feb. 4—On the Lazy Line (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 6—An American King (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) 2000
Feb. 7—The Man of Destiny (Drama).....1000
Feb. 9—A Story of Crime (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 10—The Story of the Willow Pattern (Dr.).1000
Feb. 11—Andy Goes on the Stage (Third of the Andy Series) (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 13—Rorke's Drift (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Feb. 14—His Grandchild (Drama).....1000

ESSANAY.

Jan. 24—Broncho Billy and the Bad Man (Dr.).1000
Jan. 27—The Testing Fire (Drama).....1000
Jan. 28—Nearly Married (Comedy).....1000
Jan. 29—What Came to Bar "Q" (Comedy)....1000
Jan. 30—The Girl at the Curtain (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) 2000
Jan. 31—Broncho Billy and the Settler's Daughter (Drama) 1000
Feb. 3—Dawn and Twilight (Drama).....1000
Feb. 4—Into Society and Out (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 5—A Gambler's Way (Drama).....1000
Feb. 6—The Grip of Circumstance (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 7—Broncho Billy and the Red Man (Dr.).1000
Feb. 10—Speak No Evil (Drama).....1000
Feb. 11—Miss Milly's Valentine (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 12—The Weaker's Strength (Drama).....1000
Feb. 13—Sophie Pick's a Dead One (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
Feb. 14—The Calling of Jim Barton (Drama)...1000

KALEM.

Jan. 24—Explosive "D" (Drama).....1000
Jan. 26—The Shadow of Guilt (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Jan. 28—The Masquerader (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Jan. 30—The Medicine Show at Stone Gulch (Comedy) .....
Jan. 30—Making High Grade Paper (Indust.).
Jan. 31—Playing For a Fortune (Drama).....1000
Feb. 2—The Convict's Story (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 4—The Hand Print Mystery (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 6—Vaccinating the Village (Comedy)...1000
Feb. 7—The Indian Ambuscade (Drama)....1000
Feb. 9—The County Seat War (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 11—Indian Fate (Special— 2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Feb. 13—Out in the Rain (Comedy).....
Feb. 13—The Gun Behind the Man (Comedy)...
Feb. 14—The Fatal Clues (Comedy-Drama)..... 800
Feb. 14—Flood of the Dae River (Topical)..... 200

GEORGE KLEINE.

Dec. 23—At Cross Purposes (Cines Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Dec. 30—When a Woman Wills (Cines—2 parts—Drama—Special) .....
Jan. 6—The Smuggler's Son (Cines—2 parts—Special—Drama) .....
Jan. 13—The Heart of a Gypsy (Cines—2 parts—Special—Drama) .....
Jan. 20—Who Was Guilty? (Special—Cines—2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 27—Wrecked In Mid-Air (Eclipse—Special—Three parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 3—The Marriage of Figaro (Special—2 parts—Ambrosio—Drama) .....
Feb. 10—After Death (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 17—The Artist's Model (Cello—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....

LUBIN.

Jan. 23—The Moth (Drama).....1000
Jan. 24—The Blinded Heart (Drama).....1000
Jan. 26—The Windfall (Drama).....1000
Jan. 27—His Excellency (Drama).....1000
Jan. 29—Treasures On Earth (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Jan. 30—An Unintentional Hero (Comedy).... 400
Jan. 30—A Stage Door Flirtation (Comedy).. 600
Jan. 31—The Pale of Prejudice (Drama).....1000
Feb. 2—Her Wayward Son (Drama).....1000
Feb. 3—The Catch of the Season (Comedy-Drama) 1000
Feb. 5—Out of the Depths (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
Feb. 6—The Vagaries of Fate (Drama).....1000
Feb. 7—Her Side-Show Sweetheart (Comedy).. 400
Feb. 7—Pat's Revenge (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 9—Antidotes for Suicide (Comedy)..... 400
Feb. 9—Taming Terrible Ted (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 10—The Measure of a Man (Drama).....1000
Feb. 12—Fitzhugh's Ride (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 13—The Sleeping Sentinel (Drama).....1000
Feb. 14—The Reward (Drama).....1000

MELIES.

Dec. 11—At Phnom Penh, Cambodia (Scenic)..
Dec. 11—Beautiful Angkor-Wat, Cambodia (Sc.)
Jan. 1—Temples of Japan (Architecture)....1000
Jan. 8—The Somnambulist (Drama).....1000
Jan. 15—Wooing the Sales Lady (Comedy)...1000
Jan. 22—Monte Cristo Up-to-Date (Comedy)..
Jan. 29—Batty Bill's Honeymoon (Comedy).. 600
Jan. 29—Winky Willy and the Fisherman (Com.) 370
Feb. 5—Playing With Fire (Comedy-Drama)..
Feb. 5—Winky Willy's Disappearing Stunt (Comedy) .....
Feb. 5—Dippy on the Boston Dip (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Suspense and Suspenders (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Winky Willy's Birthday Gifts (Com.).

PATHE.

Jan. 14—The Seventeen-Mile Drive—California (Scenic) .....
Jan. 15—A Thief of Hearts (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 15—Pathe's Weekly, No. 5—1914 (News)
Jan. 17—Good Pals (Special—2 parts—Drama).
Jan. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 6 (News).....
Jan. 20—Insects that Mimic (Zoology).....
Jan. 20—Submarine Mysteries (Zoology).....
Jan. 21—Three Pairs and a Cat (Comedy)....
Jan. 21—At Home with the Heron (Zoology)..
Jan. 22—Pathe's Weekly, No. 7 (News).....
Jan. 22—A Sword of Damocles (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 24—God's Warning (Drama).....
Jan. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 8 (News).....
Jan. 27—A Two Family Affair (Special—2 parts—Comedy) .....
Jan. 27—The Oasis of Gabes—Tunis (Scenic)..
Jan. 28—The Patched Adonis (Comedy).....
Jan. 29—Pathe's Weekly, No. 9 (News).....
Jan. 29—The Power of Print (Drama).....
Jan. 29—Seringapatam—Southern India (Scen.)
Jan. 31—The Lunatic's Child (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 2—Pathe's Weekly, No. 10 (News).....
Feb. 3—Wooing the Cook (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—The Fat Man's Burden (Comedy)....
Feb. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 11 (News).....
Feb. 5—Behind Comedy's Mask (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 7—In the Mesh of Her Hair (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 9—Pathe's Weekly No. 12.....
Feb. 10—Orphans of the Wild (Drama).....
Feb. 11—All on Account of Polly (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—A Typical Buddhist Temple (Typical)
Feb. 11—Scenes Along the Cauvery River (India) (Scenic) .....
Feb. 12—Broken Lives (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..
Feb. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 13.....
Feb. 14—Chains of Honor (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....

SELIG.

Jan. 15—Blue Blood and Red (Drama).....1000
Jan. 16—A Message from Across the Sea (Dr.).1000
Jan. 19—Too Late (Special—2 parts—Dr.)....2000
Jan. 20—His Guiding Spirit (Drama).....1000
Jan. 21—The Charmed Arrow (Drama).....1000
Jan. 22—A Friend In Need (Drama).....1000
Jan. 23—Doc Yak, Moving Picture Artist (Com.)1000
Jan. 26—The Adventures of Kathlyn—No. 3—The Temple of the Lion (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Jan. 27—The Conspirators (Drama).....1000
Jan. 28—The Old vs. the New (Drama).....1000
Jan. 29—Bringing Up Hubby (Comedy).....1000
Jan. 30—A Splendid Sacrifice (Drama).....1000
Feb. 2—A Modern Vendetta (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 3—At the Eleventh Hour (Com.-Dr.)....1000
Feb. 4—The Heart of Maggie Malone (Dr.).1000
Feb. 5—The Little Sister (Drama).....1000
Feb. 6—Tony and Maloney (Comedy).....
Feb. 6—Italian Games and Dances (Typical)..
Feb. 9—The Adventures of Kathlyn—No. 4—The Royal Slave (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 10—Reconciled In Blood (Drama).....1000
Feb. 11—A Strenuous Scoop (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 12—The Mistress of His House (Drama)..1000
Feb. 13—Their Lesson (Drama).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 22—Anne of the Golden Heart (Drama)..1000
Jan. 23—The Perplexed Bridegroom (Comedy)..
Jan. 23—Decoration Day at Old Soldiers' Home (Topical) .....
Jan. 24—Hearts of Women (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Jan. 26—The Return of Jack Bellew (Drama).1000
Jan. 27—Pickles, Art and Sauerkraut (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
Jan. 28—Scotland Forever (Comedy).....1000
Jan. 29—The Little Bugler (Drama).....
Jan. 30—The Lucky Elopement (Comedy).....1000
Jan. 31—The Love of Tokiwa (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 2—How God Came to Sonny Boy (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 3—Caught With the Goods (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 4—How Burke and Burke Made Good (Comedy) 1000
Feb. 5—Lincoln the Lover (Drama).....1000
Feb. 5—Marrying Sue (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 7—Tainted Money (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 9—The Winner Wins (Drama).....1000
Feb. 10—Master of the Mine (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 11—Sonny Jim in Search of a Mother (Comedy) 1000
Feb. 12—Some Steamer Scooping (Com.-Dr.).... 700
Feb. 12—Niagara Falls (Scenic)..... 300
Feb. 13—Bunny's Birthday (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 14—Children of the Feud (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company

All Specials Supplied 116-118 East Fourteenth Street, New York

Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

BIO CARBONS BIO CARBONS

WE COULD NOT IMPROVE
THE CARBONS SO WE
IMPROVED THE PACKAGE

THE MAJORITY OF MOVING PICTURE THEATRES ARE NOW USING

BIO RECOGNIZED B·C CARBONS BRAND STANDARD CARBONS

NONE GENUINE WITHOUT THE WORD "BIO" ON THE CARBON TAKE NO SUBSTITUTES.

"THEY ARE WHAT YOU WANT"

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK, 165 GREENWICH ST. MILWAUKEE, 114 HURON ST. SAN FRANCISCO, 143 SECOND ST.

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES AND SUPPLY DEALERS

BIO CARBONS BIO CARBONS

BREAKING ALL RECORDS

A MASTERPIECE IN 6 PARTS
The Stranglers of Paris
DRAMATIZATION OF BELOT'S FAMOUS NOVEL BY DAVID BELASCO
AMERICA'S FOREMOST PLAYWRIGHT

WIRE FOR STATE RIGHTS

VICTORY FILM CO., 220 W. 42nd St., New York.

Eastman Film 3½c Per Foot

(WRITE FOR SPECIAL CONTRACT PRICE)

PROMPT DELIVERY AT ALL TIMES

Attractive prices on M. P. Lenses, cameras, commercial lamps, and all photographic supplies. Also full line of operating room equipment, including Simplex and other projecting machines, motors, spotlights, rewinds, film boxes, etc.

HENSEL & MILLER, 214 North State St., Chicago, Ill.

ROLL TICKETS

Absolutely Guaranteed

Perfectly Perforated, Accurately Numbered, Best Cardboard, Prompt Shipment

TERMS—CASH with ORDER. NO C.O.D SHIPMENTS

100,000–$10.00 200,000–$18.00 300,000–$25.00 400,000–$31.00 500,000–$37.50 1,000,000–$70.00

EVERY KIND OF TICKET FOR EVERY PURPOSE

SPECIALLY PRINTED, ONE FORM, ANY COLOR, SEND FOR SAMPLES

404 So. 10th St. REES TICKET CO Omaha, Neb.

SLIDES

Announcement, Player and Release Slides. The best made at the lowest prices. Ask about our premium with $10.00 cash business. Catalogue of course.

NIAGARA SLIDE CO. Lockport, N. Y.

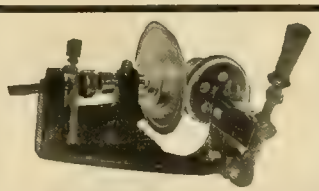
FEATURES FEATURES

Emotional Dramatic Melodramatic 2-3-4-5 reelers

All makes of European exclusives
Write for list and prices

LAKE ERIE FILM BROKERS
No. 229 ERIE STREET TOLEDO, OHIO



Speed Regulator for Motor Driven Machines

Any speed from 5 to 30 min. to Reel. 1500 used. Price $12.50. Quickly attached to any head. Get circular. Has Oilcups, Indicator and Clutch. Very rugged, practical, silent running, and will last a lifetime.

PREDDEY, 669 HAIGHT ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service.
Nearly 8,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

110 Volts, 60 Cycles.....$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles..... 50.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltages and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
317 West Illinois Street :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

670 Film Exchanges, U. S.	$3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S.	1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers	1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries	3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries	3.00

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

G. W. BRADENBURGH
802 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Phone, Walnut 534. Cable, Bradfilms, Phila

TITLE	LENGTH	MAKE	ADVERTISING		PRICE
Three Drops of Poison	3800	Luna	1-3-4	sheets	200
Cell 13	2250	Gt. Northern	1-3	"	75
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)	4500	Monopol	1-3-4-6-8	"	250
The Bank Note Forgers	3000	Luna	1-3-6	"	300
Secret of the Safe	2750	Cines	1-3-6	"	150
On the Steps of the Throne	3500	Pasquali	1-3-6	"	150
Strength and Cunning	2700	Cines	1-3-6	"	150
Last Days of Pompeii	1350	Ambrosio	1-3-6	"	75
Custer's Last Fight	2150	Bison	1-3-6	"	125
The Yellow Peril	3000	Continental	1-3-6	"	75
The Mysterious Shot	3400	Luna	1-3-6	"	150
The Black Viper	3600	Pyramid	1-3-6	"	100
God of the Sun (Colored)	2100	Pathe	1-3-6	"	125
Life's Bitter Failure	3000	Deu Bois	1-3-4	"	100
Siege of Petersburg	2005	Kalem	1-3-6	"	75
Pauline Cushman, Federal Spy	3000	Selig	1-3-6	"	125
The Czikos	1500	Drankoff	3	"	75
The Fatal Necklace	1600	Itala	3	"	75
The Yellow Man	2250	Ambrosio	1-3-6	"	75
The Black Mask	2950	Dansk	1-3-6	"	90
Wandering Folk	3000	Dansk	1-3-6	"	75
Caprice of Fortune	2000	Eclair	1-3	"	40
Fire at Sea	2000	Gt. Northern	1-3-6	"	50
For the Guilt of his Friend	3000	Deu Bois	4	"	45
Adventure of Lady Glane	2700	Treuman Larsen	1-6	"	60

One Hundred Commercial Films O. K. Condition Without Posters $3.00 per reel.

THE "MIRROR SCREEN" is the Only Glass Screen in the World. It is made of plate glass with one side plated with pure silver and the other side prismized to a Snow-White Surface.

No other surface in the world will produce such beautiful pictures. Write to-day for our new catalogues.

MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY
Shelbyville, Indiana F. J. Rembusch, President

We Have Moved to 69 West 23d Street

Book our money makers:

"THE ROGUES of PARIS" 4 PARTS
"CORSICAN BLOOD" 3 PARTS
"THE STAR OF INDIA" 4 PARTS
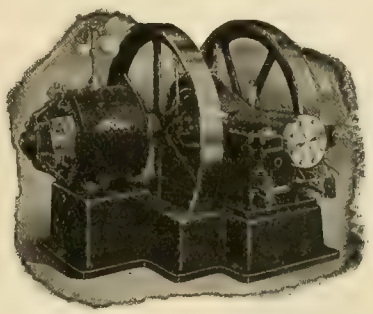
"The Shadows of the Night" 3 PARTS and many others with full lobby display.

KINETO FILM TRADERS
69 West 23rd St. Formerly 32 Union Square, N.Y. New York
PHONE 2587 GRAMERCY



PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

A WORD TO THE WISE IS SUFFICIENT

"THE PEERLESS"—THE DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN—"THE PIONEER"

STANDS FOR

"THE SCREEN FROM QUALITY STREET" EFFICIENCY FIRST "THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM"

ECONOMY—ENDURANCE—ADAPTABILITY—BEAUTY—ALWAYS

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE. ARRANGE FOR COMPARATIVE TEST, THE ONLY PROOF NECESSARY

DAY AND NIGHT SCREENS, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

NEW YORK—NEW ORLEANS—ATLANTA—PHILADELPHIA—PARIS—BERLIN—LONDON

THE PLACE TO GET WHAT YOU WANT—WHEN YOU WANT IT

Sole Agents for the "GUIL PASTIL"

MACHINES—GAS OUTFITS—SUPPLIES

Exclusive Distributors of the ECONOMIC CALCIUM OUTFIT

F Film Cement, Film Boxes, Fire Proof Rewinds, Fans, Ft. Wayne Compensarcs, Fire Extinguishers

U Universal Rheostats, Universal Carbon Clamps

L Lenses, Lobby Display, Lugs, Lighting Fixtures, Limes

T Tickets, Ticket Machines, Ticket Choppers, Turnstiles, Tents, Theatre Equipment

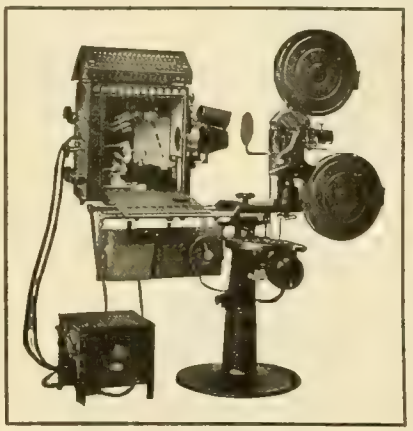
O Oil, Oil Cans, Oxone, Opera Chairs

N No Pirate Goods, No Junk, No Bargain Trash, No Unreasonable Delays, No Dissatisfaction

REMEMBER THE NAME AND LOCATION WHEN YOU WANT ANYTHING IN THE LINE OF PROJECTION GOODS, ACCESSORIES OR SUPPLIES

We Carry the Stock—Serve You Promptly—Ask Only a Fair Price. Our A-Z List is a Handy Reference Book—COSTS YOU NOTHING

E. E. FULTON CO., 152 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.



MOTIOGRAPH QUALITY

IS SPOKEN of TODAY and WILL BE FOR A LONG TIME TO COME

Enterprise Opt. Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill. Nashwauk, Minn., 1-5-14.

Gentlemen:—I have used my MOTIOGRAPH FOUR years and it is still giving excellent results. Have not had a breakdown in FOUR years. Thanking you for steering me to the MOTIOGRAPH and wishing you success with the BEST machine made.

Yours,
UNIQUE THEATRE.
CROCKETT BROWN.

This is only one of many letters received daily from all parts of the country and if YOU are in need of a machine, it will pay you to investigate the MOTIOGRAPH.

Manufactured and Guaranteed by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Eastern Office: 21 E. 14th St., New York — 568 W. Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. — Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco

COMING

A TYRANNICAL GOVERNMENT RUSSIA IN FOUR REELS

JACOB BERG, 145 West 45th Street, New York

QUANTITY + QUALITY at 10c per copy is poor ECONOMY

Subscribe for one year and get 52 issues of the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD DOMESTIC $3.00 — CANADA $3.50 — FOREIGN $4.00

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Played from Piano Keyboard

WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"

J. C. DEAGAN

DEAGAN BUILDING

1776 Berteau Ave.

Chicago, Ill.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

Archer Ave. and Leo St. CHICAGO, ILL.

ORCHESTRA MUSIC FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts, 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Northern Feature Film Exchange

Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago

Phone Central 6229

WE BUY, SELL and RENT

moving picture machines, films and chairs.

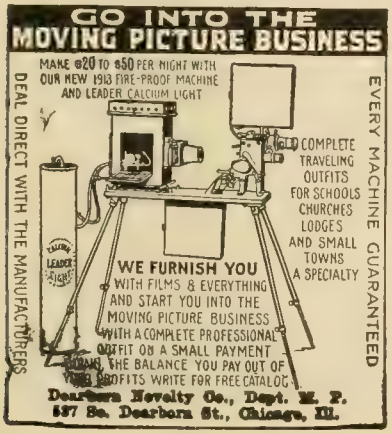
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE

140 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Commercial Photographer, for best work and rates, send to

The Chicago Feature Film Co.

4108-22 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, Ill.



GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS
MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH OUR NEW 1913 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT
DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS
EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED
COMPLETE TRAVELING OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES AND SMALL TOWNS A SPECIALTY
WE FURNISH YOU WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING AND START YOU INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF PROFITS WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG
Dearborn Novelty Co., Dept. M. P.
537 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

SOME GOOD TERRITORY LEFT

Including Dominion of Canada

BARBAROUS MEXICO

A Feature within a Feature

Our State Right Buyers and Feature Exchange Men Are Reaping a Harvest.

WHY NOT YOU?

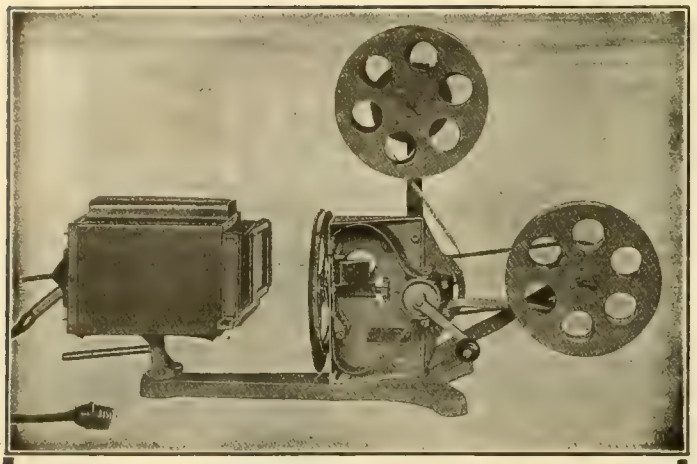
WIRE BEST OFFER on your state

Your bid to include new print in three reels, mounted lobby display and $50.00 worth of paper, WIRE NOW!

America's Feature Film Co.

406-7-8-9 SCHILLER BLDG. CHICAGO, ILL.

Note: Barbarous Mexico now playing to phenomenal business in John R. Thompson's Loop houses, Chicago.



THE PHANTOSCOPE

is a Motion Picture Projecting Machine

It takes standard motion picture film, film standard the world over.

It takes electric current from the ordinary incandescent lamp socket, either current.

It may be stopped anywhere, and the picture examined at leisure; the film will not be ignited.

It also projects standard magic lantern slides, changing without interruption.

It is light, portable, weighing in its carrying case about twenty pounds.

It projects an eight-foot picture, well lighted, with the usual film and slides.

It works equally well in rural districts without electric current.

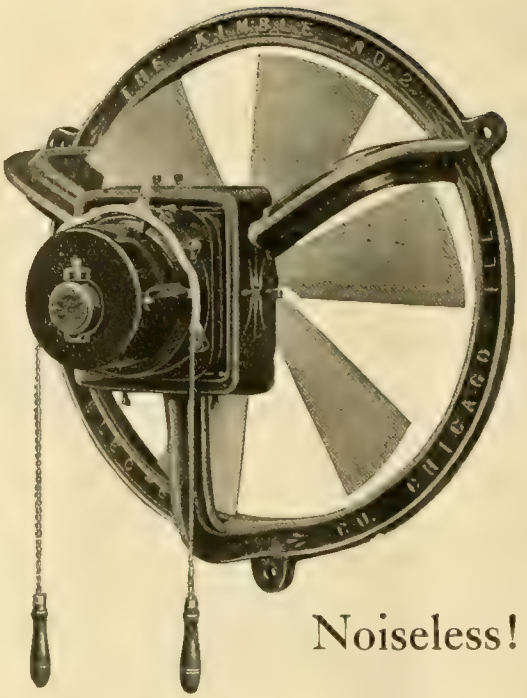
It is a machine medaled by the Franklin Institute on the recommendation of some of the most eminent mechanical engineers of this country.

It is a standardized, blue-print machine, composed of interchangeable parts, made in dies, moulds and drill-forms.

Your order may be for one, a dozen, or a hundred, it will be filled promptly, and from stock on hand.

The Phantoscope is remarkably simple, easy of operation, and costs but $75, complete.

The Phantoscope Mfg. Company
WASHINGTON, D. C., U. S. A.



Noiseless!

Ventilate with

KIMBLE

Alternating Current

FANS

Because they are—

Variable Speed

You don't have to run full speed all the time. If there are few people in the house, run at low speed. When the house is full, run at high speed. There are many speeds in between. You can get just the speed the conditions demand.

Instantly Reversible

Merely pulling the chain changes the fan from intake to exhaust or vice versa. One fan serves both purposes. You can fill the house with a continuous flow of fresh air in summer. In winter you can be always drawing the foul air out. Or you can pull the foul air out and immediately reverse to pump fresh air in. The straight blades give maximum efficiency in either direction.

Economical

The Kimble Fan reduces the consumption of electric current in direct proportion to every reduction in fan speed. Say you have a No. 1 Kimble Fan. Its maximum rotations per minute are 700. Now, say you run it at 350 r.p.m. Then it uses only about one-half as much current as it would at 700 r.p.m.

Ventilate with Kimble Fans, because with them you can get better ventilation at less operating cost. Write for our special Fan Bulletins.

Kimble Fans are single phase and for use on Alternating Current lines.

Kimble Electric Co.
The Alternating Current Fan Specialists
633 Northwestern Ave., Chicago

KIMBLE MOTORS — KIMBLE MOTORS

REMEMBER THIS:

The exhibitor who procrastinates and fails to hook up with the Universal program—the program of today AND THE PROGRAM OF THE FUTURE—may find out to his sorrow later on that his neighborhood is so full of Universal programs that it won't stand any more, and that he THEREFORE CAN'T GET IT WHEN HE WAKES UP AND FINDS THAT HE NEEDS IT! Examine that Universal program NOW in any of my offices and see why it is taking the world by storm!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

Sargent's Photoplay Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

EPES WINTHROP SARGENT
Box 70, Madison Square Station, NEW YORK CITY

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
The A. H. Andrews Co.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway.
Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 916 Mission St.

THE "STANDARDIZED" THEATRE CHAIRS

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

PHOTOPLAY COMPANY, Inc.

19 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The headquarters for all standard projecting machines. Full line of accessories and supplies.

Expert Repairing on All Machines

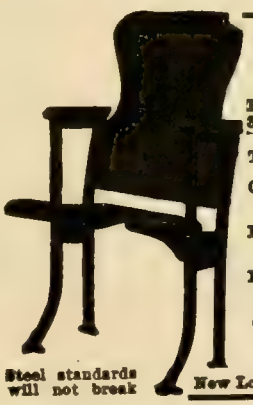
Write us for terms and catalogues.

FILMS FOR SALE

$3.00 per Reel Up

Send for our new revised list. 50 features for sale, low prices. Second-hand machines, all makes.

ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.



STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS

AGENCIES:
H. S. Analey, 31-33 East 32nd Street. New York City. Telephone 1488 Murray Hill.
California Seating Co., 1110 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.
H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave., Seattle, Wash.
L-B Mfg. Co., S. E. Cor. 6th & Vine Sts., Phila., Pa.

The Wisconsin Seating Company

Steel standards will not break

New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO
Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissell Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Boston: 69 Pearl St.

The Old Reliable
BULL DOG CEMENT
AND
ONE DROP OIL
At Your Exchange
ONE DROP OIL CO., 15 S. Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

WHY SHOW A
Jumpy—Flickery—BUSINESS KILLING Picture?
WHEN YOU CAN
HAVE YOUR MACHINE FIXED AS GOOD AS NEW. WORK GUARANTEED.
We sell all makes of machines, new and second-hand. Also machine parts, supplies, tickets, carbons, etc.
CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO., 87 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

Every Day 1,500,000 People

IN Motion Picture Theatres

of the United States listen to the Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra. Have you one? It pays.

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES
CINCINNATI

LAST CALL!

on Victor Hugo's "RUY BLAS," by New Majestic, Makers of Florence Roberts' "Sapho"

If You Want First Showing

in your town. All "first showings" are being contracted for NOW. See a Mutual or Continental office TODAY.

"THERE ARE NO FAVORITES" -well, You Know the Rest; Just Get the NEW New Majestics!

"THE VENGEANCE OF NAJERRA," Indian drama. Out Sunday, Feb. 1st. With Lamar Johnstone, Francelia Billington and William Nigh.

"THE PORTRAIT OF ANITA," 2 REELS, Romance. Out Tuesday, Feb. 3rd. With Lucille Younge, Eugene Pallette, Lamar Johnstone, Francelia Billington, Andrew Robson, Elizabeth Stone, Al Von Harder and Sid Diamond.

NO RELEASE Saturday, Feb. 7th, due to release of extra reel on Tuesday, Feb. 3rd.

"NEW MAJESTIC"

"There Are No Favorites Like New Majestic Favorites"

All-Year-Round Studios:
Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Offices:
New Rochelle, N. Y.

SELIG

HAS SHOWN THE WAY HOW TO INCREASE BUSINESS WITH

THE SUCCESS OF SUCCESSES

"THE ROYAL SLAVE."

"THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN"
NO. 4

"THE ROYAL SLAVE"

Kathlyn, escaping from "The Temple of the Lion," flees into the depths of the forest and taking refuge in a hunter's blind, platformed in a tree, has a strenuous experience, but is finally driven from her retreat by the wild habitants of the jungle to a worse Fate,—falling into the hands of slave traders.

In Two Reels — Released February 9th

February 10th

"RECONCILED IN BLOOD"

A thrilling feud play, involving wild and picturesque people —the mountaineers of Kentucky.

February 11th — "A STRENUOUS SCOOP"

A cracking good comedy, involving a newspaper reporter, a prima donna, and a porch climber.

February 12th — "THE MISTRESS OF HIS HOUSE"

A bachelor brings home a girl-wife, and his widowed sister in charge of his household reluctantly resigns her office.

February 13th — "THEIR LESSON"

A young married couple who are living beyond their means are brought to a sudden realization of their folly, and save themselves before it is too late.

N. B.—Get the SELIG selections of interesting and attractive pictorial printing for lobby illumination. One-sheets on every release; three and six-sheets on all multiple releases.

Selig

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.
CHICAGO.

BE CONSISTENT

MANY Motion Picture Exhibitors equip their theatres with the best screens, chairs and illumination, appropriate music and handsomely decorated lobbies, and do not give sufficient attention to the most important factor of their exhibition, i. e., Perfect Projection.

Knowing that you, as an exhibitor, desire to attain the best results on the screen as far as the picture is concerned, we, having gained the confidence of the trade through the satisfaction obtained by the use of Power's Cameragraph No. 6A, recommend that you inform yourself regarding the merits of this incomparable Projector, illustrations and complete description of which are given in our Catalogue G.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street New York City

Vol. 19. No. 7 February 14. 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Mary Pickford in "Hearts Adrift" (Famous Players).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

THANHOUSER "BIG" PRODUCTIONS

JAMES CRUZE AND MARGUERITE SNOW
JOSEPH IN THE LAND OF EGYPT

SEE THE NEAREST CONTINENTAL OR MUTUAL FEATURE OFFICE ABOUT THE ATTRACTIVE ARRANGEMENT THAT GIVES YOU

"THANHOUSER 'BIG' PRODUCTIONS"

for EXCLUSIVE first-run use for a FULL YEAR in your locality. Absolute protection is yours under this system. No more advertising a feature heavily to learn the fellow down the street is going to get it, too.

"THANHOUSER 'BIG' PRODUCTIONS"

"ONE A MONTH, ON THE FIRST OF THE MONTH" are FOUR REEL films that are BIG in story, setting and cast. Always released on the first day of the month and always yours on the first day of the month, if you make that arrangement now.

Always on the "First" — JAN. FEB. MAR. APR. MAY JUNE 1 JULY AUG. SEPT. OCT. NOV. DEC. — Always on the "First"

Feb. 1—"JOSEPH IN THE LAND OF EGYPT"

With JAMES CRUZE and MARGUERITE SNOW.

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

Sunday, Feb. 8th—"PERCY'S FIRST HOLIDAY" is based on the recent American adventures of W. S. Percy, Australia's greatest comedian, who came over to this country on his first vacation. The Yankeeland experiences of the famous Antipodean funster would make a mummy laugh. Thanhouser favorites are with him every minute, to make you remember always that Thanhouser grabbed the privilege of filming the comedian visitor.

Tuesday, Feb. 10th—"THE DANCER," TWO REELS, again gives you the returned Marguerite Snow in a powerful emotional role—one that brings recollections of Miss Snow in "East Lynne," "Carmen," "Lucile," and her greatest emotional successes. The story is a thrilling one of life behind the scenes. Arthur Bower plays a villainous stage manager and the Thanhouser Kidlet is the dancer's little daughter. Carey Hastings, Justus D. Barnes and N. S. Wood have strong parts, too.

Friday, Feb. 13th—NO RELEASE because of extra-reel release of preceding release day.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

Head European Offices: Thanhouser Films, Ltd., 100 Charing Cross Road, London, W. C., England.

FIVE-A-WEEK

Essanay

COMING FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th

"SOPHIE PICKS A DEAD ONE"

(IN TWO PARTS)

A clever Western comedy filled with hilarious situations. This is positively a riot from start to finish. Margaret Joslin as "Sophie Clutts," Victor Potel as "Slippery Slim," and Harry Todd as "Mustang Pete" at your service in this sensational feature.

Released Tuesday, February 10th.

"SPEAK NO EVIL"

A splendid dramatic attraction that teaches a moral, featuring Irene Warfield, Richard C. Travers, Leo White and Ruth Stonehouse.

Released Wednesday, February 11th.

"MISS MILLY'S VALENTINE"

A screamingly funny farce comedy featuring Helen Dunbar, "Bobbie" Bolder and Chas. Stine.

Released Thursday, February 12th.

"THE WEAKER'S STRENGTH"

A Western drama with many thrills and sensations unparalleled.

Released Saturday, February 14th.

"THE CALLING OF JIM BARTON"

An interesting and exciting Western drama featuring the world's most popular photoplayer, G. M. ANDERSON.

COMING FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th

"THE OTHER GIRL"

(IN TWO PARTS)

A unique drama of love, jealousy and ambition. Frank Dixon loves Ruth Thomas, a poor but honorable girl. Frank's mother wants him to marry Alice Williams, a girl of social standing. The son balks at his mother's interference, and many complications arise. The photography and portrayal of characters are excellent. This is a worthy feature.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and RUTH STONEHOUSE Featured

OUR POSTERS ARE DISTINCTIVE. They will boom your business. Lithographs are in full four colors. You can order these from your exchange or direct from the Essanay Film Manufacturing Co. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of ESSANAY players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the PLAYERS' PHOTO CO., 177 N. STATE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

"The Merchant

(Lois Weber as Portia)

A magnificent film rendition of Shakespeare's immortal drama. Sumptuous settings. Wonderful costuming. Clear photography

UNIVERSAL

SPECIAL

You can get this from your Universal exchange, but it is NOT a part of the regular program. It is a special 4-reel release, and will cost you an extra rental. Book it at any cost and draw new patrons to your house. Book it now. Released the last week in February.

(Phillips Smalley as Shylock)

A 4-reel masterpiece produced at tremendous expense. Accompanied by the very finest lithographs, special window cards, etc.

UNIVERSAL

SPECIAL

Superb 6-sheets, two kinds of 3-sheets and two kinds of 1-sheets; also two styles of window cards, all designed by the best artists of the Morgan Lithograph Co. Ask your exchange all about the special advertising matter, and don't hesitate to pay the extra rental price!

We've Changed

First "Universal Ike" Re

We can't release our "Universal Ike" comedies quite so soon as we expected. The first release will be on Tuesday, March 3rd. JOT DOWN THAT DATE RIGHT NOW! It will be a red letter day for you and for the Universal program! "Universal Ike Gets A Goat" is the title of the first scream. "Universal Ike's Wooing" is the title of the second. You'll get a "Universal Ike" brand EVERY TUESDAY beginning March 3rd. NOW GET TO WORK AND PREPARE ALL YOUR ADVANCE NOTICES IMMEDIATELY.

A rear view of a bow-legged runt of a cowboy, with the Universal trademark flapping in the breeze—that's the "Universal Ike" brand trademark!

Boost the "Universal Ike" comedy and begin right away. No matter how strong you make it, the pictures will more than make good everything you say about them!

Our Plans!

lease, March 3rd

A HOT TIP FROM PRESIDENT LAEMMLE:

There's a 2-reel Christie "Nestor" comedy coming which you MUST not miss. I laughed till the tears poured down my cheeks. I laughed for two thousand feet. The National Board of Censors giggled and shrieked. Even the hardened critics from the trade papers roared, and that is the acid test. This 2-reel "Nestor" is entitled and it will be released FRIDAY, MARCH 6th, the same week as the first "Universal Ike" release. Ask your exchange for an early booking. Remember, this is an ALL STAR COMEDY COMPANY with such clever funmakers as Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons, Russell Bassett, John Steppling and Victoria Ford in the leading roles. Under the direction of Albert E. Christie they have turned out a comedy that is a GENUINE FEATURE! (Note:—I advise every Universal exchange to buy EXTRA PRINTS of this comedy feature in order to give unusually quick bookings.) CARL LAEMMLE.

"SHE WAS ONLY A WORKING GIRL"

Universal Film Mfg. Co.
Carl Laemmle, Pres.
1600 Broadway New York

There's a universal liking for Universal Ike

Novelty 3-Sheet

Reproduced from an actual scene on the film itself. Showing a moving picture WITHIN a moving picture. Buy enough of these novelty 3-sheets to "paper" your whole neighborhood. You can boost "Captain Jenny, S. A.," with all your heart and soul, for it is a remarkable feature. In order to give you plenty of opportunity to bill it properly we have issued

6-Sheets!

3-Sheets!

2 kinds of 1-Sheets!

Don't use torn or soiled posters! Buy fresh new ones and PLENTY OF THEM! Don't spoil a great feature with worn out lithographs. If your exchange can't sell you big enough quantities of posters for this feature (or any of our other features) buy direct from the Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, O. (not from us).

Universal

CARL LAEMMLE, President

Herbert Brenon

Takes pleasure in announcing his
RE-ENGAGEMENT by the Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

Producer of the following successful feature photoplays:

IVANHOE 4 REELS — This feature holds the sales record for Great Britain (109 Copies!)

ABSINTHE 4 REELS

ROBESPIERRE (3 Reels)
LEAH, THE FORSAKEN (3 Reels)
IN A WOMAN'S POWER (2 Reels)
THE LONG STRIKE (2 Reels)
LOVE OR A THRONE (2 Reels)
KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN (3 Reels)
THE WATCH-DOG OF THE DEEP (2 Reels)
SECRET SERVICE SAM (2 Reels)
VENGEANCE (2 Reels)
THE BISHOP'S CANDLESTICKS (2 Reels)

RAGS AND RICHES, BLOOD WILL TELL, THE LAST OF THE MADISONS, AND MANY OTHERS

COMING

ACROSS THE ATLANTIC (3 Reels) THE PRICE OF SACRILEGE (3 Reels)

MR. BRENON IS NOW IN THE BERMUDAS PRODUCING A SIX-REEL SENSATIONAL FANTASY,

"NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER"

With ANNETTE KELLERMANN in the Title Role—Supported by WILLIAM E. SHAY, LEAH BAIRD and a splendid Stock Company

Film Manufacturing Company

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

One of the greatest successes of the American stage.

Daniel Frohman Presents The Famous Romantic Play

"THE PRIDE OF JENNICO"

By Abby Sage Richardson and Grace Livingston Furniss

A Dramatic Conflict of Hearts and Swords, Enacted By The FAMOUS PLAYERS STOCK COMPANY, In Motion Pictures.

"The Pride of Jennico" is a stirring drama, relating how a naughty, whimsical little princess is tamed by love, how a haughty young noble is humbled by the same sweet influence, and how both finally learn the power of the heart over pride and caprice.

IN FOUR PARTS

RELEASED FEBRUARY 20th

"AT LAST WE HAVE THE RIGHT TO LOVE!"

PRINCESS OTTILIE MAKES HER ESCAPE FROM THE CASTLE OF DORNHEIM.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

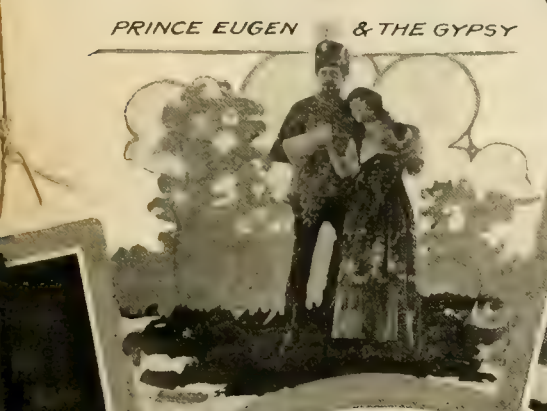
FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

Romance emphasized by daring ambitions and cold steel.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

PRINCE EUGEN & THE GYPSY



"WHEN BLADES ARE OUT, & LOVE'S AFIELD!"

"SWEAR BY THE SWORD ALWAYS TO UPHOLD THE PRIDE OF JENNICO!"

PRINCESS OTTILIE SEEKS THE PROTECTION OF JENNICO CASTLE.

FILM COMPANY

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

LONDON·PARIS·NEW YORK·BERLIN·ROME·MILAN·VIENNA·MADRID

TRADE MARK

PATHÉ

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL

·KIEV·CAIRO·BOMBAY·SHANGHAI·SINGAPORE·HONGKONG·SMYRNA·ALGIERS·

THE PANIC IN THE DEPTHS OF THE MINE

5 REELS

G E R M

HOPELESS LOVE, FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH; JEALOUSY AND HATE THAT HEROISM THAT RISES TO SUPREME HEIGHTS; COWARDICE THAT

RELEASED THROUGH THE

AS A SPECIAL FEATURE

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

COVERS THE

TRADE MARK

·AMSTERDAM·MUNICH·MARSEILLES·NOUMEA·ZURICH·ODESSA·MOSCOW·

·ST PETERSBURG·DRESDEN·HAMBURG·BRUSSELS·STOKHOLM·ATHENS·

PATHÉ

CITIES OF THE WORLD

TRADE MARK

BARCELONA·MEXICO·BUENOS·AIRES·RIO JANEIRO·SYDNEY·MANILA·

THE RESCUERS PLANNING THEIR WAY

I N A L

5 REELS

ARE STRONGER THAN LOVE OF LIFE; GREED THAT CONQUERS JUSTICE; ANGERS AND UNSELFISHNESS THAT THRILLS. THIS IS GERMINAL!

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

PHOTOPLAY MASTERPIECE

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

WHOLE GLOBE

PATHÉ FRÈRES 1 CONGRESS ST. JERSEY CITY, N.J.

TRADE MARK

ROSTOFF·WARSAW·BAKU·BELGRADE·BATAVIA·BUCAREST·SOFIA·

PHOTOPLAY

RELEASED

THE THIRD DEGREE

Adapted from Charles Klein's great New York dramatic success—appeals to all classes and has turned away crowds everywhere.

In Five Parts LUBIN Intense Drama

THE BATTLE OF SHILOH

A story of tender love and violent battle—thrilling and intense—different and better than any war play you have ever seen.

In Four Parts LUBIN Drama

The LION and The MOUSE

Another of Charles Klein's intensely human plays—one of the most substantial hits of the "speaking stage" in recent years—now the greatest drawing card on the feature film market.

In Six Parts LUBIN Drama

Booked Exclusively Through Special Feature Department

GENERAL

MASTERPIECES

COMING

JUDITH of BETHULIA

The poetic tragedy of Judith and Holofernes—based on the Apocrypha—by Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

In Four Parts BIOGRAPH Reaches the Sublime

GERMINAL

or THE TOLL OF LABOR

Adapted from Emile Zola's famous novel. Massive and compelling. Will rank with the picture triumphs of the current year.

In Five Parts PATHE Drama

THROUGH FIRE TO FORTUNE

or THE SUNKEN VILLAGE

A production which has "the trick of singularity." Strong and ingenious in contrivance.

In Five Parts LUBIN Drama

71 WEST 23rd STREET - - - - - NEW YORK

FILM CO. [INC.]

FOUR ACES

Kay-Bee Features

FEBRUARY 10th
Colonel's Adopted Daughter
(1 Reel)

FEBRUARY 13th
Arrow Maker's Daughter
(2 Reels)

FEBRUARY 20th
The Raiders
(2 Reels)

FEBRUARY 27th
North of 53
(2 Reels)

Domino Winners

Feb. 12th--The Mystery Lady	2	Reels
Feb. 19th--The Play's The Thing	2	"
Feb. 26th--Courtship of O San	2	"
Mar. 5th--For The Wearing of the Green	2	"

Broncho Headliners

Feb. 11th--Romance of the Sea	2	Reels
Feb. 18th--Yellow Flame	2	"
Feb. 25th--Repaid	2	"
Mar. 4th--Mario	2	"
Mar. 11th--Barrier Royal	2	"

Keystone Comedies

FEBRUARY 9th
Mabel's Strange Predicament

FEBRUARY 12th
A Robust Romeo

FEBRUARY 16th
Baffles, Gentleman Burglar
(2 Reels)

FEBRUARY 19th
A Thief Catcher

FEBRUARY 19th
Love and Gasoline

MUTUAL PROGRAM
EXCLUSIVELY

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP., LONGACRE BLDG., 42nd ST. B'WAY, NEW YORK CITY

A cowardly brother objects to his sister's marriage—A determined suitor, plus a live detective, solves the real reason for the brother's opposition—A Charming, Highly Dramatic Story.

KLEINE-CINES

(In Three Parts)

THE MONEY-SHARKS

(Copyright, 1914, by George Kleine)

For Release Tuesday, February 24th, 1914

Dora and Gerald Damver are wealthy orphans. Gerald, as Dora's guardian, refuses to sanction the marriage of Dora to Jim Harcourt. Harcourt, suspicious, places the matter in the hands of a competent detective, with surprising results.

The investigator soon learns that Gerald is deeply in debt to a crook called Captain Merrick. Harcourt takes up the notes quietly and when Merrick learns that Gerald is no longer in his clutches, he hires thugs to seize Harcourt and take him out of the country, bound, in the hold of a vessel.

How Captain Merrick, assisted by the weak-kneed Gerald, pressed his suit with Dora almost to the altar—how Harcourt escaped by setting fire to the vessel—his return to home and his desperate battle on the cliffs with Merrick—all combine to make an unusually interesting, highly sensational story.

RELEASED THROUGH GENERAL FILM COMPANY

One, three and six sheets with this subject

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State Street

CHICAGO, ILL.

KLEINE

·LONDON·PARIS·NEW YORK·BERLIN·VIENNA·BRUSSELS·ROME·MILAN·HAMBURG·

TRADE MARK

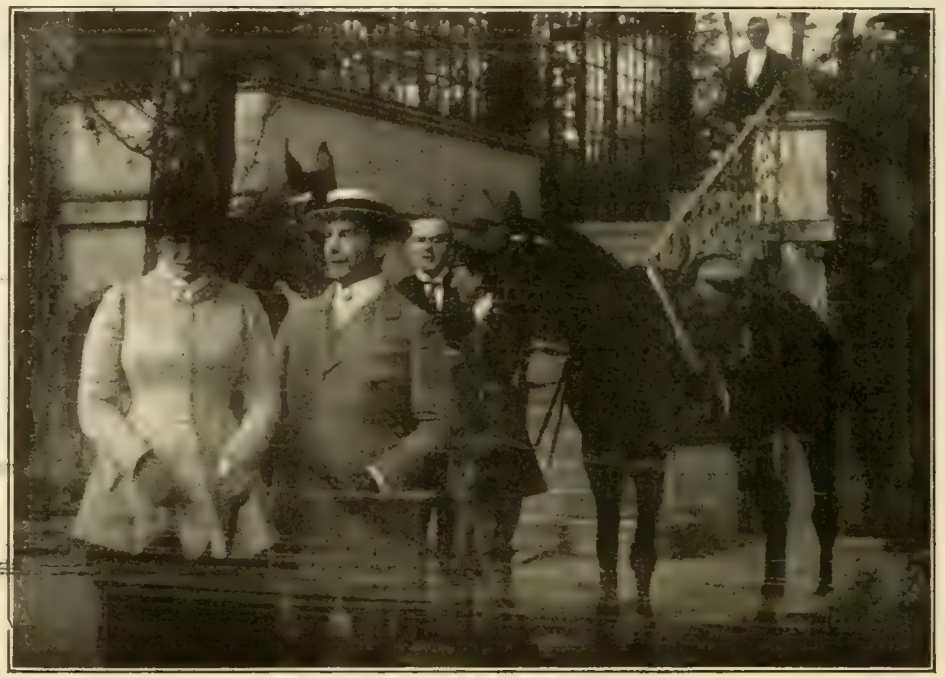
PATHÉ

TRADE MARK

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

·AMSTERDAM·MUNICH·ATHENS·ROSSTOFF·SYDNEY·ALGIERS·SINGAPORE·SHANGHAI·MANILA·CAIRO·HONGKONG·BACOU·

·BUENOS AIRES·MEXICO·RIO JANEIRO·BARCELONA·BELGRADE·BUCAREST·ZURICH·WARSAW·SOFIA·MARSEILLES·BUDAPEST·



SCENE FROM THE BROTHER COUNTS

THE BROTHER COUNTS

A TWO PART DRAMA

A fine German production telling the tale of youthful folly and the penalty. Noteworthy for artistic finish and beauty.

RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH FIFTH

ON THE ALTAR OF PATRIOTISM

A TWO PART DRAMA

A splendid story of European politics and of sacrifice of all for one's country. The leading woman, a Spanish dancer, is most attractive.

RELEASED SATURDAY, MARCH SEVENTH

NOTE — Insist upon these films at your exchange. If you can't get them, write Pathé Frères, 1 Congress Street, Jersey City, N. J.

TRADE MARK

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

COVERS THE WHOLE WORLD

PATHÉ FRÈRES 1 CONGRESS ST., JERSEY CITY, N.J.

TRADE MARK

·ST PETERSBURG·STOCKHOLM·DRESDEN·MADRID·ODESSA·MOSKOW·KIEW·

EDISON

Beginning with the third story—March 14th—"Dolly of the Dailies" will be released twice a month, on the second and fourth Saturdays. We are doubling the drawing power of this series. Are you going to profit by it?

OCTAVIUS

OCTAVIUS

Featuring Barry O'Moore Octavius — Amateur Detective

Twelve comic detective stories by Frederic Arnold Kummer, appearing in the Pictorial Review. Pictorial Review has a circulation of over 1,000,000. It is boosting the film in every possible way—advertising that you can convert into cash. The flood of police and detective plays and photoplays gives this comic detective series tremendous value as an attraction.

Second story, "The Adventure of the Extra Baby," released Monday, February 16th.

COMING SINGLE REELS

The Story of the Willow Pattern
Drama. Released Tuesday, Feb. 10th.

*Andy Goes on the Stage
Third adventure of Andy.
Released Wednesday, Feb. 11th.

*His Grandchild
Drama. Released Saturday, Feb. 14th.

Sophia's Imaginary Visitors
Comedy-Drama. Released Tuesday, Feb. 17th.

Courting Betty's Beau
Comedy. Released Wednesday, Feb. 18th.

*The Powers of the Air
Drama. Released Saturday, Feb. 21st.

COMING MULTIPLE REELS

All For His Sake
In Two Parts.
Drama. Released Friday, Feb. 20th.

The Drama in Heyville
In Two Parts.
Comedy. Released Friday, Feb. 27th.

One sheet. One and three sheets. One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.*

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope, Type "D."

LUBIN

ANNOUNCES

Two Multiple Reels Each Week

(BEGINNING WITH WEEK OF FEBRUARY 16th)

The regular Monday releases will be discontinued, to permit us to satisfy the demand for Lubin Multiple Reels, which have become so popular with all Exhibitors.

The Regular Lubin Weekly Program will be as follows:

Tuesday--A Comedy
Wednesday--A Multiple
Thursday--A Multiple
Friday--A Drama
Saturday--A Comedy

ARRANGE YOUR BOOKINGS ACCORDINGLY!

TWO LUBIN MASTERPIECES

"The Lion and the Mouse"

IN SIX REELS

"THE THIRD DEGREE"

IN FIVE REELS

(Both by Charles Klein, the foremost playwright of the day)

These two extraordinary photoplays have caused more favorable comment than any other two pictures ever shown to the motion picture public—they have broken all attendance records for every Exhibitor who has shown them.

PIERCE'S THEATRE, NEW ORLEANS, EXHIBITED "THE THIRD DEGREE" FOR FIVE CONSECUTIVE DAYS, PLAYING TO CAPACITY AT EACH PERFORMANCE. THE SUCCESS OF THESE MARVELOUS PICTURES IS CONCLUSIVELY PROVED!

(THEY MAY BE SECURED FROM THE OFFICES OF THE GENERAL FILM CO.)

FIVE RELEASES EACH WEEK - - INCLUDING TWO MULTIPLES

"THE PRICE OF A RUBY"--Drama, Special in 2 Reels - - - - Wednesday, February 18th
"THE HOUSE OF FEAR"--Drama, Special in 2 Reels - - - - - - Thursday, February 19th

---

"ANTIDOTES FOR SUICIDE"—Comedy—	MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9th
"TAMING TERRIBLE TED"—Comedy—	MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9th
"THE MEASURE OF A MAN"—Drama—	TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10th
"FITZHUGH'S RIDE"—Drama, Special in 2 Reels—	THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12th
"THE SLEEPING SENTINEL"—Drama—	FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th
"THE REWARD"—Drama—	SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14th

LUBIN'S ATTRACTIVE POSTERS

One and Three Sheets with Single Reels—One, Three and Six Sheets with all Multiple Reels—in Five Colors. Order from your Exchange or from A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Lubin Manufacturing Co. Philadelphia

VITAGRAPH

Every Week
Two Vitagraph Special Features
Each in Two Parts
Tuesday and Saturday
Every Week
A Comedy every Wednesday and Friday.

"THE WINNER WINS"

Drama. Monday, February 9th

To foil his chances in the great motor-race, the villain burns the big motor-drome. In the face of plotting, fire and villainy, the young champion wins the race and a bride.

"THE MASTER OF THE MINE"

Drama. Special Two-Part Feature
Tuesday, February 10th

A terrible explosion entombs the miners. The young master risks his life to rescue them. His young wife saves him and their love for each other is firmly cemented. W. D. Taylor, and Bertie Pitcairn are strong leads.

"SONNY JIM in SEARCH of a MOTHER"

Comedy. Wednesday, February 11th

He finds a good mother for himself and a pretty wife for his father. He finds her in a tree with the help of a cow. Dorothy Kelly, Bobby Connelly, Tefft Johnson, Rose Tapley and William Shea are the cast.

"SOME STEAMER SCOOPING" "NIAGARA FALLS"

Comedy and Scenic. Thursday, February 12th

1. The female reporter gets some stirring items in mid-ocean. The most interesting concerns her engagement to the man who was in love with another girl. Maurice Costello and Clara Kimball Young are the leads. 2. The most magnificent view of scenic splendor in the world.

"BUNNY'S BIRTHDAY"

Comedy. Friday, February 13th

He secures the unexpected loan of his neighbor's silverware. He returns it next day. He is accused of burglary. He is honorably discharged. John Bunny and Flora Finch assume the leads.

"CHILDREN OF THE FEUD"

Drama. Special Feature in Two Parts
Saturday, February 14th

It's a terrible and bitter mountain vendetta. Through the intermarriage of their children, forgiveness and peace are established and bloodshed wiped out forever. Edith Storey, Ned Finley and Harry Northrup are the principals.

SIX A WEEK

"SAWDUST AND SALOME"
Comedy-Drama.....MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th

"BACK TO BROADWAY"
Special Two-Part Feature.....TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th

"FATTY ON THE JOB"
"LUMBERING IN SWEDEN"
Comedy and Educational.....WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18th

"THE FIRST ENDORSEMENT"
Military Drama.....THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th

"HIS LITTLE PAGE"
Comedy.....FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th

"IRON AND STEEL"
Drama—Special Two-Part Feature—
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY RELEASES A SPECIAL FEATURE IN TWO PARTS EVERY TUESDAY AND SATURDAY AND A COMEDY EVERY WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY.

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS—7 x 9 PHOTOS OF VITAGRAPH PLAYERS.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES, SURPASSING ALL PREVIOUS VITAGRAPH ACHIEVEMENTS.

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

In Two Parts Featuring Alice Joyce, Tom Moore and Alice Hollister

No better money-makers than Kalem's Monday Multiple-Reel Features

Jean's hatred towards Sarah, her stepmother, drives the latter to Ware, a friend of the family and her former suitor, for advice. How Jean, stricken with remorse, sacrifices herself to save her stepmother from disgrace will bring tears to every eye.

Released Monday, February 23rd

Striking 1, 3 and 6-sheet posters that attract the eyes of the crowd

THE TIGERS OF THE HILLS

In Two Parts

The desperate conflict between the savages and the immigrants; the attack upon the weakened army post; the heroism of a prisoner who explodes a wagonload of powder in the midst of the red fiends—these incidents furnish the excitement your patrons demand.

Released Wednesday, February 25th
Superb 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters

REGGIE, THE SQUAW MAN

A full-reel burlesque on Indian life that is one great laugh. The son of wealth marries an Indian girl and brings her home to his parents. What happens when they try to civilize her, makes this a comedy that's immense!

Released Friday, February 27

THE DELAYED SPECIAL

A railroad story that rings true of the iron trail. The despatcher who risks his position and future to save a boy's life, will win the heart of every "fan."

Released Saturday, February 28th
Special 1 and 3-Sheet Posters

COMING IN TIME FOR ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Kalem's superb three-part adaptation of Dion Boucicault's greatest of all Irish dramas, "THE COLLEEN BAWN." Produced in Ireland, upon authentic locations. Release date, Monday, March 16th.

Be the first in your vicinity to show this money-making feature.

KALEM COMPANY

235-239 W. 23rd Street New York

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY

17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers .....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie .....Vice-President and General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—169 West Washington Street (Post Building), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 a year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The index for this issue will be found on page 886)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, February 14, 1914.

Facts and Comments

WE earnestly hope that the exhibitors of this state, and especially the exhibitors in the big cities of the state, are closely watching the attempt to prohibit exhibitions of motion pictures on Sundays. A bill has been introduced in the Assembly making the exhibition of motion pictures on Sundays a misdemeanor, and extending the punishment not only to the exhibitor, but likewise to the owner or agent of the building in which such exhibition may be held. The bill not only subjects the offender to the usual punishments which the law has provided for misdemeanants, but it makes him liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars. This penalty is "to be recovered in the name of the people of the State of New York for the benefit of The Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents in the City of New York and the overseers of the poor in any other city or town for the use of the poor." In addition to these penalties the proposed law provides the revocation of the license of any theater, etc., violating the law.

*

It is not unnatural to suppose that the society which is named in the bill as its chief beneficiary is interested in the fate of this measure. The aims and motives of this society may be the best in the world. Its aims and motives are indeed immaterial and not at all in issue. The practical aspect of the question is what we have to consider. In New York and in most of the big cities of the state, motion picture exhibitions on Sunday have, to say the least, been wisely tolerated. The late Mayor Gaynor and other jurists have, on more than one occasion, declared unequivocally in favor of the legality of these exhibitions. We have yet to learn of a single instance where the right to open on Sundays has been abused by the exhibitor. It is now generally conceded that the motion picture draws the public away from the unwholesome atmosphere of the saloon and similar resorts. In spite of many shortcomings, it is impossible to deny that the motion picture has an educational and refining influence. Certainly there have been no complaints of disorder in or around motion picture theaters, whether on week days or on Sundays. Why, then, this proposal to forbid a rational amusement on the very day when it can do the most good? We hope that this bill will not get further than the committee to which it has been referred, but hoping alone will accomplish nothing. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, and it behooves the exhibitors of this state to kill this senseless and reactionary measure beyond the hope of resurrection.

* * *

A THEATER in Columbus, Ohio, is reported as doing "capacity business" with the nastiest of all the white-slave films. We are glad to say that the theater in question is not and never was specially devoted to pictures. There is no city in the Union with a finer class of exhibitors than Columbus, and it is altogether natural to assume that not one regular exhibitor would pollute his house with such exhibitions. We know from the best possible source that the public in Columbus is used to clean shows, and has repeatedly registered its disapproval of the freak feature. We have no means of verifying the alleged claim of capacity business, but assuming the report to be correct, we do not believe that the business is furnished by regular picture patrons. "Capacity business" proves nothing on the ethical side of the question. An execution used to be the most popular of all exhibitions within the memory of men still living.

* * *

WE comment specially upon the election of Mr. Samuel Wheeler as President of the State League of Pennsylvania, because it is typical of the remarkable improvement of the personnel of the exhibitor. Mr. Wheeler has a substantial stake in the exhibiting business. He is the owner of a chain of prosperous motion picture theaters in the city of Philadelphia. He is an attorney, and has on more than one occasion asserted the rights of the exhibitor in the courts of his state. He is essentially constructive. He has exalted ideals of the mission and the responsibility of the exhibitor. He is progressive, and places the welfare of the exhibitors' organization above any consideration of self. We congratulate the exhibitors of Pennsylvania upon their excellent choice.

*

We take this occasion to record our emphatic belief that the strengthening of the individual state organizations is the most important task which confronts the advocates of organization. The exhibitor derives his most substantial and tangible benefits primarily from the state organization. The state organization alone can deal with the legislative measures which may possibly affect the welfare of the exhibitor. Such problems as Sunday opening, building regulations, measures of safety, etc., are essentially local problems and generally within the jurisdiction of the state.

Just Complaints of Exhibitors

By W. Stephen Bush

IN one day's mail recently The Moving Picture World received three apparently well-founded complaints of precisely the same nature. Our readers, all of whom are practical and successful exhibitors, register strong objections against indecent and suggestive pictures.

One of our readers, whose picture theater is located in a state on the Pacific Coast, protests against an alleged comedy, in which the scanty clothing of young women bathers seems to constitute the only striking point. Our friend wants to know "where the Board of Censorship was holding forth when this production was allowed to pass." He goes on to a detailed description of the offensive features of the film and then continues by saying that "the first he knew of the character of the reel was when it appeared on the screen." "Now, when I tell you," he goes on to say, "that this play came to my theater at a time when there was a big union revival being held within two blocks of the theater you can imagine the consequence. Moving picture shows were made the topic of a special tirade and referred to as the 'dirty picture shows' the night following. The moving picture theaters of Olympia were opened for the first time on Sundays about five years ago through the friendly interest of a newspaper reporter who later had to make a fight to prevent a united church fight against this method of desecrating (?) the Sabbath. You can imagine his indignation when this weapon (naming the objectionable picture) was put into the hands of his opponents to fight back with."

A similar complaint comes from an Ohio exhibitor, while a correspondent in Wisconsin sends a postal card which he had received from a patron who threatened to stay away from his show if any more "vile stuff was put on the screen." Our Wisconsin friend says he is a small exhibitor and states that even with the exercise of the greatest caution he cannot always prevent his exchange from sending him an occasional very bad picture, and as his nearest exchange is one hundred and fifty miles away he either has to "cut" his program or run a chance of offending the best part of his audience. He scores the so-called comedies of certain producers as the most likely to contain objectionable matter.

Exhibitors as a rule are busy men, and when they take the time to sit down and write a letter there generally is good cause for their complaint. It is altogether likely that these three exhibitors voice the sentiments of a large part of their colleagues. Their grievance therefore deserves careful consideration.

It is unfortunately true that too many directors confound humor with vulgarity. Nothing reflects our character more infallibly than the things we laugh at. Tell me what a man considers laughable and you have given me a distinct outline of his general character. There are minds to whom the indecent and the suggestive appeal as humorous. They are in the minority. In the average mind an exhibition that has anything vulgar or obscene in it excites no feeling except that of a lively disgust. Before a director is allowed to act out his conception of humor before a camera, which Jack London has so finely called "the eye of the audience," the owner of the studio ought to make sure that his sense of humor is normal. It does happen at times and it has frequently happened in the past that the owner of the studio is himself the worst offender. In this latter case there is but one remedy: the exhibitor must refuse to show the film. There is not the slightest affinity between humor and vulgarity or coarseness or indecency or malice. Humor has its source at the well-spring of hope. A man who has no humor can have very little hope. Even farcical humor, quite a legitimate subject for the competent producer, gains nothing whatever through descending to what is indecent or obscene. The hearty laugh follows clean humor. The guffaw of the vulgar follows the questionable joke.

Humor has a universal appeal. Like the language on the screen it can be understood anywhere, the manifold national variations of humor to the contrary notwithstanding. American humor in particular is welcome all the world over and it is ordinarily noted for its cleanness. I have spoken to producers of almost every nationality and they all declare that American humor has a catching quality and is much preferred to the native article in such countries as England and Germany.

Why, then, should "comedies" be made the vehicles of objectionable matter? Why above all things should the American-made humorous picture be thus defiled? No answer can be given, for there is none. The evil has not grown large enough to be beyond control and now is the time to check its further spread. Let us exercise double and treble precaution in keeping comedies absolutely clean. There is no objection to them being boisterous; a rough and rollicking humor often gets the greatest number of laughs. Some of us prefer refined comedy, and there never can be enough of that, but the farce comedy has its legitimate place on the screen.

While agreeing with our complaining friends and readers we cannot help pointing out to them that they are in a position to help themselves and to abate the evil of which they so justly complain. Every new development in the conditions of the industry tends toward increasing the power and independence of the individual exhibitor. He will in the future more than ever before in our history be the arbiter of his own fate. He must learn to depend wholly upon himself and to have confidence in his own judgment. Program building is going to be both the science and the salvation of the exhibitor of the future. The man with the eclectic and critical eye will go to the top and remain there. It is true that choosing is not an easy task. It is much more comfortable to trust to labels. Unless all signs fail, however, the day of labels is rapidly passing away. The successful exhibitor will have to go back of the label and make his own examination. Nor will he be able to evade the necessity of screen examination. Our friends whose complaints have been set down here all say that they did not realize how objectionable and offensive the picture was until they saw it on the screen with the audience looking on. That is wrong of course. No exhibitor can afford to trust himself and his audience to the judgment of others. He must take the trouble of looking his program over before he lets it go in the machine. He must be his own censor. "I did not know it was loaded" has never been a popular or acceptable excuse.

By exercising this careful supervision over his own program the exhibitor will re-act strongly and favorably upon the producer of motion pictures. The exhibitor is not likely to abuse this power of the veto which the new developments of the market have put in his hands. He realizes the difficulties of the producer and as a rule is in hearty sympathy with him and quite ready to forgive and forget an occasional slip. The exhibitor will not, however, hesitate to set his face against the pirates of the industry, whose appeal is always to the lowest instincts and who care nothing whatever for the name and fame of the motion picture.

Your Program

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

WHAT is the best program?

A. One of variety, accompanied by appropriate or delightful music. Comedies consistent and inconsistent, so long as they entertain, dramas intense, intellectual, beautiful or sensational, so long as they interest. Short stories if they are crisp, long ones if they grip and hold, even continued ones if they contain an element of suspense which arouses curiosity that must be satisfied.

How about the flash?

A. If it helps, but picture shows were thronged before great names were flashed, and those are still the most patronized which present the best uniform quality. Fine acting has carried along many a mediocre stage play, but the loss of personality in silent interpretation makes it necessary for the exceptional performer to have abundant opportunity.

Does variety mean both old and new?

A. That depends upon whether people are looking backward or forward. Most people are busy striving for something they do not possess. This implies a belief in the future, a passion for progress. On the other hand, many cultivated minds dwell almost constantly on the past, which seems to them more surely artistic, or which is veiled in the eternal twilight of romance.

What is most attractive in a story of dead ages?

A. A live meaning. With that in view, an artist may use subject matter found in history, legend, myth or ancient tale of any kind. An author of imaginative insight has but to rub his magic lamp to make men and events archaic his slaves, build new and dazzling palaces out of old and worn materials.

What old stories live the longest?

A. Those of great love seem to be eternal. Then it is well known that some of the greatest men have been almost unremarked or poorly understood by their contemporaries—they had no peers to judge them—and not only their works but themselves may be more justly presented by the superior enlightenment of ages following that of their supreme efforts. Old stories live the longest that have in them the subtle quality of suggestion, even if they do not clarify what we would know. Those who would enjoy understanding a great character of the past might be shown his relation to his environment and left to form their own estimate. Old stories would be interesting that picture suggestively what has offered problems hitherto unsolved.

For instance?

A. What were the hidden motives and purposes behind the remarkable acts of great men and women of history. Even more interesting to a mixed audience than noteworthy deeds of the past is the emotional spirit animating them. The facts have a scientific value—what leads up to them counts in the drama. In the drama of any age the line of interest is not as close to the act itself as to its conception and significance.

May not old stories be new to many people?

A. Worse than that, much that seems new may be very old. Prof. G. T. W. Patrick wrote in the Popular Science Monthly last May that he saw an interesting inscription on an old stone in the Constantinople museum, written by King Naram of Chaldea, 3000 B. C., which said, "We have fallen upon evil times, and the world has waxed very old and wicked. Politics are very corrupt and children are no longer respectful to their parents." King Naram was evidently in his decline, pessimistic and inclined to look backward. It is not a question of whether old stories are new to many people, but whether they are worth while to many people. Hundreds of generations historic have gone by with scarcely an event of modern interest to mark their passage. Only what still lives in our thoughts is worth new interpretation on the screen. The best old subjects are those which still engage mental speculation.

What modern spirit seems most popular?

A. That of science. It is re-shaping civilization. The fact that scientific works run a close second to those of fiction in public libraries indicates the growing taste for knowledge that is gathered by experiment and reasoning. Karslake makes a nice distinction between art and science, "Both may be investigations of truth, but science inquires for the sake of knowledge and art for the sake of production." Science disproves past dogmas and makes straight for progress.

Do people care for dry facts?

A. They need not be dry. Some of the most mysterious and fascinating of modern stories are those which probe the depths of the human mind. Moving picture audiences are as broad as they are tolerant, but they rather enjoy seeing the old forces of bigotry and ignorance knocked out by the courage and honesty of logic and plain facts. Young science is a bold spirit, a sort of a Paul Revere, calling the people to rebellion against old oppression that they may attain new freedom.

How can facts be put in story form?

A. By contrasting new truth with old error. Every one who has lived and thought is conscious of the gradual correction of early errors. From our own mistakes and those of other people we slowly reach a point of advantage—self-interest makes the picturing and exposure of unfounded assumptions of deep interest—and one of the most powerful weapons in the hands of the screen dramatist is ridicule of uncorrected false ideas. There are many farcical beliefs still cherished by the mentally unemployed.

What is amusing in scientific facts?

A. Knowledge of our own weaknesses. Hopeless vanity furnishes abundant comedy material. There is quite as much tragedy in superstitious resistance of truth, in the suffering and misery entailed upon humanity by ignorance. Moving pictures are to be one of the great spans of progress toward an end none can foresee.

Should modern drama rank first on the program?

A. Not to the exclusion of all others, but the very fact that few of us are satisfied with what is, that we are trying to live, to enjoy, to express ourselves, to be understood and appreciated, to increase our capacities by growth, indicates that we are most deeply concerned with the present and the future. Life and its troubles of yesterday are familiar enough to most of us—we are hoping that tomorrow will be brighter and better. One way to make it so is to deal with present issues.

What are present issues?

A. Those pertaining to our welfare. A very large number of people who attend the picture shows have no real opportunity to live and enjoy life as they should—if our civilization fails at all, it fails to supply growing human needs—and, even if screen portrayals do not point the way to superior conditions, they may be of service through suggestion. Many now are, hence the tremendous hold of moving pictures on the hearts of the people. Nothing could make them more dear to all than their broadening the paths of common thought and common humanity.

Vitagraph Picture Theater

Famous American Photoplay Company Leases Old Criterion Theater and Will Present "Broadway Star" Features with Elaborate Setting—Novel Entertainment Planned.

AT LAST the Vitagraph Eagle, famous bird of the photoplay, will flap its wings and fairly scream at the passerby from a huge electric sign attached to the outer wall of a Broadway theater and there has been added to the blaze of electricity that has made Broadway one of the wonders of the world another bright spot on the "Great White Way." This new "bright spot" appeared for the first time on Saturday, February 7, at the northeast corner of Broadway and 44th Street, formerly known as Charles Frohman's Criterion Theater, but henceforth to be the home of the Vitagraph Broadway Star Features.

For some time the Vitagraph Company has been working upon the details of this ambitious plan. Great difficulties were encountered in securing the house. There were prejudices to be overcome and terms to adjust, but patience and persistence finally won the day and obtained for the exhibition of motion pictures probably the finest location in all New York and a theater that is better adapted than all of those not specially built for that purpose. With this as a beginning and the changes since made in the interior of the house to better suit it to the uses of the pictured drama, it is doubtful if motion pictures will have a finer presentation anywhere than at the Vitagraph Theater.

The seating capacity of the Vitagraph Theater is approximately 1,000 persons. A careful study of the house revealed the fact that not a seat, with the exception of the upper proscenium boxes, which are seldom used, is cut off from a full view of the screen and that a splendid view of the picture is obtained from the last seat in the highest gallery. A better arrangement of seats could hardly have been obtained had the theater been especially designed for the needs of the picture.

With this unequaled location and excellent house, it is the purpose of the Vitagraph Company to spare neither effort nor expense to adapt that house to the requirements of its new use. Beginning with the lobby a special decorative plan has been adopted. The scheme is East Indian in treatment, and has transformed the once uninviting entrance into a bower of Oriental beauty. In the auditorium a complete lighting system, calculated to make it possible for one to read a newspaper at any time, has been installed. Upon the walls back of the orchestra seats appear a gallery of the leading Vitagraph players, beautiful portraits done in pastel by Anders Randolph, the well known Norwegian painter. The body of the house has been renovated and furbished throughout.

Probably the most noticeable feature will be found in the treatment of the stage. After considerable experimenting it was found that ordinary stage settings would not provide an adequate framing for the image on the screen, so a special setting was decided upon. The firm of Gates & Morange, scene painters, and designers and builders of stage settings, was called into consultation. From suggestions submitted by J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, a most elaborate and ornate structure was designed.

Regarding this setting, Mr. Blackton explained to the writer that considerable thought and research had been expended before a satisfactory design had been obtained. "In the course of the quest for a suitable idea," he said, "the thought came to me that an exhibition of pictures would harmonize with an artist's studio and I went to work with that idea in mind. This idea has been perfected with most beautiful results by Messrs. Gates & Morange, whose long experience in building stage effects afforded us valuable assistance at this time.

"What you will see from the body of the house," continued Mr. Blackton, "will appear to be one end of such a studio as might have been constructed by some great artist—a Meissonier or an Alma-Tadema—adorned with beautiful friezes, rare draperies and rich and costly furniture, art objects and rugs. A low flight of steps approach a large French window, opening upon a balustrade and through the window will be seen a view of New York harbor with its Statue of Liberty in the distance, while the foreground will show the lower end of Manhattan Island with its tall buildings.

"The interior of this studio is constructed after the French Renaissance. The woodwork is finished in mahogany and the decorative tones are brown and gold. Curtains of velour in a shade of blue will drape the window and entrances. The entire structure is of a permanent character and will occupy the full stage. I have seen many picture theaters, here and abroad, but nothing has been done in any of them that approaches this effect."

At the studio of Gates & Morange, 155 West 29th Street, the writer saw the work on the set in full swing. Mr. Morange explained that the structure would be fifty-six feet wide, twenty-two feet deep and thirty-five feet high. The screen will be hung to drop across the window and will show a picture about 14 feet by 18 feet.

Design for Permanent Stage Setting for the Vitagraph Theater. Executed by Gates and Morange, New York.

Mr. Blackton has called this the "Window of the World." When the theater drop curtain rises it will be upon a full lighted stage with the scene on the back drop showing through the window. The lights will be gradually dimmed to represent the closing of the day when the lights in the buildings and the harbor will appear. With the coming of night a curtain will drop across the window, the stage lights will go out and the first announcement of the picture will appear. Back of this curtain the special picture screen will be dropped, the first curtain raised and the picture will be shown. At the end of each act of the program from this point on the velour portieres will drop across the screen to indicate the close of that part of the entertainment.

The back, or scenic drop, is fifty feet wide and thirty feet high and presents a very realistic view of the harbor of New York. The tall office buildings in the vicinity of Bowling Green appear in the foreground, with Battery Park, the Aquarium, and the ferry slips that fringe the end of the island. In the distance may be seen the Statue of Liberty and the other prominent structures of the upper bay. This effect may be changed from time to time, giving other noted views of the world's grandeur.

Appropriate music for the picture has not been overlooked by the promoters of the Vitagraph enterprise. There are various methods by which adequate music might be provided for picture entertainments, but everything in connection with this particular entertainment is being done upon the most novel as well as the most elaborate scale, and so it is that a distinct novelty will be introduced in the line of music. Maybe that you have heard of the Hope-Jones "Symphonic Orchestra." It's the last word in special organ building, superior in many respects to the already well-known Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra, built by the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, and is being installed in the Vitagraph Theater at a cost of $30,000. We will not attempt to describe this instrument here—too technical—but it is said to be capable of producing almost every known sound appreciable by the human ear, or that could be desired to interpret the human emotions portrayed upon the motion picture screen. It must be heard to be appreciated.

Will Run Four Shows Daily.

The Vitagraph Company's plan of entertainment contemplates four distinct shows daily. The morning show will commence at 11 o'clock and continue until 1:30 o'clock. Doors will open at 10:30 o'clock. For this show the admission will be twenty-five cents to all parts of the house.

For the regular matinee show the doors will open at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon and the entertainment will begin at 2:30 o'clock, lasting until 5 o'clock. Admisison 25 and 50 cents, all seats reserved.

The second matinee or "supper show" will commence at 5:30 o'clock in the evening and continue until 7:30 o'clock. Admission, twenty-five cents. No reserved seats.

The regular evening performance will begin at 8:30 o'clock and continue to 11 o'clock. For this entertainment the prices will be 25 cents, 50 cents and one dollar. All seats reesrved.

An additional feature of the regular evening show will be a one-act "silent drama," in which the leading stars of the Vitagraph Company will appear. This is a distinct novelty in the photoplay entertainment; something that has never been done in any picture theater, here or abroad. The first performance will be looked forward to with unusual interest.

The opening performance of the Vitagraph Theater will occur on Saturday, February 7, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and the regular schedule as above noted will be followed, but the public "first night" presentation will be on Saturday evening.

A rehearsal for the press and the friends of the company will be given Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

A splendid program of pictures has been selected for the opening entertainment. The first picture to be shown will be a four-part drama entitled "A Million Bid," adapted from the play, "Agnes," written by George Cameron and directed by Mr. Ralph Ince, under the supervision of Mr. Albert E. Smith of the Vitagraph Company. Miss Anita Stewart plays the leading part of "Agnes" and is supported by Miss Julia Swayne Gordon, Mr. Harry Morey and Mr. E. K. Lincoln in the principal parts.

The second picture is a burlesque in three parts entitled "Goodness Gracious, or "Movies As They Shouldn't Be," written by Mr. J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitgraph Company, and directed by Mr. James Young under Mr. Blackton's supervision. It is one of the greatest laugh provokers we have seen in many days.

For the "Silent Drama" number Mr. Blackton has written a sketch entitled "The Honeymooners." It will be portrayed by Mr. John Bunny, Miss Mary Charleson and Mr. James Morrison.

The Vitagraph Company took charge of the house on February 2, and the past week has been spent in installing the stage setting, decorating the lobby and making such alterations as have been found necessary.

Rothapfel Rehearsing.

In Full Blast For Two Hours Before Giving Final O. K. to "Quo Vadis?"

By W. Stephen Bush.

ROTHAPFEL, the Napoleon of Dramatic Kinematography, and at present director general of the Regent Theater, is having distinguished audiences these days when he puts the finishing touches on any of the great film productions. Rothapfel rehearsing "Quo Vadis?" was watched by more than one picture expert, and he was surely worth watching. He comes to the rehearsal in a spirit of get-results-or-die. He has his eyes on a thousand things at once, and woe to him who shows any "wobbling" at the "dress rehearsal."

You can learn some things by watching him, but other things he does are so evidently the result of his own individual inspiration that you can admire but not imitate. Take, for instance, his idea of opening "Quo Vadis?" The theater is in perfect darkness. Spotlight on two seats in one of the upper boxes. Discovered a boy seated and an elderly man standing up, the boy in the attitude of a learner and listener, the old man evidently the beneficent friend and instructor of youth. The boy ingenuously asks the old man for the meaning of "Quo Vadis?" The old man explains, putting on additional airs of benevolence. Here a great problem is solved. The audience is educated without having its ignorance obtruded upon itself. We are a lot of hypocrites, you know, and love to appear wiser than we are. This neat device of Rothapfel secures him at once the good will of his audience, and puts them in pleasant humor. It's a trick well understood by the ancients, as capturing the good will of the audience was the first lesson taught in all the old schools of rhetoric and eloquence. Before this feeling of good humor has a chance to lose itself, behold! how cleverly Rothapel creates the atmosphere of ancient classic Rome, two antique benches of marble lit up by a gentle glow of alternating red and white, the light coming in different directions, and missing not a single spot of the scenery. Next, an overture breathing the very spirit of "Quo Vadis?" and a call of what he calls the "Aida" tubas, and the curtain parts—the picture is on, and the audience keenly, if unconsciously, enjoys being thus carried into the midst of things without a dull moment in the preliminaries. As the film unwound itself, behold!—oh, horrors!—a picture out of frame. The effect on Rothapfel was electric. He leaped into the air and came down accompanied by a shower of polite profanity. He stands there for a moment, his portly form quivering with repressed rage.

"... in a house like this ... you know this ought not to happen here. ... there is absolutely no excuse for it. ..." I felt sorry for the operator, as, after all, he, too, was but human, and thought of saying a word or two by way of smoothing things over, but a careful survey of Rothapfel, as he stood before me, still trembling, and darting wrath from his eyes, made me change my mind.

What is the meaning of the electric light in the middle of the orchestra? Why do the young lady and the young man sit before this light with a large board spread out before them? That is part of Rothapfel's staff. They watch things generally and record the lengths of the musical pieces with the precision and accuracy of a chronometer in the Greenwich observatory. They see to it that the cues are properly distributed and properly followed. The young lady is a stenographer, and ready to take down anything that comes into her general's mind. Rothapfel is constantly distributing himself all over the theater. A word or two to his staff in the center of the battle, then a jump on the stage where he deplores "too much brass in this last piece," and the next minute in the operator's booth having a heart-to-heart talk on his favorite theme of projection. He has to contend with the bony accretions frequently found in and about the skulls of stage hands. He does not rest until at last there comes an answering gleam of intelligence into the eye of the stage hands, and they understand to the dot just what he wants of them. Rothapfel is an adept at piercing the aforesaid bony accretions, and getting at a grade of intelligence which ordinarily is quite unapproachable. Do not get the impression that Rothapfel's assistants are comprised in this unflattering description. Au contraire—Rothapfel himself says that he could never expect to achieve the results without the intelligent and loyal coöperation of his chief assistants, and he cannot say enough in praise of Carl, who bosses the music. I agree with him. Carl is at the very top of his profession plus motion picture enthusiasm.

HERMAN FICHTENBERG IN NEW YORK.

Herman Fichtenberg, proprietor of the Alamo Theater, New Orleans, La., and president of the Fichtenberg Amusement Enterprises of that city, has been in New York for several days absorbing local color for transplantation to the Gulf city. He seems to be pretty busy circulating around the big film centers, all of which, no doubt, portends some surprise in store for New Orleans exhibitors or photoplay fans, or both.

"Comedy and Tragedy."

Two-Reel Edison. Released Through General Film Co.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THIS adequate presentation of a highly dramatic story is called a "revival," but it is far more than a return to life—it is a regeneration, with enormously increased vigor, activity and efficiency. Two reels give breadth and freedom to what one reel cramped. In fact, what may well be called the "vital action" of a screen story is usually hampered, if not crippled, by all too careful measurement. There should be absolutely no limitation placed upon the time, or its equivalent in film, consumed in picturing what is demanded by inherent logic of theme, in other words, a full response must be made to what the audience has a right to expect.

The story of "Comedy and Tragedy" is one most carefully devised to give opportunity to an accomplished actress. She is the hypothenuse opposite an angle formed by a princely lover and one of his captains. She is called upon to settle a wager as to whether she is better in comedy than tragedy at a time that an actual tragedy is being enacted in the garden of her home. She portrays a comedy scene, and has just finished, when a note is handed her that indicates what is going on. She is frantic, but her wild attempts to escape are misinterpreted by her friends as part of her acting. She is restrained at a moment when she is attempting to stop a duel between her prince and her captain, the first and least loved being reasonably sure of killing his antagonist through superior skill.

Scene from "Comedy and Tragedy" (Edison).

As all events in the preparatory scenes lead up to this one, it is manifestly the author's purpose to dwell upon it for the sake of rousing high mental tension. It is now adequately portrayed, whereas, in one reel versions, it has hitherto been so abridged as to be almost burlesqued. The free rhythms of development are in no place sacrificed from lack of room; the characters of the prince and the captain are contrasted with leisurely force; the thoroughly feminine scene where the actress sacrifices the captain's idealization of her to save his life, is given the scope it deserves; the product, like the pattern, is one of symmetry.

Although honors, according to the opportunity, are supposed to go to the lady in the case, impersonated by Mary Fuller, they are in reality carried off by Marc MacDermott, as Prince Gautier de Severac, and Augustus Phillips, as Jaques Duval, captain of the prince's bodyguard. The acting of these gentlemen is masterly in every situation—they intensify interest by admirable interpretation of contrasting characters. The long and fierce duel they fight has little of stage artificiality in it. From all appearances, it is a genuine affair between two skilled swordsmen in dead earnest.

Miss Fuller's acting may have suffered from directorial instruction, but her presentation of comedy is entirely too forced to be convincing, whereas her tragic performance seems spontaneous as well as powerful in the supposed comparison. This is as it should be to a certain degree, but it is over-contrasted. I do not share the theatrical superstition about brunettes, that dark eyes are the symbols of passion, soulfulness and intensity, though the ancient prejudice still remains, but all indications point to her superiority as a tragic actress. She does so well as one that she balances a general performance of high merit.

"From Gutter to Footlights."

A Five-Part Barker Production, Released by the Apex Film Company.

THE moral of this tale might be: "The evil women do dies with them." This means that the female of the species ceases to be deadly only when she is dead. The female in this particular instance is a severe corroboration of Kipling's recent poetical argument against votes for women. She is so deadly that out of five principals who start the story, only one is left alive to tell the tale at the finish, and his troubles vanish when the female is dead.

The picture tells the story of a woman's ambition that looks at nothing in its path except as a stepping-stone to an ultimate self-gratification and glorification. She says of mere man No. 1, "This fellow can be of no further use to me; in fact, he is a hindrance, therefore, he must be rid of." She says of easy gent No. 2, "I can use this poor fool to get rid of No. 1"; which he does, and goes to prison. She says of weaker sex No. 3, "This jelly-fish can help me in my business." She says of conceited hide No. 4, "This ape can help me more than No. 3, hence out with No. 3." In four steps she goes up the social scale, beginning at the bottom and ending at the top. No. 1 is an organ grinder for whom she danced in the gutter; No. 2 is Giovanni, a struggling Italian artist; No. 3 is a theatrical manager's son, and No. 4 is a genuine roué count.

Scene from "From Gutter to Footlights" (Apex)

Younita, the danceress, can hardly be blamed for starting all this trouble, but the means she employed will spoil anyone's good opinion of her. She had probably been taught to dance by Reno, the Italian organ grinder, who considered that he had some interest in her future success. If the theatrical manager who offered her a job had invited Reno to come along with his organ everything would have been all right, but he didn't. On her part, Younita considered that she had only one life to live, and she wanted to make the best of it. But she didn't consider that Giovanni also had only one life to live. Because he loved her she induced him to make away with Reno and laughed when Giovanni was sent to prison. Dick, the theater manager's son, fed his all to her vanity with no thanks at all and had to make way for the Count.

Chickens have a way of coming home to roost. Giovanni came back after his escape from prison to find Younita with the Count. Her lies made matters worse, and Giovanni started out to exterminate the cast, including himself. Dick was spared, which saved the play from being a general catastrophe.

As a drama, it works up logically, and has many startling situations. The acting is far from bad, and the work of Fred Paul, a well-known English actor, as Giovanni, is very excellent. Altogether, the picture makes a very fair offering for a feature of the ultra sensational kind.

LADIES' WORLD HERO CONTEST.

The publishers of the Ladies' World announce very satisfactory results from the "hero" contest now running in that magazine. The particulars of this contest have been published in the Moving Picture World in a previous issue. Seven contestants are in the race and the standing of the contestants up to and including January 24th are as follows:

J. Warren Kerrigan, 129,880; Maurice Costello, 112,885; Crane Wilbur, 109,380; Francis X. Bushman, 107,580; Arthur Johnson, 58,785; King Baggot, 56,310; Carlyle Blackwell 35,530. The total number of votes cast is 610,350.

"The Mystery of the Fatal Pearl"

Under the Empress Brand the American Kineto Corporation Will Release a Real Mystery in Five Parts.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IT has been a generally accepted theory that the screen story must be told in chronological order—that events must be shown in sequence—as opposed to the freedom of relation obtained in the printed tale. In "The Mystery of the Fatal Pearl," a five-part subject to be released in February by the American Kineto Corporation under the Empress brand, there is a most interesting departure from the usual custom. The story is told in two sections, the first consisting of three parts and the second of two. The climax is reached at the end of the third part. We are deeply in doubt as to the situation of affairs—it is one that would give occasion for the consumption of many pipefulls of real strong tobacco on the part of a most competent Sherlock Holmes. In the second section the story is taken up at the beginning; we see outlined the course of action of the opposing forces. Gradually the mystery is unraveled, the guilty punished and the stolen property restored. The picture may be shown as one subject, or, as the makers advise, it may be divided and shown on different days, thus giving the members of a community an opportunity to talk over the situation and make their guesses as to the identity of the possessor of the pearl. If the diversity of opinion prevailing in the party of which the writer was one be any criterion, there will be lively controversies in many neighborhoods, with the possible result of uncovering more heat than light.

Scene from "The Mystery of the Fatal Pearl" (Am-Kineto).

The story is as interesting as it is mystifying in spite of the strain at times on the credulity—the forcing of situations. These, however, are in great measure lost sight of. It is not in reason that the curse of the high priest that "misfortune and death shall come to all into whose possession our pearl shall fall" will have any effect in cold life. Furthermore, it is decidedly improbable that the original thief should obtain employment as a butler in the family of the possessor of the jewel, or that when that butler went to an amusement agency to secure talent for a reception there should be assigned to the function the very Hindu commissioned away off in India by the priest to bring back the pearl. There is a host of characters employed in the production, but they are well identified and the story is clearly told.

Two men, Allen and Walker, steal a holy pearl from an idol in India. Safely back in Europe, they attempt to dispose of it. Allen stays overnight at the home of a jewel collector on the promise that the stone will be bought in the morning. Allen sees things during the night—it is a vision of the idol—he suffers a stroke and dies. The collector steals the jewel. In the morning there is a strong scene when Walker insists on seeing Allen. Walker finds the body, but he cannot find the pearl. Three days later the collector is thrown from a horse and killed. The stone passes into the possession of his son, on the verge of ruin through speculation, and in the clutches of Lewis, a money lender. The son, presumably under the potent and fatal influence of the stone, commits suicide. His wife sells the stone to Lewis. The money lender has it insured for $100,000. Walker secures employment as Lewis' butler. He learns of the presence in the house of the jewel. At a reception Lewis' daughter wears the jewel on her forehead. A Hindu standing by her has an apple on his head. A second of the same nationality stands just opposite. A third is to shoot the apple. Instead he shoots to the floor the stone. There is a mad scramble. A representative of the insurance company picks up a pearl which a moment later he denounces as an imitation. The first section ends here.

At the opening of the second division the story is retraced as a sort of synopsis for the benefit of those who may not have seen the first part. Following the theft we see the priest give his emissary an imitation. Thus we believe, of course, one of the Hindus has the jewel. It develops later, however, that Lewis has it. The money lender collects his insurance. At the ending Lewis commits suicide, the money is returned and the stone goes back to India in the possession of the Hindus. The picture is well staged, well played by a most competent cast, and should have unusual value for the exhibitor.

THE THANHOUSERS IN EGYPT.

Mr. Edwin Thanhouser and Mrs. Thanhouser are still leisurely pursuing their journey about and around the globe. This latest picture shows them fresh from an attempt to interrogate the Sphinx on the future of motion pictures in America. Mr. Thanhouser writes in the accompanying note, dated Cairo, January 17th:

"I fear this photograph will give you the impression that I am not accustomed to ride a camel, and the fact is I am not. Mrs. Thanhouser and I, however, are enjoying a sojourn in Egypt, though the Sphinx is as uncommunicative as ever. Mrs. T. joins me in sending our sincere regards."

$12.000 PICTURE HOUSE AT PLAINVIEW, TEX.

Dr. J. N. Grant has opened a $12,000 picture theater on North Pacific Street, Plainview, Texas. The name of the new theater is the "Mac I," and it is managed by J. S. Bonner.

"Joan of Arc"

World Special Films Corporation Shows a Five-Part Subject Based on the Career of This Great Girl.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE World Special Films Corporation is now booking a fine five-part picture made by Savoia Films portraying the last three years of the life of Joan of Arc. The producers take up the career of this great character at such a point as will enable the representation to be made by one person. Mlle. Maria Jacobini is the artist on whom falls the responsibility of delineating the short and glorious life of the female whose achievements will stand as the greatest in the history of womankind. Yet it is hardly fair to describe her as a woman—she was but nineteen years old when she was sent to her death, in the graphic words of Mark Twain, "on that black day whose accusing shadow will lie always upon the memory of the mitered French slaves of England who were her assassins, and upon France who stood idle and essayed no rescue." Miss Jacobini gives a strong performance, reverential, sympathetic, commanding. The religious atmosphere of the story is heightened by the titles, which accentuate the spiritual aspect of the influences at work in the mind of Joan—what she construed as the command of God to serve Him by serving her king.

Scene from "Joan of Arc" (World Special).

There are many spectacular scenes—pomp and pageantry, contending soldiers, ecclesiastical gatherings. Some of the best of these are where Jean appears before Charles VII and pleads with the king, whose disguise she has penetrated, and asks for soldiers that she may save France from further humiliation; the crossing of the Loire at the head of her army; the fight at the towers in the battle of Orleans; the crowning of the king at Rheims, and the triumphal procession in celebration of the event; the stirring battle under the walls of Paris and the wounding of Jean; and the capture of the commanding officer at Compeigne. Then follow the days of captivity, the days of persecution and brutal treatment. We are shown where Jean refuses an opportunity to escape. We do not see the two futile attempts she really did make to escape. We are shown her delivery into the hands of her English enemies through the machinations of the infamous Bishop Pierre Cauchon.

The attempt of the Earl of Stafford to stab the chained and helpless Joan is shown. Loyseleur, the confessor, who assisted in the betrayal of the maid, is introduced. We see but one of the many trials, presumably the last. It is on the 24th of May, exactly a year from the day of her capture, that she is condemned to die at the stake. There is a dramatic moment when Loyseleur appeals to Joan as she is borne to the place of execution; he "grovels in the dust" and asks for pardon, which Joan yields. Then follow the lighting of the brands and the death of the Maid of Orleans.

Throughout the story are the visionary figures from which proceeded the voices that directed the course of Joan. The picture will make strong appeal to those who have read the life of Joan—such a one, for instance, as that penned by Mark Twain. It will have deep interest for those religiously inclined. The production is of marked value also from an educational standpoint, and from this angle of view should be warmly welcomed in churches and schools. Much attention has been paid to properties and costumes to preserve the atmosphere of the fifteenth century. There is a large cast and a most competent one.

Joseph Fornas Visiting New York

As Special Representative of Mr. Ambrosio, of Turin, He Comes to Feel the Pulse of the Film Market.

BRINGING with him a four-reel subject entitled "Napoleonic Epics," Joseph Fornas, of Turin, Italy, arrived in New York on January 28. Mr. Fornas comes as a special ambassador of Mr. Ambrosio, the producer of the subject named. In the making of "Napoleonic Epics," Mr. Ambrosio has expended a great deal of thought, time and money. He has asked Mr. Fornas to talk over trade matters with American film men and learn what he can of the desires of buyers and exhibitors. It is Mr. Ambrosio's intention to give especial attention to the American market, and it is with this particular object in view that he sends a commissioner to us. Certainly he could not have made a happier choice than in Mr. Fornas, who has not only a command of fluent English but a most pleasing personality. Mr. Fornas has traveled widely, has met many men, and to the qualities that go to make the successful salesman he brings those of camaraderie, the art of making quick and lasting friendships.

Mr. Fornas was for eight years with the Fiat Automobile Company of Turin, in the days when this thriving Italian city was among the leaders in the production of cars. It was while in this line of work that Mr. Fornas visited in New York and made many friendships which he is now renewing. Among his former "pals" by whom he is now being entertained is Ad. Kessel, of the New York Motion Picture Company, than whom none is more competent to explain to Mr. Fornas the ins and outs of the puzzling American situation. John Hardin, of the Ambrosio office in New York, is also showing Mr. Fornas around town. Mr. Kessel was host to Mr. Fornas at the Screen Club ball on Saturday evening—at least he was for such time as he could keep track of him, for there seemed to be many others who were seeking the companionship of the interesting Italian. Mr. Fornas met many of the leaders of the film industry and also a large number of the players. What seemed most to impress the visitor were the attractive women screen players.

"New York manufacturers are very fortunate in having the great population of the metropolis to draw upon," said Mr. Fornas Saturday evening, as he gazed about the spacious Grand Central Palace and feasted his eyes on the inspiring scene. "The larger the city, the more beautiful women there are. I know, of course, that the possession of good looks does not also indicate artistic attainments, the ability to act. Fine-looking women do, however, add a charm to the finished screen production—they embellish ensembles and make more interesting the views of large social functions. Surely this Screen Club ball is one of the most remarkable affairs it has ever been my pleasure to attend. Everybody associated in any way in the kinematograph industry should be proud of the high estate this comparatively new art has attained. It speaks well for the business itself; more than that, the presence of such a throng is a sure reflection of the interest of the great public in the motion picture. It is magnificent!"

Mr. Fornas said that the Ambrosio Company was the first motion picture company to establish itself in Turin, the city that had been made famous by its automobile manufacture. He said that his company had a most complete plant. As an indication of the number of employes he cited the fact that 150 women and girls were employed in the wardrobe departments in the making of costumes, etc., for productions large and small. There are five directors, each with his assistant. Eighteen cameramen are available for work at home or abroad. Mr. Fornas will remain in the United States probably until February 11. He will carry back with him a host of pleasant memories as well as substantial information if what he said to a World man on Monday morning may be taken as a criterion. He is good to meet.

FAMOUS PLAYERS SECURE ARNOLD DALY.

Arnold Daly, one of the most prominent actors of the American stage, famed as an exponent of the "intellectual" drama, has joined the gallery of Famous Players. Mr. Daly will be presented to the motion picture public in "The Port of Missing Men," by the famous novelist, Meredith Nicholson. Mr. Daly's delineation of character and his delicate artistry have stamped him as one of the foremost actors of the modern stage. Those who remember his polished and precise portrayal of Napoleon in Shaw's "Man of Destiny" will quickly recognize his special fitness for the role of John Armitage, the clever Austrian-American who is the hero of "The Port of Missing Men," and who outwits the spies of Austria's enemy, does great service for the Empire, yet remains loyal to his adopted country, America.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

FINAL PROCEEDINGS OF OHIO CONVENTION.

Annual Convention of Ohio State Branch No. 1, M. P. E. L. of America, at Cincinnati.

By James S. McQuade.

THE fourth annual convention of the Ohio State Branch No. 1, of the M. P. E. L. of America, will go down in the history of the league as being the most imposing, important and harmonious in the history of the organization thus far. There was just one feature about the various sessions which calls for vigilance to prevent its recurrence at succeeding conventions; namely, the loss of time caused by the failure of members to be promptly in their seats at the hours appointed. The failure of members to do so, in this instance, caused the president a great deal of needless worry and personal effort.

The Censorship Question Discussed in Detail.

Most of Thursday morning's session was devoted to the censorship question, and Mr. Neff made a long speech and went into all the details, voluminous correspondence from various quarters and interests being read. President Neff, in speaking of those who opposed the Ohio state censorship board, said; "They are not builders and instructors. They tear down and do not build up. They wait for you, fellow exhibitors, to do the building.

"Why don't the manufacturers organize to protect their customers? The censor board is in the hands of the governor of Ohio. If censorship is declared constitutional, a national censor congress, in connection with other states, can be formed. If declared unconstitutional, where is the plan? Will anyone furnish one, unless we exhibitors do so? The trade papers always come back and say the exhibitors ought to do it; but manufacturers should show a disposition to censor their own pictures and bring them clean to the exhibitor.

"The producing director is largely responsible for undesirable pictures. Why don't the manufacturers do something? They place all the burden on the exhibitors.

"I will emphatically say here that I do not endorse Maud Miller's censoring. If she were my own sister, I would not endorse her work. I stand for Messrs. Maddox and Vestal, who have done their work fearlessly and honestly. They have the respect of every manufacturer in the United States.

"It is up to you what to do in the future."

H. E. Vestal Speaks of Work on Censorship Board.

H. E. Vestal, who was present at the meeting, in the absence of Mr. Maddox, gave a detailed account of their method of censoring films.

"We always tried to be fair with the manufacturer, the exchange man, the exhibitors and the public generally," he said.

"We found, on visiting Cleveland, that the exhibitors there had passed a resolution asking exchanges not to have films censored, as they were opposed to censorship. We talked to Mr. Hennessey, of the Mutual, who said that he was going to have his films censored, but that he was not ready just them. He later stated that he was in favor of censorship and believed in it; but did not believe in the state handling it. He preferred municipal censorship.

"Every elimination and rejection by us was made known to the manufacturer concerned.

"Out of 7,000 reels censored, 62 were rejected and 50,000 feet of cut-outs made. We were very careful in these eliminations. No films were mutilated and we always saw that the cut-outs did not interfere with the story. In some cases, where the films originally were to blame in not carrying the story clearly, and exhibitors made complaints, the exchange man laid all the blame on us."

Convention Endorses President Neff Unanimously on Censorship Action.

Lem S. Miller then moved that the action of President Neff in connection with the censorship board be endorsed by the convention. Mr. Sybert, of Marietta, seconded it. The convention endorsed the motion unanimously, and with great spirit.

Some Feature Film Men Denounced.

Max Stern, of Columbus, reminded the convention that the members present at the Columbus convention had all voted for the censorship bill, and that it was only fair to President Neff to back him up, since he obeyed the wishes of the majority. He only carried out instructions. In his opinion there was not much cause for complaint by the General Film Co., the Universal and the Mutual. "The so-called feature film men, really leeches on the business, and the small exhibitors who had not made a success, are responsible for much of the trouble," he said. "None of these men have a hearty interest in the future of the business. We must get rid of the men who issue such films. Ways and means should be devised to eliminate these men who are bringing the business into disrepute. Intelligent exhibitors cater to the good opinions of the people, and this convention should devise a plan against these so-called feature men, who are sucking the life blood of the business. These sensational and suggestive pictures must be boycotted, and also the sensational posters."

Another motion endorsing the censorship by J. A. Maddox and H. E. Vestal was carried unanimously. A motion was then made and carried that all picture theaters built in Ohio henceforth shall have the ceiling not less than 15 feet high, and the auditorium not less than 25 feet wide.

Printed Price Schedules for Film Service and Posters.

In the telegraphed report appearing in the last issue, concerning posters, owing to an oversight in the instructions, it was made to appear that a committee was appointed to call on exchanges and manufacturers, instead of to make a report to the convention on Thursday. On this committee were: Max Stern, of Columbus, chairman; F. L. Emmert, Cincinnati, and Ed. Kohl, Cleveland. Mr. Stern delivered his report orally, which recommended that exchanges shall have a printed schedule on prices both for service and posters. There must not be two or more prices for the same service in the same city. "We cannot get something for nothing," said Mr. Stern. "We cannot get the posters free. If you do, you are paying for them in some other way. Be fair to exchange and poster men, and demand and secure fairness and a square deal from them. Pay for your posters, the film exchange to charge a fair price with a reasonable profit in it."

The report was accepted by the convention.

Delegates and Alternates to National Convention at Dayton.

A committee for the election of officers and of delegates and alternates to the national convention at Dayton was then appointed. The following state officers were elected unanimously: M. A. Neff, president; J. H. Broomhall, secretary; W. R. Wilson, treasurer; J. M. Kaufman, first vice-president; G. D. Spragg, second vice-president.

The following delegates were elected: J. M. Kaufman, Gallipolis; Otto Luedeking, Cincinnati; W. D. Belknap, Columbus; O. J. Sybert, Marietta; G. D. Spragg, Bellaire; Lem S. Miller, Cincinnati; Max Stern, Columbus; P. J. Peters, Mansfield; H. Heimerdinger, Cincinnati; Geo. W. Heimbuck, Cleveland; A. A. Dingelstedt, Norwood; Chas. Reark, Sandusky; W. B. Gandy, Lima, and H. O. Alexander, Dayton.

The alternates elected were: John Kasper, Pomeroy; J. J. Huss, Cincinnati; John Swain, Columbus; W. C. Bettis, Toledo; Lula M. Riefsnyder, Urbana; F. L. Emmert, Cincinnati; J. H. Johnson, Troy; V. Raberge, Dayton; P. Chakers, Springfield; R. L. Miller, Akron; W. C. Kasper, Cleveland; Mrs. F. J. Lotz, Cincinnati; O. B. Weaver, Dayton; W. D. Clark, Marion, and F. Simmons, Cleveland.

Proper Speed for Running Pictures.

The proper speed employed in the running of pictures was next discussed, and it was recommended that the speed shall be normal, not faster than 15 minutes for 1,000 feet of film.

Next State Convention at Cleveland.

Secretary Broomhall then moved that the next state convention be held in Cleveland out of respect for Edward Kohl, a stanch and loyal Cleveland adherent of the league. Akron, Ohio was also mentioned, but Cleveland carried the vote by a large majority. The date of the convention was left in the hands of the executive officers of the Cleveland branch.

Recommendation for Number of Reels on Programs.

The discussion raised by the reading of a letter sent in by a member of Sandusky Local No. 7, regarding the number of reels to be run for five cents and 10 cents, brought out the following recommendations: Pursuant to the recommendation of Sandusky Local No. 7, your committee appointed to draft a resolution as to the entertainment in picture theaters respectfully reports, with recommendation for adoption, the following resolution:

That it is the sense of the Ohio State Branch No. 1, M. P. E. L. of America that two reels of films constitute a proper program for five cents and four reels for 10 cents.

The resolution was carried with the understanding that no attempt should be made at forcing competitors who violated the sense of the convention, the recommendation being especially designed to educate the people.

Ohio By-Laws Amended.

The following resolutions, submitted by W. R. Wilson, state treasurer, were passed:

Be it resolved that it is the sense of the Ohio State Branch No. 1, that the by-laws be amended to read: All dues shall be due and payable in advance, and a member or local shall be in arrears whose dues are not paid before thirty days after becoming due; and, if after 90 days, they shall be notified and automatically suspended.

Be it resolved that it is the sense of Ohio State Branch No. 1 that the by-laws be amended to read: All locals shall give a correct list of their members to the treasurer when paying dues, and only members for whom the per capita tax is paid, shall be considered members.

A motion was then made and carried to draft and spread on the minutes an expression of regret for the death of members of Ohio State Branch No. 1 since the last convention.

National Secretary Wiley Speaks.

National Secretary Wiley, for Missouri, was then called upon by the chair to address the meeting, which he did in a felicitous manner. One of the telling admonitions given the members was that personal jealousy among themselves, in their business, must be eliminated.

This was another: "Get in closer touch with American manufacturers and co-operate with them."

He announced that he had always been strong for the small exhibitor in the small towns and recommended that his brethren in the large cities should get in touch with him and give him much needed encouragement.

Hopes to Unite Factions Before Dayton Convention.

He reported that the financial condition of the M. P. E. L. of America was in good shape. He was fervent in expressing the hope that the national executive committee will succeed in putting an end to all dissension between the two factions at present estranged, and that this would be effected before the national convention at Dayton.

He declared that there was a lack of promptness on the part of state secretaries in making their reports to the national secretary, and urged that this be remedied.

National Executive Committeeman Cory, of California, who had come all the way from San Francisco to attend the convention, was next called upon by President Neff. He seconded every word of Mr. Wiley's speech, but acknowledged that he knew little about the business except in his own state and that he would confine his remarks to it.

Mr. Cory Talks of Past and Present Conditions in San Francisco.

"It was three and one-half years ago when I entered the exhibiting business," he said. "I was very green then and did not know a single soul in San Francisco when I started. I know that I was very jealous of my competitor around the corner, and I soon began to think that the exchange man was giving him the best of it. I, accordingly, increased my service to the tune of $10.00. I did not think of the fact that my competitor might do the same thing. He did so with the result that in a short time each of us was paying $20.00 more for service than we had paid before.

"The formation of the local in San Francisco opened the eyes of both of us, and it has brought many exhibitors into harmony and has banished jealousy.

"Why, some of the exhibitors at that time were giving away bacon, ham, flour, and even automobiles to induce patronage, with four or five reels of films and four or five acts of vaudeville, for five cents! The league has done away with all those abuses and with the pernicious premium system."

Mr. Cory stated that exchanges and manufacturers were always ready to co-operate when the exhibitor got into the right spirit.

He gave an apt illustration showing how some exhibitors cheapen their picture entertainment, by citing the case of a shoe black, who gets 10 cents for shining an exhibitor's shoes, and then pays only one half of it to see a picture show in a house that represents an investment of many thousands of dollars.

Mr. Cory stated that there are 64 theaters in San Francisco, and that the owners of 46 of these are now members of the league; that there are three others which would make good members, and that the rest are small houses, which he described as "meal tickets for brokers," as they are always changing hands. He is of the opinion that the price and number of reels can be best handled locally. Prices in San Francisco vary according to the house. Many charge ten cents on Saturday and Sunday, and five cents for the remaining days of the week, running five reels instead of three at the higher price. Some charge ten cents all the time, and others twenty and thirty cents.

Banquet of the Ohio Exhibitors' League, at the Sinton Hotel, Cincinnati, Thursday evening, January 29.

He declared with emphasis that loyality to the officers of the league and to the organization meant the key-note of success. He paid a glowing tribute to President Neff for his able discharge of the duties of his office.

Co-operation with Manufacturers Urged.

He closed his remarks by again recommending exhibitors to co-operate heartily with the manufacturers, as all are in the same business and working toward the same end. Mr. Cory was then presented with a mammoth bunch of artificial lilacs, with illuminating effects, by President Neff, for the California branch.

Large Attendance at Cincinnati Convention.

President Neff then announced that the cards signed by members of the league, other exhibitors and visiting friends, showed an attendance of 1,583 during the convention.

Mr. Ramsey, of Lexington, Ky., the first state secretary that Kentucky had, was then invited to address the convention. He informed his hearers that a bill had been brought up to the Kentucky legislature to close moving picture shows on Sunday, but he believed that the move will not be successful.

"Harmony with a big 'H' is what is needed now," he earnestly said.

On the motion of President Neff the convention, by a standing vote, thanked the management of the Sinton Hotel for cordial treatment and magnificent liberality.

He closed the convention with the words, "I hope soon to see the day when the men who have been misled by the bolters will come back into the parent organization."

Mr. Vestal then moved a vote of thanks to the press and another to the sender of the large box of carnations, Lewis J. Reynolds, of Columbus, which had been distributed among members during Thursday's session. "Auld Lang Syne" was then sung by the members to the accompaniment played by a Wurlitzer demonstrator, on one of their display instruments, and the convention adjourned.

The Banquet.

Wednesday evening the big hall in the Sinton Hotel was set for the Convention Banquet, and, at the appointed hour every seat was taken. A "dutch lunch" was served with an "added attraction" in the form of "hoe cake," a viand famous in Southern song and story. When the last number of the lunch had been served there was speaking. Governor Cox had promised to be present, but other engagements prevented his appearance, and Attorney General T. S. Hogan appeared and spoke for him. The assemblage listened to Mr. Hogan with rapt attention and gave him frequent applause.

Other speakers were Peter J. Jeup, of Detroit; George Magie, of New York and the Universal Company; M. E. Cory, of San Francisco; F. J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Ind.; G. H. Wiley, of Kansas City, Mo.; Max Stearn, of Columbus, Ohio; Ed. Kohl, of Cleveland, Ohio; Judge C. C. Williams, of Columbus, Ohio, and Joe Gilligan, of Cincinnati. G. B. McClellan, of Osgood, Ind., sang a few songs, which closed the festivities. President Neff was toastmaster.

The Grand Ball.

Thursday night was a festival occasion for the motion picture folk of Cincinnati and their friends. Fine music was provided, and the dancing lasted till the small hours of the morning.

Manufacturers' and Supply House Exhibits.

Excellent arrangements had been made for the exhibition of accessories in a spacious hall on the convention floor. The room was tastefully decorated and lighted and the displays attracted a crowd throughout the convention. The following houses were represented:

Nicholas Power Company, Bert Bohannon, traveling representative; Luna Light Company, Richmond, Ind., Lewis G. Reynolds, demonstrating the "Luna Light Screen" and accessories; American Theater Curtain and Supply Co., St. Louis, Mo.; Joe Gilligan, demonstrating Radium Gold Fibre Screen; Fort Wayne Electric Co., Julian Speer, demonstrating the "Compensarc"; Precision Machine Company, New York; George S. Bothwell, demonstrating "Simplex" machine, owing to absence of J. E. Robin, general sales manager, who was sick in the east; Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, Chicago, Ill.; L. E. Newkom, demonstrating "Motiograph"; Theater Specialty Manufacturing Company, Cleveland, O., represented by George W. Armstrong, president, and J. G. Smith; American Slide Company, Columbus, Ohio, represented by L. J. Gardiner, manager, R. J. Gardiner, representative and E. A. Witte, salesman; Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, Cincinnati, represented by Messrs. F. McHugh, sales manager, H. D. Young, H. P. Schafer, H. Bemis, and G. W. Wilson, demonstrating styles "R," "G," "H" and "K" organs; Newman Manufacturing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, S. J. Newman, secretary and treasurer, demonstrating various sized easels for posters; The Poem-O-Graph Company, Cleveland, A. Siegel, demonstrating talking picture devices; National Marking Company, A. Mill, Jr., demonstrating national coin changing machine.

The following feature film exchanges were represented: Exhibitors Feature Film Company, Toledo, by H. R. Ashbrook, manager; World Special Films Company, Cincinnati Branch, by G. J. Trask and J. C. Mack; Empress Feature Film Company, Indianapolis, Ind., by B. D. Crose, secretary and treasurer and P. B. Elliott, Cincinnati representative.

PLANNING DAYTON CONVENTION.

National Executive Committee Decides to Commence Operations at Once—Secretary Wiley in Charge.

At a meeting of the National Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, held Thursday, January 29th, at the Hotel Sinton, Cincinnati, Ohio, it was decided to begin at once the preparations for the National Convention and Exposition to be held at Dayton, Ohio, July 6th to 11th. Secretary Wiley was instructed to secure headquarters in Dayton immediately, and was appointed chairman of the convention subcommittee. Clem Kerr was appointed promotion secretary. The event will be known as the Fourth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and the Second International Exposition of Motion Picture Arts.

To define the attitude of the Exhibitors' League toward the motion picture manufacturing interests of America the Executive Committee adopted these resolutions:

Resolved, That it is urged and recommended by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America that every motion picture exhibitor in America confine his support to the recognized American manufacturers and exchanges handling or distributing their product.

Resolved, That the members of the various state branches and locals of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America are urged to seek the co-operation of the above-mentioned manufacturers and exchanges in handling any matters or questions that may arise with the view of securing mutual benefit.

OKLAHOMA EXHIBITORS TO MEET.

Oklahoma State Branch No. 23, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, will hold its next meeting in Oklahoma City on February 11th and 12th, at Lee Huckins Hotel. The meeting is an important one, and a good attendance is expected. All members are urged to be present the first day at 10 o'clock A. M., so that we can attend to business first and pleasure afterward. The entertainment committee, consisting of O. McLane, B. H. Powell, and Thos. Boland, are working hard to make their end of the convention the best ever, and have mailed invitations to every exhibitor in the state of Oklahoma and adjoining territory. Those who contemplate attending are requested to notify Mr. McLane at 117 West Main St., Oklahoma City.

VOTE TO DECIDE SUNDAY OPENING.

The city of Redlands, Cal., is so excited over the question of Sunday opening that the city trustees have refused to go on record in the matter and have decided to put it to vote at the approaching city election. The matter was thrashed out at a meeting held January 21, at which heated arguments were heard on both sides, the trustees being importuned on the one hand to pass an ordinance prohibiting Sunday opening and on the other to be liberal minded and keep their hands off. They went so far, however, as to refuse to permit Menard, of the Majestic Theater, until the matter has been decided by vote. The Board of Censorship, which was appointed to pass on Sunday films, took a part in the proceedings. The Rev. Ralph P. Smith, its chairman, is a broad-minded man, and, while he would not declare himself in favor of Sunday opening, refused to go on record as being opposed to it. As Redlands is known as a city of church people the vote will probably be against the Sunday opening, though the poolrooms are permitted to do Sunday business unchecked. If the vote is adverse to Sunday opening, the evangelistic meetings, which one of the churches has held from time to time in a local picture theater, will have to be discontinued or held without the picture exhibition which was a part of them. The pastor of this church said: "We are holding these meetings in a picture theater, because that is the only way we can reach the people who attend them."

MILWAUKEE EXHIBITORS' BALL.

The first annual ball of the Milwaukee Moving Picture Exhibitors' League was held on Saturday evening, January 24th, and was attended by about 8,500 backers and fans of the screen. It proved a great success and surpassed anything of its kind ever attempted in the middle west.

James Cochrane.

Dancing commenced at 8 o'clock and continued till the wee small hours, while a continuous picture program was shown from 7 P. M. till 1 A. M., giving the dancers an opportunity to rest between numbers. Universal, General and Mutual, together with several feature companies, had elaborate booths at one end of the hall, and a cabaret entertainment was also given, Mort Livingston being the chief attraction in this.

Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne, of the Essanay Stock Company, led the grand march, and Mayor Bading, of Milwaukee, addressed the assembly, saying he appreciated the clean film being shown in the city at the present time. Bert Ennis, the Eclair "dopester," was very prominent in the vicinity of the Universal booth.

Two reels of pictures were taken, most of which was devoted to the grand march, and about fifty still views were made.

James Cochrane, chairman of the Exhibitors' League, stated after the ball that it had been a signal success, and that it would, in all probability, become an annual affair.

The committee of arrangements were: James Cochrane, T. Tufts, M. Rice, Tom Saxe, H. Imhoff, F. Bruemmer, F. Sillman and Sam Pylet.

JERSEY SOLONS OUT FOR CENSORSHIP.

A censor bill intended solely for motion pictures has been introduced in the New Jersey Legislature by Assemblyman Harry Kuhlke, of Hudson County.

The measure provides that three persons shall be appointed by the governor as a State Board of Censors at a salary of $1,500 a year and with a term of office of three years. A state license fee of $25 a year is placed on moving picture theaters, and in addition to this a fee of $1 is to be paid to the Board for every film it is required to pass upon. It is not entirely clear in the bill whether the films to be shown in New Jersey are to be passed upon at the place of creation or at each individual picture house before they are publicly shown. There is a minimum fine of $25 and a maximum fine of $300 for violations of the law and a minimum term of imprisonment of thirty days and a maximum term of one year.

Section 7 of the bill says: "Ninety days after this act shall take effect no films may be publicly shown or exhibited within the State of New Jersey unless they have been passed and approved by the said Board and stamped and numbered by such Board as provided herein."

Section 14 says: "Any person in interest being dissatisfied with any order of said board in so far as the censorship of motion picture films are concerned shall have the right to appeal to the State Board of Education, provided said person shall, within ten days from the order made by said Board of Censors, file with the said State Board of Education a petition in writing requesting a hearing as to the reasonableness and lawfulness of the order so made as aforesaid, and said State Board of Education shall have the right to set aside, vacate or amend any order so made by said Board of Censors."

PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITORS' BALL.

At the regular Friday meeting of the Philadelphia Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, by a unanimous vote, it was decided to hold the second annual ball at Horticultural Hall, Broad and Locust Streets. The date selected was February 20th, which falls on a Friday, and which was the only open date for an available hall before the Lenten season.

The following members were named as a committee on arrangements with power to act: M. Spiers, chairman; J. Weinrich, George H. Roth, D. Baylinson, D. R. Sablosky, M. J. Walsh, J. M. Solomon, Jr, Nat Fisher, J. Greenbaum, J. W. Pierce and Jay Emanuel. Sub-committees will be appointed by Mr. Spiers at an early date.

The three boxes which the hall contains have already been sold, the General Film Company and the Universal having each taken one, and the Mutual and an unnamed bidder are fighting for the third. The General, the Universal and the Mutual companies have all agreed to have some of their leading players present. The Vitagraph will also furnish its full quota as will the Lubin Studio. The ball last year proved a huge success and promises to outdo itself this year.

During the meeting the limited program for a set price was discussed, and the president, Mr. Wheeler, appointed a committee of three — Mr. Penn, Mr. Spiers and Mr. Walsh — to draft an agreement on the number of reels to be run and the price of admission. The consensus of opinion seemed to be not over four reels for five cents and seven reels for ten cents.

The matter of the odious "Philadelphia Fire Slide," with its flaring red "Fire Notice" and other objectionable wording, was discussed, but action was delayed until Mr. Wheeler had interviewed the fire marshal. Most of the members have refused to run the slide, as being a sure panic breeder.

BANQUET TO WALLACE.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York, a motion was made and unanimously carried that a banquet be tendered in honor of the retiring Chief of the License Bureau, James G. Wallace, Jr., on Thursday, February 19th.

A number of city officials have promised to grace this occasion with their presence and quite a representative body of exhibitors will be there.

The price of tickets are ten dollars ($10) and can be obtained from the banquet committee, Mr. J. A. Koerpel, chairman, Palace Theater, 1968 Amsterdam Ave., and Mr. Edward Valensi, treasurer, 15 Bowery, or at the association rooms, No. 136 Third Avenue.

FEATURE EXCHANGE MEN FORM ASSOCIATION.

Several feature film exchanges in New York have just formed an association known as The Feature Film Renters' Association. This corporation will exercise the usual functions of a Board of Trade.

The officers of the new association are: Jules Burnstein, president; Joseph E. Arnett, vice-president; Charles Streimer, secretary; Isaac S. Cohen, treasurer.

The directors are: Robert Richter, Harry Samwick, Morris Streimer, Jacob Weinberg, Joseph E. Arnett.

Messrs. Graham & Stevenson, of No. 15 Broad Street, New York City, have been retained as counsel for the association.

JOSEPH GROSSMAN A WORLD VISITOR.

Joseph Grossman, who is erecting the Standard Theater, of Cleveland, was a recent welcome visitor at the office of the Moving Picture World. Mr. Grossman said he had made the rounds of the New York studios and been most pleasantly entertained. Also he has been looking over the larger theaters in the metropolis in search of ideas for his new house, which he hopes to open about April 1. Among the equipment Mr. Grossman selected is an Automatic ticket seller and cash register.

G. F. CO. SERVICE DESPITE FLOODS.

The General Film Company's offices at Los Angeles, Cal., were up against a puzzling problem Monday, January 26th, with most of the suburban houses to which it caters cut off by the floods from city communication. Out on the San Bernardino line no trains ran through for nearly two days, from Sunday night to late Tuesday afternoon. The managers who change their film Monday night sent frantic appeals to the company to get their changes out. The company finally sent out, under the charge of R. E. G. Scott, proprietor of two houses in Redlands, who chanced to be in the city, the film for the houses at Pomona, Ontario, Upland, Colton, San Bernardino and Redlands. Mr. Scott, with a good driver and a Mitchell 36, took from 1 to 8 P. M. to make the journey, and the car was the only one of ten which started out for San Bernardino and Redland to reach the latter place, Mr. Scott making the rest of his journey to Redlands by Pacific Electric. Conditions such as prevailed during this storm have not been seen before in many years. Miles of detour had to be made to avoid washouts and mudholes.

Foreign Trade Notes

PARIS LETTER.

(Special Correspondence to THE WORLD.)

SEVERAL new picturedromes have opened recently, including the Mozart Palace, at Auteuil, and the Cinema Lutetia Wagram. Both buildings are very fine and vastly superior to the majority of old established movies.

* * *

The Eclipse Company and Pathe Freres announce the forthcoming release of a moving picture version of "Anne Boleyn." The former company's scenario is by Max Pemberton.

* * *

The titles Pathecrome, Stereocolor, Kineidochrom have been registered by Messrs. Pathe Freres, Louis Mauclaire and Maurice Audibert respectively.

* * *

Selig's "In the midst of the Jungle" was a tremendous success here. It was boomed at all the leading picture theaters.

* * *

Monat, proprietor of the concern "Monatfilm," has secured the services of a London comedian who will be known as "Piff." Monsieur Monat intends to produce some short length comics.

* * *

The Biogram Company have placed on the market a topical feature entitled "The Tango."

* * *

The Societe Anarctica has been formed for the purpose of marketing the "Anarctica," an apparatus which it is claimed permits a film to be stopped in a projector for a prolonged period, thus eliminating the risk of fire and appreciating the value of the cinematograph for educational purposes. Capital of the company is twenty eight thousand dollars.

* * *

The Eclipse Company has secured the agency for Thanhouser films for France, Belgium and Holland. The films will be placed on the open market.

* * *

Owing to increased business in Southwest France, Pathe Freres Bordeaux branch has been removed to larger premises.

* * *

A new firm, the Cinema Comptoir, announce the release of a D. B. feature "William Tell." The production was photographed in Switzerland.

* * *

Charles Mary is looking after the interests of the well known Henny Porten and Suzanne Grandais features.

* * *

Mlle. Polaire on the film is a sure winner in Paris, and the photoplay "Le Friquet," is the star film of many movies this week.

* * *

The Agence Generale are handling a sensational Danish military drama entitled "Vengeance of Death." It is the work of the Tivoli Film Company, of Copenhagen.

* * *

Beverley B. Dobbs' picture "At the Top of the World," which played for five weeks at a picture theater here, is being exploited by the Exclusive agency. The same firm controls the rights of Kalem's "From the Manger to the Cross."

* * *

The American Biograph, in the rue le Peletier, has once again changed its policy and is now featuring the Kinoplastikon pictures.

* * *

Superior vaudeville has been added to the show at the Kinemacolor Edouard VII theater. A new series of pictures is shown every week at Charles Urban's sumptuous building.

* * *

Casanova Arderius, the film agent of Barcelona, was a recent visitor to this city. He is selling, with considerable success, Warner's Features.

The remarkable Cines photodrama, featuring Maria Carmi, is the first important exclusive to be handled by the newly established Paris offices of the famous Italian firm. The Marquis de Serra, director of the French branch, has carried out an unprecedented publicity campaign in the French press and this week all Paris is flocking to the Gaumont Palace Hippodrome to see the wonderful production.

* * *

Joseph Menchen's first film of the Arsene Lupin series was recently shown as an exclusive at the Casino de Paris. This hall is now undergoing alterations and will open in February. Meanwhile it is uncertain when the long delayed exhibition of "The Miracle" will take place here.

* * *

From, what I saw on a recent trip to Vienna, Louis Aubert should do big business in France with the Northern's "Atlantis," which has not yet been released here. This great film drama has been a huge success in the Austrian capital. The following picture theaters boomed "Atlantis": Elite Kino, Kartner Kino, Munstedt's Kinoplastikon, Trianon Kino, and the Heimat Kino. Display advertisements appeared in the daily press and the picture was the talk of the town.

* * *

Thomas Alva Edison's Kinetophone is drawing big crowds to the Schonbrun Kino, and the occasional slight defects in the apparatus amuse the audience vastly.

* * *

Moving picture business in Vienna is flourishing and the halls are the finest in Europe. JOHN CHER.

A REVIEW OF BRITISH YEAR BOOK.

By F. H. Richardson.

The Kinematograph & Lantern Weekly, Tottenham Street, London, W., England, has favored us with a copy of its Year Book, a handsome and substantially bound volume of 442 pages. It is designed to be a glossary of information for theater managers and others connected with the business. The range of subjects covered is too large to enumerate. However, there is a directory of London, London suburban and provincial moving picture theaters, and special articles by such well known authorities as G. Lissenden, H. B. Montgomery, Low Warren, T. J. West and others.

There is a retrospect of the past year by E. T. Heron, editor of the Kinematograph Weekly, a review of legal decisions by Humphrey Williams, a survey of the year's technical progress by Colin N. Bennett, F. C. S., and an article on the law and the Kinematograph by J. E. Taplow.

Altogether I am sure the work will be a popular one with theater managers and others connected with the business, especially in Europe.

ANGLO-AMERICAN CORPORATION EXHIBITIONS.

As a result of the great popularity enjoyed by their first two productions in Europe, the Anglo-American Film Corporation promise a magnificent presentation of the "Three Musketeers" when they have completed negotiations for a theater. The production will be offered with all the pomp and circumstance of an important stage production. More expert people will be required for its presentation than for a spoken production of corresponding import, there being interminable details for attention which have to be executed with mathematical precision as well as dramatic intelligence. Mr. Laurillard, who is associated with Mr. Lederer in the company, has the advantage of his experience with both productions in his fine New Gallery Kinema, in London. The magnitude and stirring completeness of these two masterpieces are at least calculated to win for them the recognition that they scored abroad.

ITALIAN-AMERICAN IN NEW QUARTERS.

The rapidly increasing business of the Italian-American Film Company, of New York City, has compelled it to move from its original quarters in the Columbia Theater Bldg., 47th Street and Broadway, to its handsomely furnished new suite of offices in the Fitzgerald Bldg., 1482 Broadway.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

A Novice.

E. S. writes:

> I am a young pianist starting out on a career of picture playing, but I am troubled by the task of telling what to play for each picture. For instance, drama's—it is slow waltzes isn't it? For comedy pictures I don't know what to play, and those educational pictures—about birds, snakes, etc., have me puzzled also. And pictures with parades I don't know about either. I play fairly well (without bragging), have played in public before, but this is my first job in picture work and the manager don't want to take me as I have had no experience. I should like to show him I can hold the job even though I lack experience. Any suggestions you may offer will be appreciated.

You are confronted with the same obstacles that beset every beginner in this and any other line of work. But you cannot acquire experience unless you first get a job to practice on. Now do not make the mistake so many are making and imagine you can get your experience for nothing. If it is worth going after it is worth paying for, and your principal expense will be for music. Your music represents to you what tools represent to another workman. You cannot "get by" with a few waltzes and two-steps and truthfully call yourself an experienced picture pianist no matter how long you stay in the business. So your first step must be a gradual collection of good music—a little at a time—the expense will not be felt so much in that way—until you have a library of good music. Popular music is useful, of course, and should have a place in every library, but it is evanescent—wears out quickly, and it is not wise to confine yourself too closely to this class of music. The standard compositions are always reliable, and while some may cost a little more than popular music, are cheaper in the long run as you never need throw them aside. Nearly all the piano albums contain material useful in picture playing and many are quite cheap. Slow waltzes (I presume you mean the "waltz lento"), are all right so far as they go. Music of this nature makes an excellent "fill-in" for neutral scenes in dramatic pictures. By "neutral" I mean scenes in which the action runs along in a commonplace sort of way without rising or falling to any marked degree. Ordinary waltzes are also useful for this sort of work as well as things on the intermezzo order. Get some pieces like Dvorak's "Humoreske" and Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman" Barcarolle.

The more emotional scenes can often be effectively accented by the accompanying music; sometimes this is best done by accelerating or retarding, swelling or diminishing as the action may require, but more frequently it is better to change to a different piece—one descriptive of the character of the scene. It may be sad or gay, gruesome or exciting; if the scene remains long enough to develop any particular emotion you should follow it with your music. Novelette's, caprices and bright waltzes are of a cheerful nature. The flower songs, serenades, meditations and cradle songs are more on the sentimental or pathetic order.

Fit Your Music to the Scene.

Continue the music so long as the action calls for that kind of music and change when the action suggests a change. Don't simply play a number through once and then quit because you have reached the end. Adapt your music to the length of the scenes—not to the length of the piece—comedies are usually lively and the music is of like character. These generally offer good opportunities for your rag marches and popular song stuff. This ground has been threshed over so much it seems impossible to add anything to what has already been said.

Regarding the educational pictures, there is seldom anything which calls for suggestive music. Pictures of birds would, of course, suggest bright and dainty numbers—or lively and pretty pieces; generally you can play almost anything pleasing in these pictures. Of course, you wouldn't use anything pathetic, and then one should be cautious about introducing popular songs which might detract from the interest of the picture. Otherwise one can play almost anything for most of the educational pictures. As to "what to play for parades," there is only one thing—marches. A parade is usually accompanied by a band. The band plays marches. Even when there is no band shown in the picture the marching columns, whether walking or riding, will suggest march music. You can't very well parade to any other kind. This is so obvious that we wonder if you are trying to think at all on your own account. In another part of the letter the correspondent asks what kind of music should be played in the intermissions. I don't know. It depends on the house and the intermissions. Personally I don't understand why a manager should insist on working his musicians perpetually. They will rest at some time. They must; and if not during intermission, then during the show, If the manager values his "ballyhoo" more than his show, he will probably tell you what kind of music he wants. No doubt something which can be heard in the next block.

Concert in the Intermissions.

In some theaters, the intermissions are set aside for concert music. While the audience is resting from the pictures, they have an opportunity of enjoying some good music for its own sake. In these places, so far as I have observed, arrangements are made to permit occasional rests for the musicians. If done judiciously it will mean a rest for the hearers also. A perpetual banging on the piano is tiresome. But it is evident that E. S. is not using the intermissions for concert work else he wouldn't ask what to play. He would know before he got the job, otherwise he might "stall" in some of the educational pictures. He cannot very well do it in the other parts of the show and keep up the interest as it should be done—not according to the present day ideas of applying music to pictures.

Why, Yes Certainly.

W. S. Clarke, Naval Theater, Olongapo, Philippine Islands, in a recent letter says: "If you wish I can give you an account of the fun a moving picture pianist has in the Philippines."

But he stopped there. Cousin Clarke, if you know anything funny about playing for the pictures in the Philippines step up to the front and let us hear it. Or even if it isn't funny, we'll stand for it if it is interesting—and I'll bet W. S. C. can make it that. Come on now.

"Not Enough Time."

A. W. W. (name of town withheld), says:

> We have an orchestra of four pieces. Enjoy your page very much and only wish it appeared more frequently. We try to "play to the picture" so far as we are able and manage to play a pretty fair class of music as well. But it is a pretty hard matter sometimes to fit the picture as we know it should be done, for the reason that there is so little time. Our house gives evening shows only. Four reels—usually three shows nightly. Change the bill every day. The first show we "dope out" the music—roughly, of course—that is more in the nature of a rehearsal than anything else. The second show is played just about as we first laid it out. The third show we smooth up the rough spots—and then it is time to go home. Just about the time we are ready to play the picture the way we think it ought to be played, it is time to quit.

This is an obstacle all orchestras, for "evenings only," must contend with. In some theaters a preliminary run is given in private for the purpose of laying out the music, but this is not always expedient. In such cases one must get along the best he can, but a conscientious leader with a good bunch in the orchestra and a fair library on his shelves is not apt to go very far wrong; particularly if they have a serviceable stock memorized—and it is a safe bet that "A. W. W." and his orchestra have.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

THE best of us are liable to a lapse of good judgment and make mistakes, and the best of us should be willing at all times to accept suggestions tending to pave a way by which we may avoid such occurrences; therefore the members of the Screen Club cannot reasonably object if something is directed toward them for the purpose of showing a slip of judgment in connection with the ball given a few nights ago under the auspices of the organization.

* * *

One of the chief aims of the leaders among the legitimate producers and exhibitors of motion pictures has been to convince the public that from the standpoint of art and dignity the motion pictures are entitled to and should receive the same recognition accorded the best products of the theatrical world. This recognition has been won after a long, bitter struggle and all engaged with the field should at all times be alert to see that nothing intervenes to weaken confidence on the part of the public in that connection.

* * *

It is not a matter of years since the people playing parts in motion pictures were looked upon by the public, more especially those working in and patronizing the theatrical field, as figures of no more importance than those who played minor parts in such pantomimic productions as "Humpty Dumpty." It was quite common to overhear in theaters such expressions as "He's like a harlequin," or "Look at little Red Riding Hood," yet many of the originals of the figures upon the screen had done some very good work. The public was slow to recognize it because the critics, skeptics and conspirators were untiring in their battle of ridicule against the pictures. The people have since realized that those playing responsible parts in the screen plays are actors and actresses; that their work and standing is coupled with the same amount of dignity that attaches to the favorites in the stage profession.

* * *

The duty for holding this recognition devolves upon the people who play the parts in the pictures and they cannot be too zealous in the performance of it. In advertising the Screen Club ball there was an invitation to the public to attend the event and dance with their favorite photoplayers. Ordinarily the invitation would be looked upon as a very clever piece of advertisement. It was a big bid for attendance of the non-professional people, and no doubt it brought to the event hundreds of people who would not have been there had their attention not been drawn to the opportunity.

* * *

From a professional standpoint the advertisement met with unreserved criticism. Adverse comments were plentiful and many of the players either refrained from attending the ball, or cloaked their presence as much as possible. One well known player who is generally among the most prominent and popular attendants of such events expressed himself substantially as follows: "My heart is with the affair and the boys, but I cannot be with them on this occasion. I know that success upon the screen is as much due to public opinion as that upon the stage and I am most grateful for the scores of complimentary letters I receive during the course of a week from the patrons of the photoplay houses, but I cannot undergo the ordeal of an audience at a public ball, much less the strain attending a tango, turkey trot, or something along that line with the dear girls that admire me so much. I assure you that I am not conceited in this matter. I simply feel that, as between the photoplayer and the public, the same line of reserve should be maintained as that in vogue among the stage people, and anything that tends to weaken it is a step towards weakening appreciation of the player's work. There must be restriction upon the intimacy between the players and public. Somebody has said that 'familiarity breads contempt,' and I think the expression fits this case exactly."

* * *

Another player said, "The photoplay has attained a connection with the family circle similar to that of the school and church and the players practically hold the same relative positions as the teachers and pastors, with the additional advantage of being the household entertainers. As such the public and the players can approach each other only to a certain point. To go beyond it means a removal of that illusion which is one of the most vital holdings of the player. One of the strongest arguments against any movement towards bringing about personal contact of players with the public is supplied by visits to the studios. More than half the people who visit them seem to leave disappointed. Something in the appearance of an idol, or some expression he or she may drop, seems to unfavorably impress the visitors; and from that time it is the play and not the players that counts. The player is the loser. I have given this matter some thought for a long time and at one time I was seriously opposed to the social gatherings of players with exhibitors, because I knew that at all such events there is a large attendance of friends of exhibitors who have no connection with the business and who attend them solely in a spirit of curiosity. On the other hand I realized that the exhibitors are practically in the same position as the regular theatrical managers, so I have governed myself accordingly. But I cannot relinquish my right to privacy beyond that point. It has never been done in the regular theatrical sphere and I cannot see why photoplayers should do it. It is true that professional people have served at booths in events held to raise funds for their organizations and in that way have come in personal contact with the public; but in doing so they have been able to maintain their professional dignity. I am pleased that this matter has been brought up for discussion. I am quite sure that many of the players have not thought of it in the light now presented."

* * *

"No; I am not going to the ball," said a well known funny man. "My wife won't let me. Both of us intended going, but when my better half heard that everybody had been invited to meet and dance with me there she promptly vetoed the proposition. 'Why, my dear,' said I, 'wouldn't you be delighted to see how many admirers I have? It is a matter of business, my dear.' 'What!' she exclaimed. 'Me sit there and see you waltzing about the place with some blond dame and have her basking in the lovliness of your mug. Not if I know it. I can attend to all the admiration you require, and the others may keep their eyes on the screen. That is close enough for them. What would you say if they didn't admire you after getting a good, close look, eh? Suppose those big feet of yours got on somebody's train? Suppose—suppose—well, suppose something happened to displease your admirers and you and I had to go on the road again? That would be a fine matter of business, wouldn't it?'"

* * *

In spite of the great number of new films that are issued every week there is a surprising amount of old stuff still in use. During the past week two houses displayed subjects that were issued over four years ago, and they were not features, or of the kind that had received care to preserve them. Both the houses are located in Greater New York. One of the managers said he had never heard of the subject he ran before it was sent to him, as he had not been in the business very long. Such explanations will not satisfy the audience. Exhibitors have ample opportunity to keep posted on releases, a subscription to the Moving Picture World, for instance.

* * *

The business capacity shown by some exhibitors makes one wonder how they ever got together enough money to own a house. An exhibitor recently opened a place in a respectable residential district with a well selected program. During the course of the first two weeks he learned that competition within easy distance was too strong for him to maintain an admission price of ten cents, so he reduced it to five cents. With the cut he slashed the quality of his service, booking lurid stories of life in the underworld. Now he is wondering why he cannot get the people even at half the former price.

* * *

The case of an exchange owner and his assistants, who are charged with unlawfully getting possession of a large quantity of films, recalls the great trouble manufacturers of and dealers in films had in battling against unfair competition in the early days of the business. Mr. Marcusson, one of the accused, claims that all the films in question were purchased in Europe, although they are of American make. In the early days some long-headed fellows conceived the idea of buying films for export, thus saving the difference in price charged for films for home use. The films were shipped to friends in some foreign port and then reshipped to this country, when they were offered for sale at from one to two cents a foot cheaper than the home dealers could sell them. Naturally the latter were the targets for complaints by the people paying the domestic rates and both manufacturers and dealers were in hot water for some time before they got the matter regulated. Few of the newcomers to the motion picture field know that this export trick was one of the chief causes for some manufacturers adopting a system of leasing films to exchanges instead of selling them outright.

Moving Picture Educator

"THE ANGEL OF THE HOUSE" (Gaumont).

MORE appropriate than "The child is the father of the man," would be the older and greater truth. "A little child shall lead them" to best designate the key-thought of this somewhat serious "comedy" so called. The average of the play is good, but deals with truths and conditions in life too serious to be classed with the comedies. The entire setting is French, and requires some knowledge of the French way of doing things to fully appreciate all that is portrayed.

Marie, the only child of a somewhat wealthy couple, brings sunshine in the home on her return from boarding school and exhibits her prizes with much welcome satisfaction; being rewarded by her father with a bank-note for her successes.

Finding life at home somewhat monotonous, the father decides to visit Dinard. With the usual license practiced by the unfaithful, he arranges to meet an actress for a season of loose living. This fact becomes known to wife through a wrongly sent telegram which reveals both his whereabouts and the company he is in. Naturally the wife is much depressed and little Marie knowing that the cause is her father's absence, decides to go after him and bring him back to her mother. Stealing away in the night, and taking the money her father had given her, she starts for Dinard. The journey is a bold venture of the writer of this play, fortunately the child actress proves fully equal to her part which minimizes the boldness of the author in causing her to undertake so great a task. The travelling scenes, real and thrilling, are very good, and form a strong part of the whole. On the journey a clergyman becomes interested in the child and upon learning her mission decides to accompany her. Arriving at their destination and finding the apartments of the father, they take possession in his absence; upon his arrival his surprise is naturally unbounded, and he is compelled to battle against most mingled emotions of good and evil. The offices of the clergyman are, however, very opportune in disposing of the actress, and persuading the father to fulfill the mission of his child by accompanying her home.

Scene from "The Angel in the House" (Gaumont).

In the home again, the child and the minister are able to bring about a complete and lasting reconciliation, and the united family circle with the minister as a guest becomes happy in the affection with the "Angel of the House" has brought about. The scenes in this play are particularly good, many settings becoming superior, The mission given to the child is most appropriately accomplished by an actress of tender years, who wins the affections of the audience by her ability and thoroughness. If judged by the purpose of the play, the whole is well sustained and has many good parts.

"The Moving Pictures Are Teaching the Bible."

This title is the heading in one of the New York leading Sunday newspaper magazines. Notice of it is recorded here because of the positive nature of its declaration that moving pictures "are" teaching the Bible.

The question as to the use of the kineomatograph in religious and biblical teaching was an open one for sometime; now, however, the magazine referred to declares: "Progressive ministers, school teachers and others interested in religious education are awakening to the importance of motion pictures as an effective method of familiarizing both old and young with the great events of Biblical history. Such remarkable progress is being made by all the leading film manufacturers in the reverent portrayal of religious subjects, that a motion picture projection machine and a wide assortment of films will soon be considered an essential part of the equipment of every church and Sunday-school.

Turning the Bible into scenarios for motion picture plays began long before there was any idea that the film would take its place alongside the catechism and the pulpit. This was when the industry was in its infancy—long before all the famous novelists and playwrights had begun writing for the films, as they are doing to-day.

With the public demand for pictures growing by leaps and bounds, it was but natural that the producers in their search for material should turn to the Bible. The Scriptures are uncopywrighted and their pages abound in plots powerful to stir the ambitions of the most capable actors and the most skilful stage directors.

The Pictures Serving a Doubly Educational Purpose.

Interesting Americans, and educating the mixed natives of the Philippine Islands, is one of the latest double accomplishments of the kinematograph.

Dean Worcester, for some time secretery of the interior of the Philippines, is at the present time interesting Americans by a series of kinematographically illustrated lectures on the many and varied problems of those islands. An elaborate number of films taken in all parts of the islands are proving very helpful in bringing to the American Government and people, a thorough knowledge of the conditions with which they have to deal in those far off and much scattered lands.

The greatest interest, however, centers in the graphic descriptions of how the various tribes are being lifted from savagery to civilization, by means of the moving pictures. Professor Worcester says: "Wonderful results have been achieved among a number of wild Philippine tribes by the use of the motion picture. It has always been difficult to convey the desired lessons by word of mouth alone. It is also difficult to put the principles of sanitary science into the language of wild peoples, and here the moving pictures have proved of greatest value. The natives of the non-Christian tribes have lived in appaling squaler, but, when shown the pictures of better conditions, contrasted with the old, have manifested a most encouraging disposition to profit by the lesson. Naturally the pictures are not devoted entirely to those matters; scenes from foreign life are shown, conditions in America are shown and arouse the keenest interest and are very effective in helping to impress them with our ideas."

Education in Comedy.

It is impossible to study the large and growing list of releases without being impressed with the number of comedies issuing from all makers. Of the licensed releases for the current month, twenty per cent. are comedies; while the independent releases shows over forty per cent. of that class of picture.

We have now come to the time when everything that is best is incorporated in every class of film. Of course, there are still a few mediocre makers of mediocre comedies, but they do not belong to the rank and file of moving picture manufacturers.

A close survey of these comedy releases reveals what has been aptly described as an "up to the minute" use of all possible advantages in science and art.

The best class of "trick" photography is used, together with the most pleasing of "double picture" and other "changing" effects. The old saying applied to the circus clown "It takes a wise man to make a fool," is repeated on a much larger scale in moving picture comedies, in that it now takes many educational principles, keen philosophy, and a great blending of the arts and sciences to produce these situations in life, the representation of which, are as interesting as they are entertaining.

A good sample of this is in a recent Gaumont release entitled:

An Elopment by Aeroplane.

In this picture some clever aeroplane work is made necessary, so that a skilled aviator is now an essential part of a moving picture comedy. The ability of the military aviator to drop a bomb on the deck of a battle ship, finds its counterpart in this comedy, in that the aviator lover must needs drop a bouquet of flowers in close proximity to the home of his lady love. Many of the most difficult arts of flying are made to serve in giving new life to this class of picture, so that an exhibition in aviation is made to serve as an aid to the latest class of comedy. A race between the aeroplane and an automobile is another feature in this film so that it is readily seen that such pictures as these are more than simple laugh raisers.

It is not surprising, therefore, that a large increase in this class of pictures is now shown, when it is remembered that crude jokes, and questionable comicalities are now replaced by making the arts and sciences legitimate servants of the humorist and talented fun maker. With all these resources manufacturers have neither the will or the power to produce anything but that which is good. The increasingly educated public taste will "hold the balance true" so that we do not look for any abuse of the advantages now seen to be at hand for the broadest powers of legitimate and entertaining educated comedy.

Exploits City by the Moving Picture.

The Chamber of Commerce of the city of Redlands, Cal., has decided that motion picture advertising is of immense value to a community and is preparing to follow up an experiment in that line, which has already been tried. Sometime ago films were used in picturing various phases of life in the town, some of its beautiful features and other things of interest. Arrangements were made for showing these in many cities between California and Chicago. The result is being shown by the many letters of inquiry which are being received at the Chamber from people who viewed the film and who are anxious for more information on the desirability of the city for a place of residence or for a winter stopping place. Encouraged by these results the Chamber has decided to have a new series of pictures taken which will include pictures of the orange industry from start to finish, and to exhibit them wherever possible all over the United States. The Chamber is also planning to film every happening of important news value, and to get the picture included in the film weeklies. The Chamber has bought a motion picture camera of its own and has secured a competent operator to run it, and the plan for exploiting the city through this means will be continued indefinitely.

Motion Pictures in Oregon Asylum.

Motion pictures are being introduced as a permanent institution at the new Eastern Oregon State Branch Hospital, and are meeting with good success. The service is furnished by the General Film Company, of Portland, and three reels are shown at each twice-weekly performance. A Power's 6-A machine is used. The installation of this worthy feature shows the progressiveness of the institution and reflects great credit upon Dr. McNary, who is directly responsible for it. Musical selections are rendered between reels by an orchestra composed entirely of employes of the hospital.

Moving Pictures in Japanese Schools.

The school system of Japan is using the motion picture as a means of education, especially in the smaller grades. Power's Cameragraph No. 6-A projection machine is used extensively throughout Japan, as is evidenced by the shipment of a Power's machine last week to the Y. M. C. A. of Nagasaki, Japan. The Nicholas Power Company also reports the shipment of Power's Cameragraph No. 6-A motion picture projection machines to Hong Kong, China, and to Honolulu, Hawaii.

DAVID HORSLEY GOES TO THE COAST.

Universal's Superintendent of Laboratories and Equipment Will Inspect Plant and Supervise Installation of Machinery.

David Horsley, superintendent of laboratories and equipment of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, left New York on Tuesday, January 27th, for Los Angeles, Cal. He was accompanied by Mrs. Horsley and their young son. It is the intention of Mr. Horsley to inspect the Universal's coast plant and also to supervise the erection of buildings and the installation of new machinery. The new equipment is to take the place of that destroyed in the recent fire. Mr. Horsley is no stranger at the coast, having made several visits there since his first trip to establish the Nestor studio. Mr. Horsley has been described as the "Nestor of the independents," a phrase that has applicability to him as well as to the brand of film of which, before its absorption by the Universal, he was the owner. The former Nestor maker has always been deeply interested in the photographic end of the motion picture business; it was in recognition of this fact that the Static Club of America, an association of men connected with the technical end of the business, recently elected Mr. Horsley an honorary life member. Mr. Horsley was some time ago requested to time his arrival at Los Angeles for a Sunday, so that his friends in the coast city might be at the station to meet him. As he left New York on Tuesday, it is fair to assume that his many friends in the Universal and other camps will have ample opportunity to greet him on the day they appointed.

The distribution of Lumiere film, of which Mr. Horsley is the American agent, will during his absence be under the direction of his manager, Roland E. Blaisdell.

A TRUE LUBIN ROMANCE.

A few months ago the Lubin editor handed out a scenario of a romantic war picture entitled "Fitzhugh's Ride," which will be released early in February. Edgar Jones got the script and, being leading man of his own company, cast himself for Fitzhugh. He also selected for his story sweetheart little Louise Huff, who is listed as the Kate Greenway girl of the studio. Miss Huff is a fair little doll with blonde hair and a pair of beautiful blue eyes. Truly in the photoplay she was a bride worth fighting for. In the closing scene Fitzhugh, who was supposed to be dead, hears that his dear one is about to be married to a rival. Fitzhugh mounts his horse and gallops to the church, riding up the aisle just in time to prevent the ceremony. In a second he snatches the girl to the saddle of the horse and flees, outpacing all pursuers. During the wild ride Louise held tightly with her arms around the gallant soldier's neck and Fitzhugh with his arm around her slender waist. There was love in the situation which neither could resist, the acting became real, and the sequel was consummated on Tuesday (January 27th), at the same little country church at Oaks, near Norristown, with the Rev. George W. Barnes who assisted at the photoplay scene. The little Kate Greenway girl was married to her director Edgar Jones. W. H. Kerry, purchasing agent of the Lubin Company, acted as best man. John E. Ince and many more associates of the plant provided atmosphere. Miss Huff's mother and sister, Justina, were also present to cheer the little bride up. After the ceremony the party were serenaded by the Lubin cowboys with the typical yells and revolver salutes as Mr. and Mrs. Jones, with their automobiles filled with friends, sped off to the Jefferson Road Inn to celebrate the pretty sequel to the photoplay romance which has put the Lubin plant in a flutter.

JOHN M. NICKOLAUS GOES TO COAST.

John M. Nickolaus, who has been in charge of the Universal plant at Bayonne, N. J., left New York on Tuesday, January 27th, in the party of David Horsley, bound for Hollywood, Cal. Mr. Nickolaus, three years ago, established in California the Nestor plant when Mr. Horsley began the production of pictures on the coast. It was this factory which became the nucleus of the great Universal establishment of the present day, and the superintendency of the technical end of which Mr. Nickolaus now goes west to assume. The new photographic sharp of the coast organization has been known to his friends as the "Nestor quality man," and they are sure that under his direction the present high standard of the Universal's technical product will be sustained and, if possible, improved.

UNIVERSAL MUST ANSWER.

Judge Giegerich of the Supreme court has overruled the demurrer interposed by the defendant, Universal Film Manufacturing Company, in the action brought against them by Joseph A. McKinney and George F. Parker. Defendants are allowed to answer over upon payment of costs.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Fighting Long Programs.

QUALITY rather than quantity should be the keynote of most of the advertising against the long show, for it stands to reason that the manager who knows no better than to wear down an audience with an over-long show does not know enough to give proper projection and assuredly cannot run his program at a proper speed.

It is the personal belief of this writer that at no time is it either wise or politic to admit competition. A direct attack upon a business opponent is suicidal, and the more bitter the attack the more probable it is that the sympathy of the public will go to the other man. If you have a house next door to you on both sides, do not admit competition either in your advertising or in your conversation with your patrons. If someone comes out of your house and tells you that your entertainment is twice as good as that offered by your competitor, do not promptly offer as your opinion the fact that the bullet-headed, beetle-browed scum of the earth can run a show at all is one of the wonders of the age. Thank the speaker and express the hope that he will always enjoy your performance. Promise that you will always do your best, but do not accept the speech as your cue to launch a diatribe against the much-hated competitor. The comment will be certain to get back to the other fellow and all who hear your speech will figure that such heat is based on the fact that the other man really is running a better show than they thought.

Spend every penny of your advertising appropriation in advertising yourself and let the other fellow do the roasting and the hammering. Then he may help you and you will not be helping him. One of the then largest vaudeville circuits in the east went down to oblivion merely because another man opened a theater a mile away. The heads of the circuit were scared stiff, and instead of attending to the proper conduct of their house they spent the energy that should have been so directed to killing competition. Then they had ten houses. Today the name is but a memory. The man who was to be killed recently sold out his interests for several million dollars.

It is the same way in any branch of the business. If you attend to the proper conduct of your own business you have all that one man can intelligently handle. If you attend to your competitor's business and he to yours, both of you will go down. In everything you do make it your slogan that you're the only man in the world, and go ahead on that basis. Know that there is competition, but don't let anyone else know that you know or else they will feel that you are scared and the other fellow must be of some account or you would not be alarmed.

In your advertising, therefore, do not directly fight your many-reeled opponent, but conduct an educational campaign without particular reference to any specified house or houses.

Things To Say.

Do not for example, say that Smith's show is bad. Say your show is good and tell why in such a fashion that people can judge for themselves just why Smith's show is bad. They do not know it is bad because he rushes through the show. They think the fault lies with the film and not the grey matter that Smith does his thinking with. Something like this:

DON'T HURRY.

We don't and that is why we get such perfect projection. Photoplays are made to be shown in fifteen to eighteen minutes to the reel. We take the proper time and give the acting its fullest value. We could get the film through the machine in seven minutes—but that wouldn't be fair to you, to the man who made the film with painstaking care, nor to ourself. You are entitled to the best projection. We give it.

Work several advertisements along this line. Here is another suggestion:

RUSH JOBS.

Seldom are jobs well done, because haste prevents care. Motion pictures are made to be shown at the rate of sixteen individual pictures each second. If more are shown the acting is too rapid and the effect is lost. We try to give you good acting, instead of a lot of it. We also give you no more than enough. We do not cater to bargain hunters, but to people of intelligence and appreciation. We could not do this if we had to show too many reels.

Speak of the effect of an excessive number of reels. Try this:

Ten drinks make one drunk.
Perhaps you remember the old table:

Ten cents, one drink,
Ten drinks one drunk,
One drunk, ten days.

Ten drinks are too much, not too much of a good thing, but just too much. It's the same with other things. Enough is plenty and too much is more than enough. Ever come out of a theater feeling that the pictures were growing tiresome? Ever stop to think that it was because you had seen too many pictures at one time? We could give you ten reels for ten cents, but you would not enjoy any of them. You will enjoy the four we do run, and so you'll get the full value of your money.

In some sections even this allusion to drunkenness will not appeal. Try something along this line:

HALF A DOZEN DINNERS.

Are all right on half a dozen days, but no man wants to do all his eating for a week without getting up from the table. It's the same way with photoplays. Don't take too many at a time and you won't get mental indigestion. That's why we only run four reels. We want you to enjoy the performance at the Dreamland.

Here is another angle:

WE COULD SPEND MORE MONEY.

And get three or four times as many reels as we show, or we could spend less and still get more program than we have. But we could not spend more money and get better reels than we have and we know you are discriminating enough to prefer a few of the best reels to a lot of junk. We offer the best and plenty of the best, but not so many as to tire. That's the secret of the good show at the Idle Hour.

Perhaps you will want to give greater detail. Here is the foundation for something on this line:

TRADE SECRETS.

You can hire photoplays from a dollar a day up, and you'll get just what you pay for. The longest show is not always the best and generally it does not cost as much money. We think you'll appreciate the fact that a few good reels properly projected make a better entertainment than a lot of cheap stuff run off so quickly that you see the last scene almost the same time you see the title. We give quality, not quantity here, plenty of the best, only the best and not too much to tire you.

In all of this suggestion we have used the straight reader form, because it is supposed that you will use this merely as the starter for an advertisement that will run on to tell about your program for the day or week, but it can be adapted to display with small trouble.

Program Argument.

A better place for this propaganda is the house program if you have one. Do not try to tell it all at once, even if you have the space. Give a brief, convincing argument each week and it will carry more weight than a paragraph so long that no one will stop to read it through. Here are a series of paragraphs that will suggest others:

We do not believe in sending our audiences from the theater all tired out. We seek to entertain you, not to bore you, and so we run a short, carefully selected program that will please, rather than a longer program that would satiate you. We could get ten or twelve reels if we wanted to for less money than we pay for four good subjects, but we don't want to run that sort of a program and we know you would not like it. We want you for a regular patron and we know you would lose your interest in photoplays if we gave you twice as much program. You can get tired of anything if you get too much of it, and so we stick to quality, believing that you will appreciate quality.

We have been asked why we do not run longer programs. We could, if we wanted to, but we take a pride in showing perfect pictures and we could not do justice to fine photoplays if we ran too many, because we would have to run them too fast. Possibly you've seen plays where the action was so fast that it could hardly be followed. Perhaps you thought it was the fault of the films. It was not. It was because the projection machine was being run too fast to get the show over and the people out. There is a standard speed for running pictures, and you do not get the best there is in a picture unless that speed is adhered to. The proper speed cannot be used on too long a program. We run our films just right and so give you the best possible performance. We think you appreciate this.

We do not save money by running a short program, nor do we want to save money. We want to give you the best possible entertainment and this means good films and proper projection. We could get subjects for a dollar apiece a day. Sometimes these subjects are called "commercials," but generally they are called "junk." Junk is film that used to be good, but which is now so old that it cannot command a decent price. It is dirty and worn and full of "jumps" where the film has been torn and patched together again. sometimes even whole scenes have been removed, or the printed explanations are missing. This is good enough for "junk," but we do not feel that it is good enough for our audiences and so we pay more for fewer films and get the best there is to be had. You can't buy ten yards of silk for the price of three yards and get the same grade of silk, and you won't like what you get. We give you the best and only the best, and it looks all the better because there is not so much of it.

We try to play fair with our audiences and not swindle them. We would be swindling you if we gave you anything but the best. We do not try to give you six reels of film in the same time that three can be properly shown, because to do so would be to run the subjects so fast that you would not enjoy them. This would not be fair to you and it would not be fair to the players, for you would blame them for crude work where no blame was deserved. You cannot do two minutes of acting in one minute of time and have it look as good as though you took the two minutes the scene demands. That's why we run short programs; not because we are stingy, but because we want to be honest with you and give you what you are entitled to when you buy a ticket. When we sell you a ticket at the box office it is our guarantee that you will be given an interesting program run at a proper speed, neither too fast nor too slow, but just as the players acted it. That's the only honest way. Don't you think so?

The Better Way.

In none of this stuff is there any direct reference to competition. You state the facts and leave inference to the audience. They will make the application quickly enough. If you sailed in and skinned the hide off the man down the street you would defeat your object, because all would be certain that you were more eager to kill the other show than to tell about your own, but telling about your show and ignoring others puts your readers in possession of the facts and they will do the rest.

It takes nerve to keep your head and watch someone else get your patrons for a time, but it does not always follow that because your patrons go away they will stay away. Of course, if you've run a three-reel show that for merit measures about up to the six-reel show the other gives, you are in his class and cannot win your patrons back, but if you have been running a good show right straight along, let the other man get your people and they will not only come back to you, but they will come back more ready to stick, for they now have a standard of comparison and will be more appreciative of the merits of your performance.

You use the telephone every day of your life and never think what a wonderful thing it is. If there should be a strike and no telephone service for a few days, you would be better able to appreciate what a wonderful convenience the telephone is. Your regular patrons are like the telephone users. They never realize how good you are until they go somewhere else and see the difference.

On the other hand, if you are the newcomer and fight a ten-reel show with three or four reels, the patrons of the other house will come to you through curiosity and stick by you because they learn, for the first time, that there are better and higher standards. The man with the really good entertainment always wins in the long run. Hold to your standard. Do not lower it to get on the same plane with the competition.

On Wheels.

Here is the photograph of a new idea, a motorcycle with a trailer. It is sent in by the West Point (Ga.) Amusement Company. They explain they call it "Getting Out and Getting It," and they say it gets them in. A motorcycle can cover a lot of ground in a day and this trailer, which is made from a pair of old buggy wheels and gas piping, is certainly a handy attachment. It is commended to other exhibitors.

If you have no motorcycle how about the trolley company? In a small town it might be feasible to attach this to a car on its regular tracks where the car does not run over a suburban right-of-way, and even there a spare truck might be used.

So Do We.

S. Shultz sends in his weekly program with the statement that it makes business for him. We think so, too. It is a four-page issue for the Dreamland Theater, Caribou, Maine; though we suppose the same idea is used by Mr. Shultz in his three theaters in Lewiston. There is nothing pretentious about it. It is in black on yellow, the pages about five by eight, but it is well set up and well printed and doesn't try to carry more type than the space will permit. The front page, in particular, impresses favorably because it is so neat and businesslike. Inside the top third is given the vaudeville act for three days, and below is the film program for those three days, four reels being used. The only waste comes on the back page, where the line "Save this program for reference" is the sole letter press. We think that this back page could be made to work for the house. It is to be supposed that most of Caribou knows the house and its advantages, but just the same it is a good plan to recite these advantages, to point them out, lest they be overlooked. In winter tell of the steam heat, in summer brag about the ventilation. Talk always of the excellence of the bill and the courteous care of the attendants.

No one would pay a man a seven-day salary and expect him to work only four days a week. If you pay out money for a program make every page of the program work for you. The show's the thing, just as Shakespeare has said before us, but it is not all. Yesterday's show is of use to you only in the memory it has created, but your house will be there tomorrow and the next week. Tell about it. Point out the good things. Get and hold the interest of the people in yourself and your house, as well as your films, and then you'll get full value from your program. It may mean a little work to change copy each week, but it's worth the trouble and more, and it is worth the additional cost of typesetting.

Likes a Program.

M. D. Singleton, of the Crystal Theater, Dallas, Texas, finds that the weekly program builds business for him. He gets a lot of work out of a small four-page; more than many managers get from double the space, because he uses it to the best advantage. We hope that he will respond to the frequent requests for sample programs or, better still, that intending publishers send him a return envelope for a copy.

On the first page below a well set, permanent heading, he uses a general argument. In one program he has indentation on one side and when he makes a new paragraph he changes the indentation to the other side. which gives an odd but pleasing effect. The copy is changed weekly, but he always runs the line:

> This little newspaper is issued every Friday to enable our patrons to know what good things we have in store for them.

The second page carries a few items of general film interest and the advertisements of the specials for the week and later. The third page gives the program for the week, the names of the leading players being added to the titles. The back page is also given to reading matter relating to Universal films. This is a compact and orderly arrangement of material and without being costly, the sheet is effective in every line.

A Good Calendar.

The Olympian Theater, Seattle, gave calendars for Christmas presents and offered an excellent one. It is on brown fabric finished paper printed in gold with an attached calendar pad. The usual picture is replaced by the design of the house in purple on the gold ground. Being frankly an advertising calendar, we think that the use of the design in place of the picture is advisable where the work is as well done as in this case. It probably cost as much, if not more, than a picture calendar, and it gives a greater suggestion of dignity and, what is equally important, special preparation. The addition of a hurriedly printed advertisement to a stock calendar somehow suggests a makeshift where more careful printing of the advertisement is apt to impress.

Personality.

It is gratifying to note an increasing use of names in advertising the films; gratifying because the success of the photoplay is more dependent upon the player than the play in most instances. Many managements now list the players, either by casts or mention, and we like the forecast used by the Gem Theater, Pittsburgh, which runs:

> NOTED PLAYERS IN THIS WEEK'S PICTURES.
>
> This week's pictures at The Gem contain an array of talent superior, we think, to anything in the motion picture line. Each day's feature contains an artist or artiste of national reputation and our patrons can rest assured of seeing the highest-salaried and most efficient actors in the silent drama. Following is the list: On Monday we will have William Clifford in "The Raid of the Human Tigers;" Tuesday, Barbara Tennant will appear in "Partners;" Wednesday's star is Wallace Reid in "Fires of Fate;" Thursday we will see Edwin August in "A Stolen Identity;" Friday's notable is Francis Ford in "Winona's Vengeance," and on Saturday we will present Warren Kerrigan in "Back to Life."
>
> Then, also, in the single reels we will see some world-renowned performers. Heading the list will be King Baggot, on Wednesday, in "The Child Stealers of Paris." Louise Lester as "Calamity Ann" will be seen on Saturday.

In the early days the regulars used to invent names for their favorite players, and the use of actual names has done much to create and hold loyalty to the players.

Pick Them Carefully.

Estes & Estes, of the Town Square Theater, Brooklyn, Mich., sent out a very handsome New Year's card, but they overlooked the fact that the card selected did not give them a printing surface. Their own greeting is printed on the back of an embossed card and the embossing causes their letter press to look cheap and crude where, in reality, the fault lies not in the printing but the surface. If you select a stock card to be printed, pick out one that will give a proper printing surface, or even copper plate will not show up. Make certain that there is an absolutely flat surface where you want your card to run or, no matter how pretty the card itself will be, the effect will be poor.

Information Wanted.

Will any manager who has had experience of any sort with the use of matrons in his house kindly communicate the results of his experience to the Rev. E. Boudinot Stockton, in care of this paper. Dr. Stockton is anxious to procure this matter as quickly as possible in connection with certain proposed legislation, but he wants the truth whether it is for or against, so do not color your reports to suit his supposed desires. He wishes to obtain the facts, not to support any contention of his own and he approaches the matter with an entirely open mind.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

HERE'S a picture of Emmet Campbell Hall, at present a staff writer for the Lubin Company and one of the soundest writers in the business. Four years ago Mr. Hall was turning out a professional, workable script, and at that time he had never seen a studio, indeed his first glimpse of a studio was nearly a year after his first script was sold and then he stopped off at Philadelphia for a look in at Lubin's on his way to New York for a talk with the Biograph. Mr. Hall has been widely quoted by the correspondence schools in a manner to suggest that he had been a pupil of that particular school, but he was doing finished work for nearly a year before the first school was started. He had come to Washington from the south to take a position in the civil service, but he found writing more to his liking and gave his attention to "fillers" for magazines and newspapers. He early turned to photoplays and, with nothing more than a form sheet as a guide, he started in and soon attracted the attention of the Lubin, Biograph, Selig and other companies, his original hits being mostly placed with the Lubin and Biograph companies. He has twice refused a position with the Biograph, not liking the idea of living in New York, but when the Lubin staff was formed he joined them as staff writer. Some of his early successes were: "Indian Blood" (the first story with that title), "The House with the Closed Shutters," "His Trust" and "His Trust Fulfilled," the last two being practically a two-reel picture.

Emmet Campbell Hall.

Supplies.

If you really mean to be a writer, lay in supplies in proper quantities. Do not buy a box of paper. Buy a printer's size ream and have it cut. Get your carbons by the box and not by the dozen, and do not have to run down to the store for things just at the time you feel most like writing. You'll save money and time.

Classifying.

Our form for cover sheets carries the three classifications, "Farce," "Comedy," and "Drama." A friend objects that this does not include provision for melo-drama.

It is not necessary to classify closely; indeed, it is not necessary to classify at all, but if you do farce, farce-comedy, comedy, comedy-drama and drama is sufficiently exact. Unless you do use a printed cover it is not necessary to classify at all, and above all other things, do not call a story a half-reel. Some editors might buy it for a whole and pay you for the half you say it is.

Reading.

Do you read to gain knowledge or do you merely read? A novel may give you an insight into some phase of life, but not much. We got for Arabian stories out of the foot notes to the Sale version of the Koran and two more from extracts from the Rodwell version. The Ramayana gave us two modern stories and the travels of Mungo Park helped with the Zulu stuff we sold last year to Lubin. We did not find the stories themselves there, but the suggestions for stories and the local color. We've read most everything we could lay hands on, from the Bible to Rules and Regulations for the Guidance of Station and Baggage Agents on the New York Central Railroad, and we have gotten information and suggestion out of both.

Using Clips.

Where do you stick your paper clip, in the middle of the sheet or at one end? Put it on (and just one) about an inch from the left hand corner. Then the script can be read without removing the clip, that is, if you do not start your script at the top of the page, but make the proper drop of two inches.

Casting Plays.

Don't cast your plays. Lately a woman wanted to know if perhaps this was the reason her plays came back so quickly from a certain studio, and we opined that it was. She explained that a friend suggested that she mark in the players of certain parts for the guidance of the studio and she did so, and not only did the scripts come back more quickly than usual, but not all of her return stamps were used.

If the boy who has been bringing you groceries for the past year should suddenly come around some morning and ask for the job of building the new house you planned to erect, wouldn't you be apt to regard dubiously his skill as a builder? Wouldn't you figure that experience delivering groceries scarcely qualified him as a builder?

On the other hand, if the man who recently built a handsome row of houses across the street should approach you about the contract, you would give attention to his arguments, for you would know him competent and well qualified.

It is the same way when an editor reads a script. If it looks like the product of an experienced workman, he feels that it probably is good. If it fairly shouts its amateurishness, he argues it very probably is poor, and past experience has proved to him that nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of every thousand he is right.

No experienced writer casts his play for a certain studio. He may, now and then, suggest that a part is particularly well suited to some star of that studio, but he will convey this suggestion in a letter and not on the script. He will not write John Bunny's name on a script sent to Vitagraph, for instance. He will know that the part might suit James Lackaye or Hughie Mack equally well. He knows, too, that the director casts the play and that the editor will probably resent the cocksureness that virtually suggests that the studio will have to purchase the play. The practised writer leaves his script in such a shape that if it comes back from one studio in good shape it can go on to the next in good order and without recopying; whereas, if the play has been cast, he must write another cast sheet. It is almost impossible to get a ribbon impression that will match the other sheets and this, of itself, is a tacit admission of a previous rejection.

Knowing all these things, the editor will argue that the play cannot be worth while and is apt to send it back without reading it.

But the final and most positive evidence of amateurishness is the enclosure of loose stamps with the manuscript and no return envelope. The first letter of the writer's alphabet is always to send a stamped and addressed envelope with every submission and one for each script in that submission. Not to do so is to confess inexperience.

Where loose stamps do come in they are appropriated to the editor's use and the script goes back with the single stamp that will move it out of the office.

Don't advertise your ignorance. Try to conceal it.

Mr. McCardell's Views.

Lately we spoke of a story in the Green Book. This story started in with a pretty little paragraph about a man in a railroad car jotting down on the back of an envelope a story he would subsequently sell some company at a fabulous sum, the writer being Roy L. McCardell. Just in passing it might be mentioned that the writer, Hugh Weir, is now under medical observation, having developed hallucinations, and William Lord Wright cleverly suggests that this Green Book story was one of them. Anyway it has served to bring a letter from Mr. McCardell and he shows that even a famous humorist (and he is famous) must do his share of hard work if he would find reward. This is what he writes:

> I appreciated your temperate paragraph on the Green Book article. I hardly need to say that I knew nothing of the writer or the article until I saw it in print. I only wish I had known it was in preparation that I might have referred the author to you to get the right dope. However, what does it matter? The insiders know better and the boobs like to read that sort of stuff.
>
> I do get any amount of letters, not only from boobs, but also from people who should know better. I find it useless to endeavor to be patient or instructive to any of them. In the first place, they have not the brains, and in the second place, they will not take the pains. I suppose if they had the brains, they would take the pains. When I tell them to buy your book, they only write me more letters and send me more deathbed junk in four, five and six scenes. Personally, it has been a good year for me with Selig, Vitagraph, Kalem, Edison, Mutual and Biograph, in order named. The end of the year finds me with but two unsold manuscripts. One of these, an outdoor skating winter comedy, and the other, a fantastic Chinese story on the Yellow Jacket order. Both have been refused with regret because concerns they were sent to were not prepared to take such pictures.
>
> Regarding Ed-Au Club: I am going to join, but I stay home Saturdays and write moving pictures with my secretary, Mr. Roese, whom you will have the pleasure of meeting. We work all day and we sometimes work all night, and Sundays too, laying out campaign for the coming week and filling what orders we have in hand, etc.
>
> I have been selling to Keystone, too. But this is the only Los Angeles studio I send to. Selig being my farthest west. I find the companies I have named to you, and in the order named—Selig, Vitagraph, Kalem, Mutual, Edison and Biograph, are now a good, strong market for me and practically take everything I write at excellent prices. I have the reputation with these good, solid, honest companies of furnishing full, complete working scripts. They tell me that while their directors may and do make changes in my scripts, yet my scenarios can be placed in the hand of new and more or less inexperienced directors, and if they follow my directions they will get a good picture. I average six or seven pages to a reel and am doing a great deal of two and three reel stories. In response to a Balboa advertisement I sent a script, which they accepted. But their copyright release blank only called for the payment of ten dollars. This I refused to accept, and had no difficulty selling the script to a good company for fifty dollars.
>
> Mrs. Brandon has, personally, been as nice as she could be and I believe her to be absolutely on the level. But the Eclair directors "stalled" on some scripts, which she had practically accepted at twenty-five dollars each; but I also had the good fortune to dispose of them promptly at fifty dollars each. I get twenty-five dollars a split-reel; fifty dollars a full reel; one hundred for two reels, and so on. But I will sell synopses for twenty-five dollars per reel. I have had the good fortune to receive several bonuses, and, within a few months, you will see a great deal of my work, as I am placing practically all I write with the companies I mentioned. I am going to do a lot of slapsticks, and two-reel comedies and dramas in the next few weeks in synopsis form, which I will make complete scenarios of, if desired.

The New York Motion Picture Studios.

By Marc Edmund Jones.

The studios of the New York Motion Picture Company, manufacturing the films released under the Kay-Bee, Broncho, and Domino brands, together with those of the Keystone Film Co., a subsidiary corporation, are all located at Los Angeles, and the production offices and scenario departments for both companies are in Edendale, scripts being mailed to the New York or the Keystone Company, at 1712 Allesandro Street, Los Angeles, and not being sent to individuals, to New York, or to Santa Monica, under any circumstances.

The script desk for the Keystone Company is being filled on trial at this writing, Mr. Coolidge now being the editor for the St. Louis Motion Picture Co., at Santa Paula, Cal. At the script desk of the New York Co. Mr. Richard G. Spencer continues in his capable editorship, assisted by William H. Clifford, a staff writer, and the usual staff of readers. Synopses only are desired by the Keystone Company, and decisions are given as quickly as they can be read by Mack Sennet, the chief producer and vice-president of the company. A similar system exists in the scenario department of the New York Company, where either completed scripts or synopses are considered, the best of the scripts being held and read at a meeting attended by Thomas H. Ince, the production head and vice-president of the company, by Spencer and by Clifford.

The location at 1712 Allesandro Street is now the property of the New York Motion Picture Co., and permanent improvements are being made. The new negative developing plant and technical department is nearly completed at this writing, and work is about to start on the new office building. A handsome mission wall will surround the grounds and keep the curious out. Edendale is just within the city limits of Los Angeles, lying about fifteen minutes ride on the street car northwest from the central section of the city, on the route to Glendale.

The Keystone stages, dressing rooms, etc., are all located on the Edendale lot, and six directors, including Mack Sennet, are now working. The type of story fitted for Keystone comedy is probably more generally familiar than the requirements of any other company—so much so that another editor will ask for a "Keystone" story. It is merely necessary to add that the present is for melodramatic comedy—bomb throwing, and the like.

For the other brands a little more detail in the matter of requirements should be of value. This company does not feature their players, and does not care to have the identity of the players or directors given any publicity. It is possible, however, to give a very exact statement of the stories that will find favor in this studio, for the very reason that certain players are not featured and that consequently it is not necessary to build stories to fit the people, and for the further reason that the directors are not catered to particularly, as the stories are purchased considerably ahead of requirements, and without any regard for who may possibly be called upon to produce it. In other words, the story is the thing. As in the case of the American company, the screen is no criterion of their wants, as they aim for variety, and a series of any one style of picture, such as the Puritan series, will be all produced and ready for release before the first one is released. It is safer to keep away from costume stories as a matter of principle, and there is one prohibition—All-cowboy Westerns are not wanted.

The New York Motion Picture studios are located at the old 101-Bison ranch, five miles north of Santa Monica, on the ocean in Santa Ynez Canon, and covering a tremendous piece of ground that must take up half of the mountain side. Thomas H. Ince is manager and chief director, and there are six other directors at work with a stock company of 250, of which about 30 are principals. There are eight stages for interiors, and a number of special exteriors, such as complete Puritan, Irish, Japanese, Spanish, and Western villages, which have been built for large productions and for special series of pictures. "Making a Motion Picture" or a release under a similar title, will shortly appear under the Keystone brand, and this film shows the stages, properties, and various phases of the work, all taken on the ranch at Santa Ynez. Some of the directors are seen at work. The locations here cover nearly everything from the sea to the mountains, and Santa Monica, or even Los Angeles, is readily accessible for city locations.

The New York Motion Picture Co. is anxious to win early consideration of the work of regular contributors, of which they have practically only one outside of the staff, and authors will find prompt, courteous treatment. although they will find that only high-class material will be bought from the outside. Payment is liberal. Credit on the screen will be given to any author whose work does not require extensive reconstruction, and who sells them over five scripts. They prefer stories in synopsis form, and pay almost as well for a synopsis as for a completed script. There are no contract writers, and but two staff writers, including the editor.

Practically any original story with dramatic situation is acceptable. A short cast with not over four or five principals is preferred, not because of expense, but because it is felt that it is hard for the audience to follow more. Their technique runs a few more scenes to the reel than the average. One to three reels are used.

Saving Money.

Time is money and so is the stuff that carries the government stamp and both are valuable to the man who makes pictures. If he had a story that can be made in three days instead of a week, he saves three days. Now suppose that his running expense for that company is one hundred dollars a day. He has saved three hundred dollars just as surely as though someone handed him that much in real money and he put it in the bank. If you plan simple productions and look to your story rather than the scenery to gain you your effect, you can save some manufacturer that much money. If you fuss the story all up then you'll waste that much or more.

It is a bit confusing at times. Recently a company turned back a two-reel story with the suggestion that it would be taken if certain scenes aboard a yacht were switched to an automobile. It was a pursuit; not a chase, and called for a yacht and a tug. And while the author was working on the changes the same company announced that it had a five-reel story in preparation for which it had hired a handsome yacht. That sort of thing looks contradictory, but figure it out. In the big picture no expense was to be spared. It was to be sold for more money and part of the investment in the film was regarded as chargeable to the advertising. For this picture the yacht was necessary. For the other it was not. It's the same all along the line. A company will spend money when it has to. It won't when it does not have to. Save money where you can.

Get Hep.

Someone sent a story with an alligator hunt in it to one of the Jacksonville sections the other day. It was a nice, lively script, but it costs ten cents even to look at an alligator down in Jacksonville.

Rejections.

A rejection means that a company cannot use your script. It does not mean that no company can use your script. Not all editors "see" stories alike and what one man will call poor another will like. One current hit was rejected by two companies, but a third paid $50 for it. One editor even wrote that he thought it hurt our reputation to send out such stuff, and yet, nine times out of ten we will defer to his judgment. This happened to be the tenth time. Lately a writer named three companies and asked if we thought that rejection by all three argued a lack of merit. All three together do not buy a dozen scripts a month, because they are the tightest of the tight markets. Of course, the large percentage of scripts would not pass anywhere, but mere rejection counts for nothing.

Writing to Objects.

Ever try writing to objects? You may not get a very good story at the start, but it will be good practice if you pick out the right object. A tin can, for instance, does not suggest much, but suppose that a small boy found some labels a druggist had thrown out and started in to "play drug store." He places a poison label on the can and, tiring of the game, wanders away. A tramp comes along and sees the can. It will serve as a cup and there are some almost empty beer kegs around the corner. He fills the can, drains it, and then sees the label. His imagination does the rest.

Simple? Sure! Try it.

Impossibilities.

Sometimes we wonder if some writers are crazy or whether they merely imagine that the editors are. How is this for a plot?

A girl is determined to go on the stage. The stage managers laugh at her. She locks the star in her dressing room after binding and gagging her and plays the leading role, winning the plaudits of the audience and a long time contract. Mind you, she did not offer herself as a substitute. she merely went on and played the part, pretending to be the star, and all the players who had been playing with the woman presumably for weeks, never guessed the deception until the fall of the last curtain, when she removed her wig.

Silly sort of story, isn't it? To be sure it is. But look here, are you absolutely certain that you have no plots just as absurd? Look it up.

With a Laugh.

Do you write your comedies with a laugh and your dramas with a tear? We don't mean the sort of laugh that brings the janitor to your door with the suggestion that you are annoying the other tenants, but the pleased little laugh that doesn't even get to the lips, but which lingers in the eye; an internal laugh, if you will, or the swallowed sob. In a word, do you back out your stories or do you write them with your whole heart?

After you have been writing for a number of years, writing becomes a habit, but we think that every real writer does his work with a sob or a tear and not merely in a mechanical fashion. If you cannot get interested in your work yourself, how can you expect others to be interested?

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Operators' Union Directory, I. A. T. S. E.

NOTICE:—Each union is entitled to have its roster of officers, meeting nights, etc., listed here once per year free of cost. Preserve this list as it will not be republished. The mail address of the secretary should be included, and address of regular meeting place, if any.

Local No. 173, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

Clarence McMahn, President; William Taylor, Vice-President; George F. Eaton, Secretary; 680 Ossington Avenue; Lindsey McCracken, Treasurer; William Winslow, Sergeant-at-Arms. Meetings held first Sunday in each month in Labor Temple.

Important Notice.

It is impossible to reply to letters through the department in less than two weeks and sometimes three. In order to give prompt service those sending 4 cents in stamps to cover the cost of same will receive a carbon copy of the department reply by mail. Those desiring the full list of questions, now running in the department, may obtain same by remitting 25 cents to the editor.

Question No. 19.

Best answer will be published and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Explicit permission to use the name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used.

Suppose your motor-generator ran fine for a time after installation but presently the brushes began to spark and a black mark appeared on either side of the commutator, directly opposite to each other. The trouble spreads quickly to include about one quarter of the commutator and the generator will not pick up its load, or if it does the brushes flame badly. We will assume that brush-shifting has been tried and the armature tests out clear, so far as shorts and grounds are concerned. What is the trouble and its remedy? How does a shorted shunt field coil on a compound wound generator affect the other field coils? What general effect does it have on the generator?

Roll of Honor.

There was a small basket full of replies to question 13, but a large percentage of them were really replies to question 12. This was the editor's fault, since the two questions, to a considerable extent, covered the same ground. I have had one awful struggle with these questions. It looks simple until you tackle it, but a football skirmish is a joke by comparison. To first select just those questions which are best calculated to serve the purpose in view, to word them in the best possible way and then to keep one from overlapping on another is one great big job, believe me.

The Roll of Honor for this week is as follows: Harold Weiss, Battle Creek, Michigan; E. L. Rawlins, Eagle Pass, Texas; Chicago, Illinois (4), three answers by members of L. U. No. 2; Philip Glaser, Lancaster, Ohio; Toronto, Canada; Clarence Dowsley and L. S. Usher, both of Winnipeg, Canada; W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey; L. C. LaGrow, Albany, New York; Ernest Wills, Brookings, South Dakota; Cleveland, Ohio, (4); C. A. Webster, Cameron, Missouri; Joseph R. Aaron, Calgary, Alberta, Canada; Fort Worth, Texas (2); New Orleans, Louisiana; Lee Kelley, Ft. Flagler, Washington; Denver, Colorado; Tacoma, Washington; Henry Joesten, Brooklyn, New York; St. Louis, Missouri (2); Joseph L. Waldock, Brooklyn, New York; Robert D. Marshall, Wilmington, North Carolina; St. Paul, Minnesota, and Los Angeles, California.

Answer to Question No. 13.

By "Commutator," Washington, D. C.

The question:

What care should be given to a commutator and what is the best evidence that it is in A1 condition? Explain what troubles the commutator is liable to and how you would remedy each.

The Answer:

The best evidence that the commutator is in A1 condition is a sort of glazed appearance, smooth as glass, a brownish shade in color and a slight squeak from the carbon brushes when the armature is revolved slowly. To obtain and maintain this condition the following care must be given:

(a) That the brushes are kept set as nearly as possible at the sparkless point, and this point may vary with the load.

(b) That the brushes have just sufficient tension to make good electrical contact with the commutator, remembering that every particle of unnecessary pressure will tend to wear both commutator and brushes unduly, and groove the copper unless the armature has a little end play.

(c) That the commutator be kept clean and free from dust. This may best be accomplished by cleaning the whole machine once every day, blowing the dust out from around the field poles, etc., with a bellows and, last of all, wiping off the commutator with a canvas pad made as follows: Cut a piece of ordinary canvas six inches square, fold this so that it is two inches wide by six long, which will form a pad with a face of one thickness, backed by two thicknesses. Next open up your pad and smear a little vaseline on the center section, which is the back side of the face of the pad, after which re-fold the pad and it is ready to use. Sufficient vaseline will gradually soak through the pad to give the commutator all the lubrication it needs, and that is mighty little. The foregoing holds good in summer, and in winter, too, if the generator is located in a warm room, but if, on the other hand, the machine is cold then it will be well to moisten the face of the pad by dropping a few drops of a very thin oil on a piece of glass, spreading it around evenly and then wiping it off on the face of the pad, the idea being to get the oil evenly distributed on the pad. Remember this, however, too little lubrication is better than too much, and heavy lubricants must never, never, never be used on a commutator. If one application as above every six hour's run does not suffice, then it is likely that; (1) your brushes have too much tension, (2) your machine is overloaded, (3) your brushes not properly set, or (4) there is some other trouble. (See reply to question 12.) Never use gasoline or benzine around a commutator as it is likely to attack and sofen the shallac and insulaion and set up serious trouble.

(d) That sufficient oil, or combined oil and carbon dust, has not collected at any point or spot, either on the commutator or face of any brush, to form a semi-insulation.

(e) That there are no high bars, low bars, etc., and that the commutator is perfectly round. (See reply to question 12. Ed).

(f) That a fragment of copper does not drag across the insulation between two adjacent bars, or that oil and carbon dust does not form such a bridge.

(g) That the brush springs do not carry sufficient current to heat them.

(h) That the brushes fit properly in their holders and are kept free from accumulation of dirt, dust, etc.

(i) That the brushes are neither too hard or too soft.

(j) That the armature "floats" slightly—i. e., has from 1-16 to ⅛ inch end play, according to size of machine. This tends to prevent the brushes cutting grooves in the commutator.

(k) That the copper and mica insulation wears down evenly.

(l) That the generator is not overloaded and that there are no other faults present which would tend to cause unnecessary sparking or otherwise injure the commutator.

As to remedies, I think question No. 12 took care of that end of things and that you have inadvertently overlapped the two so that extent, therefore, I will dock the ship, put out my headlight, put the reels away and retire to dream that by happy chance I shall see my name, or at least (thanks to that r-o-t-t-e-n "law") my nom de plume, on the Roll of Honor in due course of time.

On the Map.

Messrs. Francis Fox and Melvin Cummings, Hillsdale, Michigan, by their combined efforts have accomplished the following:

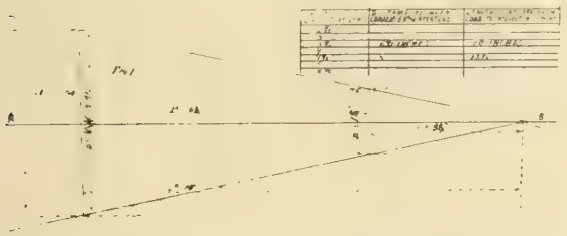
As we have seen nothing in our department from Hillsdale, we wish to let you know that this little city is on the map. I have been operating three years, and Brother Fox, who is writing half this letter, has been struggling with a crank for an equal period of time. Projection here is good and we are trying to learn everything possible. After reading the Handbook until the type turned red, we ask the following: In an issue of May, 1913, there is a diagram for an oil tight casing which encloses the geneva movement, but we do not understand it and would like you to give more detailed information.

I can see by your letter that both of you really have been operating just three years, because one-half of the typewritten letter is precisely as good as the other half, therefore, your ability must be equal. Signed: Sherlocko, the Editor. As to the oil casing in question: It was illustrated on page 485, May 3, 1913, issue. The thing is simple enough. Brother Klink, Canton, Ohio, made a new cam and intermittent sprocket shaft for his Edison machine, and made them long enough so that they extended out on the left hand side of the machine a sufficient distance to allow of the cam and star being placed on the end of the shaft outside the mechanism. He also put them on the shaft in reversed position, that is, pointing the other way. He also removed the left hand bushings from their present position and put them in a separate bearing, as shown. I think this should make it clear to you. Remember that the cam and sprocket have been taken out of their present position and put on the extension of the shaft on the outside of the left hand side of the machine. That is probably what puzzled you. Possibly Brother Klink will write you and explain matters more fully. The address of Brothers Fox and Cummings is either the I. X. L. or Mantauk Theater.

An Excellent Letter on the Lens Question.

John Griffiths, Ansonia, Connecticut, writes:

With regard to the recent article by Brother James, of Camden, New Jersey, page 1,540, December 27th issue, it does indeed seem strange that after all these years we are still largely in the dark as regards the proper focal length condenser to use under the various conditions we meet with in our work. I, myself, have given the subject considerable thought, and after a close study of Brother James' article have come to the following conclusion, viz.: That when we have obtained the conditions shown in the diagram accompanying Brother James' article we get a clear field by reason of the fact that the light rays are traveling true through the objective lens, or, in other words, they are not distorted during their passage through the objective. One important point I gather from Brother James' experiments is that the position of the lamp house is definitely fixed at a certain point with relation to the intersecting point in the center of the objective lens. For instance: We will assume that a 1½-inch spot at the aperture is standard, therefore, if we draw a line from the center of the objective lens passing through the outer edge of the spot and bring the lamp house into a position when the line would pass through the outer edge of the condenser lens, we would have obtained the position in which the condenser ought to be because, unless we change the size of the spot, it is the only position in which the conditions shown in Brother James' diagram could be obtained. As I will attempt to show, it is comparatively easy to make a table from which we could set our lamps in the right position by measurement and not by experiment. Also, I will endeavor to show how a table can be compiled showing what combination of condensing lenses we need with any objective lens we may happen to be using, but, please understand, Mr. Editor, that this data is only good in so far as Brother James' theory and practice is correct. It is a pretty large order, but I think that between us we will be none the worse for trying. With regard to the table dealing with the position of the lamp house and the cone representing the rays of light from the condenser to the center of the objective lens the diagram in Figure 1 is pretty much self-explanatory, when taken in conjunction with rough draft attached thereto.



The table dealing with the combination of lenses is not so simple, however. After reading Brother James' article again with regard to removing the ghost, I found I had another think coming. Inasmuch as we are dealing with the lamp house only, remove the machine head; also, if possible, the cone and slide carrier, so as to get a clear unobstructed view of the light rays directly from the condensers. Now with the condensers in position and not to exceed ¾ of an inch apart, get a piece of tin and paint it as Brother James suggested. Preferably this tin should be a large one which can rest on and slide along the table. Scribe a circle 1¾ inches in diameter in position which would correspond, to the machine aperture if the machine head was in place, so that a point in the center of the circle would be in line with the optical system. Having prepared our black screen we will now place it in the light rays so that the spot just fills the 1¾-inch circle before mentioned, being certain, however, that you are not working on the back focus or beyond the intersecting point of the light rays. If there is a ghost in the circle, advance or pull back your lamp (not the lamp house), at the same time following with the screen so as to keep the spot 1¾ inches in diameter all the time. We will thus find a position where the spot will show no signs of a ghost, though it is still 1¾ inches in diameter. When that position is determined, remove the black screen and, without altering the light, measure the length of the light cone from the condenser to the intersecting point of the rays, which gives us the factor we are after, i. e., the length of the light cone projected by that combination of condensers. This experiment must be repeated for every combination of condensing lenses used in the projection of moving pictures, or to cover all the lengths of cones that the table attached to Figure 1 says we should have based on the different objective lenses in use.

Figure No. 2 shows a suitable way of tabulating the results of these experiments. From this it may seem that the producing of these tables means a whole lot of work, but, on the other hand, it would save a whole lot of useless labor for others in future, and above all things we must not lose sight of the main point, viz.: That it would produce better projection. I would suggest that some machine manufacturer might detail an expert draughtsman to execute table indicated in Figure 2. This table should be very carefully made, as large errors could easily creep in on angles of this kind. I would suggest that such a table properly and carefully compiled, could be sent to operators with the advertisement of the manufacturer on the back, and the manufacturer could rest assured that it would not find the waste basket.

Brothers Griffiths and James between them have certainly succeeded in starting something, and that something looks very promising to the editor. However, it appears to me that two factors enter into the matter, from the practical point of view, the first being that the compilation of that table lies properly with the lens maker rather than with the machine manufacturer, and after all who desire to do so have expressed themselves on this matter I shall refer the same to the Bausch and Lomb and the Gundlach Manhattan people for their opinions. However, the application of such a table with accuracy would hardly be practicable, I think, due to the fact that we are using cheap condensing lenses and that scarcely any two of the supposed-to-be, for instance, 7½ condensing lenses really measure alike. But it seems to be that such a table might at least very largely improve matters. I have not studied this thing closely and in detail, and I have not time to do so just now, but on the surface it looks promising. I believe for one thing it might not only eliminate the ghost, but would stop a considerable waste of light between the film and the objective lens, and thus make for better results all around.

From New Hampshire.

Harvey Conant, Bristol, New Hampshire, breaks ground thusly:

Please observe that this is from the Granite State. Have followed the department for two years, and while I find it O. K. in every way, I seldom or never see anything from New Hampshire. I am manager and operator of the Lyric Theater in this city. We use a. c. through a Fort Wayne compensarc, the projector being a Power's Six A. A plaster wall with the necessary coating is my screen. The house seats 200. The population of our little town is 2,000. We always have your Handbook ready in case of trouble. Some book, believe me! There being no license law here in New Hampshire I am not a licensed operator but I hope to be one in the near future. However, the license doesn't make the operator. (You never said a truer word in your life friend Conant.—Ed.) With regard to writing on glass: It may be done with ink made by the Thaddeus Davids Company of your city, called Letterine. It comes in colors and I have been using the same for two years; it costs 10 cents a bottle and gives perfect satisfaction, using a common pen. Am sending sample of slide made with the same.

The license, brother Conant, is a good thing, although in all too many cities it is shamefully abused and you are quite right in saying that the license doesn't make the operator, or, in other words, the fact that a man is licensed does not always prove that he is a competent operator by several good long hops. We have licensed operators here in New York City, and there are licensed operators in Chicago and in nearly every other city who know as much about real projection as a tom-cat knows about architecture. The Thaddeus Davids Co. has just submitted samples of its new ink called "glassine," and it is fine; works perfectly on raw glass. It supersedes "Letterine." See advertisement.

Live Wires.

John W. Rose, Greenville, Texas, sends in 25 cents for the questions and writes:

Just a few lines to the "Old Reliable" to let you know the Greenville boys are not dead ones. Have been reading the department since its inception about four years ago. There are four theaters in this small city all using Power's Six-A projectors, two in each house. A new house opened recently and the operator is one of the old school; I note that Mr. Travel Ghost is present most of the time. I recently obtained some patent lamp lubricant which was advertised. It is a flat failure. When the lamps became cold the lubricant caked and made it almost impossible to adjust the lamp. Vaseline and graphite for mine in future.

I would suggest, Brother Rose, that the directions for lubricating the lamp as set forth on page 199 of the Handbook is the ideal method. I don't think you can improve upon it. And why use patent lubricants when a box of powdered graphite and a little kerosene, or other light oil, is all that is necessary? The oil is merely to make the graphite stick until the lamp is put together; therefore, use a very light oil. My compliments to the Greenville boys. The other matter you spoke of has been referred to headquarters.

Out of Focus Effect.

Leon Loeb, Selma, Alabama, who is an old timer in the M. P. line as an exhibitor and who has had some experience with the camera, says:

I note on page 169, January 10th issue, the complaint of Mitchell, South Dakota, relative to certain scenes of films being out of focus, while others on the same reel appear sharp. In my opinion such scenes as appear out of focus and which refocusing does not make clear and sharp, were taken by a camera which was itself out of focus at the time that particular portion of the film was taken. Your suggestion regarding several cameras making the different scenes is, in my opinion, incorrect. It should not matter how many were used so long as each was in perfect focus.

Very likely you are right, Brother Loeb. I am not a camera man. We would appreciate it if some member of the New York Cinema Camera Club would set us right in this matter.

The Condenser Matter.

L. C. LaGrow, Albany, New York, lands on Brother James, Camden, New Jersey, all spraddled out, as follows:

> The point raised by W. S. James is one of more than passing interest to me, and probably also to most progressive operators. I cannot see how this hypothesis has any foundation in fact. (Sic him Tige! Bow-wow-wow! Fireworks from Camden.—Ed.). However, as we know, light must travel in straight lines until the medium of travel is changed, or, in other words, so long as the path of the ray is through a medium of equal density. James says: "Emerge in a straight line" (I take it he means emerge in parallel lines), "and do not begin to spread until * * * several inches from the lens." If the rays emerge from the front of the objective in parallel lines what would deflect them thereafter? I believe Brother James is led astray by diffused light and the fact that lenses reflect as well as refract light. The lens tube and machine head are always full of diffused light, part of which is reflected along through the lens factors and as this light strikes the lens factor from almost every angle, and since the angle of incidence has to do with the angle of refraction, we have considerable unused illumination emerging from the objective lens, most of which is dissipated. Proof of this: Continue lens tube to aperture plate painting inside of continuation black and not having it exceed the lens tube in diameter, and then work the front of your machine head so as to eliminate as nearly as possible all unrectified light from the aperture and try your light on a piece of cardboard painted flat black. (Phew! O my! such a headache.—Ed.). It will be found that the cardboard screen is truncating a cone of light, the apex of which is the true focus of the entire lens system. (Hey there! Somebody quick catch my coat before he escapes entirely.—Ed.). Rays not nor nearly parallel. I believe brother James is entirely in error in his assumption with regard to the length of lens focus and the crossing of light rays. This condition may obtain in short foci lenses, but, as I understand it, the best compounds have their point of convergence built outside of the tube in the longer focal lengths. Whether the point of convergence is inside or outside of the tube can be determined by diaphraming down inside the tube and finding the focus from parallel rays of light. Should the point of convergence be inside the tube the image will show greater definition on slight diaphraming, owing to the lessening of spherical aberration. If the point of convergence be outside the tube the image will show loss of intensity so marked as to be convincing. Definition will be greater at first but will suddenly be lost on diaphraming. What I am trying to say (thank you, that's the dope. Ed), is that a lens compounded so that the point of convergence is inside the tube, i. e., between the factors, can be stopped down much more than one so built that the convergence is outside. Diffused and unrectified light causes flicker when the shutter is too far ahead of the lens, or at least that is my opinion. We would all like some sure way of matching our optical system, and I think that if you and the boys would dig into it we would soon have a way. I am trying brother James' plan on page 1540, December 27th issue.

I wish to assure you gravely that the editor is, metaphorically, seated on top of the flag-pole on the Woolworth building looking down, and his stenographer is glaring out of the office window at him. Some words, my boy, some words. I do not think brother James meant to express the opinion that rays emerge from the objective in parallel lines; that would, of course, be manifestly absurd, since they would continue to travel in parallel lines clear to the screen. I am given to understand that Professor Wall is working on this problem, and that the results of his labor will be submitted to the department for publication, therefore I think I would rather wait than enter into an extended discussion of these points at this time. Personally without going deeply into the matter, brother James' plan appeals to me, and I am of the opinion that there is a good deal in it too. Your remarks concerning diffused light are unquestionably correct, and, moreover, this diffused light does, under certain conditions, cause travel ghost, or at least I think it does; but I am not going into this subject just now. In the first place the questions are occupying so much of my time and energy at present that I have not the necessary time to devote to the matter. Later on, if Professor Wall does not settle it for us, we will see what can be done. It is, however, encouraging to see operators taking up advanced questions of this kind. It would be especially interesting to have the views of Mr. Miller, Chicago, on this matter.

A Watch.

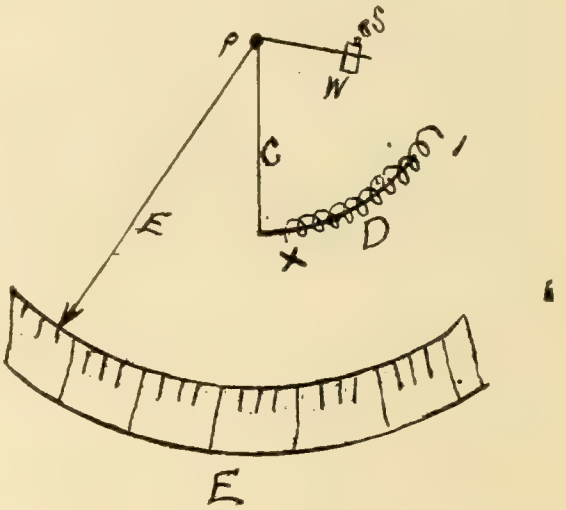
Maine sends in 25 cents with the idea of starting a fund to buy the editor a watch, to be suitably engraved as coming from his friends. He wants to know if there has been anything about the Kinemacolor machine in the department, and if not, could I give him a description of the shutter, etc. He has something new in slides which he will contribute shortly.

In the first place, brother, while I appreciate the spirit which prompted you to propose the watch business, still I feel amply repaid for my labor in the knowledge that I am doing you boys some good. Moreover, while 25 cents seems an almost insignificant sum, still it is a good deal to thousands of operators, and, therefore, I cannot encourage the idea. As to the Kinemacolor sutter: It consists of a regular shutter, the effect of which is the same as the shutter of any machine and, in addition to that, there is an auxiliary shutter which contains two colors of gelatine and it is the combination of these two colors which produces the colors on the screen. In order to give you an intelligent idea of this I would have to consume a great deal of space. The Kinemacolor machine was described once, but it was a long time ago; it would be quite a job to hunt it up now and, moreover, I don't think you could get the back number at this late date. As to your trouble with the No. 5, it is rather hard to say what is wrong, but, at a guess, it would lie in the toggle movement, which is probably badly worn. By "toggle movement" I mean the bar and gears on the left hand side, which make possible the framing of the carriage.

Valuable Experiments.

Fort Worth, Texas, writes as follows:

> First let me say concerning the Joke, page 45, January 3rd issue, Brother Sturgeon didn't say how he beat it up the street so fast that the paving blocks have not entirely cooled off yet, and secondly, as to that Photometry, page 47, January 3rd: I made the tests with a Weber photometer and wattmeter, both of which have been feloniously abstracted (stolen) from your humble servant since that time. It is the only portable photometer I know of. But arc measuring is just approximate, owing to the variation of the amount of light given out in one direction at any one time, this due to the variations of the quality of carbons, position of arc, and color of light. I find that with carbons giving off a greenish light a little more illumination is produced on the same wattage. Next comes a yellow or orange cast, with purple cast the least effective of all. I am now experimenting on the color of light, and expect in the near future to produce a greenish cast which will be so perfect that you could hold a piece of purple silk dyed with methol violet 6B and get the same shade or effort in daylight as is given by the arc light. I don't say I will succeed, but if I do it will well repay me for my efforts. Now as to the ammeter illustrated on page 45: I will give you a diagram of one that will work, although, of course, it is not very correct, especially in lower readings, due to hysteresis in the iron core.



When the current to be measured is passed through the coil it draws the soft iron core D, which is pivoted at P. The needle E is fixed to C at P. The core is drawn into the coil against the force of gravity, W serving as an adjustment. W must have a set-screw to hold it in position. This is what would be called an electromagnetic pendulum ammeter, and is built something like the ammeter of early days. The greater the current in the coil the greater will be the deflection of the needle.

The General Electric Company informs me that your tests, as recently set forth in the department, are approximately correct, and that endorsement has been published. My compliments to you. As to the ammeter: I know that sort of an arrangement will work, but whether or not it will work as well as or better than the one illustrated on page 45, I don't know. However, those things are worth experimenting with, because an ammeter in the operating room, placed right square in front of the operator, is to my mind an exceedingly important piece of equipment. As to the light experiments, we will be glad to receive your report when it is ready. If you can accomplish what you expect to it will be, it seems to me, a very important matter indeed.

What Is It?

C. J. Berger, Rochester, New York, writes:

> Although the titles of my films are in focus, the pictures are blurred, foggy and hazy looking. I had my operator change the condensers, using various combinations, but the trouble has not been vanquished. The machine is a Power's Six-A. The curtain is a plain canvas, one coated with alabastine. The current comes through a Bell & Howell 110-volt a.c. compensarc and the lens is a Bausch & Lomb; the throw is 90 feet, using 45 amperes. The machine is somewhat noisy. Could you suggest a remedy?

In the first place the proposition you put up seems to be if not impossible, at least highly improbable. If all of your titles are in sharp focus then your pictures ought to be so too, except for possibly an occasional scene badly photographed or developed. I am inclined to think the whole business is out of focus, and that you don't notice it so much in the titles. Examine your lens carefully and see if it is not dirty, oily, or if there is not a faint finger mark. Take the objective lens apart and wash the lenses with alcohol, polishing carefully with a perfectly clean, soft cloth, being sure that you get them together again properly, as per Figure 146, page 362 of the Handbook. Possibly you have had the lens apart and it was not put together properly, or that one of the combinations is loose in the barrel. I am quite certain your trouble lies in the lens. As to the noise in the machine, I could not give you an intelligent opinion without having more complete information as to what kind of a noise it is. Possibly the machine is badly worn, in which case it should be sent to the Nicholas Power Company for repairs. I would refer you to the instructions on the Power's machine on pages 270 to 290, inclusive, of the Handbook.

Another Experiment.

John Griffiths, Ansonia, Connecticut, is here with the following:

> This letter is not in the nature of an argument as to who gave the correct answer on the glass heating matter. I admit that I was barking up the wrong tree myself. However, anything which tends to increase our knowledge in matters connected with our profession is worth finding out. (Right-o! Ed.) And now I am going to suggest an experiment which will cause even more surprise than the glass stunt. Take an ordinary thermometer, having an exposed bulb, and put it in the cone of the lamp house for fifteen seconds, with the bulb within one-half inch of the hot condenser, and note the degrees rise in temperature. Now, after allowing the thermometer to cool down to its original temperature, hold the bulb in the light rays near the aperture and you will find that near the aperture is by far the hotter place (that is where the glass surprise came in. Ed.), which seems to prove, beyond doubt, that my reasons why the glass in the slide carrier got so hot were correct. The experiment with the thermometer should be made when everything is good and hot, say at the close of the show, but if you have any respect for the thermometer keep your eye on the mercury when the bulb is in the light ray at the aperture. You can leave it close to the condenser for one full minute without damage, provided it is not actually touching the lens, but half a minute near the aperture would cause the bulb to explode and that fact ought to satisfy Brother Foltz, Findlay, Ohio, that there really is some heat there after all. I am not yet prepared to accept the theory that the greater part of heat rays, as effecting glass, are extracted when light passes through the first glass. I would not think of disputing that proposition, but I am inclined to believe that a glass becomes hot exactly in proportion to the amount of light it absorbs. (Hum! that is worth thinking over some. Ed.). A piece of mica is not so clear as glass, therefore, it would absorb more light and get a little hotter, and if another piece of mica were placed so as to intercept the light ahead of the first one, then the second piece would naturally not get so much heat, since it would not receive so much of the light. Now here is something not generally known: A piece of tinned iron would not get as hot as a piece of black iron, because, although the tinned iron stops just as much light as the black iron, the tinned iron reflects a large portion of the rays back again, and the iron only gets hot in proportion to the amount of light it absorbs. For proof of this last statement cover the bulb of an ordinary thermometer with a piece of black iron and another thermometer with a piece of tinned iron and in both cases have the back of the iron touching the bulb of the thermometer. Now hold each one in the rays of light for the same interval of time and the one with the black iron will register the greater amount of heat.

Your last statement is, to my mind, not correct, in as far as light be concerned, neither of the pieces of metal absorbing any light whatever. It is, however, a fact well recognized by those who have to do with heating that an iron radiator painted black will radiate more heat than one covered with silver bronze or any light color and, conversely, black iron will absorb more heat (not light, mind you, but heat) than when painted white or a light color. Of course, I must admit that the question of light rays and heat rays are here to some extent jumbled together, and pretty closely interwoven. I have not the space now to go into this matter extensively, but it is interesting and, as you say, anything which tends to give us an enlarged knowledge of anything having to do with the operator's profession, or line of work, is of distinct value. That is one difficulty the editor of this department is now contending with. It is a perfectly simple matter to get almost any operator to see the value of knowledge which will help him, for instance, to stop his picture from vibrating on the screen, but it is not every operator who can see and understand the fact that discussions of this kind also have a very decided and distinct value in the broadening of knowledge.

It is the desire of the editor of this department to co-operate with the more advanced men, gradually, so far as possible, dropping the answering of simple, kindergarten questions, and to devote the department almost wholly to matters of higher class. There are hundreds of matters, some of them purely theoretical, some of them practical, and some of them a mixture of theory and practice, which can be profitably discussed. Neither this department nor its editor has any apology to make for its course in the past. If it was all to do over again I cannot, in looking back, see where I could have modified to any material extent, what I have done, taking everything into consideration. What the course of the department will be in the future will depend to a considerable extent on the co-operation shown by advanced individual operators and by operator's organizations. Meanwhile, let me say to Brother Griffiths that discussions and experiments as he has set forth in this letter will always be welcome, and will be given space so far as is practicable in the present very crowded condition of the department.

Operators Attention.

At last, after a long hunt, I have found what seems to be a really practical work on electricity which fits the need of the moving picture operator. I have been looking for this kind of a work for lo, these many moons. It has been extremely difficult to find and the credit for its discovery lies with W. H. Rosenblum, Chicago, Illinois, who very kindly sent a copy to the editor. The book is entitled, "Lessons in Practical Electricity," by Swoope, fourteenth edition, revised, and up-to-date.

After carefully examining this work I can heartily recommend the same to operators. I believe this book, in conjunction with the Handbook, will supply every need of the moving picture operator, at least so far as the electrical end of things goes. Mr. Swoope's work is such that any man can readily grasp and understand it. It gives the rules, and other things which the operator ought to know, in plain understandable language; the part dealing with generators is particularly excellent. This book contains 502 pages of text matter and illustrations, aside from the index, etc. It is well bound in cloth; the price is $2. Until other arrangements are made orders sent to the editor of this department, accompanied by money order in the sum of $2, will be taken care of, and, in view of the questions now running, I would again strongly recommend all operators to invest that sum in Mr. Swoope's work.

From Canada.

Charles S. Stuckey, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, writes:

> I guess I had better wake up and take a little more interest in your series of questions, which will undoubtedly prove of great help to many operators. Attached find my answer to Question No. 12. Am now operating at the Monarch Theater in Edmonton. Our outfit consists of a combination Power's Six and a dissolver with a G. E. rectifier for the projector and a rheostat for the dissolver. We pull 35 to 40 amperes at the arc and get very good results on our 125-foot throw, projecting an 18-foot picture on a plaster wall covered with some special coating. I enclose picture of my operating room taken by myself while my partner, David M. Stimac, was running the machine.

I am sorry, old man, but your reply to Question No. 12 came too late. Get a hustle on. You are not the only one those questions are waking up and showing how little they really do know when it comes right down to the technical side of their business, and just you wait! Some of the questions already asked are easy compared with some of them yet to come. The motor, generator and engine will last fully six months or more, probably considerably more, and there are some very pertinent questions to be asked which I think will put even the best of you to grubbing. But let me tell you, friend Stuckey, that the compilation of this series of questions is proving to be one great big task. I had no idea what a job it really would prove to be or perhaps I would not have tackled it at all.

Carbon Resistance.

Brooklyn, New York, writes:

> My employer is also an operator, or was one. I recently asked him why he did not get 12-inch carbons. His objection was that by using a 12-inch carbon the resistance would be such that it would injure the light; his son is also an operator and claims the same thing, whereas I believe they are in error.

Unless you are working right up to the capacity of your carbons, a thing which it is not advisable to do, the resistance of 12 inches of cored carbon is negligible. By actual experiment, made by the editor, the insertion of a 12-inch 5/8 cored carbon in a circuit carrying 35 amperes only caused a drop of a little less than one ampere, so while, of course, this amount is something, still it is not worth bothering with in practical affairs. Your employer and his son are mistaken. A great many operators believe there is an enormous amount of resistance in 12 inches of carbon, but, as a matter of fact, there is not, unless, as I say, you are working right up to capacity, which would with a 5/8 carbon be about 45 amperes. But aside from this the use of 12-inch carbon doesn't mean you would have 12 inches of the carbon actually in circuit. You could not have much more than 6 inches, unless you had a very short lower carbon and a correspondingly long upper one, a condition which is not the best. With modern lamps there is no use in using 6-inch carbons on top; they are built to take a 12-inch carbon and the use of the 12-inch carbon is more economical and much less bother.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

By F. H. Richardson

420 Pages Illustrated

$2.60 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

"A TWO FAMILY AFFAIR" (Pathe), January 27.—A farce with little that is new, but acted in a brisk, pleasing way. It is a good offering for the gallery and is wholly inoffensive. There was little laughter.

"THE OASIS OF GABES" (Pathe), January 27.—Excellent pictures of one of the fertile spots in the great desert of Sahara. It is worth seeing.

"THE CONSPIRACY" (Selig), January 27.—A melodrama on the detective story plan and utilizing the usual sensational incidents. There is no marked suspense, but it has been fairly acted and produced.

"HIS EXCELLENCY" (Lubin), January 27.—A romance of a youthful president of a South American country who, bored by his fine uniform and calm duties, goes in disguise among the people where he is soon in the sweet toils of a love story. It is built on an unusually acceptable formula, but has not been produced with much care as to unimportant details. However, just as it is, it is a bit out of the rut and makes a likable offering. It was written and produced by Paul Powell.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE TALKING WIRE" (Edison), January 27.—A detective story with fair suspense and some feeling of mystery. From "The Chronicles of Cleek," it is the third of the series to be produced. The author is Thomas W. Henshaw and George A. Lessey produced it. Benjamin F. Wilson is taking the leading role in these stories as a Scotland Yard detective. A likeable offering; it entertained a large audience.

"HOW BOBBIE CALLED HER BLUFF" (Edison), January 28.—Sumner Williams has given us a pleasing bit of insight into a human and likable young miss and her brother, who is "onto" her. It makes a comedy that will amuse nearly everyone. Charles M. Seay has produced it and made some charming scenes, well acted, naturally set and photographed.

"THE CALL OF THE FOOT LIGHTS" (Edison), January 28.—On the same reel this broader farce may make louder laughter. Two stage-struck employees of a theatrical hotel furnish amusement to an actress who sets them up to going through their paces. They "go on" at a real stage on amateur night and get the hook. Charles H. France wrote and produced it.

"THE OLD VS. THE NEW" (Selig), January 28.—Love story with the old doctor's daughter and the young doctor as centers of interest. This theme is a good one and has been treated in a number of ways in other pictures. This one has elements of popularity, but failed to hold one audience here in New York. Written by Wallace Clifton and produced by N. MacGregor.

"NEARLY MARRIED" (Essanay), January 28.—Farce comedy of a lost wedding ring. It is a bit too far-fetched to be really amusing, but there is a scene in it after the sub-title, "Nearly Married," that is worthy a better plot and preparation.

"SCOTLAND FOREVER" (Vitagraph), January 28.—This farce of kilties instead of pants made laughter, but a good deal of its fun is not spontaneous. It deals with the adventures of a fat boob in New York. He was without his pants and wearing newspapers and some young Scotchmen give him a job in the Caladonian Club. His coming home to the village in kilties makes a stir. The Vitagraph players are good at this sort of thing and made much of it amusing. Charles Brown is author and it was produced by Captain Harry Lambert. There are passages of poor photography in it.

"THE PATCHED ADONIS" (Pathe), January 28.—The girl has her own ideal of Adonis and the artist, it chances, is making a painting, but can't find a model, so chooses three of the most promising and does a composite of them. The girl has been tantalizing her lover, a friend of the artist, and he uses the painting and the model (three men in a row) to show her that Adonis is not to be found among mortals. It is done in a fairly successful burlesque spirit and gave a good deal of amusement.

"THE LITTLE BUGLER" (Vitagraph), January 29.—This story of army life in the Philippines makes a nice appeal. During an engagement on the battlefield the little bugler, a boy named Tommy, sounds the call to charge, the regular bugler having been killed. There are some attractive views of picturesque lowlands. This strikes a patriotic note.

"BRINGING UP HUBBY" (Selig), January 29.—A domestic comedy number with a lot of good humor running through it. The scene where the young husband sits down in the custard pie is very laughable. After repeated experiences the young wife gives up trying to train her spouse. The scenario is by W. E. Wing.

"OUT OF SIGHT, OUT OF MIND" (Biograph), January 29.—In this comedy half-reel a young man with a fickle disposition loses both his Eastern and Western sweethearts because of his inconstancy. The contrast of New York and California scenes is interestingly handled. The story is slight, but entertaining.

"BUY WOOL" (Biograph), January 29.—This, on same reel with above, makes quite an amusing yarn. The secretary, seeing the words "Buy Wool" on his employer's cuff, plunges heavily. The words really referred to woolen underwear, but the stock rises just the same and the young man is accordingly happy. A good idea in this.

"WHAT CAME TO BAR 'Q'" (Essanay), January 29.—Once more in this number is the perennial comedy of the tenderfoot on a Western ranch successfully put on. Only in this case both a young man and his sister are initiated into Western life. The newcomers both handled their parts very well and the fun runs high from the time they appear. A lot of laughter is brought out by this offering.

"BATTY BILL'S HONEYMOON" (Melies), January 29.—A clever French farce-comedy, with some extremely hilarious moments in it. Bill's adventures with his music-loving bride are convulsing in places. The subtitles, couched in musical phrases, were cleverly handled.

"WINKY WILLY AND THE FISHERMAN" (Melies), January 29.—This, on same reel with above, furnishes a milder form of amusement but is very enjoyable. The manner in which the little French boy obtained the fisherman's lunch was quite original. A good farce-comedy release.

"THE MEDICINE SHOW AT STONE GULCH" (Kalem), January 20.—John E. Brennan as Dr. Connem, a "skin" showman, and Ruth Roland as his assistant, get some easy money out a primitive town and have a narrow escape in making a getaway on the roof of a freight car. The picture will mildly amuse.

"MAKING HIGH-GRADE PAPER" (Kalem), January 20.—On the same reel is this interesting advertising-industrial; advertising because not only have we in the initial sub-title the name of the concern and its location, but following this is a panoramic view of the great sign of the firm; later this is emphasized by showing us the die of the watermark and the finished imprint. It is industrial because we are shown the process of making paper from rags, in well-photographed close-up views.

"THE LUCKY ELOPEMENT" (Vitagraph), January 30.—Cornelius Shea writes and Ralph Ince directs this comedy in which there are some extremely funny situations. Mr. Ince also plays the lead, and contributes much of the humor. There will be a big laugh as the country youth jumps on the neck of the burglar and the two roll over the turf. George Stewart, the little fellow who bears messages between the lovers, shows talent. Miss Stewart is charming in the bit she has to do. Tod Talford as the burlesque sheriff and Charles Wellesley as the father of the girl do their share in the fun-making.

"A SPLENDID SACRIFICE" (Selig), January 30.—Maibelle Heikes Justice writes this fine drama and Mr. Le Saint produces it. There are a number of strong situations and they are splendidly handled. One of the little things that indicate quality in the picture is the incident of the dropping of the handkerchief. The scenes at the denouement were dramatic and stirring. Stella Razetto, as the cousin of the wife; Guy Oliver as the husband, Al Filson as the friend of all, and Eugenie Besserer as the wife make an excellent cast.

"AN UNINTENTIONAL HERO" (Lubin), January 30.—A comedy in which there seems to be a dearth of new situations.

"A STAGE DOOR FLIRTATION" (Lubin), January 30.—On the same reel as the foregoing. The best thing in it seems to be the close-up views of Mae Hotaling and her impressionable companion watching the show, or rather the latter as he watches the show and being watched by the former. The story is of two men made up as Jewish characters, "sports," coming to grief and being beaten up by a female impersonator and the "actors" when they try a little flirtation with the soubrette. The skirt-lifting incident by the car door might have been omitted.

"THE PERFECT TRUTH" (Edison), January 31.—The first of "Dolly of the Dailies" series by Acton Davies, and is a delightful little comedy picture. Its humor springs cool and fresh from below the surface of things and it is played so that even its peculiar characters are human and good company. Its best characters are very attractive. William West, as Dolly's father, couldn't be improved upon, while both Dolly, herself (Mary Fuller), and Bobby (Edwin Clark) are excellently chosen and excite lively interest. The story that Dolly writes for the town newspaper, giving away the "perfect truth" about the village people, stirs them up and makes them exemplify it for us in an amusing way. The incident makes a self-contained story and we are left longing to know what the bright girl's further adventures are to be. Walter Edwin produced it.

"PLAYING FOR A FORTUNE" (Kalem), January 31.—A melodrama with a conventional plot. Its feature is a struggle between police officers and a gang of thugs, the former led by a lover of the girl who is sister of one of the gang and reluctantly an accomplice. It is not made realistic, nor is it really exciting, but will serve as a commercial offering. Some interesting shore scenes cluttered with cabins and shanties are shown. The photography is clear.

"BRONCHO BILLY AND THE SETTLER'S DAUGHTER" (Essanay), January 31.—A good, dashing offering in which the hero fights Indians to rescue a girl and the two are rescued just in time by soldiers who find their cabin already ablaze.

"THE FALLEN ANGEL" (Biograph), January 31.—A love story on a somewhat trite pattern and of a not wholly healthy kind. It is over sentimental and melodramatic with no marked suspense, but there are many who will count it a fair picture. We are also sure that there are many who will not like the taste of it. The acting is reasonably fair.

"THE PALE OF PREJUDICE" (Lubin), January 31.—An unscientific picture dealing with methods of healing without drugs, but not in a clear-headed way. As entertainment it is weak, for in its over-drawn story there is little freshness and no moment when it is effectively convincing. The acting handles the subject as well as possible, and the photography is excellent.

"HOW GOD CAME TO SONNY BOY" (Vitagraph), February 2.—An excellent Sunday-school offering with a story very like some told by preachers. Sonny Boy is a child of a poor artist and his mother needs medicine. The father finds an old masterpiece as in answer to prayer on the part of child and its mother. There is no "punch" to it. One fails to believe that its producer really felt his imagination stirred by it and it doesn't live. It won't offend any; but neither will it please any very much. Some in the audience watched, some talked in groups.

"IF IT WERE NOT FOR POLLY" (Biograph), February 2.—There is an amusing situation in the development of this picture; but it comes a bit late and a good deal of the early business is poor amusement. As a whole it is only fair. Polly is a child comedienne, but there is nothing spontaneous in her work.

"HOW THE EARTH WAS CARPETED" (Edison), February 2.—A phantasy with little real humor. It has one good idea, the invention of shoes; but this is too little for a whole picture. Ethel Browning wrote the script and it was produced by Ashley Miller.

"HER WAYWARD SON" (Lubin), February 2.—Story of the West with nothing new in character or situation, except what is due to the kaleidoscope of life by which nothing can happen twice the same. The characters are not life-like and do not interest. It lacks effective direction. The author and producer is Jos De Grasse.

Licensed Specials

"WRECKED IN MID-AIR" (Eclipse), January 27.—A three-part special offering of substantial merit as a sensational melodrama. Through most of the first reel the backgrounds are in and around a large aeroplane manufacturing plant for entire control of which the villain schemes against the heroine's father. Frustrated in his first villainy, he becomes bandit and, finding buried treasure, has means of making himself felt by his one-time partner. The scenes which show how he captures the heroine in her own automobile and how the hero, flying past overhead, sees and gives chase, only to be captured himself, are indeed entertaining. The adventure in the cave where the bandit has imprisoned his captives and the escape after setting off a tremendous blast of powder are sensational enough even for modern audiences. A good offering.

"PICKLES, ART AND SAUERKRAUT" (Vitagraph), January 27.—For review see page 267, issue of January 17, 1914.

"THE MASQUERADER" (Kalem), January 28.—A two-part offering with Carlyle Blackwell as a romantic crook. The story is not quite up to the best in his productions, but has the qualities that careful handling and good acting give a picture. The story pleases without convincing at all and does so mostly by its showing of something good in humanity. The heroine had loved the crook before he was arrested and had a bundle of his letters. These her maid steals and, with the help of an accomplice, is blackmailing her just as she is about to be married. The crook, now out of prison, steals them back for her.

"PLEASURES ON EARTH" (Lubin), January 29.—A two-reel offering by Clay M. Green. This is a well-pictured story of a miserly father whose wife and son leave him. After a lapse of seventeen years they are restored to him by the workings of fate. A factory strike figures in the story. The chief drawback in this is that the observer can foresee the developments too much in advance, which makes the action seem slow. The plot is well constructed, but seemed to lack novelty.

"THE POWER OF PRINT" (Patheplay), January 29.—This film story, which runs about a reel and a half, is rather a formal mixture of newspaper and political life. The opening scenes are carefully planned and lay the ground work for some excitement, but the action does not come up as well as it promised, and the ending seemed a little disappointing. The photography and acting are acceptable.

"SERINGAPATAM, SOUTHERN INDIA" (Patheplay), January 29.—Showing the old fort besieged by Lord Cornwall, with monkeys running over the walls; street scenes, etc. This is on same reel with above; pleasingly picturesque.

"THE GIRL AT THE CURTAIN" (Essanay), January 30.—In the second scene of this two-reel story the writer noticed a jarring note—in the ridiculous manner in which the stenographer was made to chew gum. From this time on until the last scene the picture held tight in spite of one or two instances in which slight improbabilities entered in. Mr. Bushman as the unwilling bridegroom and Beverly Bayne as the even more unwilling bride do splendid work in a drama replete with strong situations. The mother dictating to her shorthand-studying daughter will recall to thousands sad quarters of an hour spent with the pothooks. At times there is a vein of delightful if momentary comedy, as when the wife who has never seen her husband finds she is employed by him and that he is unaware of her identity. The story has unusual appeal and stirring quality; it should be a real hit. "A Misplaced Confidence" is a short comedy at the end of the second reel. It is not new, it is distinctly old, but it is very funny.

"THE SILENT DEATH" (Edison), January 30.—A story supposed to be laid in Central America; the only physical indication that it was not was the big "Fla." following the name of a town on a river steamer. The picture has fine quality as a scenic, with the jungle-bordered placid river, the semi-tropical forests, the great plantation and the shot-holed or crumbling old fortification. An American stricken in the woods with fever is helped by an Indian maid-servant, and by the judicious use of a rifle with silencer attachment is enabled to break up a conspiracy having for its object the death of his brother and partner. Two men are shot and one wounded, and later the latter, in a fight of his own seeking, is thrown into the river and drowned. The picture will interest.

"THE LUNATIC'S CHILD" (Pathe), January 31.—A rather grim story of French peasants. It has a sensational plot, but is not melodramatic and tells no love story. A wealthy family is bringing up a lunatic's baby and think it their own, which really was drowned while in care of a nurse, who then stole the crazy woman's child and substituted it. The fraud is discovered. We have a series of striking situations and they give a well utilized chance for strong, effective acting so that the picture makes a substantial offering. As usual in Pathe offerings made in France, the backgrounds are interesting. The photography is serviceable and clear.

"THE LOVE OF TOKIWA" (Vitagraph), January 31.—A two-part story of Japanese and Americans and set perhaps on the coast of California. The characters, especially the Japs, are well set forth. Tokiwa, the unfortunate daughter of a brutal fisherman, is played by Margaret Gibson; her father by Otto Lederer, and the lover to whom the father sells her, by George Kunkel. In these characters there is a good deal that is distinctly foreign and it passes for Japanese. Bertie Pitcarin and William Taylor play the Americans. The story is fresh and clearly pictured, but few will count it a powerful one, although there are two distinctly sensational incidents. The lack of power comes not from improbability so much as from lack of liveliness in the characters. The photography serves. It was written by W. E. Wing and produced by U. Davis.

"THE CONVICT'S STORY" (Kalem), February 2.—This is another "crook" story that has been well put on by Carlyle Blackwell and his company. In the development there is something so astonishingly novel that we dare say it will be the most noticeable offering of all to-day's releases. It seems as though a little care in the statement of the situation would have got rid of some of the unconvincing things that at present mar it. To have the girl's fiance suspected so quickly weakens our interest just where it should have been carefully bolstered. People will like the picture.

"A MODERN VENDETTA" (Selig), February 2.—A three-reel production that is likely to leave all but the wakefulest confused about much of its story. The main thread is clear. An escaped prisoner kidnaps the son of a judge and brings him up to be a forger just for revenge, and although the boy escapes from the toughs, he is in later years, yet innocent, sentenced by his own father, who fails to recognize him. Then there's a happy ending. Many of the lesser threads are not clear and it impresses one as a poorly produced offering. There was padding in the first reel which added nothing and, as the story progressed, we noticed jumps in the action. Of the former, take those scenes with the carriage just before the accident. Of the latter, take those scenes where Tom saves Barnes' daughter. Just what happened there we don't know. There is plenty of interesting matter and a good many will enjoy the situation and story; but it is not an absolutely sure feature number. Edward McWade is the author and it was produced by Oscar Eagle.

"IN THE MESH OF HER HAIR" (Pathe), February 7.—The Pathe Company is showing in these new two-part offerings a marked advance over its former work of late. This holds true in many departments as plot making, acting, etc. Pathe staging and photography have been good right along. This number is a romantic drama with Eleanor Woodruff and Irving Cummings in the lead, and they are ably supported by well-drawn characters—one by Paul Panzer and one by Sam Reid being especially noteworthy. Florence Dyer and Claire Rae also do good work. There is a touch that reminds one of Ibsen in the State of mind of the hero as he goes to the scenes where he and the girl, whom he thinks drowned, were once happy in each other's love.

Independent

"WITHERING ROSES" (Beauty Films), January 14.—An allegorical picture, teaching that "With deeds of kindness is the road to happiness paved." It has many pleasing scenes, although its double exposures are not always perfect. It fails to convince as a picture of life, but as a fairy tale it will get by and perhaps please many. People certainly like these unobtrusive sermons—it does none of us any harm to see such pictures occasionally and we know it so we are willing to pay for them; that's why it is a good offering.

"ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 99" (Universal), January 28.—Showing the changes asked for in the National flag by the Confederate veterans, a race between Barney Oldfield and Lincoln Beachey and various scenes of about ordinary interest. Hy. Mayer's drawings at the close were extremely laughable.

"THE PURSE AND THE GIRL" (Princess), January 30.—A love story with crooks in the background. The latter serve as the means of drawing the young people together. The plot without novelty has sufficiently the sense of newness and with business that is not convincing, the characters are lively and excite interest. Produced in a simple forthright way, it makes a pleasing release.

"THE VENGEANCE OF NAJERRA" (Majestic), February 1.—Najerra is an Indian humble lover of a beautiful Mexican girl who marries a dashing youth and moves to the village. Soon she is treated coldly and forsaken for another senorita, and we are given scenes of cafe life with senoritas smoking cigarettes on the tables under the vines or shade trees. Najerra comes to town for vengeance, but, as by the hand of fate, he is saved from soiling himself with blood by an accidental explosion which kills the villain. Such pictures offer little chance for fresh comment, but still serve a useful purpose as entertainment.

"THE GREAT PASADENA ROSE TOURNAMENT" (Apollo), February 1.—This annual flower fete at Pasadena has been pictured again and we think that there will be many among the spectators who will be very glad to see the street parade and the floats of flower-decked cars. The photography is clear, if not always artistic.

"WHY REGINALD REFORMED" (Thanhouser), February 1.—If there are any prettier rooms than in Thanhouser pictures we don't know where they are. This picture opens with a specimen of sets that are picturesque and elegant, but the story, though amusing, is not artistic. It is light, with broad humor; is well acted and doesn't drag. We think the majority will be amused by it.

"OUR MUTUAL GIRL NO. 3" (Reliance), February 2.—There is no doubt that many people are deeply interested in the adventures of "Our Mutual Girl"; if one inquires, he hears of it. But that the series has been so far inartistic is also very true. In this installment the girl's country beau has already turned into a sleuth, who is of service to the regular detectives trying to arrest the "count" for smuggling. The picture ends with the scoundrel's temporary escape after leaving the gems where they will probably be found in the girl's muff, but she doesn't know it yet. Sights of the great city are included, with glimpses of Laurette Taylor, of Tetrazinni, the opera singer, and also of some famous hotels and houses. We also spend more time in the studio of the modiste, whose showrooms occupied so much space in the first installment.

"TWINS AND A STEPMOTHER" (Thanhouser), February 3.—A likeable little picture that is not at all pretentious, but wholesome, cheery and pretty. Thanhouser has turned out a good deal of work of this kind and we have found it fairly popular.

"THE JANITOR" (Reliance), February 4.—This picture may be a sore trial to some who, it may chance, have burdens something like it shows, to carry. At least there is something of real experience about it. It powerfully convinces and it is, even with its happy ending, a tragic story. It, like all really tragic stories, is hard on the spectator for the moment, but like medicine to cure pain with hope, later. The horrible drunken father, who is a janitor, is like a defacing smutch on the clean sweet robe of a love story. Love finds a way to conquer even it. The acting is very serviceable and we count it a strong release.

"MY WIFE'S AWAY" (Komic), February 5.—A rough farce with comical situations in which, now and then, there is a touch of newness. It is played in a speedy way.

"THE SLEEPY HEAD" (Komic), February 5.—Sharing the same reel with the foregoing is this, also a farce with an old joke. Every experienced entertainer knows that old jokes are often very acceptable. It will please a good many.

"IRENE, THE ONION EATER'S DAUGHTER" (Victor), February 6.—This number, written by Walter McNamara, has quite an ingenious plot of a burlesque sort, though the humor is somewhat forced in places. The villain in the piece buys up all the onions in the world and the girl's father is driven insane because he cannot get an onion to eat. The photography is very good and the production quite novel.

"TRUE WESTERN HEARTS" (American), February 7.—There is passion in the way it is brought out in this picture that the father and son who had toiled for five long, self-denying years for money to buy a farm would die rather than give it up to outlaws, but finding a widow and her baby in need, think little of giving it all away to her. The faces of the players tell in bringing this human fact home to the spectator, especially does that of the old father, whom the roughs were torturing to make him reveal where the gold is hidden. The picture makes a powerful impression. It is well put on and a worthy offering in every way. Such pictures are worth while.

"THE ELIXIR OF LOVE" (Imp), February 12.—This picture is a number of only ordinary interest. Some of the situations have in them an element of humor, but the story of the rival lovers is not consistent enough in development to hold the interest strongly. The outdoor scenes are attractive.

"SLIM TO THE RESCUE" (Frontier), February 12.—Molly, Slim's sweetheart, is tied near a keg of dynamite, with a burning candle in it. Slim comes to the rescue just in the nick of time. This is well pictured, but the burlesque situation is very old and is not very strongly handled here.

"THE HEART OF SMILING JOE" (Frontier), February 14.—Smiling Joe was a road agent who came to the aid of some helpless girls. His wound should not have been made so serious, as it made his gallant work seem too improbable. This is a story of the ordinary Western type.

"THE MONEY LENDER" (American), February 4.—A picture with the situation once more common in commercially-made offerings—that in which a doctor bargains for a fee before he will lift a hand to help a sick child. In this case the father of the child is rich and a ruthless money lender, and the fee is to be a restitution of a house which the broker had taken from the doctor's friend, but there is little popularity in such a situation. The story is not made convincing and it depresses.

"THE CHICKEN CHASERS" (Joker), February 14.—A burlesque having for its basis the misinterpretation by the wives of two chicken fanciers of an innocent business letter. Two chickens are pretty roughly handled in the making of the picture. The subject will have appeal to those liking the more pronounced slapstick stuff.

Independent Specials.

"THE PORTRAIT OF ANITA" (Majestic), February 3.—A pretty, pathetic story with love followed by after-marriage coldness on the part of an artist husband and then contrition when it is too late and the lovely Anita is asleep in the graveyard. Lamar Johnston plays the artist, with Francile Billington as Anita, the beautiful girl of the mission village. It is produced in the costumes of early days in the Southwest and is graceful and well acted, although there is no real passion or anguish in it. Perhaps it will be the better liked for that. A certain amount of sentiment is all right, but we are seeing a good deal of tears and sorrow in pictures this week.

"JANE EYRE" (Imp), February 9.—Frank H. Crane is the producer of this two-reel adaptation of the famous novel of Charlotte Bronte, first printed in 1847. Irving Cummings and Ethel Grandin have the leads. At times there is an atmosphere of suspense, due in a measure to the spooky situations. It is a picture that will probably be liked by the average house.

"THE LOST TREASURE" (American), February 9.—This three-part picture, although it tells a story very much like that in a single-reel picture of a year or so ago, is a fair offering. It is a good story, exciting in action, if not wholly convincing, and has a pleasing sentiment. The players act naturally, as is expected in releases of this brand, and the photography clearly sets it forth with semblance of life in an interesting country. The story deals with outlaws who cleverly manage to extract from a large invoice of gold four bars. They get access to the express office the night before and fix things so that it is possible. In the developments that follow there is a good deal of padding, but interest is very fairly maintained.

"MYSTERY LADY" (Domino), February 12.—A romance very Cinderella-like in the method bringing about the happy ending. The place is Jamestown in the days of the first settlement. The heroine is a girl made an orphan by Indians and made a drudge by her adopted mother. The fairy god-mother is a dutchess (the lady of mystery) in hiding in America, who sends the poor girl in fine clothes to the governor's ball. Because this story is a bit too closely like its portotype, the suspense suffers, but the atmosphere is interesting and well maintained; the acting fair, the photography good.

"THE ARROW MAKER'S DAUGHTER" (Kay-Bee), February 13.—A vigorous two-part picture of the Western plains that will stir the house, even if they have seen every one of the other Indian picturs that licensed and independent makers have turned out—it will seem to them as good as any of the others. It is introduced by a few scenes, giving a Crow Indian love story and soon the lover is a part of a small hunting band that is overwhelmed by the Sioux. The lover is wounded by an arrow and, helped by a comrade, takes refuge with a caravan of white people crossing the plains. The Sioux attack this and there follows a savagely pictured, grim and terrible battle taken close up and well handled so that the spectator is made to hold his breath. It is a popular picture most surely.

"THE LAW'S DECREE" (Victor), February 13.—This two-reel film at once sets in motion an interesting story. Florence Lawrence appears as a shop girl, who takes the blame for her mother's theft. The scenes during and after her imprisonment hold the interest unflaggingly; the plot is original and the action and photography good. H. L. Solter demonstrates again a correct knowledge of proportion in directing this number. A desirable release.

Flickers.

ROMEO said; "What's in a name." You and I have probably not given this much thought, but go up and ask W. Milligan (of the Billboard), if he is W. Milliken, then give him ten minutes to identify himself and watch his complexion change. This happened to him last week in the Candler Building, when two city detectives, who are trailing a W. S. Milliken wanted by the police for larceny, heard our friend called by name, and he being in the film business they nabbed him. The different spelling of his name did not satisfy the sleuths, and not until some of the boys, especially Joe Farnheim and Charlie Feature Abrams, positively identified him, did the gum shoe men relinquish their hold.

* * *

Harry Lande, proprietor of the Feature Photoplay Company, is putting over a good three reel comedy; a burlesque on the "Traffic In Souls" picture. The comedy is being directed by Sidney Golden and will be called "Traffickers In Souls." The story is said to be one continual laugh from start to finish.

* * *

R. F. Mundstuk, until recently one of the owners of the M. & F. Feature Film Company, in Chicago, after selling out his interest in that concern, has opened new offices in the Long Acre Building, Broadway and Forty-second Street, and from now on will handle only large productions of foreign manufacture, mainly Italian made pictures, among which the Savoia brand will take a prominent part. The pictures will be marketed on the state rights plan, and all buyers will be protected by the U. S. copyright laws.

* * *

W. E. Greene, one of the pioneer film renters and known to every exhibitor "Down East," has given up his office in that part of the country and will now be found in the World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street. Mr. Greene will import and sell only feature subjects. It's in the air.

* * *

Miss Jeanette Cohen, city representative for the Metro Lithograph Company, after a week's illness, has left for her home in Nashville, Tenn. The doctors think that a rest for two weeks will be sufficient to restore the young lady to her former self, and she has promised to be back among us by that time.

* * *

If any of you film manufacturers are in need of a leading lady, and will treat the information confidentially, I will give you the name and address of a well known dramatic picture actress looking for a change of position.

MAC.

DEATH OF JOHN KENNY.

Mr. John Kenny, aged twenty-five, a brother of Miss Mae Kenny, secretary of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, died Monday, January 26th., in St. Luke's hospital where he had been taken to be treated for an injury received some time ago. Mr. Kenny was very well known in New York City and Brooklyn on account of his connection with the municipal government. The funeral was from the young man's house, and the body was escorted by a dozen uniformed policemen, who also acted as pall bearers.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE.

THE Chicago Tribune of January 30th had the following editorial under the heading, "The Dangers of Censorship," which is well worthy of prominent space in THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD:

"The controversy between Maj. Funkhouser and the proprietors of moving picture theaters is important not only because of the great number of moving picture theater patrons who are interested, but also because of the problem of censorship involved.

"The question of how far one set of people shall decide what is proper for another set of people to do; and, conversely, how far the second set of people may conduct themselves to suit themselves in violation of the feelings of the first set of people, is as old as history, and will last as long as the world.

"The tendency has been and always will be for the faction in power, whether theocratic, autocratic, bureaucratic or democratic, to gratify its sense of the proprieties and its sense of power at the expense of the rest.

"In direct ratio to the power of office holders to harass is the revolt against it strong and bitter.

"In comparatively free America there are no publications to compare in lasciviousness, brutality, and bitterness, with the periodical press of autocratic Germany.

"With the recent flood of vice plays, a movement was started to censor the "legitimate" drama, but the public has shown by its withdrawal of patronage that it is eminently qualified to protect its own morals. And this calls to mind that the nasty theaters of the Sam T. Jack type of the last decade have failed from lack of attendance.

"If censorship had been enforced in the theaters, we may feel sure that the vice show would have persisted under police blackmail, while the great political or social lessons which some of our plays have taught would have been suppressed by the force assailed.

"In the case of the moving picture theaters it is said, with great reason, that they appeal largely to children, and that, therefore, scenes calculated to instill low principles of morality should be eradicated.

"Admitting this, it must be understood that the pruning knife should be wielded with a maximum of discretion.

"The first principle of our government is—the people supreme above the office holders.

"Brass buttons on a blue coat do not give unquestionable judgment on matters of propriety. Nor does enthusiastic willingness to superintend other people's business bring with it an equal soundness of judgment.

"The trouble with censorship is that it is almost invariably used or warped to serve the interests of the censor. A policeman will use his power to prevent even justifiable criticism of the police, just as a monarch will use his power to prevent justifiable criticism of the monarchy, or a political factionist will use his power or influence to exalt the faction to which he belongs.

"Censorship at all times and of all kinds is dangerous, and can only be permitted to exist when it is exercised with the utmost forbearance and the utmost common sense."

The Amusement Protective League.

At the meeting of the Amusement Protective League in the Sherman Hotel, Monday, January 26th, the following officers were elected: Joseph Hopp, president; George Gilmore, treasurer; Ora E. Chapin, secretary, and Hy J. Toner, general counsel. About $500 was subscribed during the meeting to aid in conducting a campaign against the present police censorship.

Anyone connected with any amusement enterprise is eligible for membership, and members of the I. M. P. A., Chicago; the Operators' Union, and the White Rats of America, are accepted as affiliated members.

Voluminous resolutions were adopted, among them this one:

"That all exhibitors, theater owners, operators and exchanges in the city of Chicago be urged to join in an active campaign to protect their rights, their investment, and the rights of the patrons, against unjust and oppressive methods of censorship, unfair ventilation inspection, limited lobby, fire and police regulations, proposed five-minute intermission ordinance, or any other unjust attack that may be made by the city of Chicago upon the moving picture industry."

Also this resolution: "That an immediate appeal be made to the patrons of all of the moving picture theaters in the city of Chicago, and that the candidacy of those persons running for the office of alderman of the city of Chicago only be supported who favor a sane censorship law, a reasonable ventilation and fire requirement, honestly and intelligently administered."

It is the opinion of some of the most substantial and representative people in the industry here that there is too much blaring of trumpets and red fire in the action of the Amusement Protective League thus far. The speeches made against Major Funkhauser, it is feared, will make a seeming martyr of the head of the Chicago censor board. The recent action of the forum study class, of the City Club, in passing the following resolution would seem to point that way:

"Whereas, It is of vital interest to all women of Chicago that Second Deputy Superintendent of Police Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser be upheld and supported in the crusade he is now making for the betterment of the moving pictures. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we recommend and urge all women's organizations of the city, regardless of party or other affiliations, to indorse this movement and to pledge to Maj. Funkhouser their support."

Also the following resolution by the members of the Chicago Woman's Club:

"The reform department of the Chicago Woman's Club has watched with the utmost satisfaction the effectual work performed by Second Deputy Superintendent of Police M. L. C. Funkhouser, in dealing with vice conditions generally, and with the suppression of objectional moving picture exhibitions in particular.

"In guarding our children and young people from being shown pictures of crime, vice, and cruelty, Maj. Funkhouser is rendering an invaluable service to this community.

"The thanks of the Chicago Woman's Club and the assurance of its earnest support are hereby tendered to Maj. Funkhouser."

The next meeting of the League will be held Monday, February 9th, at the Sherman.

Election of Officers, Illinois Branch, I. M. P. A.

The members of the Illinois branch of the International Motion Picture Association met at Royal League Hall, Masonic Temple, this city, Monday, February 2nd, to elect officers for the ensuing year. The following were unanimously chosen to serve: Robert R. Levy, president; Geo. Henry, vice-president; Wm. J. Sweeney, treasurer (re-elected); Sidney Smith, recording and financial secretary (re-elected), and I. Gelder, sergeant-at-arms.

On the executive committee the following were elected: Samuel Katz, chairman; I. E. Berkson, Harry Hyman, C. C. Whelan, M. A. Choynski, Fred Hartman, and H. W. Lederer.

Moving Pictures Reduce Infraction of Rules in Penitentiary.

Warden Thomas Tynan, of the Colorado Penitentiary, at Canon City, is a firm believer in the moving picture as a powerful moral and corrective agent among the men in his charge.

"Experience has taught me that if you want to build a man up morally and mentally, you have to begin by building him up physically," he said recently. "In the first two years after the installation of the moving picture machine our report showed 400 less violations of the rules than the highest number theretofore recorded."

Now Warden Tynan is supplementing the work of the moving picture by the addition of a six-acre athletic field and amusement park, which will be in readiness at the state penitentiary about the opening of the baseball season. Provision will be made for athletic contests of all sorts, including track events, running, jumping, pole vaulting, hurdling, baseball games and when the fall season arrives, for football and basketball contests. The arrangement of gates will permit the public to witness the contests from a portion of the grandstand and for the convicts not engaged in the games to observe them from another portion of the structure.

Grand Exhibitors' Ball at Milwaukee.

Owing to the fact that my last Chicago letter was sent in Sunday, January 25th, prior to my departure for the Ohio State Convention, at Cincinnati, before any data was received, the exhibitors' ball at Milwaukee, on Saturday evening, January 24th, was not chronicled in the last installment. My friend, Frank Cook, however, and others who attended report a gala time. It is said that fully 800 people participated in the festivities, many outside visitors being present.

The grand march, an imposing spectacle, took place under the eye of the camera, and the entire throng of Milwaukeeites and visitors who participated in it have been already viewed in pictures by cinematographic fans in the Cream City, the film having been shown in theaters there. In these pictures Francis Bushman and Miss Beverly Bayne, of the Essanay Company, take the place of honor, as they were unanimously chosen to take the lead in the opening number.

Mr. Bushman, who has established an envious reputation as a platform lecturer on films, was in big demand during the hours preceding the ball. He delivered a lecture at the Alhambra, and another at the Princess, both on the Saxe Amusement Circuit, late in the afternoon. These enjoyable lectures were devoted to the subject, "How Moving Pictures Are Made." A single Essanay reel was also run off to illustrate the lecture at each house, and for the purpose of outlining the dialogue spoken by the actors while a picture scene is being taken. Mr. Bushman spoke the exact lines used by him during the taking of the negative of this particular Essanay reel.

The pictures were taken under the direction of D. W. McKinney, president and general manager of the Acme Commercial Film Company, of Chicago, assisted by M. G. Watkins and W. A. Baier, of Milwaukee.

The booths were held by the Selig Polyscope Co. (represented by John F. Pribyl, the Essanay Co. (represented by V. R. Day), the General Film Co. (represented by the Milwaukee branch manager), the Universal (represented by George Magie and J. C. Flaherty), the Mutual, the American (represented by R. R. Nehls), the Laemmle Film Service (represented by Tom Norman), the Anti-Trust Film Co. (by C. R. Plough), the Acme Commercial Film Co. (by D. W. McKinney), the American Cinematograph Co. (by Capt. A. L. A. Boening), and a number of representatives of manufacturing and supply houses. The booth of the Motion Picture Operators' Union had an interesting exhibit, showing the development of the motion picture machine from 1892 to the present day.

Films to Show Proper Handling of Food Products.

The Illinois Food Commission has organized a moving picture show and traveling museum, which will be sent to every part of the state to give free exhibitions as a means of educating the public in the proper handling of food products. The work was inaugurated by W. Scott Matthews, of Carbondale, Ill, state food commissioner, after consulting with Dr. H. W. Wiley and Commissioners Crumbine, of Kansas, and Bernard, of Indiana. The films and other exhibits soon will be ready for the road.

Exhibitions will be given in theaters, schoolhouses and assembly halls in the towns and cities of the state, under the direction of Dr. John Owens, former educational secretary of the Indiana State Board of Health. Lectures will be given, the character of the milk supply of the community investigated, and efforts made to promote the use of pure foods and the betterment of sanitary conditions.

Successful Opening of the New Park Theater, St. Louis.

W. J. Flynn, general manager of the Associated Circuit of Theaters, St. Louis, writes that the New Park Theater, a magnificent new house devoted to high-class vaudeville and moving pictures, was opened January 19th. A local paper writing of the opening says:

"The New Park Theater is the latest of the vaudeville and picture establishments, and the claim of those responsible that it is among the very best and handsomest in this line must be allowed without stint.

"It is truly a beautiful place of popular entertainment inside and out. The promise of the facade is more than redeemed by the elegance of the interior. Mural, ceiling and proscenium decorations are in liberal taste, and the lighting effects throughout the auditorium are among the handsomest in this part of the country. The width and height of the interior impart a sense of freedom to the audience, and with it corresponding comfort. The boxes and the balcony are readily accessible, and after the manner of the playhouses built in modern style,, every seat being in line of sight and sound with the stage.

"Notwithstanding an immense crush an hour before the opening, which crowd was constantly augmented by latecomers, the attaches handled these throngs with celerity. In the box office, on the doors and along the aisles things moved with the precision of a long-established playhouse, a fact which only those who have attended many of these opening exercises know just how to appreciate.

"Grace Van Studdiford, prima donna and queen of light opera, was, of course, the one real attraction which the Park Theater management did well in securing for their inaugural. Miss Van Studdiford wore several stunning gowns at yesterday's prime occasion, and, with Miss Anita Owen at the piano, sang three well-chosen numbers, with which she was easily enabled to display her voice. The singer was given the closest attention, and her faintest notes were distinctly audible in all parts of the house. Miss Van Studdiford was instantly en rapport with her listeners, among whom were hundreds who had made special trips from remote parts of the city to welcome her. Every seat in the Park was taken continuously from 7 P. M. until the final presentation of the long and neatly varied program."

The New Park seats 2,400 people.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Hutchinson left for Santa Barbara on Saturday, January 31st. Mr. and Mrs. John Freuler accompanied them.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wirick paid a visit to THE WORLD office last week. Mr. Wirick is owner of the Olympic and Majestic Theaters in Sioux City, seating, respectively, 300 and 400 people. Mr. Wirick has been indisposed for the past six months, but has now sufficiently recovered to proceed to his home from a Michigan sanitarium. He is president of the Iowa State Branch Local No. 16, M. P. E. L. of America, and reports that the organization is in good shape, in his state, at the present time. Mr. Wirick has been an exhibitor for six and one-year years. He uses Mutual programs. There are 11 moving picture theaters in Sioux City, the largest being the Royal, with a capacity of 600.

* * *

Beginning February 8th, the Chicago Examiner will devote a full page to moving picture news every Sunday. This section will be edited by Mr. Haydon, publicity man of the Celebrated Players Film Company, this city.

* * *

Mr. Hazel, owner of the new Rex Theater, Naperville, Ill., called at this office last week. He stated that he had installed the latest Simplex machine in his house, and that he will operate it himself. He has been an operator in Chicago for the past six years, and is a member of the I. M. P. A. He says that Naperville can well be proud of the new Rex. Licensed service is used.

* * *

David Mundstuk, of Munstuk Features, paid a flying visit to the city, arriving Sunday, February 1st, and returning the following evening to New York City.

* * *

O. F. Langworthy, of Sistersville, W. Va., owner of "Thee Show" in that city, was a visitor at the Ohio State Convention in Cincinnati. During conversation, he reported excellent business.

* * *

George L. Cox, general manager of the Advance Motion Picture Company, was an interested visitor at the Cincinnati Convention. As usual, George was out for business.

* * *

Charles F. Stark, of the Essanay force, stopped over at Cincinnati to take in the convention, on his way to Pittsburgh on business. He took in the ball on Thursday night and had a royal good time.

* * *

Our friend, George A. Blair, of the Eastman Company, Rochester, N. Y., spent several days in Cincinnati during the Ohio State Convention, and renewed acquaintanceship with many friends.

* * *

C. Lang Cobb, Jr., of the Ramo product, and Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb, of Union Features and Features Ideal, were prominent visitors at the Cincinnati Convention.

* * *

F. J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Ind., came on for the banquet of the Ohio State Branch No. 1, on Wednesday, January 28th, and was warmly welcomed.

* * *

George Magie, district manager of the Middle West for the Universal Film Mfg. Co., attended the Cincinnati Convention in place of Carl Laemmle, who was unable to attend, owing to a slight indisposition which called him to the springs at West Baden for several days. Joe Brandt was not in attendance on account of pressing business in Chicago. Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Brandt were scheduled to leave for New York, Tuesday, Feb.3rd.

* * *

William Sievers, secretary and treasurer of the New Grand Central Theater, St. Louis, spent two days in the city last week on business. He reported that for the week of January 12th, "The Third Degree" was run in his theater; "The Battle of Shiloh," the week of January 19th, and "The Lion and the Mouse," the week of January 26th. The first two subjects showed to remarkable business. On Thursday, during the run of "The Lion and the Mouse," the box office took in $782, at an admission of 10 and 20 cents. The audiences were comprised of the very finest people, and it was an ordinary sight to view more than sixty automobiles lined up near the theater.

* * *

Mrs. F. J. Lotz and her daughters, Misses Freda and Martha, are the only women exhibitors in Cincinnati. They own and manage the Norwood and the Nemo. The former, seating 1,150 people, is managed by Mrs. Lotz, and the latter by the young ladies. An airdome, to the rear of the Nemo, which seats 500 people, is operated by them during the summer months. Mrs. Lotz informed me that their houses are growing more popular every year, and that they have used licensed service all through the four years they have been in business.

* * *

The Princess Theater, St. Louis, formerly managed by the late Dan S. Fishell, and controlled by himself and brother, Arthur Fishell, has been purchased by Arthur J. Fitzsimmons, William J. Flynn and Judge Frank M. Kleiber, of the Associated Theaters, St. Louis. Since the death of Dan S. Fishell, the members of his family have been reluctant to operate the house on a sentimental ground, as it had been the life work of the former manager in St. Louis. The new owners will conduct it on a plan similar to that on which the other houses on the circuit are run.

"The Merchant of Venice"

Shakespeare's Play in Four Reels by the Smalleys Full of Dignity and Scholarship.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

SHAKESPEARE could be a careful weaver of plots and many of his plays are perfect in the artistic setting forth of the story; but his mind was so rich that he often makes story overlap story. In "The Merchant," there is the interest of which Shylock is the center, and there is Portia's love story, with the relief and criticism that it gets from Jessica's adventures in love, and besides these, one or two smaller stories such as the comedy episode of the rings. In making a picture of the play for the average spectator, it is inevitable that the love story, with its broad emotional appeal, should be prominent, and in producing this picture, the Smalleys have fortunately done just this. In doing so they have brought out much of its wonderful significance. It is hard to estimate the value of this picture to the thoughtful mind, or to praise it too highly as interpretation, for thus setting it so clearly forth leaves us free to catch the deeper significance of the different threads that are fed into it. These things are subtle, and, in their scholarly and dignified production, the mind will catch glimpses of things that a newspaper reviewer of the picture cannot stop to develop. Suffice it that it is very rich in sidelights on Shakespeare's human truth, and has value aside from its entertainment.

As an offering of entertainment to the public, the picture has many fine qualities. While the love story is being developed, it is deeply absorbing, the more so because Jessica's love affair in the narrower compass of four reels is brought in closer relationship to Portia's romance and greatly enhances its value. The center of this is Lois Weber as Portia. The charm, the dignity, the womanliness that are needed to make the spectator feel the great value of the prize Bassanio has at stake are all there. The courtliness of her surroundings is not overdone. Her palace, her attendants, etc., are reflections of herself; it shows art that they are only what is needed. She is not well supported in Bassanio, whose lovemaking is unfortunate. The choosing of the caskets in each of the three cases has been made into an impressive ceremony, and in each case it is done slowly enough so that the significance of it can sink into the mind. We want to repeat that the whole picture gets its peculiar quality from the fact that condensation helps us to see the whole at a glance, so to speak. The author of the scenario, Lois Weber, shows wisdom, too, in the quick strokes with which she has drawn Jessica's elopement with her father's jewels and ducats. It is like a flash to one side, as though one said, "See how others, under other circumstances, enjoy their romances." Jessica is played by Edna Maison, who, without attaining any passion, has given an even, pretty portrayal. The episode is light and acceptable rather than especially praiseworthy. Antonio, the merchant, is convincing in both affection and in dignity; is a man of worth and honor; but we are not made deeply interested in his fate, for the terror that Shakespeare put in the play is not brought out strongly.

The role of Shylock is played by Phillips Smalley, and, while it is certainly a good, human piece of work, it hardly does justice to the skill of the actor. In make-up, in bearing, in the self-respect due his gray hairs and keen mind that has carried him successfully through one long battle against great odds, the Jew is all that could be desired; but the bitterness of the struggle is not there. Even when he sharpens the knife there is no real ferociousness in him. This is not to be wondered at. The poet's lines carry, when spoken, continual suggestions to the heart of the player and to spectator alike. In drawing such a character, the living vibrations between these two must count for much. Here, the whole scheme of the picture makes it hard for the spectator to understand the attitude of Shylock. He is not likely to fear the kindly eye under Mr. Smalley's bushy eyebrows. Then the pert mocker of the "A Daniel Come to Judgment" episode rather hinders than helps.

The ending of the story which gives us the comedy of the rings is a bit obscure. Such as do not remember the story will be apt to miss some of it. Of the staging, the highest praise is due. Many of the scenes make lovely pictures, and none of them is awkward. Grace, dignity and charm are found all through the offering.

BILLY QUIRK WITH THE VITAGRAPH.

Billy Quirk has hooked up with the Vitagraph Company. He put in an appearance at the Flatbush studio on Monday, February 2, and it is said that in a few days he will be actively at work in comedies. This will be news as good as it is interesting to the friends of the well-known comedian, who has a large following among picturegoers. Mr. Quirk has played with Pathe, with Solax and with the Universal.

MR. LYTTON RETURNS FROM VACATION.

L. Rogers Lytton, the well-known Vitagraph director and player, is back at work after a four weeks' vacation on the island of Bermuda.

The Casket Scene from "The Merchant of Venice," a Universal Feature Under the Gold Seal Brand.

"A Celebrated Case"

A Four-Part Kalem Production of the Well Known French Play Loses None of the Virility of the Original.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS is a most ambitious and altogether creditable effort to produce a famous French play in films. The effort is on the whole successful. The spectacular effects are very strong, well conceived and well executed, while the settings are superb throughout. The pictures were made in Florida, but the scenes are so well and artistically chosen that one is, throughout, reminded of La Belle France.

Scene from "A Celebrated Case" (Kalem).

In the course of the action scenes from the battle of Fontenoy are introduced. They afford eloquent testimony of the gigantic progress that has been made in the reproduction of historic battles. The situations in this feature are at times very tense. Indeed, the story was originally written for the legitimate stage and is said to have had a remarkable run in France. The acting is up to the true Kalem standard. Alice Joyce, who never fails to grace and adorn the picture in which she appears, has a comparatively small part but displays her best skill in the rendition of it. The plot, woven by a practiced hand, grows more interesting not to say mystifying as the action advances, and this surely is a good test of its quality.

Scene from "A Celebrated Case" (Kalem).

It would be impossible to enumerate all the fine points of the production within the limits of this review, but one or two may be mentioned as typical of the general excellence of the play. The scene showing the interior of the gallery in which the innocent father of Adrienne is toiling his life away is most impressive and novel. It reminded me of a leaf taken from the book of human cruelties and barbarities. A word of praise is due to the correctness of the military uniforms of both the French and the British contingents in the historic battle. Historic accuracy is rarely found in motion picture films—the more's the pity—but the Kalems have always aimed at perfection in this regard and it is common knowledge that their aim has been uniformly good.

It is but just in an appreciation of this feature to give a special word or two to the powerful climax in the last scene. The last two reels all work toward this strong denouement, which comes with a most dramatic suddenness. There are some minor defects. I believe that the early portions of the feature might have been compressed, but it may well be urged that the condensation would have resulted in the loss of atmosphere.

The story told in outline is as follows: Jean Renaud, a soldier in the French army, is married to Madeline Renaud, a foster-sister of the Duchess d'Aubeterre. Madeline, on her marriage to Jean, has received a precious locket as a wedding present from her noble foster-sister. Jean Renaud is called to the front and his company takes part in the battle of Fontenoy. Count de Mornay, a nobleman, has been exiled by the king. His life is in danger and he decides upon a hasty flight. Before leaving he places his infant daughter in the care of the Chanoinesse of the College d'Hyereo. On his flight the Count de Mornay is caught between the fires of the two contending armies at Fontenoy and falls mortally wounded from his horse. A hyena of the battlefield seeks to rob him, but is frightened away by Renaud, who comforts the dying moments of the Count. The latter gives him his purse as a reward and asks him to preserve for the future heir of the house the jewels and papers of the house of Mornay. Renaud accepts the mission and steals away from his command to place the papers and jewels in the care of his wife. Lazare, the foiled hyena of the battlefield, has seen all and follows Renaud to his home. Renaud delivers the precious objects to his wife commanding her to keep them sacredly against his return and then hurries back to his place in the ranks. Lazare steals into Renaud's house and demands the jewels and papers. Madeline, though no match for the burly villain, refuses and resists. Her cries of help are heard by her five year old daughter who, jumping out of her bed, rushes to the door of her room and joins in the cries of her mother. The villain under horrible threats compels the mother to quiet the girl by saying: "Keep still, your papa is with me." The child then keeps quiet and the villain renews his demands for the jewels. A struggle ensues and Lazare stabs the unfortunate Madeline to death. The next moment the child enters and sees her mother dead on the floor. She is disconsolate and as the neighbors arrive, attracted by her cries, she tells them that "papa was the last person with mamma." Renaud in the meantime has captured a British standard in the battle at Fontenoy and has been commended in the ranks for his bravery. A few moments later a magistrate appears from Renaud's native village, accompanied by little Adrienne. Renaud is accused of murder and his little daughter unwittingly is the most damning witness against him. A kindhearted Irish sergeant assumes the care of Adrienne, while poor Renaud is condemned to serve in the galleys for life. Adrienne is adopted by the Duchess d'Aubeterre and her life is under this black shadow of her father's supposed crime. Lazare, the villain, now thinks the time is ripe to claim the estates of Mornay, whose exile has been revoked by a royal order. Lazare seems to triumph until confronted by the Chanoinesse of the College d' Hyereo. The Chanoinesse remembered Count de Mornay and she exposes the impostor. The locket on the bosom of little Adrienne establishes her identity. She recognizes in the wretched convict, who is allowed a little rest in the gardens of the d'Aubeterres, her own father. The guilt of Lazare is then discovered and everything ends very happily.

N. J. MOTION PICTURE COMMISSION MEETING.

The New Jersey Motion Picture Commission, which is drafting a new state law for the regulation of moving picture exhibitions and theaters met in the commission rooms in Newark, January 29th, and took up the detailed discussion of the first draft of the bill which it intends to introduce into the Assembly. Each item of the bill was carefully discussed and revised and then referred back to the executive committee which is to redraft the bill and present it for further discussion. Mrs. Ritter, an exhibitor from Red Bank, and the Rev. Dr. Stockton, of the Moving Picture World, were the representatives of the business present, the other members being delegates from the various civic and social service organizations of the state. The commission is making every effort to deal with the questions involved from a practical and common sense point of view, and to be fair to every interest concerned, and it earnestly asks the co-operation and support of every one both inside and outside the moving picture business in order that its work may subserve the best interests of the business itself as well as of society.

"The Ruby of Destiny"

Romance Full of Mystery and Intrigue, in Six Reels, by Warner's Features.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THIS new picture gives us a romance woven around the State Ruby of the Kingdom of Styr. It really is a mixture of old-time royal romance and of modern thrilling adventure story without sentiment or dignity; but the early parts that tell how the ruby became the State Jewel and all the scenes which refer to the Queen of Styr or her court can be dismissed. They are very poorly done; but do not really belong to the picture's story, and do not hinder it much as an offering of entertainment to the public. The adventures of the ruby and of the characters most concerned in it, after it has left the Kingdom of Styr and been brought to modern cities, such as Milan, Lucerne and Venice, are new enough and thrilling enough to attract attention, and there are enough of them to hold the attention very well. Of the quality of these adventures little need be said. This kind of picture, with its detective, its beautiful villainess, who steals the gem from the villain's accomplice, and with the hero wrongly accused, the girl he loves, is well known as a kind apart. As a whole, the picture will go well beside other good specimens of its kind. As we have said, its romantic scenes are awkwardly directed; but its adventures and its modern business in modern scenes are effectively brought out. There are some views of the city of Venice that are more lovely in tone and intimacy with the subject than any we have ever seen on any film.

Scene from "The Ruby of Destiny" (Warner's Features).

The King of Styr is dead and his oldest daughter rules. She is in love with Lieutenant Eric and makes him keeper of the crown jewels, a post of the highest honor. A count is jealous, and he soon finds that Eric is in love with the queen's sister and brings her to a trysting place of the lovers. The queen is furious and plots with the count to disgrace Eric. This is easily done. The queen steals the gem from its accustomed place and Eric is accused of the theft. The count has an accomplice who now steals it from the queen. Eric escapes from prison. The count's accomplice is now in Milan and meets a beautiful woman in a cafe. Eric is in London, and confides his troubles to a famous detective who undertakes to recover the gem for him. They come to Milan only to find that the girl has already stolen the jewel from the accomplice and departed for Lucerne. The count also comes to Milan to get the ruby. As it now stands, the girl and her gang are determined to keep the ruby; the detective, who has had a duplicate one made is as determined to get it from her and the count also is bent on stealing it. The count makes the first move; and the girl is warned by the detective. Then he makes a bargain with her, and, by promise of marriage, gets her consent to bring the gem back to Styr. Their first move is to Venice, where we follow them with the detective. Just before they start for Styr the detective changes the stone and puts the fac simile in its place. The girl finds this out; but the count wants to get her out of the way, and, in trying to double-cross her, fails to examine it. He presents the wrong stone to the queen and this is his undoing, for the detective has the real stone. Then we have the happy ending. These adventures will interest. It is an uneven but very fair feature picture.

HOFF TO BUILD $40,000 THEATER.

A $40,000 moving picture theater will be built at 178 Ocean Avenue, Jersey City, N. J., by Stephen Hoff. It will be three stories in height and of fireproof construction. It has a frontage of 57 feet and a depth of 105 feet.

"Fire and Sword"

Six-Reel Spectacular Melodrama of the Kismet Feature Film Company Lives Up to Its Title.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE six-reel subject, "Fire and Sword," of the Kismet Feature Film Company will be watched by the gallery god with real pleasure. He will find in it abundant material for several melodramas—fire, sword, lust, hate, jealousy, revenge, pursuit, battle, love. The story begins in Tangier, and is then transferred to Fez. There are flashes back to New York. Most of the action is shown in Fez. The North African atmosphere is well maintained. In view of the director's successful efforts in this particular direction there can be no harm in suggesting that some of the backgrounds have a strong resemblance to a certain part of Coney Island where Arabs much do congregate. The characters, with few exceptions, are of the dark-skinned type. The leads are played by men well made up—men who will be recognized by picturegoers as those they have often seen in white-face parts. The mob scenes contain many Arabs—there can be no mistaking that.

Scene from "Fire and Sword" (Kismet).

The picture sustains interest, certainly up to the final reel. Here it is possible to sharpen the action by a bit of pruning. The story is of Helen, an American girl, visiting in Tangier with her uncle and aunt. Seen by the grand vizier, the girl is abducted. The functionary, in manner none too gentle, tries to win her regard. In a struggle, the girl seizes a knife from the vizier's belt and tries to stab him. The official throws her to a couch, but the captive hurls him over her to the floor. Helen is then carried to Fez, where she is taken before the sultan. The latter takes her away from the vizier, which starts trouble and eventually revolt. All this time the American consul is trying to discover what has happened to the missing girl. The parents back home have been notified; a newspaper reporter, accompanied by a comedy valet, has been dispatched to Tangier to unravel the mystery.

The reporter meets a native of the town of his destination, does him a service and receives promise of help. When an expedition organized by the reporter to go to Fez gets out on the desert a band of outlaws attack and capture it. Owing to the head of the outfit being a member of an Oriental order of friendship, the reporter and his companions are not killed, but induce their captors to join them. Arrived in Fez there are many adventures, too rapid to enumerate here. There are wall scalings, hand-to-hand combats, revolution, much shooting and burning. In the end, however, the girl is released and taken in safety to Tangier, then to America, where, of course, she is betrothed to the reporter.

"Fire and Sword" is a picture as to which each exhibitor should decide for himself. It is entirely a matter of constituency. The scenes of torture, where the captured newspaper reporter is suspended by his thumbs or wrists and lifted from the floor with what purports to be a great iron ball tied to his feet, will please some in some houses. The jump of Helen from the window of the burning palace into the water will thrill all. The views of the burning town are on a scale unusual even in large productions. There are in the picture many things to praise; so also there are some to condemn. The photography is satisfactory. The subject, which was staged by T. Hayes Hunter, is being sold on the states right plan.

Hodkinson—Conservative Iconoclast.

How the Great Film War in San Francisco Was Ended and Order Brought Out of Chaos—Two Wicked Ikons: The Daily Change and the Low Admission—Interesting Predictions By a Verified Prophet.

By W. Stephen Bush.

DEAR friends of the film and liegemen to the screen, in endeavoring to introduce to you a very fine specimen of an iconoclast I must be a trifle discursive and illumine the nice old word "Ikon." An ikon, be it known, is something like an idol, an embodied superstition encrusted with the foolish veneration of the ages, a fetish, a sort of sublimated billiken. Ikons are popular in Russia and other backward countries. In such countries they are often used as a substitute for reason. A man, woman or child kisses an ikon in the morning and feels happy the rest of the day without exactly knowing why. Americans as a rule have scant respect for ikons. We are notorious for our lack of reverence. As a famous phrenologist said after looking over the crania of five thousand average Americans: "These men have a depression where their bump of awe ought to be."

Now, before throwing yourself into an attitude of patriotic hauteur, pause a moment and remember that we, too, have a few ikons "in our midst." Getting nearer home, we discover two large robust ikons right here among ourselves in the inner circles of filmdom. One of these ikons we find is labeled "Pictures Changed Daily," and the other ikon, grinning down upon us, bears this brief inscription: "Admission Five Cents." You and I and all of us have burned handfuls of incense before these ikons, nor have we failed to creak the pregnant hinges of the knee in order that as we thought "thrift may follow fawning." The worst of this quotation is the wrongness of its application. Thrift did not follow fawning upon these ikons. On the contrary, distress followed and great loss of coin.

Having thus set the stage with the ikons in full view of the audience, I now call upon William W. Hodkinson, iconoclast, to step to the center and right into the limelight. He is the man who shattered the aforesaid ikons into smithereons in the year of our Lord, 1911, in the city of San Francisco. In the month of September of that blessed year the exhibitors of San Francisco were carrying on what the reporters call "an internecine" strife. There were price cutting, murderous competition, insensate envy and all the symptoms of galloping firstrunitis. No one was making any money and the exchanges were persistently falling behind in their returns.

W. W. Hodkinson.

When this highly unpleasant posture of affairs was at its worst a young man with a scholarly, detached way of looking and speaking and a pair of mild blue eyes came into the perturbed city. Quietly he announced that, as the representative of the oldest and largest organized group of manufacturers, he had come to bring order and peace to take the place of war and chaos. Right there and then he said he was going to pulverize the two ikons heretofore mentioned. To be sure, he added, that in place of the ikons he was going to erect a monument to common sense, but he was never allowed to finish the promising part of his sentence. The cry went up among the exhibitors that their ikons were in danger and they assembled en masse in the office of the sacrilegious young man. They swore they would die in defense of their ikons. If the daring young man had received these enraged men en masse this story would never have been told. He would now be wearing the crown of martyrdom. Happily he saw the angry exhibitors one by one and one by one he convinced them that daily changes were ruinous, that repeaters were a necessary consequence of firstrunitis and that a return to two and three changes a week and a higher price of admission were the only means of salvation. Sounds very sensible when thus spread with printer's ink upon the page of white, but coming in quiet measured tones from the lips of the young man these remarks brought forth angry rejoinders with a steady undercurrent of profanity. The young man stood his ground, talking in his impersonal convincing way.

"Show me," he would say with just the faintest trace of a Socratic smile upon the somewhat ascetic lips, "how your way is better than mine and I will capitulate. I am willing to be convinced."

Then followed argument and counter argument, and presently the recalcitrant exhibitor would subside and admit that in the forum of reason the Hodkinson plan was the best.

"Well," Hodkinson would conclude, "that kind of a forum is the only forum worth talking in." Whereupon he would face the next ikon worshiper and convince him likewise. In less than a month the daily change on Market Street, and on every other street was abolished, the price was raised to a minimum of ten cents, no more than a certain number of reels was allowed and even the vaudeville houses running pictures had to come into line. Today there are mighty few houses running daily changes on the Pacific coast and there is no first-class theater in all that region which is changing its program every day. Using a far smaller output of reels than his predecessor, Hodkinson turned a far larger amount into the treasury of his group.

Just now Hodkinson is in New York looking the East over and gathering knowledge at the source. I found him in the World's Tower Building the other day and I stayed with him from 10 A. M. to 7 P. M., mostly listening and going over a trunkful of data which Hodkinson, in his careful methodical way, had collated in the course of years. Not the least interesting documents were the big stack of letters from exhibitors on the Coast, who had become converts to the Hodkinson system of distributing and exhibiting motion pictures. Hodkinson had asked them why they preferred to stick to the less frequent change and why they would not want to go back to the daily change.

Hodkinson believes that the numbers of people able to appreciate and willing to pay for a higher grade of pictures is constantly on the increase.

"The motion picture at first" said he "was wedded to the nickel. The public with the nickel responded most quickly to the motien picture. I suppose we will always have the nickoledon with us. But why cater to this cheap business exclusively or even very largely. The public want more quality. The demand is not any more for newer but strictly for better pictures. If we had the proper uniform quality the daily change would soon come to an end. The daily change is death to quality. It encourages overproduction. The producer has not the time to put quality into his pictures. On a nickel basis of admission he has in these latter days no adequate returns for his product. The new condition of things will be upon us over night. New theaters devoted to a high-class clientele will spring up everywhere and they will demand quality. The cheap business will still be with us, but I do not believe it will be either possible or profitable to go after the good and after the cheap business at the same time and to be successful in both.

"This is not a mere theory, I have proved it to be a fact.

On the Coast today the high-class theaters are all devoted to quality pictures and with the quality pictures have come the better prices. There are scores of thousands of people who like to go to their motion picture entertainment in surroundings that are in harmony with cultured taste and refined manners. The day will come—it is at hand now—when every large city will have this ultimate motion picture theater. These theaters will demand not quantity but strict quality. Audiences are very discriminating nowadays. The huge amount of regular releases produced under the old system of things will go begging or stay on the shelves. I have tried out this question of exacting higher prices for higher grades of pictures and I have had great opportunities of testing the thing as the representative of one of the organized groups of producers. The public respond very swiftly to every improvement in quality. Commercially, of course, the favoring of quality and the rejection of the cheap stuff, except for the cheap and diminishing business, will be the greatest blessing for the industry. The producer will have time to put quality into his pictures owing to the longer runs of his pictures and he will make more money out of them naturally."

Mr. Hodkinson showed me a resolution passed unanimously by the organized exhibitors of California, thanking him for putting the exhibiting and distributing branches on a sound basis and professing an implicit faith in his judgment and his fairness. He also showed me letters from devoted exhibitors in every part of the Coast urging him to do for the East what he had done for them. Be it understood that Hodkinson's dealings with exhibitors, or with exchanges, are based on a rigid code of ethics. He is equitable by nature. When he thought that hardships were being imposed on the exhibitors he pleaded their cause with his employers and likewise when exhibitors would be carried away to harsh judgments by gusts of passion, he would bring them back to reason.

"Isn't it ridiculous," he continued, "this craze for daily changes. Take this illustration. A play has a great run on Broadway. It holds the boards for months. This same play goes out to the smaller cities and is shown for just one night. A filmplay, into which perhaps a good deal of money and time has been put, runs for one single solitary day in Nek York and then it stays for a week and sometimes for longer in a smaller city. We are at the present still in a state of chaos and fermentation. The clarification, however, has begun. It will mean the triumph of quality and nothing else. I have studied film conditions for a solid seven years, I have watched developments and often forecast results to the letter, and I am quite sure of these, my latest predictions: that overproduction will cease, that the single reel will suffer from the law of diminishing returns and will lose its prestige more and more, and that success in this business will be measured absolutely by quality."

"Do you propose to apply your ideas and plans here in the East?" I asked Mr. Hodkinson, to which he replied somewhat enigmatically:

"Wait and see."

Filmdom will hear from William W. Hodkinson. This is one of the best bets in the kinematographic "futures."

TO BUILD NEW THEATER.

Henry Burge, proprietor of the Pastime moving picture theater, on State Street, Hammond, Mo., is to build two picture houses, one at Collinsville, and the other at Edwardsville, suburbs of St. Louis. Mr. Burge is having great success with his Pastime.

NEW THEATER AT CLINTON, IOWA.

The Lyons Investment Company, of Clinton, Ia., will open a new picture house on Main Street, under the name of the Parkside, in the middle of next March. The Lyons Investment Company offered a prize of $10 for the most suitable name, and it was suggested by a Mrs. W. F. Jackson who submitted the name of "Parkside."

PURCHASE GEM THEATER AT MUSKEGON, MICH.

M. D. Rathbun and M. A. Osmun, of Muskegon, Mich., have purchased the Gem Theater, on Western Avenue, that city. The new proprietors have changed the name of the house to "The Miles." The theater had been redecorated before it was reopened.

PLANS BIG PICTURE THEATER FOR MUSKEGON, MICH.

Frank H. Smith and Paul J. Schlossman, are planning to erect a big moving picture and vaudeville house in Muskegon, Mich. The house is planned to be erected in the central business section of that city. The proposed house is to have a seating capacity of 1000.

JOHN INCE.

John E. Ince comes from a family celebrated in the annals of the American stage, and is a brother of Thomas H. and Ralph Ince, noted directors with the N. Y. Motion Picture and Vitagraph companies, respectively. The Lubin player was the last to enter the field of photoplay, making his debut before the camera one and a half years ago. Ince's forceful intensely virile acting and robust personality are as potent on the screen as behind the footlights. Always having played heroic characters such as Messala in "Ben Hur," and Stephen Ghent in "The Great Divide" it is natural that Mr. Ince should find fullest expression of his individuality and temperament in dramas of the West where the conflicts involved are those of red blood and brawn. Mr. Ince's gifts as a director are not less than his art as an actor. His generalship of the army of supernumeraries employed in his Civil War production "The Price of Victory," written by Emmett Campbell Hall, established him as a director of sensational spectacles. Yet in the "Taking of Rattlesnake Bill" his acting could not have been more poignantly appealing.

John E. Ince.

DONALD CRISP.

For four months, Donald Crisp, the well known actor now appearing in Reliance pictures on the Mutual program, was compelled to work as an extra man before he gained enough recognition as a pantomimic artist to be placed on a regular salary. Although his entrance into the field of motion pictures took place five years ago and he was a Broadway favorite of acknowledged standing, he had to serve his apprenticeship and in spite of many offers to return to the stage, swallowed his pride and made good.

Donald Crisp.

After two years with the Biograph Company, however, he joined the forces of Cohan and Harris and appeared with "The Yankee Prince," "The Little Millionaire" and "Stop Thief," in which he played the leading role. Three years of the speaking drama was followed by a return to the Biograph Company, where he created many important characters in D. W. Griffith's pictures. With the Mutual Film Corporation, Mr. Crisp is still under D. W. Griffith's direction and will be seen in the Griffith picture of Paul Armstrong's drama "The Escape."

Although Mr. Crisp is still possessed of the valuable tenor voice which caused him to begin his stage career as a member of the Floradora Sextette in the original version of that musical comedy in England, he says that all his ambitions now center in the realm of the silent drama.

PLAZA TO BE REOPENED.

After having been closed for about two months, the Plaza, a moving picture theater, situated at Flatbush and Seventh Avenues, Brooklyn, N. Y., will be reopened by the Duffy estate, a client of Henry Pierson & Co., real estate brokers, which had the place for sale. The Plaza was one of the first picture houses to be opened in the Slope section of Brooklyn.

The Screen Club Ball

Another Brilliant Affair Establishes a New Record as the Premier Social Motion Picture Event.

"Once Over" by Hugh Hoffman.

THE temptation is strong for a one time press agent to revert to first principles and the use of alliteration's artful aid in describing the now famous Screen Club Ball, which took place Saturday night, January 31, and continued well on into the next month, at the Grand Central Palace, New York.

Aside from the work of the various committees there was considerable individual preliminary preparation which culminated in the grand affair at the Palace. For weeks hundreds and hundreds of ladies were devising ravishing gowns that would be in the latest style and still be within the law, the dividing line being microscopic and capable only of a Comstockian interpretation. Massage parlors and Turkish baths reaped a golden harvest, while the advance sale on silk hosiery was unprecedented. Screeners had been neglecting business for days in preparatory study of de rigeur fashions for men, up to the very day of days.

Saturday was ladies' day at the club; the first mixed gathering in the new mansion. The rooms were prettily decorated and it really was a pleasant thing to see and have the ladies there. It was a very busy place that day, but a jolly one withal.

The guests were tardy in arriving at the ball, but it may be that the crowd looked small because the hall was so large. Club members in faultless evening attire met the arriving parties until midnight when the great hall was well crowded. At a conservative estimate and with no reason for exaggerating, there were easily 3,500 people on the floor. The Palace had been decorated by a committee for that purpose and the job was well done. The boxes were done in bower fashion with rose vines as the superficial motif with rustic chairs and a table each upon which were superimposed containers of dark green to match the leaves, some bearing the name of Pommery and some Cliquot, according to the fancy of the occupant.

The boxes were populated by those prominent in motion picture and theatrical circles somewhat according to the following list:

C. J. Hite, Otis Lithographing Company, Famous Players, Thanhouser Company, World Special Film Company, Ramo Films, Willat Film Company, All-Star Company (two boxes), Harry Raver, Solax Company, Gorman Company, King Baggot, Robert Daly, Jules Burnstein, Mark Dintenfass, Eclair Company, W. F. Haddock and Jake Gerhardt, Norma Phillips, "Our Mutual Girl"; Richard Harding Davis and wife, Bessie McCoy, Augustus Thomas, Gloria-American Company, E. Roskam, Moe Streimer, Gaumont Company, Theater Film Company, Edison Company, Universal Film Company, Mutual Film Company, Kessel & Baumann, Hugh Hoffman, Vitagraph Company, Lubin Company, Pathe Company, Arthur Smallwood, Thomas Ross, Robert W. Chambers, William Collier, P. A. Powers, Warner's Features, Frank Powell, Crane Wilbur, Barry O'Neill, Alec Francis, Will Sherer, Stanley Walpole, Fred Gunning, Frank Tichnor, David Horsley and the Billboard.

A great big band of more than thirty pieces made some excellent music and gave plenty of encores. While the dancers were on the floor it was a beautiful sight. The great pillars rising from the floor at intervals gave the assemblage the appearance of some great court ball such as we sometimes see in paintings.

It's funny when you stop to think of it what changes one short year will bring about. At last year's ball the guests were admonished to dance the dances that their mothers used to dance. This year the mothers were dancing the dances that their daughters danced. At last year's ball the Directoire skirt was frowned upon. This year—well—"Votes for Women."

The grand march, that fond relic and wall-flower's delight, began as announced, but where it finished memory serves not. It was led by King Baggot, president of the club, and Miss Mary Fuller, followed by John Bunny and Miss Lottie Briscoe and Screeners and ladies in proper order. It was a very beautiful thing to look at as the lights were switched off and spotlights in many colors played fantastically upon the participants and the majestic columns. But to anyone who has the Tango bug the grand march is an awful time-killer, and it was suggested that a Tango class be held at the club at regular intervals hereafter so that by next year every Screener would be a dancer and the march could then be relegated to the limbo of terpsichorean jokes.

Sometime after midnight the souvenir program de luxe was put up at auction by King Baggot. Messrs. Kessel and Bauman, who bought last year's de luxe edition for $1000, started the bidding at that figure. It was a very spirited sale that lasted for an hour at least. The bids rose until there were combination bids and the book sold on this basis at $3,500. It becomes the property of the club library by donation of the purchasers.

In the wee early hours a straggling procession began toward the club house, where breakfast was being served. Soon the domicile was alive with merrymakers and the fun kept up well nearly all day Sunday. It was a glorious affair and a night to be marked with a red pencil. It is estimated that the club's treasury was increased $10,000 on the event.

Stella Razeto

Stella Razeto, conspicuous among a number of handsome and gifted young women at the Selig headquarters in Los Angeles, has made a name for herself as a versatile actress. She was born in San Diego, California, educated at the Girls' High School in San Francisco, and made her stage debut at the Alcazar Theater in that city. She impressed Florence Roberts, who took her to Honolulu as an ingenue in her company. After that she played in stock at the Burbank Theater in Los Angeles.

Stella Razeto.

Later she was induced to join the Majestic Company for pictures. She attracted so much attention that she was engaged as leading lady by the Kinemacolor Company in California.

Miss Razeto went to the Selig Company and demonstrated her capability as an actress, but proved excellent where deeds of daring were required, such as sliding down the mountain in a log chute—a very perilous stunt. Another dizzy feat was a trip across a canyon on a high wire cable in an ore-bucket. Miss Razeto is a dark, petite type of woman with sparkling eyes. She claims a great fondness for Cecil Bruner roses and her brand new husband, the eminent producer of the Selig Polyscope Company, Edw. J. Le Saint.

TEXAS RECEIVER'S REPORT FILED.

Receiver Wroe, who had charge of the General Film Company's branch exchanges in Texas for the past year, has filed his report and been discharged by Judge Davidson, sitting in Baumont, Texas. The report covered thirty typewritten pages, a summary of which shows the receipts to have been $586,209.51, derived as follows: Commission from handling "From Manger to the Cross," $1,000; deposits at Dallas and Houston on offices for films, $583,414.37; from Houston contingent fund, $1,000; from balance Dallas contingent fund, $499.54; from balance Houston contingent fund, $295.60. The disbursements aggregated $575,145.54, as follows: Royalties paid direct, $1,572; film rentals, $349,615.62; contingent fund, $106,973.57; merchandise, $33,623.61; receivership salaries and expenses, $83,360.74.

BIG STORM IN CALIFORNIA.

Isadore Bernstein, general manager of the Universal west coast studios, Hollywood, Cal., reports by telegraph the worst storm ever experienced at Los Angeles, Cal., confirmed by the Weather Bureau. The Universal ranch was completely cut off from communication and under water. Mr. Bernstein attempted several times to reach the ranch by both automobile and horse, but was unable to do so. His telegram stated that he was trying it again on a raft, which seems rather primitive. However, it is an improvement on swimming or walding. The Weather Bureau reports fourteen inches of rainfall this season, breaking the record for Los Angeles. Last year three inches was the record for the season. Mr. Bernstein reports, however, the backbone of the storm broken, whatever that means, all of which interferes with the making of moving pictures at the second largest location in America.

ESSANAY PICTURE GETS FLORIDA'S GOAT.

A couple of months ago the Essanay Company put out a two reel picture called "The Toll of the Marshes," a story based on the activities of alleged land swindlers who sell Florida swamp land and everglade tracts to credulous investors in the North, especially to those of limited means who later find their small fortunes and themselves tied down forever on land that will produce nothing but a beggar's living.

A Jacksonville realty publication called "Dixie" rises to the defense of that state, scoring the Essanay Company soundly for misrepresentation and for doing the state an irreparable injury from a real estate point of view. There is a kernel of consolation in this charge for if the moving picture has so much power for evil it must have an equal power for good. The remedy is obvious. There are several motion picture companies at present in Florida. Instead of invoking the wrath of the legislature upon motion pictures in general let the Florida editor and those injured by "The Toll of the Marshes" go to the motion picture producers in their state and induce them to turn out a "nice" picture that will offset the supposed damage done. This course would make it "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" according to the Scripture.

The story was written and produced by Archer McMakin, at Ithaca, N. Y., last summer.

WILLARD HOLCOMB GIVES CLEAN BILL TO PICTURE CRITICS.

Willard Holcomb, the widely liked publicity man of Kinemacolor, in a witty review in "The New York Courier and International Review" takes a fall out of some captious persons who have almost insulted him together with other critics of music and the drama. He finds that aspersions have been cast upon the clan's artistic purity and intellectual independence. We notice with pleasure that he quickly adds he is glad that the picture critics are not included in the indictment. He finds that they are quite a clan in themselves and fears that there might be something doing if they too had to go out on the warpath. We quote him from memory, but we got the gist of his remarks in the "Courier." It is true; the picture critic cannot be provincial as yet; for there is only one locality where the genus grows prolifically, and that is here in Gotham. All the professional day in and day out critics labor here and a good picture made in China is just as welcome to them as any.

CHARLES PATHE HONORED.

Famous Film Manufacturer Made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Mr. Charles Pathe, head of the great motion picture house which is known wherever pictures are shown, has been tendered by the French government the coveted decoration of the Legion of Honor and formally accepted on the 18th of January.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Pathe has been offered the same decoration before but through the modesty which is characteristic of him, has always refused it. This time the wishes of his friends and admirers prevailed.

The French government has thus recognized the man who built up a huge industry with many thousands of employees, whose name has become almost a household word all over the world, who was a pioneer in an untried field and whose g nius and efforts made the picture plays of today possible.

MONTGOMERY MAKING THINGS HUM.

Information from Jacksonville, Fla., headquarters of the Montgomery Amusement Company, reaches the World to the effect that the business of that concern has been more prosperous during the past six months than at any time in its existence. The company is still interested in the exhibition business to a very large extent, having houses in Jacksonville, and Tampa, Fla.; Atlanta, Ga., and Savannah and Columbia, S. C.

At the present time the Montgomery Amusement Company is not exploiting features as it has disposed of all subjects in which it had an interest. Negotiations are on for some spectacular productions and exhibitors will be advised when they are secured.

MORE OFFICIAL CENSORSHIP.

Governor Tener, of Pennsylvania, has finally appointed a state board of censors under the law passed more than a year ago. J. Louis Breitinger, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. E. C. Niver, of Charleroi, are the appointees.

In New Jersey a legislative measure has been prepared which authorizes the governor to appoint a board of three persons at a salary of $1,500 per year to censor all pictures shown in that state. It is proposed to charge a fee of $1 for all thousand-foot subjects and $2 for subjects exceeding one thousand feet. The bill also provides for a license fee of $25 for each picture theater in the state.

Photoplayers of All Companies Now in Florida Entertained at the Edison Studio in Jacksonville.

NEW ECLAIR OFFICES.

American Company Will Occupy Entire Floor in Leavitt Building on Forty-sixth Street.

On Monday, February 16th, the Eclair Film Company, which firm now occupies a suite of offices at 225 West 42nd Street, New York City, will move to the new Leavitt Building, at 126 West 46th Street, where they will occupy an entire floor. The increase in the sales of American-Eclair films, and the additional staff of employees which have been put on to keep pace with the work involved in their growing sales has necessitated the company's moving into quarters which will be four times the size of their present offices, and which will give them every convenience. No expense has been spared in giving the Eclair Film Company a business home which will rank second to none. There will be thirty large offices, two spacious rooms to accommodate stenographers, a reception room for visitors and an office where the Board of Directors may hold their meetings. One large room has been laid aside for the use of the office boys and telephone operators.

With their customary policy of doing things right, the Eclair Company has provided two projection rooms for the display of films. A large one fitted up in beautiful taste, while a smaller one has been reserved for the private exhibition of Eclair films to the members of the firm and their technical experts. Two operators will be constantly in readiness to show pictures, and two new Simplex machines have been installed. Large cutting and joining rooms have been provided, and additional employees will be taken on to cope with the increase in this work. There will be a shipping room with a force of clerks to expeditiously handle this end of the Eclair Film Company's business.

Fireproof vaults have been built for the storing of films, and, in addition to this, there has been a large amount of room reserved for the keeping of posters and the storing of reels, cans, etc. Taken all in all, the new offices of the Eclair Film Company will be most pretentious and beautiful.

HERBERT BRENON INJURED.

In the Making of a Picture a Glass Tank Bursts—Miss Annette Kellermann Also Hurt.

Word comes from Hamilton, Bermuda, that on the afternoon of February 3, while taking a scene in which was employed a glass tank holding 8,000 gallons, Herbert Brenon, director of the Universal-Imp Company now working in that town, was badly hurt, his removal to a hospital being deemed advisable. Miss Annette Kellermann, who was playing the lead in the picture, was also injured and taken to her hotel. The tank was part of the equipment of the Bermuda Aquarium. It seems that in one of the scenes the pressure became too great and the glass front gave way. The rush of water drew the two performers across the broken edges. Mr. Brenon was gashed seriously in the arms and legs and Miss Kellermann was badly lacerated on the left side.

No word has come up to the time of writing indicating how long the large company on the island will be delayed in the making of the feature picture on which the Imp Company has been busy for several weeks. Working with Mr. Brenon are William E. Shay and William Welch, both good actors and also screen players of experience. It is assumed that in case of the incapacity of the two principals the players named would film other stories pending the recovery of Mr. Brenon and Miss Kellermann.

UNIFORM RENTING CONTRACT PROPOSED.

Feature Film Renters Association Inc., the association of feature film exchanges in the metropolitan district, have asked their attorneys, Messrs. Graham and Stevenson, of No. 15 Broad Street, New York City, to draft a uniform contract to be used by all members of the association in dealings with exhibitors. The contract is designed to meet conditions present where features are rented to local exhibitors, or to out of town exhibitors, and it is based upon the experience of its new branch of the film exchange business.

Several meetings have been held, and the contract in its final form has been printed and copyright procured in the name of the association, so that none are permitted to use the form except members.

The president, Mr. Jules Bernstein, states that the contract has been drawn with an aim to fairness to both the exhibitor and the exchange.

EDWIN AUGUST ON VACATION.

Edwin August, writer, director and player in Universal-Powers pictures, who for the past fifteen months has been working at the coast studios of the Universal, is visiting New York and enjoying a rest. Mr. August arrived in town for the Screen Club ball, where he was kept busy greeting old friends.

GREAT BALL OF PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITORS.

Great preparations are being made for the ball of the Philadelphia exhibitors which is scheduled to take place on the 20th of February in the Horticultural Hall. The ball committee consists of M. Spiers, chairman; M. J. Walsh, John J. Connors, John F. McMahon, George Roth, Mathew Fisher, and L. Balenson. At a recent election of officers Mr. Samuel Wheeler was elected president, M. Spiers, first vice-president; Charles Rapaport, second vice-president; M. J. Walsh, treasurer; J. W. Pierce, secretary, and Mr. J. S. Greenbaum, business manager. The board of directors consists of Edward Jeffries, George Roth, and Louis Hopkins. Mr. Greenbaum called at the office of the Moving Picture World on a recent trip to New York and shook hands with all the members of the staff. He is an energetic young man and is devoting his energies to the building up of the organization with unqualified success.

PREMIUM SWINDLER ON THE COAST.

We are in receipt of the following letter from the Royal China Company, of Sebring, Ohio, which tells its own story and carries a warning to Pacific coast exhibitors:

Sebring, Ohio, Jan. 31, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—We find there is a man by the name of E. A. Boehm, with whom we have no connection, who has been calling on Motion Picture Shows, in Western territory, lately in California.

He offers a very alluring premium proposition on china dinner sets, and collects from $10.00 to $15.00 in advance, which closes the entire transaction, as far as he is concerned, as the money is never turned over to this concern, which he claims he represents.

We at one time corresponded with him, and he is using our stationery to convince the trade that he is a bona fide representative.

If you see fit to mention this in your next publication, we would suggest heading it so as to bring it to the attention o fthe concerns in the Pacific coast states.

Your co-operation in this matter will undoubtedly be an advantage to your subscribers.

Yours truly,
THE ROYAL CHINA CO.

NICHOLAS POWER SAILS.

Nicholas Power, president of the Nicholas Power Co., and inventor of the Cameragraph No. 6-A, left New York on February 2 for an extended trip, sailing on the S. S. "Rotterdam." He will visit Greece, Turkey, Jerusalem, Egypt, Italy, France and several other countries. This is the first vacation Mr. Power has taken for several years and we trust the well earned rest will prove beneficial. We wish Mr. Power Bon Voyage and a safe return.

PREPARING TO RETURN TO PARIS.

Mr. Robert Schwobthaler, the founder of the firm Raleigh and Robert, one of the pioneers in the motion picture field, is making preparations for his return to Paris. He announces that he is ready to take up suitable agencies for the other side. He is well acquainted in Europe and speaks all the principal languages. His "Greek-Bulgarian War Pictures" are meeting with great success. He is offering for sale Japan, China, Australia, South America, South Africa and Russia for the war pictures.

KINEMACOLOR ELECTS OFFICERS.

The Kinemacolor elected the following officers on February 4, 1914, for the ensuing year: President, A. P. Barnard; vice-president and general manager, William H. Hickey; vice-president, Burton J. Wescott; secretary and treasurer, Morris U. Ely; assistant treasurer, Elmer Luce. In addition to the above, the following are directors: George H. Burr; Walter D. Young, Noble Crandall, Edward Lynch, and Edward King. Charles Urban, of London, sailed for England on Wednesday, February 4th.

McCLINTIC TO MANAGE REGENT.

S. M. McClintic, whose management of the Park Theater, Park Row, New York City, has been one of the notable successes in that line of endeavor, has been selected to manage the Regent Theater, 116th Street and Seventh Avenue, New York City, succeeding S. L. Rothapfel, who has gone abroad for a tour of inspection of foreign picture theaters. Mr. McClintic assumed his new duties on February 2.

FILMS LOST OR STOLEN.

The Famous Players Film Company, of New England, announces that one set of "Checkers," five reels, have either been lost or stolen. Exhibitors and exchange men are requested to keep a lookout for the same. Any information leading to the recovery of the missing films will be appreciated by the manager of the above named company, H. Asher, 31 Beach Street, Boston, Mass.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE CRICKET ON THE HEARTH" (American).

Dickens' popular tale is done in two reels by the American Flying "A" Company, Lorimer Johnston directing.

Any one desiring to linger on the more cheerful incidents of life, away from the fatique and anguish that beset and burden most travelers on life's highway, will find in this simple tale of "love and living happy ever after" a keen delight and a warmth of cheer and pleasure. The settings have been selected with the utmost care, the costumes lend a quaint atmosphere and the dramatization is rendered in a perfectly charming manner with Sydney Ayres playing lead as Caleb Plummer, supported by Vivian Rich as Dot, Jack Richardson as old Tackleton, and others of the Johnston Company in familiar parts.

Scene from "The Cricket on the Hearth" (American)

The atmosphere is decidedly English and the titles are of the Old English style which add a novelty touch to the production. The photographic quality is par excellence and a credit to the American. This subject will be released in two parts on Monday, February 16th, 1914.

"IT WILL REPAY" (Universal).

"It Will Repay," is the title of a stirring two-reel drama, the production of which has just begun under the direction of Henry MacRae at the Universal Pacific coast studios. This picture is worthy of special mention owing to its two principal situations. It opens during a Boxer uprising in China and comes to a dramatic climax during the earthquake and subsequent destruction by fire of San Francisco.

Mr. MacRae has just completed the production of what he considers to be his masterpiece. It is entitled "A Vagabond Soldier," and is in three reels. The story does with the hair-rising adventures of a soldier of fortune. As an example of its style, in one scene a mother hides her baby in a basket and, leaving it for a moment, a half dozen lions find the child, carry the basket away and fight for the human morsel within.

"Captain Jenny, S. A.," a three-reel production, the story of which is woven around the sublime sacrifice of a Salvation Army girl, has just been completed at the Universal Pacific coast studios by Otis Turner. Herbert Rawlinson plays the leading role.

SIMPLEX NIGHT SHIFT.

Beginning January 26th, the factory of the Precision Machine Company established a night shift, working from 6 o'clock P. M. to 6 o'clock A. M. It is believed that this is the first time this has occurred in the motion picture machine business. The influx of orders for the Simplex projector has determined this for an indefinite period.

CONSOLIDATION OF FEATURE EXCHANGES.

Beginning February 1, the McIntire & Richter Exchange, New York, will be consolidated with the A. B. C. and Regal Feature Film Co., of which Nicholas Kessel has been proprietor.

The new exchange will be conducted under the name of the Regal Feature Film Co., Inc., the office of which will be at 381 Sixth Avenue, New York City. As both the A. B. C. and Regal and Mr. Richter own quite a number of state right productions they feel that by combining they can give exhibitors better service and a larger variety of features to select from.

"THE MASSACRE" (Two-Part Biograph).

"The Massacre," a two-reel Biograph, already released in Europe, and declared by European exhibitors to be the best Biograph exhibited, will have its initial release in the United States and Canada, Thursday, February 26th, when it will take the place of the usual single release of that date. The film depicts the struggles of the early settlers in the Northwest in their conflict with the fierce Indian tribes of that time and period, presenting as far as is possible a reproduction of actual scenes. In the story, which at no moment is lost to the spectator, in spite of the many thrilling battle scenes and action, it is shown how an Indian scout remained true to his trust in protecting the child of the woman he had loved and lost. The child grown, the love felt for the mother returns, but a stranger again robs the man of his cherished love. On the plain the scout is called to prove his trust. The husband is called away, and the maddening Indians move closer and closer around the helpless, fast narrowing circle. There on the plain, in one of the fiercest battles of the period, the scout proves true to his trust.

Scene from "The Massacre" (Biograph).

"THE WIFE" (Beauty Films).

A "Beauty" production that gives Harry Pollard and Margarita Fischer an unusual opportunity to give free reign to their histrionic ability. Intense dramatic situations are handled with such grace and ease as to eliminate all semblance of "acting." They live their parts with unwonted realism that is sublime and touches the heart and gives rise to a natural flow of sentiment on the part of the spectator. The final scene reproduces a thrilling display of storm and lightning as the figure of the woman is exposed to the elements. Released February 11th, 1914.

"IN THE MESH OF HER HAIR" (Pathe).

There is a marked change in Pathe quality of late and it is very noticeable in the two-reel release of February 7, called "In the Mesh of Her Hair." One striking feature of it is a searchlight hunt for the hero who, in a fit of semi-madness, has cast himself from a Sound steamer. He had loved a fisher girl and, thinking her dead, was on his way back to her island home. He was hearing in his mind the tap-tap-tap of her old father's cane. The old man was on the same boat. The younger man gets a glimpse of him and, thinks it is a ghost and at once leaps overboard. Eleanor Woodruff plays the girl with convincing grace. She is floating alone in an open boat on the Sound and it is she who finally finds the man madly swimming through the reeds. Irving Cummings, in the role of the young man, gives another of his fine portrayals. It is a picture to attract attention.

Scene from "In the Mesh of Her Hair" (Pathe).

"LOVE'S VICTORY" (Victor).

This is the second two-reel play produced by Frank Crane since his joining the Universal. "Love's Victory" is one of the most distinctive, delightful dramas, with a vein of humor running through the whole, that it has been our pleasure to witness in sometime. There is pith to the story—a real, live plot with situations that are out of the beaten path.

And then there is another feature that should make this play doubly interesting and attractive. It is the first play in which Alexander Gaden, new Imp leading man, appears. Miss Grandin, who plays the young wife, is supreme in her part.

Scene from "Love's Victory" (Victor).

"Love's Victory" tells the story of a young bride who goes out to work beside her husband to keep the wolf from the door, and the consequent complications that arise when the employer attempts to shoulder the blame for a forged check on her husband. It points out that love, when of the right sort, discards all suspicion, overcomes all difficulties in the end. The spirit which permeates the piece is of such to leave a warm glow in the heart of one—a smile of satisfaction at having seen something really worth while. It will be released February 20th.

BOYD MARSHALL DENIES.

The other week the Princess Company, at New Rochelle, sent out a story, which some of the papers fell for, on the speech of Boyd Marshall, their leading man, in favor of Sunday closing of picture shows, before the Woman's Club of New Rochelle. It seems that the press department of the Princess Company was in error about the speech ascribed to Mr. Marshall. That player is now quoted as saying: "It would likely have been a novelty for a man who gets his living from the movies, to address a public body in behalf of an ordinance that would forbid their exhibition at any time, but I wouldn't be novel that way! I merely advocated an editing of Sunday programs that would result in exhibitions that were more or less educational in nature. If the ministers are against the showing of red-blooded dramas on this day, we can give them light drama of an educational character or straight educational pictures, for certainly there are enough films of that kind to go around."

"OUT OF THE DEPTHS" (Lubin).

A powerful two-reel drama with many trials caused by a mystery that takes years to solve, but in the end brings vindication and happiness to a worthy pair of lovers. The atmosphere is true to life in California, with a slight suggestion of the gambling room.

John Harvey is paying teller at the National Bank of California; he is in love with Vera, daughter of Albert Rogers, the president, who is disposed to look favorably upon the match, until one night he sees John in a gambling room and a little the worse for liquor. The president takes Harvey to task and receives a promise that the circumstance will not again occur. Rogers restores John to favor, but still has a slight distrust of the boy. Tom Carr, the faithful old watchman, lives with his widowed daughter, Clara, and idolizes his little grandchild, Allie, of whom he is also very fond. At a meeting of the directors it is resolved that Carr is getting a little too old for the post, and the watchman is dismissed. John is sent with a thousand dollars to take up a note, and on his way meets Carr, who tells him that Allie is very ill, and that since his discharge poverty has gotten the family in its grasp. John calls to see the little girl and offers aid. On leaving, he discovers that the thousand dollars has disappeared. Knowing that he will be suspected of the theft, he determines to go away and enlists in the navy. Some time after, the mystery is solved, John is vindicated, and returns to a happy reunion with his sweetheart.

Scene from "Out of the Depths" (Lubin).

"ATLANTIS" FOR CANADA.

The sole Canadian rights for the Great Northern Film Company's widely-heralded, six-reel production of "Atlantis" have been acquired by the International Feature Film Corporation, Limited, of Montreal, Que. Herbert Lubin, president and general manager of the Canadian concern during a recent visit to New York, entered into preliminary negotiations with General Manager Oes, of the Great Northern, ano during the past week the transaction was finally closed. Mr. Lubin and his associates are veterans in the film business and they are making preparations to give "Atlantis" an out of the ordinary publicity campaign throughout the dominion. The film version of Gerhardt Hauptmann's stirring novel already has been widely exploited in this country and Canada and the International Corporation proposes to make the advent of this feature one of the film sensations of the decade.

"LET NO MAN ESCAPE" (Essanay).

The story of "Let No Man Escape," is based on the motto of the modern efficient police department "Let No Man Escape," and through which there is interwoven a man's faith in God, the Omnipotent, and the strength in his own convictions of his innocence.

There is more or less of the romantic connected to this realistic drama that makes it interesting as well as exciting. William Bailey, Essanay's versatile artist has a vehicle in this play for the very highest expression of his powers, while Richard C. Travers portrays the role of Brannon with the vim and vigor that puts the realism into the production. It is needless to say that Ruth Stonehouse does admirably, as she always registers well.

Scene from "Let No Man Escape" (Essanay).

There is intense interest sustained through the entire production, while the piece is fairly filled with the feeling of admiration, anger, hate, agitation, tenderness, compassion, excitement, pathos, sympathy—in fact one feeling follows another in such rapid panorama that the audience will be fairly "swept off their feet."

The photography is unparalleled—rarely have we seen such beautiful examples in the art of cinematography. This picture will please both from the scientific standpoint and from the capable manner in which the piece has been produced and portrayed. The production is booked for release Friday, February 27th.

HUGH FORD JOINS FAMOUS PLAYERS.

Hugh Ford, the well-known theatrical producer, who together with Frederick Stanhope and Edward A. Morange recently became allied with the Famous Players Film Company to collaborate on the production of spectacular film subjects, left New York, January 30th, for the Los Angeles studio of the Famous Players, to make preparations for the production of "The Silver King," the noted play by Sir Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. Ford has had as extensive an experience in the producing of plays and large spectacles as any producer of our time.

Hugh Ford.

With Edwin S. Porter, technical director of the Famous Players, he will organize a company to enact this play, which in the course of the production will go to Europe for the exact atmosphere in which the action occurs. This play will be the first of a series of productions with which Mr. Ford will be identified.

EDMUND BREESE IN "THE MASTER MIND."

Edmund Breese, who starred in the piece through its metropolitan run, has been engaged by the Lasky Feature Play Company to play his original role in "The Master Mind" before the camera. Mr. Breese was on the point of beginning rehearsals in a new play, but postponed this in favor of the moving picture production of his former vehicle.

Edmund Breese.

As many of the original cast as can be secured, will be engaged by the Lasky concern, and the production, the scenario for which is being written by Mr. Breese himself, will be made at the Lasky studios, at Hollywood, California and will be staged by Cecil B. De Mille and Oscar Apfel.

The Lasky concern now has under contract and option, enough dramatic successes to keep two companies busy two entire years. The policy of this concern will be to devote from four to six weeks to each production, to concentrate the efforts of the entire organization on one production and to release one feature a month.

NEW KINEMACOLOR PICTURES OF BALKAN WARS.

Colonel John De Loris, late of the Grecian Army, and at present associated with Feiber & Shea, Feature Films, of 1493 Broadway, New York City, arrived from Europe on February 4th with six new reels of Kinemacolor film of the Balkan wars. Three of these deal with the first struggle, and show new views of the taking of Salonika and Janina by the Greeks, also the last stand of the Turkish forces in Adrianople. There is said to be a scene in this latter film with 25,000 Turks in the field of vision.

Perhaps the three films dealing with the later struggle against Bulgaria will attract more notice. One reel shows a naval battle with the fleet of Greece against the fortifications of Port Largo, a town near Cavalla to the east of Salonika. The bombardment makes a splendid spectacle, and is followed by the landing of the Greek marines. Another film shows the Servian assault on Istep. Here the Bulgars were strongly intrenched. The country is rugged. There were three assaults upon the fortifications, from which the Servians were dislodged twice, and at length were victorious. This, we are told, is a startling picture of terrific modern warfare. And even more terrible is the picture of the great battle of Kilkis, a village in Macedonia where the Greek soldiers overcame the Bulgarians. Here the feature is a thrilling cavalry charge in which, with perfect horsemanship and undaunted courage, the Greek officers outrode their men and were picked off by the riflemen far in advance of the main body.

"BETWEEN SAVAGE AND TIGER" (Cines-Kleine).

One of the most daring attempts to use wild animals in pictures is George Kleine's latest masterpiece from the Cines studios in Rome. The title of this six-part feature is "Between Savage and Tiger." Three royal Bengal tigers meet death in the film. Anthony Novelli, Cines' leading man, does some rarely hazardous feats, and has two very narrow escapes from injury.

One of the reels contains a bit of business quite new in motion pictures. Hanging from the lower limb of a tree, Novelli watches a rider dashing toward him. Suddenly letting his legs down, he curls them about the neck of the rider, neatly lifting him from the saddle. Another extremely clever feat is seen in the production of the great fire-at-sea scene, in which several hundred women and children leap into the water.

HOW ONE STUDIO GREW.

When the Majestic Company arrived at Los Angeles, the studio stage was only 22 by 35 feet. Constant additions have resulted in a stage of 110 by 55 feet, while an enormous new stage in now in process of construction, so that the Majestic has now one of the largest plants in Southern California.

MUTUAL HAS ROOSEVELT PICTURES.

The Mutual Film Corporation was the only picture concern to send its camera men with Colonel Roosevelt on his South American trip. The result in three intensely interesting reels is about to be released.

In the Mutual's party on the journey, besides Carl Von Hoffman, the daring war correspondent-camera man, were two special envoys, John J. McGovern, a Wall Street broker, and J. Howard Mason, who had been associated with Marconi in wireless telegraphy. They succeeded in securing the most interesting scenes on the steamer on the way down and in South America, also.

Aside from the great interest in the Colonel's personality, the film will prove especially attractive from an educational standpoint, showing as it shows the intimate side of Brazil, which has never before been shown on the screen, the leper colony at Trinidad, and many beautiful South American nature pictures.

In the Colonel's exploration party are to be seen Anthony Fiala, the Arctic explorer; Dr. George Cherry; the Rev. Father Albert Zahn, who has traveled 500,000 miles in the interest of science; Frank Harper, the Colonel's secretary; Dr. Leo Miller, of the Rockefeller Institute, besides Mrs. Roosevelt, Kermit Roosevelt, and Miss Margaret Roosevelt, a niece of the Colonel's, who died on her return from the journey.

TURNER TWINS IN THANHOUSER FILMS.

The little tow-headed Turner Twins have left the musical comedy stage for pictures. The little apples of Valeska Surratt's eye have joined the brigade of New Rochelle youngsters. With the Kidlet, the Twins, Marie Eline, Leland and Dorothy Benham, the yellow topped Turners are in "fast company" and on their youthful mettle all the time.

The Turner Twins.

Their debut comes in "A Can of Baked Beans," a February Thanhouser. For the sake of readers who never "caught" the Turners in a musical show, let it be said that they are boys, of course. The "of course" is added to impress that the original Thanhouser Twins are girls and the engagement of the Turner lads is in no way intended to interfere with them.

"A FLIGHT FOR LIFE" CHANGED TO "WON IN THE CLOUDS."

The name of Otis Turner's Universal picture "A Flight for Life," a three-reel story of South African adventure in which Roy Knabenshue's big dirigible balloon plays a conspicuous part, has been changed to "Won In the Clouds."

For the first time in many years Otis Turner appears upon the screen in his own production. He did not come as a matter of his own wishes but as a necessity. On short notice he had to have an actor who could play the part of a banker. On the spur of the moment he could find no one who suited him, so he played the part himself.

NEW "AMERICAN" SCENARIO EDITOR.

F. E. Wall has been engaged as scenario editor at the Flying A" studios, Santa Barbara, California. Mr. Wall wrote "The Dream Child," a two-part production, produced by Thos. Ricketts and scheduled for early release.

PRINCESS RED WING INJURED.

The accompanying photograph from the Lasky headquarters at Lasar, Utah, showing the death of Nat-U-Rich, wife of the "Squaw Man" in Edwin Milton Royle's play of that name, was made more realistic by the accidental shooting in the arm of Princess Red Wing, the prominent photoplay actress, who is appearing in the part of Nat-U-Rich for the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. No explanation is made as to how the revolver happened to be loaded. The bullet inflicted a slight flesh wound in the Indian girl's left arm, but she went through the scene without any demonstration of pain or injury. When the scene was completed, however, Red Wing showed a badly swollen and bloody arm. It was the first serious accident during the nine weeks Lasky's company has been working before the camera.

The Death of Nat-U-Rich from "The Squaw Man."

MISS ALMA TAYLOR.

Premier Actress of the Hepworth Stock Company, London.

THE leading roles in the feature productions of Hepworth's, London, are portrayed with rare and exquisite skill by Miss Alma Taylor. Her latest characterization as Molly in the two-reel feature, "Blind Fate," places her among the brightest stars in the motion picture firmament. The part is an exceptionally difficult one because of the fact that the girl is supposed to be blind and because there are several very emotional scenes. Coupled with her remarkable ability before the camera, Miss Taylor is possessed with striking beauty, making her a valuable asset to the Hepworth Stock Company.

Alma Taylor.

It is appropriate to mention here the growing popularity of the Hepworth product in America. Beginning with the justly meritorious "David Copperfield," which was a gem of artistic picture making, Mr. Blinkhorn, the American agent, has offered a number of features from the house of Hepworth that have been truly commendable. A noteworthy subject was "The Vicar of Wakefield," a delightful picture version of the famous story of the same title. Whatever may have rested upon the English producers in the way of odium because of inferior work in the past, Hepworth has done much to lift that burden. More of his good work will be welcome on this side.

MISS TSURA AOKI, JAPANESE ACTRESS.

Lovers of motion pictures may soon see a most interesting actress in the Mutual "movies," Miss Tsura Aoki, a Japanese star of recognized ability in her own country, is competing for film honors. She was about to enter the vaudeville field in America when the Majestic Company induced her to star in a photoplay entitled "The Oath of Tsura San," which she did with immediate success. Thomas Ince saw her and lost no time in securing her services for five new dramas to be presented by the New York Motion Picture Company, in which she will be featured in leading parts. Aside from her talent, Miss Aoki is a person of consequence in Japan, being a near relative of Viscount Aoki, formerly Japanese Ambassador to the United States.

STATE RIGHT STUFF WITH LOCAL INTEREST.

The Imperial Motion Picture Company, of New York, is working on a state right feature along unique lines in that the feature will have a local interest for each state in which it is exhibited. It will be a story of convict life entitled "The Governor's Pardon," and for each state the governor of that state will be shown signing the pardon.

The Imperial Company is at present in Norfolk, Virginia, where they arrived on the steamer Monroe just before that vessel put to sea on its fatal voyage. The company is under the direction of James Gordon a well known member of the Screen Club.

ASCHER AND GOLDREYER FORM PARTNERSHIP.

Sidney Ascher, president of the New York Motion Picture Exhibitors' Board of Trade and vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and Chas. A. Goldreyer, president of the Goldreyer Amusement Company, have entered into partnership as Ascher & Goldreyer, Inc., with executive offices at 220 West 42nd Street. Negotiations are under way at the present time for the purchase of several spectacular and thrilling features, all of the four, five and six reel variety.

LOTTIE BRISCOE A MAGNET FOR ARTIST.

Mr. Albert Shore, the well known artist of New York, and the winner of the Scott Gold Medal, presented by the city of Philadelphia, was so struck with the appearance of Miss Lottie Briscoe, in the "Parasite," Lubin's recent most successful release, that he got into communication with her and requested Miss Briscoe to sit for him as his model for his entry for the forthcoming Art League Exhibition, which will be held in New York this summer. She consented, and is at present posing for Mr. Shore for a painting which may be called "A Thoughtful Maiden" or "Thoughts Afar."

JOSEPH KLOTZ ON WESTERN TRIP.

Joseph Klotz, the treasurer of the True Features Company, has started on a trip which will take him through the entire West and Southwest. He will stop at all the principal cities in that territory and try to make the quality of True Features known as widely as possible. True Features have recently enlarged their offices and increased their capitalization. Mr. Klotz expects to return before the end of February.

"THE SACRIFICE" (Beauty Films).

Another "Beauty" soon to be released. This subject is enacted with an earnestness and sincerity that lends a realism devoid of affectation and unnatural presentation. A page from life's history of many a home and will give food for thought to some who perhaps are today suffering untold agony from causes similar to those portrayed in this subject. Margarita Fischer plays the lead and Harry Pollard, who is the producer, supports her very ably.

DOWLAN SECURED BY UNIVERSAL.

William C. Dowlan, for years one of the most popular leading men in western stock and leading man with Milton Fahrney's old Nestor company, has been engaged by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to play romantic and juvenile leads in Allan Dwan's Gold Seal company at the Universal Pacific Coast studios.

CHARLES ABRAMS FINDS BUSINESS GOOD.

Under date of February 2, Charles Abrams sends in word from Cleveland that business with him is humming. He left New York on January 27th and visited Buffalo and Pittsburgh. In Cleveland he found conditions so promising that he opened an office. It was his intention to go to Indianapolis before returning to New York. Mr. Abrams, at the time of writing, was still smarting under his disappointment at not being able to be present at the Screen Club ball.

DECORATE YOUR STAGE.

Much has been written and printed in the Moving Picture World regarding the proper setting of the picture screen—how to frame the picture in the most artistic manner. There are, doubtless, many Rothapfels in the embryo who would do something out of the ordinary if they had the right material at hand to work with. It is not an easy matter to obtain just what is wanted at all times and in all places, but a broad ray of hope is offered by Gustave Schroeder, a manufacturer of artificial flowers and decorations who is located at Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Schroeder offers his proposition in an advertisement on another page in this issue in which he gives some details. At Cincinnati two specimens of his work were exhibited and created considerable comment among exhibitors present because of their beauty and novelty. They were clusters of flowers illuminated by small electric lights with beautiful effect.

These decorative effects are already being used by Mr. Kunsky in his Empire theater and Garden theater in Detroit, Mich., and by A. J. Gilligham in his new Idlehour theater at Grand Rapids, Mich. It is reported that the try-outs at these houses have been very successful. Exhibitors should write to Mr. Schroeder, 1524 Prospect Avenue, Cleveland, and get full particulars concerning his new product.

GREGORY MADE AIDE TO FLEMING.

Carl L. Gregory, who from its beginning has been identified with the Thanhouser Company in various capacities, has been promoted to the position of assistant to Carroll Fleming, producer of the more ambitious multiple reel plays of that company which are known as the Thanhouser "Big Productions." Lately Mr. Gregory has been a director of the Princess films and is one of the few who can direct and operate his own camera at the same time.

THEATER CHANGES HANDS.

Iorio Bros., who have been the proprietors of the Photoplay Theater in Flemington, N. J., for several years past, have sold the house to Charles B. Fithian, of Haddonfield, N. J. The theater has a seating capacity of 500.

PICTURE THEATER ON OLD LOG CABIN SITE.

Ed. J. Caldwell, Danville, Ind., has purchased the site on which the old log cabin, that city, has been standing for the past ninety-three years. On it he will erect a moving picture theater. The old cabin will be erected in the public park in Danville, and will be preserved as a relic. Danville has a population of about 2,300.

Notes of the Trade.

MISS ETHEL CLAYTON, now playing leads in the Lubin productions of the Charles Klein plays, is an enthusiastic motorist. She really owns a car which she values all the more because purchased with her savings. When not at the studio the actress can be seen spinning through the park in her gray-and-red motor at a great rate of speed.

* * *

The expose of the true historical facts connected with the career of Judas Iscariot and Mary Magdalene and the delicacy with which the subject is handled in "Mary Magdalene" (Kennedy Features), places this film far above the average in both interesting and entertaining worth.

* * *

Richard L. Johnston, a Stanford student, made a visit to Santa Barbara. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorimer Johnston of the "Flying A" staff. The younger Johnston frequently grows ecstatic over the beautiful grounds and environment of the American studios.

* * *

J. Warren Kerrigan, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has been notified by the editor of the Ladies' World that he is in the lead in the moving picture contest, which is being conducted by that publication.

* * *

The twenty-fourth branch office of Warner's Features, Inc., was opened in Detroit last week at 30 Campau Building, under the management of D. Broderick, an old hand at the exchange game.

* * *

When Thomas Hardy, the celebrated novelist, saw the Famous Players production of his masterpiece, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," he said—according to the London Post—"That it was a very fine production and showed the high perfection to which the cinematograph had come."

* * *

Sixty-three attentive listeners, with Rosemary Theby, of the Lubin Company, as the speaker, and the trials, tribulations and compensations of a film favorite—as the subject—thus was the situation at the annual dinner of the Studio Club, in New York, last week.

* * *

Tom Ricketts, "Flying A" producer, is working on "Out of Nazareth," a script by Marc Edmond Jones. Nazareth is a hamlet on the New England Coast and not the one of the Holy Land.

* * *

The interior of the Temple of Dagon, the largest interior set ever built by a motion picture company, has just been completed at the Universal

Pacific Coast studios. This set is to be used in the six-reel production of "Samson," in which J. Warren Kerrigan is featured under the direction of J. Farrell MacDonald.

* * *

Two changes were made the past week in Warner's branch managers. S. B. Kramer replaces W. H. Lawrence in Indianapolis, and J. J. Noecker, formerly manager of the Swanson-Crawford Exchange in St. Louis, is the new Warner manager in that city.

* * *

January 21st, Louis Joseph Vance, author of "The Day of Days," which has just been released by the Famous Players, wrote that concern as follows: "This afternoon, for the first time, I witnessed a run of your film version of my story, 'The Day of Days,' and I hope you may care to learn how thoroughly pleased I was."

* * *

William V. Hart, who is said to have the personal acquaintance of more motion picture theater managers in the United States than any other man his size, has been transferred from the New York Mutual Exchange to Springfield, Mass., as manager of the Mutual Exchange in that city.

* * *

Joseph W. Smiley, of the Lubin staff of directors, has just finished the production of a picture upon which he expended even more than his customary energy and care. It is a big story—vigorous, yet full of heart interest, and will probably be released in three reels—"The Root of Evil," by Herbert Lusk.

* * *

In the three-reel production, "The Call of the Traumerei," by the American Film Mfg. Co., Lorimer Johnston is reproducing, as closely as possible, the Portola-Lonore of San Francisco, famous to all tourists. One hundred people will be on the stage, and a large orchestra will participate in the program while the pictures are being made.

* * *

A three-reel drama of the Revolutionary War, entitled "Washington at Valley Forge," is in the course of production at the Universal Pacific Coast studios, and is under the direction of Francis Ford. The story was written by Grace Cunard, Mr. Ford's leading woman.

* * *

Romaine Fielding's first appearance before the screen was made recently at the opening of the superb new Queen Theater, at Houston, Texas. The mayor, and many prominent citizens who motored to Galveston, where Mr. Fielding's studios are now located, induced him to assist in the festivities.

* * *

The Kinemacolor Company of America is providing the remarkable program of natural color motion pictures at the Park Theater, New York, which proudly claims to be the "picture palace de luxe" of Columbus Circle.

* * *

Fred Wright, Pathe director at the St. Augustine studio, says they have been having some exciting times down there in their animal pictures. In a big feature comedy, called "Binks' African Hunt," Lillian Wiggins, after being chased through the house by a lion, takes refuge on the top of a table. Walter Seymour, as leading man, entered the window to rescue beauty in distress, and catching up Miss Wiggins, who by now was half fainting, carried her out of the window. He did so just in time, for the lion reached the window a close second.

* * *

Frank Powell, Pathe director, left for the Pathe Southern studio at St. Augustine, Fla., February 2, with Crane Wilbur, Eleanor Woodruff, Marguerite Risser, Jack Standing and cameraman Horn. Mr. Powell is getting out "Lucille," a three-reel feature, and is taking this trip to Florida for the sake of tropical backgrounds. Frank says realism is the thing, and that's what he's after.

* * *

The second release of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, "Brewster's Millions," in which Edward Abeles, the original star, is to again play the leading role, is now under way at the Lasky studio, Hollywood, Cal., and by the time "The Squaw Man" is released, will be partly completed.

* * *

The Rolands Feature Film Company has commenced a sensational picture, entitled "Trapped in the Great Metropolis." The theme treats of a young, clever girl reporter, who exposes an organization of infamous criminals. The scenes are laid in New York City, and embrace stirring situations replete with heart interest and humor. Release on or about the 15th of February.

* * *

Oscar Apfel, for five years a director with the leading motion picture producing concerns, but now permanently with the Lasky organization and located on the Pacific Coast where, in conjunction with Cecil B. De Mille, he is producing "The Squaw Man," is one of the most popular and most successful of motion picture directors.

* * *

Charles Arling, Pathe player, is one man to whom the word mother-in-law has no terrors. Last summer he was out canoeing with his wife and her mother when the canoe upset. Mrs. Arling swims and was able to make her way to the shore, but her mother was helpless. Arling safely brought his mother-in-law to the shore. The other day he received, at the Pathe studio, a handsome diamond-studded watch charm, with the inscription, "From your grateful mother-in-law." Arling says the old jokes about mother-in-laws are "way off."

* * *

The World Special Films Corporation has just acquired the rights to another great big feature film produced by the Savoia Film Company, Turin, Italy, in five parts, depicting the life of Joan of Arc, Maid of Orleans. The American rights for this film were secured through the offices of the Eclair Company.

* * *

The new Vitagraph Theater (formerly the Criterion), where this company will show its feature pictures, has been equipped with two Power's 6-A projection machines, and as the Vitagraph Company intend having this one of the best equipped motion picture theaters in the country, the order for the Power's machines speaks well for their perfect projection qualities.

Eleanor Woodruff, Pathe leading woman, is building up a popularity abroad. Pathe Frères report a growing demand from their foreign offices for films in which she appears.

* * *

Arrangements are being made by the World Special Films Corporation to handle "Joan of Arc," a stupendous five-reel Savoia production, on a larger scale than was "The Last Days of Pompeii," which was marketed through their offices, and negotiations are now pending for a showing of this film on Broadway in the near future.

* * *

Realizing the value of the big feature motion picture productions, the Keith houses at Union Square, and the Harlem Opera House have been equipped with two Power's 6-A projection machines at each theater. The Union Square Theater opened February 2nd with the Universal Film Company's big production, "Traffic in Souls."

* * *

"The Conspiracy," or "A $4,000,000 Dowry," a four-reel Paris-Eclair production, is an early release scheduled by the World Special Films Corporation.

* * *

Pearl Sindelar, Pathe leading woman, recently received an invitation from the Phi Gamma Delta College fraternity to be their guest at their convention in Atlantic City. Miss Sindelar's grandfather was one of the founders of the fraternity, and she is very popular among its members in consequence, having been entertained at their banquets several times.

* * *

J. K. Burger has resigned as auditor of the World Special Films Corporation to assume a like position with the Eclectic Film Company.

* * *

George Kleine's "The Last Days of Pompeii," which played a three-day engagement at the Saxe Lyric Theater, Minneapolis, broke the local records recently. The production showed Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, November 24, 25 and 26 to $1,800 in paid admissions. These are record figures for any motion picture in Minneapolis.

SPECIAL FILMS FOR EDUCATIONAL AND SUNDAY PROGRAMS

SEND FOR OUR CATALOGUE

THESE PICTURES ARE GUARANTEED EXCLUSIVE

THE VERO EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY

THE WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY

SLIDES 2c EACH

Typo Pads — THE MADE IN A MINUTE SLIDE

Outfit 100 — Plain, $2 a 100 — Bordered, $4 a 100

Directions — Place in typewriter and write what you wish.

A & B MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.

ATHENS, GA. — RALEIGH, N. C.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St. — Brooklyn, N. Y.

CORRESPONDENCE

LOUISVILLE.

THE Switow Amusement Company, of Indiana, and the Falls City Amusement Company, both of which control several motion picture houses, have been absorbed by the newly incorporated Switow Amusement Company, of Kentucky. The new company has a capital stock of $300,000, as against much smaller capitalizations of the two former companies. In addition to operating the numerous theaters in Kentucky and southern Indiana, formerly owned by the companies merged, the company will purchase and build a number of others, including, probably, a large house in the downtown section of Louisville. Within the next six months it is estimated by Michael Switow, the head of the company, that it will have twenty-one houses in operation. In connection with the operation of this string of houses, Mr. Switow proposes to acquire first-run feature films by purchase for the use of his string, using them afterward through a film exchange which will be formed. The larger business to be handled by the new company has resulted in an expansion of its offices, the move being made last week from 304 Realty building to a suite of three rooms on the fifth floor of the building. The officers have not yet been elected.

Simon Switow, of the Switow Amusement Company, went to Indianapolis last week for the purpose of starting negotiations for at least two houses of the company in the Hoosier capital.

The new express rates recently placed in force under an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission will prove a great help to the film exchanges and exhibitors alike, in the opinion of H. D. Ticknor, manager of the Universal Film Exchange's Louisville office. To the more distant point the reductions made amount to nearly fifty per cent. of the forwarding charges, and this will give a substantial saving in the course of a few months.

The new National Theater recently placed in operation one of the most novel electric signs in the city, in the form of an immense eagle, perched at the top of the building in front, who can be seen at night slowly flapping his wings. The National put on a five part feature production of Charles Klein's great play, "The Third Degree," last week, in connection with its usual vaudeville program.

The "Louisville plan" of urging early mailing before Christmas, which was by the use of slides in the motion picture houses, a suggestion made by Postmaster E. T. Schmitt, proved so successful in the cities where it had been tried that the department will instruct postmasters all over the country to follow the plan next Christmas. The cost of the plan in Louisville was only $19, the slides being run free of charge by the exhibitors, and the enormous rush of Christmas mailing was spread over a longer period, and with less trouble in consequence than ever before.

E. K. Lyon and H. P. Bartram, of Frankfort, Ky., operating the Grand and the Columbia picture houses, respectively, are growing used to being presented in court upon the charge of operating their houses on Sunday, and it should be added, equally used to being promptly acquitted of the charge, as far as any criminality is concerned. Both were recently acquitted by a jury in the Frankfort police court in the record time of one minute. Whether further arrests will follow, on the instigation of the crusading councilman who started the trouble, is not known, but the exhibitors are not worrying perceptibly, as the legal and public view of the matter has been effectively demonstrated to be favorable to them.

The management of the Princess Theater, the largest and finest house in Henderson, Ky., has announced that Kinemacolor pictures will hereafter be a regular part of the program. As soon as the machine can be installed, pictures in color will be run regularly in addition to the regular program.

J. S. Grimes, of Leavenworth, Ind., was in Louisville last week making arrangements for numerous improvements in his house. He is enlarging his stage, and intends to secure several sets of scenery, for use in connection with the vaudeville acts which he proposes to make a feature of his program in the future.

A motion presented in the city council of Henderson, Ky., recently, directing the mayor to take steps to close up the motion picture shows in that city on Sunday, failed of passage by a vote of 8 to 3. This reflects public opinion on the matter pretty accurately, as far as Henderson is concerned, as an expression of opinion was taken recently, indicating the desire of a large majority of the people that these places of amusement be kept open on Sunday.

The Colonial Theater, recently opened by Spahr Swift in Winchester, Ky., has met so far with distinct success, and its seating capacity of 280 has been kept filled pretty regularly. An orchestra imported from Cincinnati, Ohio, has proved an attractive feature. Steve McKenna, an expert electrician, formerly of Lexington, Ky., is the operator, and Miss Mary Hackett is cashier. Mr. Swift is himself managing the theater.

John Venable, who has for some time had charge of the Princess Theater, one of the largest and most successful motion picture houses in Hopkinsville, Ky., recently announced his resignation. He will remain in Hopkinsville, although he has not stated what line of work he will follow. J. P. Masters, of Bowling Green, Ky., has succeeded Mr. Venable at the Princess.

The Princess Theater, recently opened at Adairville, Ky., has added an electric piano, equipped with a number of rolls of popular music, to the various features of attractiveness to its patrons, and is growing in favor steadily. Only licensed pictures are used.

The I. O. O. F. Moving Picture Theater, recently opened in the Odd Fellows' Hall in Newcastle, Ky., has announced that it will give shows regularly hereafter on Thursday and Saturday nights of each week, with continuous performances on court days from 10 o'clock in the morning.

Plans have been approved by James King, of Ashland, Ky., for the handsome two-story brick building to be erected by him in that city, the first floor of which will be occupied by a theater with a seating capacity of 700. The house will be used principally as a motion picture theater, although it will have a stage large enough to accommodate vaudeville and small dramatic productions.

While the Zoeller building, in Hazard, Ky., is not entirely finished, it has been occupied since Christmas by a motion picture theater, which has drawn large crowds. The building will be finished shortly in every respect, without interfering with the operation of the picture show.

Manager Brown, in charge of the picture show at Middlesboro, Ky., recently decided not to open his house on Sunday, as he ascertained that there was some opposition to Sunday shows, and he is determined to give no cause for criticism of his house.

The management of the opera house at Irvine, Ky., which has been operated as a motion picture house during the current season, recently announced that it has resumed the use of the General Film Company's program.

W. E. Crutcher, cashier of a bank at Vine Grove, Ky., has opened up a photoplay house in that town as sole proprietor and manager.

It has been reported here that S. E. Nestor, formerly of West Virginia, has sold the feature film "Female Raffles," to H. C. Dorsey, of Jacksonville, Fla.

R. S. Shrader, of the Central Film Service Company, is much pleased with the way business is picking up with the exchange of late. A goodly amount of commercial business is coming to the Central these days, and he is thinking seriously of moving the exchange to larger and better quarters to facilitate the handling of the increasing business.

John H. Christy, of Lagrange, Ky., who operates the New Grand at that place, was a recent visitor to Louisville. He was in quest of supplies for the house.

A well-known visitor to the Falls Cities was F. J. Rembusch, "the man who made the Mirror Screen famous." Mr. Rembusch, whose home and business is at Shelbyville, Ind., was in town only for a few days, but was a very busy man while here.

The Novelty Theater, under the active management of D. Levenson, is attracting steady crowds every day in the week, to say nothing of Sundays, which play to packed houses. All reels to be shown at the house the next week are featured at once on plates. The public gets keenly interested in following up such players as King Baggot and Warren Kerrigan, and are always to be found waiting for the next picture. A recent feature shown at the house was "Absinthe," a four-part production of the Universal program, featuring Leah Baird and King Baggot. Dodgers were given out a week in advance of the picture. The dodgers were of unique style and attracted considerable attention. They represented two partly filled bottles of Absinthe, and showed Leah Baird in one and King Baggot in the other.

Miss B. A. Plessinger, manager of the Independent Moving Picture Service Company, notes a steady business at the present time. Conditions are just about normal at the present time with her. Very few new shows are opening at this season of the year, and new service can hardly be expected. Shipments are coming in promptly, and the new fifty-pound parcel post law should help in the handling of films to a marked degree, if the exchange people would try it out and find out how it will work. The trouble with the parcel post system at the present time is the fact that the department makes the shippers pack each film in a separate box of fibre. On a single-reel shipment the arrangement works out nicely, but on a six-reel shipment, some of the reels are likely to become separated from the remainder of the shipment, and if they happened to be a series, there would be some commotion in a country town the next morning, when four out of the six reels arrived. Miss Plessinger has shipped but one reel so far by post, but says that any time an extra reel is needed, or a small amount of supplies, will see how the new system works. The express rates have been lowered, and probably the parcel post will not get the chance at the film business which it would have done if the rates had remained as they were. These new rates went into effect February 1.

R. S. Shrader has returned from a three-day's business trip to Indianapolis, Ind. The trip covered the latter three days in the week.

Harvey Bryant was in Louisville recently from Indianapolis, Ind., booking the Ramo feature films of the Ramo Film Company, of New York.

G. M. Anderson was a recent visitor to Louisville. He was looking for bookings for Homer's "Odessy," in which Helen Gardner takes the leading part. He controls the state rights on the feature in Kentucky.

The Central Film Service Company and the Universal Film Company are still operating separate exchanges. It was expected that the two exchanges would be merged about the first of the year, as the same interests practically control both companies.

Judge W. Allen Kinney is now in a position to take a long lease on the Columbia Theater. For some time the theater was tied up, because the heirs to an estate to which the property belongs were not able to come to a decision on the matter. The trouble has been settled and Judge Kinney can now get the terms which he has been after for some time. The house will be put in good shape, overhauled, new seats put in, and while it has always proved a profitable venture, it is expected to do a good deal better as it was rather run down from several years of steady wear and tear.

The Henderson Amusement Company, which operates the Princess in Henderson, Ky., held its annual stockholders meeting on January 20. W. A. Kinney, of Louisville, was re-elected president, and T. W. Callahan and A. L. Ward were re-elected vice-president and general manager. Judge Kinney made a trip to Henderson for the meeting, and was very well satisfied with the showing made by the house in the short time it has been running.

A Mr. Garnett, representing Blochi, of Indianapolis, was a recent visitor to Louisville, spending a day or two with Judge Kinney.

The Auditorium moving picture house at Danville, Ky., has been temporarily closed for repairs of an extensive nature.

Joe Frankel and W. O. Ratcliff recently sold out their interests in the Princess Theater, of Lagrange, Ky., to J. H. Christy, formerly of Scottsburg, Ind. The old management is said to have been a very successful one.

The National Moving Picture Company has leased the old Arcade Vaudeville House, of Paducah, Ky., from Desberger Bros., who formerly operated it as a vaudeville house. The work of remodeling the theater is in the hands of the contractors, who hope to get it ready for business in the next few days.

The Princess Theater, of Russellville, Ky., has changed hands once more. Arthur Mitchell, who operates the Dixie Theater, was the purchaser. S. W. Linebaugh, who owned the theater, leased it six months ago to Hugh Hill and Mendel Perry. These two men, like Mr. Linebaugh, put on nothing but high-class pictures, but were unable to make good, as it seems that Russellville can support but one show house.

The Lyric Theater, of Muncie, Ind., has been chartered, under the laws of Indiana, with a capital stock of $10,000. The directors are: G. D. Williston, I. B. Williston and D. M. Williston.

A newly appointed board of Safety in New Albany, Ind., recently made an investigation of the city fire department, various other buildings, and the picture show houses. Some improvements will be suggested in the exits from some of the show-houses, but general conditions were found to be satisfactory.

E. E. Adams, owner of the Lyric Theater, of Lebanon, Tenn., has secured the services of Charles M. Garlinger, formerly with the Lyric, of York, Pa., as manager of the local playhouse. The Lyric has undergone a thorough renovation.

A recent report from Somerset, Ky., announces that in addition to the Dixie Theater, owned and operated by Charles Mize, a new house is under consideration for Somerset. Who is behind the movement is not known.

Herman Duncan, of Uniontown, Ky., recently bought out the half interest of his partner, Sam Graves, in the Idle Hour Theater. Uniontown is a few miles from Henderson, Ky.

W. C. Brewer, formerly of Cadiz, Ky., has leased the Lyric Theater, of Pembroke, Ky., and will run the theater again as a moving picture house.

G. D. CRAIN.

MONTREAL.

IN the Superior Court, Montreal, a petition for an interlocutory decree by James McNeill against John E. Boldt et al was dismissed without costs. McNeil was the Monertal contractor engaged to build the studio at Longuevil for the Royal Films, the new local producers of all Canadian films for use abroad. Owing to some dispute, the contractor is alleged to have abandoned the work, and the owners undertook to complete the job themselves. Then McNeill sought to obtain an injunction, with the result given. Work is now being rushed on the building, so as to have it finished so that work can be commenced on the interior scenes of the photoplays, the exteriors of which were taken during the past summer.

The Canadian Cinematograph, Ltd., manufacturing "Royal Films," with offices in the Imperial Theater Building, Bleury Street, and a fine studio in Longuevil, across the river from Montreal, has just bought five thousand acres of land in the Laurentian Mountains. They have engaged to paint the scenery in their studio an Italian artist who painted some of the scenery for the National Opera Company of Canada. They are seriously thinking of starting a "Canadian Weekly" on the same style as Pathe, Mutual, Universal and others.

Manager Hooley, of the old Theater Francais, has been replaced by C. S. Schlesinger, formerly of the Academy Theater, Buffalo. Under the new management the policy of this theater has been changed from three shows a day to two. The new manager introduced something entirely new, entitled "Visions of Art." It is a five-thousand-dollar production, and is only shown at the Sunday concerts.

The Strand, St. Catherine Street West, one of the Independent Amusement Co.'s houses, was crowded at every performance at which "David Copperfield" was shown. The Herald comments: "The patronage given to such efforts to elevate the photo stage will do more to improve it than armies of censors."

Mr. White, manager of the Montreal branch of the General Film Co., reports very good business. Of the eighty picture houses in Montreal, nearly seventy-five per cent. of them show licensed pictures.

The Imperial Theater continues to attract Montrealers from all parts of the city with its program of licensed pictures and musical acts. Mr. Conover, the manager, states that about fifty thousand people pay admission to his theater every week.

Montreal North-Enders are now able to go to the "movies" without going downtown. A new picture house, the Mount Royal, managed by Mr. Herring, and built at a cost of $100,000, has just opened its doors to the public. Judging by the attendance at every performance, suburbanites evidently appreciate this advantage laid right at their doors.

The Orpheum Theater, a Keith vaudeville house, under the management of George Dricoll, has been giving a picture program on Sunday afternoons and evenings.

The Empire Theater, in Stanley Street, which was opened about two months ago, has changed its policy, its boards being held by a New York stock company during the winter months.

The New Grand, on the site of the old Lyric Hall, is one of the latest houses to open in St. Catherine Street West. It shows pictures.

The province of Quebec Moving Picture Censors are again in the limelight. This time, however, they did not condemn a picture, but approved it. The picture in question was a few scenes in Pathe's Weekly, showing the recent water famine in Montreal. Some of the "city fathers" did not like it and asked the censors to use their shears, which those worthies did not use.

The Quebec Legislative Council passed a bill on the 16th relating to moving pictures, after adding an amendment by which the proprietor of a moving picture hall shall be liable to lose his license should he admit children under the age of fifteen, not accompanied by their parents or tutors. Another amendment to the bill gives to the proprietor of a film, rejected by the censors, the right to appeal to the full board of censors.

The Royal Films, a registered co-partnership which has been making pictures in and about Montreal for use abroad, has just sold out to the Canadian Film Manufacturing Company, Limited, with a federal charter, and a capital of $500,000. Patrick A. Powers, of Warner's Features, New York, is one of the directors of the Montreal company. Mr. Powers has entered into an agreement with the Montreal company for the exclusive handling of their films in the United States, and will distribute 66,000 feet every week.

The Quebec censors are not alarmed over the report that the strip of film attached to approved films is being tampered with. They have a special mark of their own, visible only to those who are in the "know."

Martin Harvey, one of the most noted actor-managers of the English stage, is again in Montreal. To an interviewer who called on him, Mr. Harvey told how the cinema had been of much service to him in bringing home certain imperfections in his part in "The Cigarette Maker's Romance," which his friends had commented on. "Overloaded with technique," was the criticism of his friends, but the famous actor himself never realized how this could be until he had seen his own acting reproduced on a moving picture film. Then the truth of the criticisms was brought home to him and he proceeded to eliminate certain features. This experience led Mr. Harvey to express the opinion that the film may become of much assistance in helping an actor to perfect his performance of a role.

The Bond Street Congregational Church, Toronto, shows, every Friday night, several films in the school room. The shows are attended by all classes and creeds, and have been a big money-maker since the first of the year.

A northern separate school purchased some educational films and the attendance for the last two months has increased materially, so much so that the fact has been brought before the Board of Education.

Moving pictures were taken of the opening of Parliament at Ottawa, last week, and were afterwards shown in Montreal houses.

The Montreal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has decided to use moving pictures to demonstrate the work they are doing.

George F. Driscoll, manager of the Orpheum Theater, which puts up a picture program on Sundays, sailed with his wife, for Europe this week.

The picture theaters in the Northeastern part of the city, whose patronage is mostly French, have been showing plays by French stock companies lately.

Montrealers were delighted to see Mary Pickford on the screen again. "Caprice," a Famous Players production, in which she appeared, was shown at the Strand last week.

The Friday afternoon music recitals are continuing to be popular at the Imperial. Prof. Mac Clymont charms his audiences with his masterful playing on the Hope-Jones Unit Orchestra.

Interest is added to the Selig "Adventures of Kathlyn" series, by the fact that the story is appearing serially in a Montreal daily newspaper. The story is also being published in Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto and Moose Jaw papers, as well as in a large number of American papers.

The New Grand, St. Catherine street West, is showing, as an extra special, moving pictures of a large fire which raged in the downtown district early this week. The record for this kind of work is still held by the Imperial Theater, that showed pictures of a fire eight hours after it broke out.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company is advertising their players in a Montreal daily.

The Mount Royal Theater, in the North End, has had erected a large sign in a vacant lot on Park avenue. The sign contains the day's program, together with posters of the feature plays. The sign is so placed that street-car passengers may acquaint themselves with its announcement.

"The Count of Monte Cristo," by the Famous Players company, was the chief attraction at the New Grand and at the Mount Royal theaters. Judging by the applause which James O'Neill's appearance on the screen received, picture patrons evidently appreciate good talent.

GALLAGHER.

PHILADELPHIA.

THE regular annual meeting of the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, held on January 23, at the association's headquarters in the Parkway building, proved to be one of the most interesting meetings ever held. The chief topic of the meeting was the appointment of J. Louis Breitinger, formerly counsel of the League, as chief of the board of motion picture film censorship of Pennsylvania. The election of officers for the year also took place and resulted in the following: Samuel F. Wheeler, president; Morris Spiers, first vice-president; Charles M. Rappaport, second vice-president; J. W. Pierce, secretary, and M. J. Walsh treasurer. Edward Jeffries, John J. Conners, John F. McMahon, George Roth and Louis Hopkins, were elected directors.

For some time there has been a rumor afloat in feature film exchanges in and about Philadelphia that the National Feature Film Company, 1126 Vine street, is a part of several other like business houses in this city, and so great has become the belief that a representative of the company has issued a statement in which he says that the concern is in no way connected with any other film exchange.

Local motion picture interests are expressing a great amount of interest in the new enterprise of William A. Brady, who has just incorporated a $1,000,000 concern under the laws of the State of Delaware, which will be known as the William A. Brady Picture Plays, Inc. Mr. Brady will give a large part of his personal attention to the company. There will be a studio in New York City and a plant of several hundred acres in the West. There will be moving pictures of thirteen Shakespeare plays. Many other popular plays will also be issued in picture form, and a specialty of educational films will be made.

W. Madison, of the North American Film Company, is looking for a favorable location to open a film exchange in Philadelphia.

Sunday afternoon private exhibitions of the General Film Company, at the Regent Theater of Alexander R. Boyd, are becoming to be looked upon by the exhibitors as one of the best ways in which to set forth the value of their newest releases. On a recent Sunday the General Film Company exhibited Lubin's masterpiece, "The Lion and the Mouse," by Charles Klein.

The Hildinger Bishop Company are making plans for a motion picture theater, which will be erected on a site at North Clinton avenue and Mead street.

J. C. S. Fernald, 5533 Wyalusing avenue, is preparing plans for a one-story brick moving picture theater, 50 feet by 110 feet, which will be erected at Fifty-second and Warren streets. The seating capacity will be 500.

J. Pollon, of the Lincoln Theater, states that business during the first month of the year has been exceptionally good, and that he has booked some big features which should prove big drawing cards.

J. Bradfield, of the Family Theater, has had a Wurlitzer orchestrion installed in the theater, at a cost of more than $5,000. Mr. Bradfield contends that the patrons of the silent drama of today appreciate a higher class of music than can be produced by the piano, no matter how efficient the person playing may be, and that the piano does not give out the volume of tone that is needed to fill a large theater.

A. Levy, who is about to open the S. & S. Studios, reports that favorable progress is being made, and that the alterations to the building are rapidly nearing completion.

Edward O'Keef, of the Atlantic City Square Theater, was a trade visitor during the week, booking special features for the shore resort house.

W. J. Vernon has let a contract for the erection of a motion picture theater, to be built on a site of ground at 1526-28 West Cumberland street. The building will be 37 by 76 feet. It will be built of brick and concrete, to cost $8,000.

Carl Swartz, of the Monarch Feature Company, North Ninth Street, is making a tour of the United States in the interest of the company. Recently the concern received a number of three and four-reel foreign features, which are making a hit with local exhibitors.

G. J. Barrett, of the Prince Features, returned last week from a trip in the vicinity of Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, Pa., and he reports that conditions in the sections visited are most gratifying and that exhibitors are having no trouble in filling their houses.

The recent declaration of Commissioner Jackson in regard to the over-crowding of the picture theaters, and the prosecution of all such exhibitors who persist in allowing too many people in as an audience at one time is being strictly enforced. Since this new ruling went into effect many novel ideas have been hit upon by managers to let the people understand that their houses are filled to capacity and that they will have to remain outside until the next show. One enterprising manager has had an electric sign installed, which is turned on when he has decided that enough people are within. Another manager provides music for the patrons who are waiting without until the end of the show.

The First Ward Amusement Company, of Newark, N. J., has been chartered under the laws of New Jersey with a capital of $50,000. Thomas Dougherty is the head of the new corporation.

The Mutual Film Corporation, of 902 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, has laid a complaint before the Public Service Commission in Harrisburg, concerning a difficulty with the Adams Express Company in the transfer of shipments at Wilkes-Barre. Shipments arriving after 12 noon are not transferred until midnight that day. The complainant also asserts outsiders are allowed to open all shipments, picking out their own.

Through the courtesy of Jay Emannuel, manager of the Ridge Avenue Theater, a matinee show of "What Eight Million Women Want," was given on January 22, the proceeds of which were turned over to the Twentieth legislative district of the Women's Suffrage party of Pennsylvania.

Work on the new Stanley Theater now in course of construction at 1620 Market Street, has been temporarily set back, owing to a collapse of the concrete floor, which buried three men in the debris, killing one and severely injuring the other two.

W. J. Vernon has awarded a contract for a moving picture theater to John McKenna & Son, which will be erected at No. 1528 Cumberland Street.

Stuckert & Sloan are preparing plans and specifications for a face brick and ornamental terra cotta fireproof moving picture theater to be erected at Fifty-second and Locust Streets for the Falt Amusement Company. The theater will seat from 800 to 1,000 persons and will be elaborately decorated and finished.

Nicholas Carrado, manager of the Star Theater, Wilmington, Del., has now become a weekly visitor among the trade, booking features and special service for his house. Recently Mr. Corrado has had the theater thoroughly renovated, with new chairs being installed and two new projecting machines.

The New Palace Theater, Arctic Avenue, Atlantic City, N. J., which was opened several weeks ago under the management of Fred Moore, has been forced to close, owing to the lack of business.

M. Goldberg, the manager of the theater at 333 Market Street, Lebanon, Pa., has taken full charge of the Lubin Palace, at 1218 Market Street, Philadelphia. W. C. Herchreider, formerly connected with the Auditorium Theater, in Eighth Street, will leave for Lebanon, where he will take charge of the theater vacated by Mr. Goldberg.

For the special purpose of featuring Philadelphia, her industries and developing the activities of Philadelphians, the H. H. B. Motion Picture Company, of Philadelphia, has been organized by Philadelphians for the benefit of Philadelphia. The new corporation organized by electing the following officers: President, W. Spence Harvey; vice-president, Marcus A. Benn; secretary-treasurer, Col. Lewis E. Beitler. The company will maintain offices in the Real Estate Trust Building, and the plant at 2231-3 and 5 Vine Street, formerly occupied by a feature film manufacturing company, has been secured for studio purposes. For the purpose of the new company the environs of Philadelphia will include all the territory within 150 miles of City Hall, excepting only New York.

In all affairs in which Philadelphia is interested or in which Philadelphians participate the company will not only send operators to make films, but will send experts to work up the material for the lead-to the end that Philadelphia may be benefitted to the fullest extent possible. Cameramen will be sent into factories, and films made of articles in the course of construction. The picture will show the processes from the beginning to the end. This is done with the thought to show the great masses of people just how long and about how much expense is attached in making the article, whatever it may be. Events of importance to the general public which take place in Philadelphia will be photographed and shipped broadcast within the very shortest possible time.

CONGDON.

INDIANA.

W. H. LIPPS, owner of the opera house, Alexandria, Ind., has been fickle to the Universal service. Lipps was an old standby for some time and was persuaded to try another service, but this week he is back again. "My crowds like it better—or at least they seem to have sort of become attached to it," is Lipps' explanation.

The Talbott, at Talbott avenue and Twenty-second street, Indianapolis, had to put on the Imp European film "Ivanhoe" for the neighborhood by special request. It packed the little theater for one of the biggest businesses it has ever had. The film seems to be getting the greatest of all advertising, the kind that goes from mouth to mouth. The film has been shown in Indianapolis repeatedly.

I. Hamburg bought the Virginia Theater, Evansville, from Philip Skora. Now Skora has bought it back again.

The big twenty-four sheet poster being put out to the trade by the Universal is meeting with a cordial reception among Indiana exhibitors. The Central Film Service, Indianapolis, has sent out three hundred of them and has ordered one hundred more. Inasmuch as the exhibitor receiving the poster agrees to rent billboard space for it, the publicity campaign seems to be catching on.

A feature of the corn show, January 9-10, at the Winona College of Agriculture, Winona Lake, Ind., was 5,000 feet of film exhibited by the American Steel and Wire Fencing Company. The company sent a lecturer to explain the pictures, which were exhibited free.

Louis Klene, proprietor of the Arc Theater, Lafayette, Ind., has closed for thirty days. The theater will be remodeled entirely, inside and out. The plans of Mr. Klene will greatly beautify his house, and he declares there will be no handsomer show house in the Middle West. The cost will be about $7,000.

The Orpheum, Lafayette, Ind., is showing as an added attraction pictures of the Brockton fair at Brockton, Mass., the local interest centering in the fact that the J. Crouch & Son magnificent six-horse team is a feature of the scene befor the reviewing stand where former President Taft is the honored guest.

The Empress Feature Film Company has bought the rights to "Kissing Cup," the four-part racing melodrama imported by A. Blinkhorn. The aeroplane ride to get the jockey entered in time and the race itself, are proving big attractions, and the film is being booked freely.

The Empress Company also is getting extensive bookings through Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky for "Black 13," an Apex sequel to "On the Trail of the Spider Gang."

The Bobbs-Merrill Publishing Company treated a gathering of its fiction salesmen in Indianapolis to a moving picture reel of James Whitcomb Riley. The film was taken by Louis Sereinsky, of the Motionscope Company, and showed scenes in Anderson, Greenfield and Indianapolis when the school children took part in a birthday tribute to the Hoosier poet.

A. G. Blacker, manager of the Sedeg Feature Film Company, Indianapolis, is on a vacation in Pennsylvania. Joe Barnett is acting manager in his absence. The Sedeg Company handles Gaumont features.

John Servaas, manager of the Alcazar Theater, Indianapolis, is on a vacation at his home in Kalamazoo, Mich. In his absence the management of the house was turned over to Ben Crose, of the Empress Feature Film Company. Crose used all his own company features and did an increased business for the house.

H. L. Whitehead, proprietor of the Irving, the new house in the college suburb of Indianapolis, is making a house to house distribution of advertising in spite of the fact that his house has been crowded every night since the opening. He says it is up to him to be sure every one within reach learns of his house and its location.

D. T. Costello is to open two new houses in Ft. Wayne, Ind., soon. One seating 410 will be in the suburb of Bloomingdale, and the other, seating 350, in the suburb of Nebraska. Costello runs the McClain Place house in Indianapolis, and is negotiating for its sale.

The Auditorium Theater, South Bend, Ind., is featuring the Daniel Frohman Famous Players' productions every Friday. "An Hour Before Dawn" was shown to a big business. The Auditorium uses quarter page ads in the local papers, giving news of its weekly program.

The Industrial Film Company, of Chicago, expects to exhibit a film of Vincennes, Ind., in the Moon Theater of that city this week. Production has been delayed by the unfavorable weather. According to the weather bureau, Indiana has been without sunshine for eighteen days.

The Lake County Times, Hammond, Ind., in an editorial condemns "white slave" films and urges that parents mark places where such films are shown and see that children avoid them. The editorial gives the Hammond exhibitors credit for showing only clean stuff.

Manager Laymon, of the Theato, Washington, Ind., has installed a new radium gold fiber screen and is much pleased with the improvement.

G. W. Williams is building a house at New York and Garfield streets, Indianapolis, on the site of the old Argo aerdome. It will seat 660 persons, and cost $8,000 to $10,000.

WILLIAM.

The Switow Amusement Company has filed articles of incorporation in Jeffersonville, Ind. The capital is $300,000, and the incorporators are Michael Switow, Junius A. Woolfolk and H. M. Revell. The new company took over the interests of the Switow Amusement Company, of Indiana, and the Falls City Amusement Company, of Kentucky. The companies absorbed have houses in Louisville and Madisonville, Ky.; Jeffersonville, New Albany, Madison, Salem, Bloomington, Martinsville and French Lick Springs, in Indiana. The company is building a new house at North Vernon. The company proposes eventually to increase the number of its houses to twenty.

The Victoria, Alabama and Sixteenth Streets, Indianapolis, opened this week. The house seats 610 and is the finest in the city up to date. M. C. Farrell is the manager in charge. The house is owned by the People's Amusement Company. Part of the directorate have other picture interests, being part owners of the Central Amusement Company houses, and of the Central Film Service Company. The opening of the house was advertised with a quarter-page in the local Sunday papers. It was built at a cost in excess of $15,000.

The Star Theater, Union City, Ind., is now getting Warner Features. The management of the Star theater makes a point of connecting film subjects with local events. The success with which this can be done by the country manager depends upon the manager, but the Star has been able to do it very effectively. "The Hand of the Law" is advertised as a "dramatization of Warden Coding's lecture on the 'Honor System' at the Chautauqua last summer."

Wilson & Akers will open the Princess Theater, Argos, Ind., about February 1st, or sooner.

A Kokomo editor is considerably worked up about the report that General Villa, of the Mexican rebel forces, has a contract with a moving picture company to share with it the profits to be derived from photographs of real battles. He concludes the contract calls for a satisfactory part of the killing and dying being done in focus.

The Lyric Theater Company, Muncie, has filed articles of incorporation. The capital is $10,000 and the incorporators are George D., Ina B., and Dudley Williston.

People in Seymour, Ind., are worked up over the report that one of the twenty houses which the Switow Amusement Company expects to have eventually, is to be in Seymour. The proposed theater is getting much publicity.

Michael Switow's first moving picture house, by the way, was operated in Shelbyville, Ind., in connection with a restaurant. A laugh and a thrill were premiums with every meal.

Indianapolis is to get one of the Switow houses. The others planned, it is said, are to be in Columbus, North Vernon, Rushville, Bedford, Vincennes, Washington, Greensburg, and Seymour, as before mentioned. The cost, $150,000.

W. R. Dunavent, Joy Theater, Edinburg, Ind., is negotiating for the sale of his house.

The Famous Players Film Service, Inc., has filed notice of its purpose to do business in Indiana, representing that $12,000 of its capital stock is invested in the state.

Mayor Bell, Indianapolis, has announced that he will no longer accept the $25 a week contributed to the office by the Citizen's Charity Association. The association is made up entirely om motion picture exhibitors, who exhibit on Sunday. The law n Indiana forbids Sunday shows, but by making it a matter of voluntary contribution at the door, the technicality has been successfully evaded, the evasion having popular approval. Part of the sum taken at the door has always gone to charity. The amount contributed to the Mayor's office was used in buying tickets for charitable work, and to meet other demands upon the office for charity. It was not graft in any sense of the word, as strict accounting was made of every cent expended, but Mayor Bell held that it was improper for the office to be made the distributing center.

A. J. Ingram, Newport, Ind., opened his house to a big crowd. Mr. Ingram is in a new building of fireproof construction.

Chief of Police, Sam Perrott, Indianapolis, attended the presentation of the film, "Traffic in Souls," as censor, and failed to censor it. The film was used to fill opentime at Shubert Murat Theater and attracted good crowds.

Chief Perrott, however, did censor the giving of free prizes at motion picture house drawings over the city. Chief Perrott told the police at roll call that it was gambling. Potatoes, flour, sugar and other foodstuffs made up the prizes. Most moving picture men are glad the practice was stopped. They hold a moving picture house should be visited for its films—not as was becoming the case in many instances, for a sack of flour.

Mayor Bell ordered that Sunday vaudeville shows be stopped. The order was made to except the movies. The exception seems to have no warrant according to the spirit of the law, but technically the movies are safe. They accept donations at the door, instead of telling tickets. The vaudeville houses were attempting to conduct business in the usual way. Whether they will attempt to meet the technicalities as have the movies is a question on which they do not express themselves. For the present, at least, they will remain closed on Sunday.

The semi-annual meeting of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has been postponed to the latter part of February or the first of March. The date set was January 20, but the sickness of Secretary A. C. Zaring delayed arrangements, and now word has been received by President J. M. Rhodes from Evansville, where the meeting is to be held, that the exhibitors there would prefer to hold the meeting late in February or early in March "that we may the better entertain you."

J. A. Victor, proprietor of the Two Johns Theater, in the Indianapolis "black belt," sometimes called "Frog Island," is back from a trip around the world. He visited the devastated part of Japan on his trip, and was greeted as Two Johns by a colored man in Honolulu. The colored man had formerly been a frequent visitor at Victor's house.

William H. Lipps, Alexandria, Ind., is increasing the seating capacity of his house by 100 chairs.

Press notices of a "cabaret show" in Peru, Ind., announce that "the decorations will be done by an Indiana fresco artist, who is now working on the Illinois circuit." It is further advised that "the beverage served will be tea." There will be movie shows and tango dancing teachers, who will be "changed every week."

WILLIAM.

PITTSBURG.

THE Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry is sending to all motion picture theater owners and managers in Pennsylvania a set of the newly adopted rules and regulations governing motion picture houses. Pittsburgh managers who are in receipt of the rules say that they are the most drastic in existence and will work hardships on the business. The rules were formulated by John Price Jackson, state commissioner, and Inspector David Weaver, of the local branch of the state department, has been named to see that the new regulations are enforced here.

An abstract of the new rules show that all motion picture auditoriums must be located on the first floor. All theaters must have one center and two side aisles, each leading directly to an external exit. All aisles must be four feet wide and clear of obstruction; all exits not less than five feet wide, plainly marked "exit" with a red light showing, and all doors must open outward. Separate doors must be used for entrance and exit.

One of the provisions of the new code that is especially drastic is that requiring, in addition to the main entrance and exit, at least ten feet of other exit space, with aisles leading directly to an outside alley, court, street or fireproof of passage.

All seats must be fastened to the floor. They must not be less than eighteen inches from arm to arm, and not less than thirty-two inches from back to back. No more than six seats will be permitted to intervene between any seat and the nearest aisles, nor more than thirteen seats in any row between two aisles. Electric lighting and power is required where obtainable. Complete equipment for fire extinguishing must be on hand. Heating plants must be separated from the auditorium by fire walls. Where there are living apartments above, these must be separated from the auditorium by fire walls.

All exits and entrances must be at ground level, and no steps will be permitted except by special permission of the inspectors, or where balconies are allowed. Balconies will not be permitted on a lot less than twenty feet in width, and no balcony will be permitted to have a seating capacity of more than twenty-five per cent. of the entire seating capacity of the theater. The width of the stairways leading to the balconies shall not be less than six feet for fifty persons or less, and one foot wider for each additional fifty persons. Stairways from balconies will not be permitted to lead into the main auditorium, and must be equipped with hand rails. Balconies must be equipped with at least one line of fire escape leading to the outside of the building.

Before the erection or adaption of any building for use as a motion picture theater, blue prints in duplicate, showing all the exits, passageways, aisles, stairs, fire escapes and the like, arrangements of seats indicating the number of rows and the number of seats in a row, and distance between rows; size of floor beams, walls, supports and the like; location and construction of picture machinery, and lighting, and other complete details must be furnished the state department. Picture machinery must be safeguarded in accordance with the acts of the legislature governing it.

The new rules will be strictly enforced, according to the local state department, and theaters will be closed on any infraction of the new regulations.

Rowland & Clark, formerly of the General Film Company in this city, and now owners and operators of a string of motion picture theaters in Pittsburgh and vicinity, are located in the Empire building.

The Pastime Theater, at Market and Fifth, is giving away on Tuesdays and Fridays sets of dishes to the holders of certain tickets. Tickets are numbered and drawings decide the lucky numbers.

The fire department of Vandegrift Heights has leased a motion picture house on Logfellow and will operate it, applying the proceeds to the maintenance of the department. Salaries, rents, etc., are expected to be paid from the profits of the theater.

The downtown theaters have raised the price of admission on Saturdays from five cents to ten. The plan has been entirely successful.

D. L. MANLEY.

(Continued on page 854)

National and State Officers of the

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA

PRESIDENT—M. A. Neff, 1003 Mercantile Library Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.
1st VICE-PRESIDENT—Robert L. Macnabb, 551 8th Ave., New York City.
2nd VICE-PRESIDENT—T. P. Finnegan, Hippodrome Theater, Dallas, Texas.
SECRETARY—George H. Wiley, World Theater, 8th & Highland, Kansas City, Mo.
TREASURER—Orene Parker, Covington, Ky.
NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—M. A. Neff, Chairman; George H. Wiley, Secretary; Orene Parker, R. L. Macnabb, T. P. Finnegan, Peter J. Jeup, M. E. Cory.

National Vice-Presidents for States

ALABAMA—Alex. A. Wall, Birmingham.
ARIZONA—Fred T. Green, Miami.
ARKANSAS—S. A. Arnold, Mena.
CALIFORNIA—C. Rothschild, San Francisco.
CANADA—Paul LeMarquard, Winnipeg.
COLORADO—O. T. Curtis, Pueblo.
CONNECTICUT—P. S. McMahon, New Britain.
DELAWARE—J. N. Ginnes, Wilmington.
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA—Fulton Brylawski Washington.
FLORIDA—E. O. Griffith, Tampa.
GEORGIA—U. T. Koch, Atlanta.
ILLINOIS—Dee Robinson, Peoria.
INDIANA—Phil Gloeckner, Richmond.
IOWA—Thomas A. Brown, Iowa City.
KANSAS—C. E. Glamann, Wellington.
KENTUCKY—Orene Parker, Covington.
LOUISIANA—John Depinet, New Orleans.
MAINE—Hiram Abrams, Portland.
MARYLAND—J. Howard Bennett, Baltimore.
MASSACHUSETTS—George F. Washburn, Boston.
MICHIGAN—Peter J. Jeup, Detroit.
MINNESOTA—George Osborne, St. Paul.
MISSISSIPPI—Fred Abley, Gulfport.
MISSOURI—E. E. Richards, Kansas City.
NEBRASKA—J. E. Schlank, Omaha.
NEW JERSEY—L. F. Blumenthal, Jersey City.
NEVADA—Glenn D. Hurst, Reno.
NEW YORK—Sidney Ascher, New York City.
OHIO—Ed. Kohl, Cleveland.
OKLAHOMA—Carl Gregg, Tulsa.
PENNSYLVANIA—Walter Steumpfig, Philadelphia.
RHODE ISLAND—S. Y. Merchant, Providence.
SOUTH CAROLINA—Julius Meyers, Charleston.
SOUTH DAKOTA—E. J. Hipple, Pierre.
TENNESSEE—W. H. Wasserman, Nashville.
TEXAS—J. S. Phillips, Fort Worth.
VIRGINIA—D. P. Wine, Harrisonburg.
WASHINGTON—John Rantz, Bremerton.
WEST VIRGINIA—A. L. Cottrell, Point Pleasant.
WISCONSIN—John R. Ek, Oshkosh.
SASKATCHEWAN—J. L. French, Rosetown, Sask., Can.

Officers of the State Branches of the M. P. E. L. of A.

OHIO STATE BRANCH NO. 1.
M. A. Neff, Pres., 1003 Mercantile Library Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. H. Broomhall, Sec., Jewel Theater, Hamilton, Ohio.

ILLINOIS STATE BRANCH NO. 2.
F. L. Frank, Pres., 29 West Washington St., Chicago, Ill.
E. C. Bostick, Sec., Court Theater, Pekin, Ill.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE BRANCH NO. 3.
Samuel Wheeler, Philadelphia, Pa.
J. W. Pierce, Philadelphia, Pa.

MICHIGAN STATE BRANCH NO. 4.
Peter Jeup, Pres., Pastime Theater, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. Caldwell, Secy., Battle Creek, Mich.

INDIANA STATE BRANCH NO. 5.
J. C. Lockwood, Pres., Frankfort, Ind.
J. W. Cochram, Sec., Theatorium Theater, Washington, Ind.

WEST VIRGINIA STATE BRANCH NO. 6.
A. G. Frohme, Pres., 3521 Jacob St., Wheeling, W. Va.
M. A. Sybert, Sec., Moundsville, W. Va.

KENTUCKY STATE BRANCH NO. 7.
J. H. Stamper, Jr., Pres., Lexington, Ky.
F. J. Dolle, 810 E. Broadway, Louisville, Ky.

WISCONSIN STATE BRANCH NO. 8.
Harry Burford, Pres., LaCrosse.
A. H. Gray, Sec., Oshkosh.

MISSOURI STATE BRANCH NO. 9.
Louis Herman, Pres., 1825 N. 9th St., St. Louis, Mo.
W. C. Smith, Sec., Lyric Theater, Mexico, Mo.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA BRANCH NO. 10.
William P. Herbst, Pres., 2105 Pennsylvania Ave., S. E., Washington, D. C.
Fulton Brylawski, Sec., 911 Pennsylvania Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

NEW YORK STATE BRANCH NO. 11.
A. N. Wolff, Pres., Rochester, N. Y.
Maurice L. Fleischman, Sec., 2755 Webster Ave., New York City.

CALIFORNIA STATE BRANCH NO. 12.
G. W. Goddard, Pres., Sacramento, Cal.
W. A. Cory, Sec., 722 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco, Cal.

NEW JERSEY STATE BRANCH NO. 13.
G. A. Robinson, 734 DeMott St., W. Hoboken, N. J.
P. H. Kirchner, Sec., 328 Bergenline Ave., Union Hill, N. J.

ALABAMA STATE BRANCH NO. 14.
E. H. Colley, Pres., Vaudette Theater, Birmingham, Ala.
J. G. Wells, Sec., Alamo Theater, Anniston, Ala.

LOUISIANA STATE BRANCH NO. 15.
A. G. Gurgel, Pres., Gretna, La.
F. H. Mayberry, Sec., Savoy Theater, New Orleans, La.

IOWA STATE BRANCH NO. 16.
Claude F. Wierck, Sioux City, Iowa.
W. G. Eddy, Sec., Marengo, Iowa.

MINNESOTA STATE BRANCH NO. 17.
Address all communications to M. A. Neff, 1003 Mercantile Library Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TEXAS STATE BRANCH NO. 18.
A. B. Remey, Pres., Fort Worth, Texas.
Harry J. Gould, Sec., Forest Theater, Dallas, Texas.

NEBRASKA STATE BRANCH NO. 19.
Frank Harris, Pres., Empress Theater, Omaha, Neb.
E. C. Preston, Sec., Sterling Theater, Superior, Neb.

NEVADA STATE BRANCH NO. 20.
Address all communications to Glen D. Hurst, Grant Theater, Reno, Nev.

MASSACHUSETTS STATE BRANCH NO. 21.
Address all communications to George H. Washburn, 700 Washington Ave., Boston, Mass.

TENNESSEE STATE BRANCH NO. 22.
Address all communications to W. H. Wasserman, Nashville, Tenn.

OKLAHOMA STATE BRANCH NO. 23.
R. W. Wirt, Pres., Majestic Theater, Enid, Okla.
L. W. Brophy, Sec., Yale Theater, Muskogee, Okla.

ARKANSAS STATE BRANCH NO. 24.
O. A. Bandy, Pres., Argenta, Ark.
D. A. Hutchinson, Sec., Lonoke, Ark.

KANSAS STATE BRANCH NO. 25.
J. Brainard, Pres., Mulberry, Kansas.
Geo. McCrum, Sec., 957 Park Ave., Kansas City, Kan.

MISSISSIPPI STATE BRANCH NO. 26.
H. A. Carleton, Pres., Dixie Theater, Jackson, Miss.
R. H. Redus, Sec., Elite Theater, West Point, Miss.

SOUTH CAROLINA STATE BRANCH NO. 27.
Address all communications to Julius Meyers, Charleston, S. C.

CANADA BRANCH NO. 28.
Address all communications to P. LeMarquand, Winnipeg, Can.

MAINE STATE BRANCH NO. 29.
Moxley Blumenberg, Pres., Casco Theater, Portland, Me.,
J. A. Emery, Sec., Bar Harbor, Me.

RHODE ISLAND STATE BRANCH NO. 30.
Address all communications to M. A. Neff, 1003 Mercantile Library Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

CONNECTICUT STATE BRANCH NO. 31.
Address all communications to M. A. Neff, 1003 Mercantile Library Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

COLORADO STATE BRANCH NO. 32.
Address all communications to O. T. Curtis, Pueblo, Colo.

SOUTH DAKOTA STATE BRANCH NO. 34.
L. D. Milne, Pres., Maynard Theater, Mitchell, S. D.
M. B. Balsiger, Sec., Bijou Theater, Huron, S. D.

WASHINGTON STATE BRANCH NO. 35.
A. B. Campbell, Pres., Princess Theater, Sedro Wooley, Wash.
W. L. Schanks, Crown Theater, Seattle, Wash.

MARYLAND STATE BRANCH NO. 36.
J. Howard Bennett, Pres., 115 N. Howard St., Baltimore, Md.
F. H. Durkee, Sec., 1925 E. North Ave., Baltimore, Md.

DELAWARE STATE BRANCH NO. 37.
Chas. I. Beckett, Pres., Grand Opera House, Wilmington, Del.
H. E. Klume, Sec., Gem Theater, Wilmington, Del.

VIRGINIA STATE BRANCH NO. 38.
C. A. Turner, Pres., Portsmouth, Va.
E. J. Sparks, Sec., Richmond, Va.

GEORGIA STATE BRANCH NO. 39.
John Evans, Pres., Vaudette Theater, Atlanta, Ga.
P. E. Castlebury, Sec., Bonita Theater, Rome, Ga.

ARIZONA STATE BRANCH NO. 40.
Address all communications to F. T. Greene, Miami, Arizona.

At the Sign of the Wing-éd Clock

Andrew Carnegie Billie Burke

Mayor Mitchel of New York

District-Attorney Whitman

These are but a few of the "real people" shown meeting

"Our MUTUAL Girl"

Up-to-the-minute fashion material, showing the newest styles on living models in the studios of the great New York dressmakers.

Central Park, Fifth Avenue, The Plaza, The Ritz—all the fashionable places. With such wealth of material all brought together in a fascinating love story, is it surprising that exhibitors everywhere are clamoring to show

"Our MUTUAL Girl"

The Greatest Business Getter Ever Offered in Regular Service to Moving Picture Houses

Bear in mind that this great feature film can be had only by houses showing Mutual Movies. It is part of the regular programme.

Special posters—special lantern slides—special heralds.

Branches in 49 Cities MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION NEW YORK

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—One Thousand to One Shot (Comedy)..
BIOGRAPH—Skelley Buys a Hotel (Comedy).....
EDISON—A Story of Crime (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—The County Seat War (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
LUBIN—Antidotes for Suicide (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—Taming Terrible Ted (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 12, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No. 4 (The Royal Slave—Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
VITAGRAPH—The Winner Wins (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10th, 1914.

CINES—After Death (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
EDISON—The Story of the Willow Pattern (Drama)...1000
ESSANAY—Speak No Evil (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Measure of a Man (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Orphans of the Wild (Drama).....
SELIG—Reconciled in Blood (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Master of the Mine (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 11th, 1914.

EDISON—Andy Goes on the Stage (Third of the Andy Series—Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Miss Milly's Valentine (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—Indian Fate (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
PATHE—All on Account of Polly (Comedy).....
PATHE—A Typical Buddhist Temple (Typical).....
PATHE—Scenes Along the Canvery River, India (Scenic)
SELIG—A Strenuous Scoop (Comedy).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Sonny Jim in Search of a Mother (Comedy) 1000

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—As It Might Have Been (Com.-Dr.).....
ESSANAY—The Weaker's Strength (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—Fitzhugh's Ride (Special—2 parts—Drama)....2000
MELIES—Suspense and Suspenders (Comedy)..... 500
MELIES—Winky Willy's Birthday Gifts (Comedy)..... 500
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 13, 1914 (News).....
PATHE—Broken Lives (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
SELIG—The Mistress of His House (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Some Steamer Scooping (Com.-Drama). 700
VITAGRAPH—Niagara Falls (Scenic)..... 300

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th, 1914.

EDISON—Rorke's Drift (Special—2 parts—Drama)....2000
ESSANAY—Sophie Picks a Dead One (Special—2 parts Comedy) 2000
KALEM—The Gun Behind the Man (Comedy).....
KALEM—Out in the Rain (Comedy).....
LUBIN—The Sleeping Sentinel (Drama).....1000
SELIG—Their Lesson (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Bunny's Birthday (Comedy).....1000

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—A Nest Unfeathered (Drama).....1000
EDISON—His Grandchild (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—The Calling of Jim Barton (Drama).....1000
KALEM—The Fatal Clues (Comedy-Drama)..... 800
KALEM—Flood of the Dal River (Topical) 200
LUBIN—The Reward (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Chains of Honor (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
VITAGRAPH—Children of the Feud (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Her Old Teacher (Drama).....
EDISON—The Adventure of the Extra Baby (Second Story of Octavius, Amateur Detective) (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—A Million in Jewels (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 14, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—The Uphill Climb (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
VITAGRAPH—Sawdust and Salome (Drama).....

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th, 1914.

CELIO—The Artist's Model (George Kleine—Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
EDISON—Sophia's Imaginary Visitors (Comedy-Drama)..1000
ESSANAY—To Alaska via the Great Rivers of the North (Scenic) 1000
LUBIN—Getting Even (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—An Innocent Victim (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—Whiffle's Balcony Buds (Comedy).....
PATHE—Rambles in Bourges, France (Scenic).....
SELIG—Through the Centuries (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Back to Broadway (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) 2000

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18th, 1914.

EDISON—Courting Betty's Beau (Comedy).....1000
ESSANAY—One-to-Three (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—Chasing the Smugglers (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
LUBIN—The Price of a Ruby (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
PATHE—Won by a Nose (Comedy).....
PATHE—Monuments of Upper Egypt (Architecture).....
SELIG—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Fatty on the Job (Comedy)..... 600
VITAGRAPH—Lumbering in Sweden (Industrial)..... 400

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—A Desperate Hero (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—Skelley and the Turkey (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—Italian Love (Comedy-Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The House of Fear (Special—2 parts—Drama)...2000
MELIES—A Fable and Its Moral (Comedy)..... 300
MELIES—A Hobo Philosopher (Comedy)..... 700
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 15, 1914 (News).....
PATHE—Where the Heart Calls (Special—2 parts—Drama)2000
SELIG—Venus and Adonis (Comedy).....
SELIG—A Mad Marathon (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—The First Endorsement (Drama).....1000

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th, 1914.

EDISON—All for His Sake (Special—2 parts—Drama)....2000
ESSANAY—The Other Girl (Special—2 parts—Drama)...2000
KALEM—Too Many Johnnies (Comedy).....
KALEM—A Bottled Romance (Comedy).....
LUBIN—In the Dredger's Claw (Drama).....1000
SELIG—Memories (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—His Little Page (Comedy).....1000

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Criminology and Reform (Drama).....
EDISON—The Powers of the Air (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—Snakeville's Fire Brigade (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—An Indian's Honor (Drama).....
KALEM—A Long Island Skunk Farm (Industrial).....
LUBIN—A Winning Mistake (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—The Female Book Agent (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—Victims of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama)...2000
VITAGRAPH—Iron and Steel (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000

EXPRESS RATES GREATLY REDUCED It will cost you very little now to get one of our specially low-priced poster frames. The handsomest and most practical ever made. Every exhibitor is using them. Write for illustrations.

AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. 1st National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

"We have what you want when you want it"

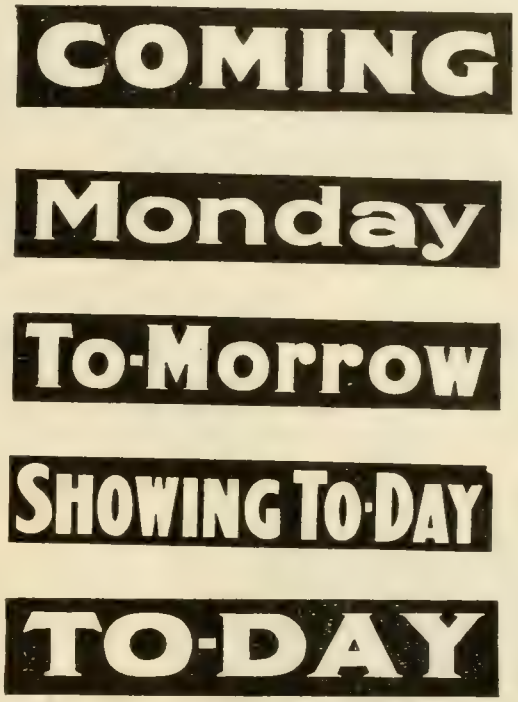
MR. EXHIBITOR

We want to impress on you that GOOD ADVERTISING is just as essential towards the success of your house as good films.

STRIPS

Over 100 styles--various sizes--paper. Almost every conceivable saying or wording that can be used for Pictures.

Size 5 x 28, for 1 sheets, 20c per doz.
Size 7 x 42, for 3 sheets, 40c per doz.



The QUALITY of FILMS in GENERAL FILM SERVICE is Reflected in the Offerings of Our Advertising Service

Our posters, lantern slides, banners, photographs, and all the rest of our advertising helps are just as good as our films. We have a reputation to live up to, and we do it.

Banners and lantern slides constitute a very small part of our stock. There isn't a single advertising help you might need that we cannot supply. One-sheet posters and three-sheets for single reels and multiple reels, photographs of prominent players, heralds, snipes, oak and brass frames for lobby display, and a thousand other things too numerous to mention are carried in stock and offered at prices that we defy you to beat.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

GENERAL FILM COMPANY, Poster Department

(Formerly Photoplay Advertising & Specialty Co.)

71 W. 23rd Street and 440 Fourth Avenue, New York; 121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; 7th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass.; 122 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.; 3610 Olive Street, St. Louis. Mo. New offices opening.

SOLAX SPECIAL ST

Solax

BENEAT

BIG RUSSIAN SECR SERVICE DRAMA

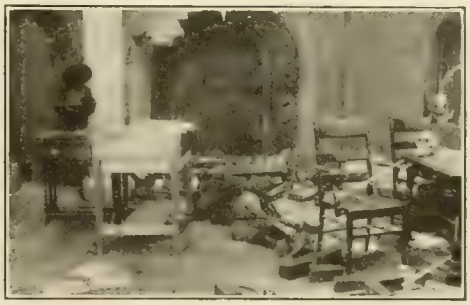
FEATURING

CLAIRE WHITN

Solax

BOOKING NEW YORK STATE AND NEW ENGLAND, Box Office Attraction Film Rental Company, 126 West 46th Street, New York City; EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, NEW JERSEY, MARYLAND, WASHINGTON, D. C., DELAWARE AND VIRGINIA, Electric Theatre Supply Company, S. E. Cor. 13th and Vine Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.; WEST VIRGINIA AND WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA, Weiland Film Company, 212 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburg, Pa.; NORTHERN ILLINOIS, Union Film

TE RIGHTS FEATURE



I the CZAR

Solax

FOUR PARTS

This is a daring melodrama dealing with the Russian spy system. The situations are gripping and the characters delineated with remarkable strength. The Russian "underground railway" system here is operated by forces as mysterious as the "Black Hundred" organization—in fact, it is commonly supposed that they are closely allied. Their operations result in misery and wretchedness. In this production we have a prince of the realm aligned with reformers against these forces of oppression and ignorance.

ADVERTISING MATTER

Three kinds of one-sheets, two kinds of three-sheets, a six-sheet, announcement slides, heralds, cuts, photos in sets of 18 and booklets.

Solax

SOLAX COMPANY, FORT LEE NEW JERSEY

Company, 164 West Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois; MICHIGAN, Casino Company, Dime Bank Building, Detroit, Michigan; WASHINGTON, OREGON, Northwestern Feature Film Company, 329 Oak Street, Portland, Oregon; CALIFORNIA, Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, California; INDIANA AND KENTUCKY, Blache Feature Service, Willoughby Building, Indianapolis, Ind.; EASTERN CANADA, International Feature Film Company, New Birks Building, Montreal, Canada.

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 8th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—For a Woman (Drama).....
ECLAIR—Valentine's Day (Comedy).....
ECLAIR—The Black Sea (Comedy).....
REX—The Coward Hater (Drama).....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9th, 1914.

VICTOR—The Man Who Slept (Drama).....
IMP—Jane Eyre (2 parts—Drama).....
POWERS—An Academy Romance (Comedy).....

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10th, 1914.

GOLD SEAL—The Bride of Mystery (3 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—Getting Reuben Back (Comedy).....
CRYSTAL—Baldy Belmont Picks a Peach (Comedy)...

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 11th, 1914.

NESTOR—The Greater Devotion (Drama).....
JOKER—Universal Ike's Wooing (Comedy).....
ECLAIR—The Good in the Worst of Us (2 parts—Drama) .....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 101 (News).....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12th, 1914.

IMP—The Elixir of Love (Comedy).....
REX—The Law of His Kind (2 parts—Drama).....
FRONTIER—Slim to the Rescue (Comedy).....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th, 1914.

NESTOR—His Royal Pants (Comedy).....
POWERS—Withered Hands (Drama).....
VICTOR—The Law's Decree (2 parts—Drama).....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14th, 1914.

JOKER—The Chicken Chasers (Comedy).....
FRONTIER—The Heart of Smiling Joe (Drama).....
101 BISON—Unjustly Accused (2 parts—Drama).....

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 15th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—A Sure Cure (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—The Legend of the Lilacs (Drama) .....
REX—An Old Locket (Drama) .....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1914.

VICTOR—Votes for Men (2 parts—Comedy) .....
IMP—The Box Couch (Comedy) .....
POWERS—Almost a White Hope (Comedy) .....

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th, 1914.

GOLD SEAL—Honor of the Mounted (2 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—Some Doings (Comedy) .....
CRYSTAL—Harold's Burglar (Comedy) .....

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18tth, 1914.

NESTOR—A Flash in the Dark (Drama) .....
JOKER—A Narrow Escape (Comedy) .....
JOKER—Lumber Industry of California (Industrial)....
ECLAIR—The Cross in the Cacti (2 parts—Drama)....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 102 (News) .....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, 1914.

IMP—The Price of Sacrilege (3 parts—Drama) .....
REX—The Boob's Honeymoon (Comedy) .....
FRONTIER—Slim Joins the Army (Comedy) .....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th, 1914.

NESTOR—Scooped by a Hen-Coop (Comedy).....
POWERS—My Mother's Irish Shawls (Drama) .....
VICTOR—Love's Victory (2 parts—Drama) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, 1914.

JOKER—The Tender Hearted Sheriff (Comedy) .....
FRONTIER—The Fatal Card (Drama) .....
101 BISON—Her Father's Guilt (2 parts—Drama).....

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 8th, 1914.

APOLLO—One-Round O'Brien in the Ring Again (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—A Turn of Cards (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Percy's First Holiday (Comedy).....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Lost Treasure (3 parts—Drama).....3000
KEYSTONE—Mabel's Strange Predicament (Comedy)...
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl (Fourth Release—Drama)

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—Colonel's Adopted Daughter (Drama).....1000
MAJESTIC—Just a Song at Twilight (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Dancer (2 parts—Drama).....2000

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 11th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Wife (Drama).....1000
BRONCHO—Romance of the Sea (2 parts—Drama).....2000
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 59 (News).....
RELIANCE—Pat Flannagan's Family (Drama).....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12th, 1914.

AMERICAN—No Release.
DOMINO—The Mystery Lady (2 parts—Drama).....2000
KEYSTONE—A Robust Romeo (Comedy).....
KOMIC—That Spring Lock (Comedy).....
KOMIC—The Plumber and Percy (Comedy).....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Arrowmaker's Daughter (2 parts—Drama)2000
PRINCESS—The Tangled Cat (Comedy).....
THANHOUSER—No Release.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Money Lender (Drama).....
KEYSTONE—Not Yet Announced.
MAJESTIC—Fate's Decree (Drama).....
RELIANCE—The Idler (Drama).....

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 15th, 1914.

APOLLO—The Black Hand Conspiracy (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—The Orange Bandit (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Skating Master (Drama).....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Cricket on the Hearth (2 parts—Drama)2000
KEYSTONE—Raffles, Gentleman Burglar (2 parts—Comedy) 2000
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl (Fifth Release—Drama)...

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—No Release.
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported)
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Reported)

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Sacrifice (Drama).....1000
BRONCHO—Yellow Flame (2 parts—Drama).....2000
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 60 (News).....
RELIANCE—A Working Girl's Romance (Drama).....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, 1914.

AMERICAN—No Release.
DOMINO—The Play's the Thing (2 parts—Drama).....2000
KEYSTONE—Thief Catcher (Drama).....
KOMIC—(Title Not Reported)

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Raiders (2 parts—Drama).....2000
PRINCESS—(Title Not Reported)
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Reported)

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, 1914.

AMERICAN—The "Pote Lariat" of the Flying "A" (Drama) 1000
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Reported)
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Reported)
RELIANCE—(Title Not Reported)

Exclusive Supply Corporation

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 3rd, 1914.

GAUMONT—The Obsession (Drama) .....
GT. NORTHERN SPEC. FEATURE FILM CO.—Pierrot's Love (3 parts—Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 4th, 1914.

BLACHE—Dream Woman (4 parts—Drama) .....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 5th, 1914.

GAUMONT—Oscar Wins the Shopgirl (Comedy).....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 6th, 1914.

ITALA—Shattered Idol (3 parts—Drama) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7th, 1914.

GAUMONT—The Angel of the House (3 parts—Drama)

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9th, 1914.

F. R. A.—Mystery of No. 13 Hill Street (3 parts—Dr.)..

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10th, 1914.

GAUMONT—Leonce at the Chateau D'If (Comedy)....
GT. NORTHERN SPEC. FEATURE FILM CO.—A Woman's Heart (3 parts—Drama) .....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12th, 1914.

GAUMONT—Simple Simon Ragtime Mad (3 parts—Dr.)
GAUMONT—Fan Making (Industry) .....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th, 1914.

ITALA—Convict 113 (3 parts—Drama) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14th, 1914.

GAUMONT—Guilty Secret (2 parts—Drama) .....

Isn't this enough?

The motion picture public grows more exacting daily.

Film manufacturers MUST keep the quality of their output abreast of these conditions.

They MUST know that their films are perfect, and their studios MUST be equipped with the VERY BEST means for demonstrating this.

ASK ANY FILM STUDIO IN AMERICA WHAT PROJECTOR THEY USE, AND WHY.

WE SUPPLY OVER 90% OF THEM.

CAN WE OFFER A MORE FORCIBLE ARGUMENT THAN THIS?

WHY SHOULD YOU HESITATE?

Simplex

The IDEAL PROJECTOR

Illustrated Catalogue A on request

Made and Guaranteed by

PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 East 34th Street, New York

CRITERION

FEATURE FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Announce for shipment, February 11th, a feature film.

THE TRAP
The first release of a company that is going to be famous.

THE TRAP
3 reels.
Shipment February 11th.

THE TRAP
Has a cast of great strength.

THE TRAP
Tells the story of a man who felt the call of the wild and answered it. Tells how the dream of love came to him and of how he made that dream come true.

THE TRAP
Scenes are laid in snow carpeted forests of giant pines, on mountain peaks, and by rushing rivers.

THE TRAP
Shows some truly wonderful photography.

THE TRAP
Has a strong line of printing and publicity pushers in general.

THE TRAP
Is being shown now at our new offices.

THE TRAP
Is something we are proud to show.

THE TRAP

WITH

WILFRED LUCAS

(Biograph leads for 3 years)

AND

JEANNIE MAC PHERSON

(Powers leads for 2½ years)

Three Reels

NEXT RELEASE

The Desert's Sting

Three Reels Shipment Feb. 25th

CRITERION

FEATURE FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY
110 West 40th Street, New York City

KENNEDY FEATURES

INCORPORATED

Announce for Shipment FEBRUARY 18th

A Great Feature Film Presenting

CONSTANCE CRAWLEY AND ARTHUR MAUDE

in a Magnificent Production of

RIDER HAGGARD'S Famous Romance of Love and War

4 REELS 4

JESS

4 REELS 4

A Gripping Story Worthily Staged and Splendidly Acted

1000 SOLDIERS SHOWN IN BATTLE

TERRITORY? (Wire)

Following "JESS" and carrying out our policy of one big feature every two weeks we will offer Miss Crawley and Mr. Maude in a notable production of Oliver Wendell Holmes' world-known story of pre-natal influence:

"ELSIE VENNER" IN 3 REELS; FOR SHIPMENT MARCH FOURTH

TERRITORY ON OUR PRODUCTION OF

The Bride of Lammermoor

READY JANUARY 21st

IS ALL SOLD

WE THINK IT WAS QUICK WORK, DON'T YOU?

TERRITORY ON OUR PRODUCTION OF

Mary Magdalene

READY FEBRUARY 4th

IS NEARLY ALL SOLD

GLAD TO TELL YOU WHAT'S OPEN—WRITE OR WIRE

Our projecting room is open all day and not only are we glad to show our pictures but we take a great deal of pride in showing them.

COME IN!

KENNEDY FEATURES

INCORPORATED

110 WEST 40th STREET NEW YORK CITY

HELEN GARDNER

in

"Fleur-de-Lys"

Chapters from the Life of a Dreamer

WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY CHARLES L. GASKILL

Copyrighted, 1914, by Helen Gardner

"Fleur-de-Lys" is full of pathos, heart-interest and beauty. It is modestly spectacular, and the story grips the interest from the start to the finish. The last 700 feet of this picture holds with an interest unprecedented. The story is fresh and original—a departure from the hackneyed and stale. No better picture has ever been made in America or Europe. Photography perfect. Three reels.

CHARLES V. BARKER, Inc.

General Sales Agent

Worlds Tower Building Suite 601 110-112 West 40th Street, New York City

Have you contracted for a Marion Leonard night at your theatre?

The Star Who Made the Moving Picture Famous 'Round the World

Marion Leonard

Under exclusive engagement to appear

Twice-a-Month

in a series of powerful, splendidly mounted and superbly rendered

THREE PART PRODUCTIONS

Written and directed by STANNER E. V. TAYLOR at MISS LEONARD'S own studio

423 Classon Avenue, Brooklyn

GENERAL SALES AGENTS:

CHARLES V. BARKER, Inc.

SUITE 601, WORLD'S TOWER BDLG., 110 W. 40th ST.

What about that Marion Leonard night every other week?

WHAT THE GODS DECREE

A Story of Adventure in the Pursuit of a Necklace that Carries the Spectator through a Series of Thrilling Episodes and Hairbreadth Escapes

FIVE PARTS

THE HEART OF A POLICE OFFICER

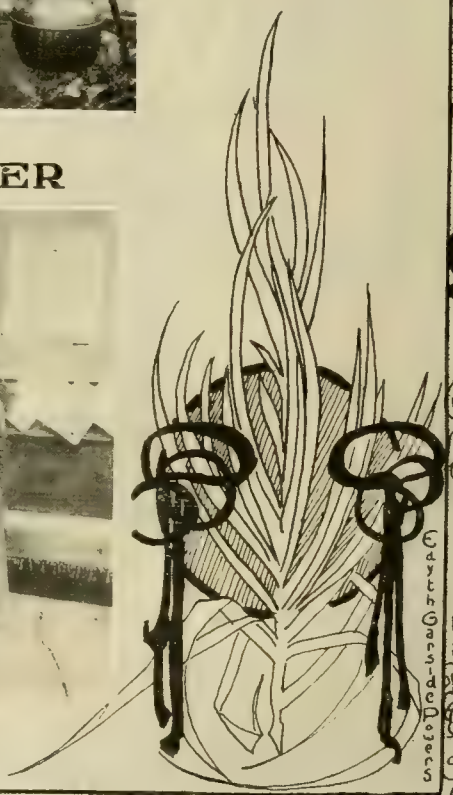
A Realistic Production Showing the Life of a Police Officer.

Full of Heart-Interest and Intrigue.

Carrying a Distinct Punch.

A Marvel of Photography.

FOUR PARTS



IF YOU HAVEN'T PLAYED THESE FEATURES, INVESTIGATE THEM AT ONCE

The Last Days of Pompeii	8 Parts	Sapho	4 Parts
The Two Sergeants	6 Parts	The Golden Cross	3 Parts
Protea	4 Parts	A Ragpicker of Paris	3 Parts
Jack	4 Parts	The Blind Sculptor	2 Parts

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION

110 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

BRANCH OFFICES

NEW YORK	MINNEAPOLIS	KANSAS CITY	BUFFALO
PHILADELPHIA	BOSTON	CINCINNATI	ST. LOUIS
CLEVELAND	INDIANAPOLIS	PITTSBURG	DALLAS

DETROIT CHICAGO WASHINGTON ATLANTA NEW ORLEANS

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION
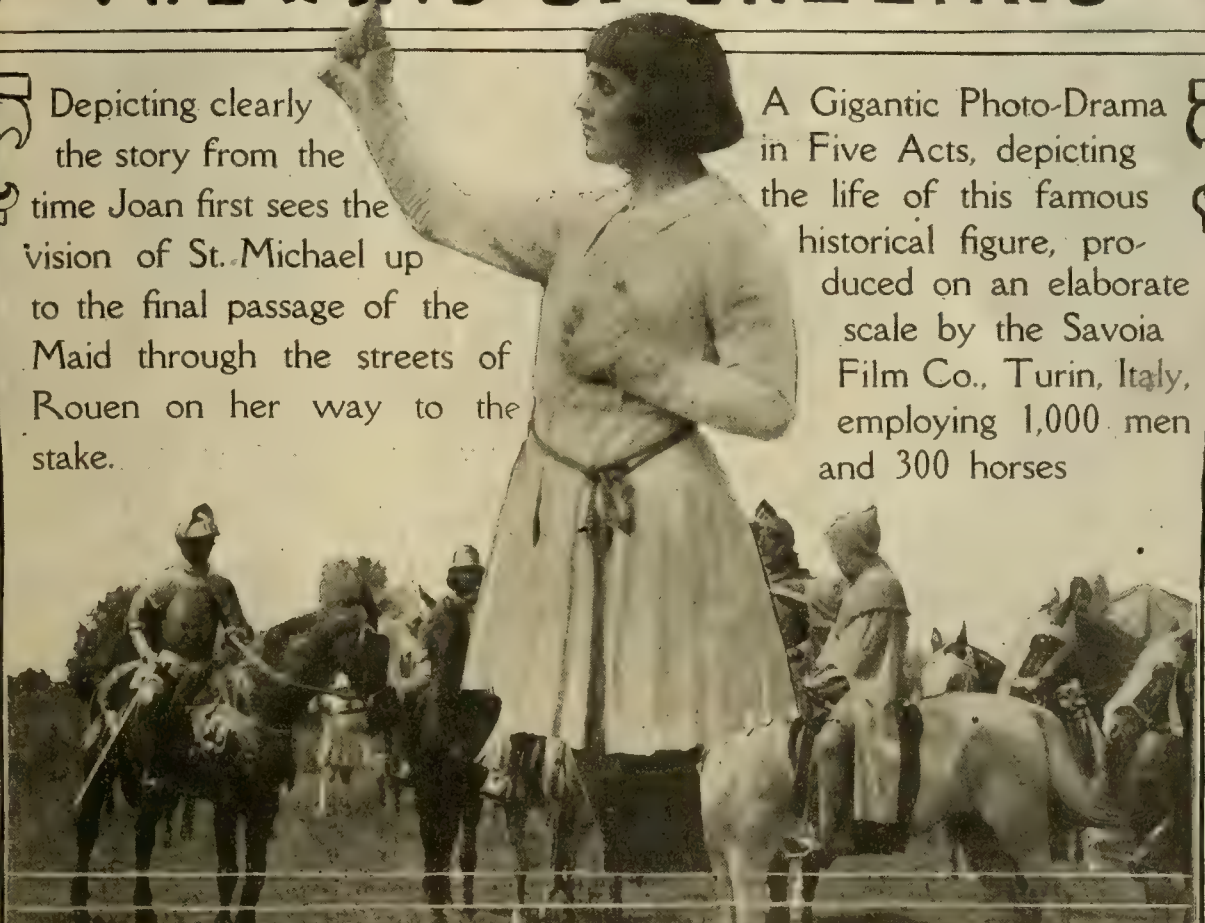
Presents

JOAN OF ARC

THE MAID OF ORLEANS

Depicting clearly the story from the time Joan first sees the vision of St. Michael up to the final passage of the Maid through the streets of Rouen on her way to the stake.

A Gigantic Photo-Drama in Five Acts, depicting the life of this famous historical figure, produced on an elaborate scale by the Savoia Film Co., Turin, Italy, employing 1,000 men and 300 horses



WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION
110 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK CITY
BRANCH OFFICES

NEW YORK	MINNEAPOLIS	KANSAS CITY	BUFFALO
PHILADELPHIA	BOSTON	CINCINNATI	ST. LOUIS
CLEVELAND	INDIANAPOLIS	PITTSBURG	DALLAS
DETROIT	CHICAGO	ATLANTA	NEW ORLEANS

WASHINGTON

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

OPERATOR—And electrician, first class man, 3 years' experience on all machines. Mass. license. Will go anywhere. E. E. SHINDLER, 99 Leverett St., Boston, Mass.

MANAGER—For photoplay house, experienced, best references, salary reasonable. A. C. KREBS, 1422 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ill.

MANAGER—Open for engagement. Ten years' experience; successful, good advertiser. Salary, or salary and commission preferred. Security. If I can't show results in a reasonable time all I ask is legitimate expenses. Address SUCCESSFUL MANAGER, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

WHO WANTS.—A first class stenographer and typewriter; one experienced in handling advertising and publicity. References. Address S. A., care M. P. World, New York City.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR DESIRES ENGAGEMENT.—Expert, 16 years' experience throughout Northern states. For twelve years on road with own show, playing high class theaters. The past four years operator in one of the largest picture theaters in Connecticut. Now at liberty on account of closing of theater. Best possible projection guaranteed. Reliable, do not drink, nor smoke. Salary required, only moderate, and can also furnish, free, without any extra expense, two good Power's machines, and thirty reels of films. Address M. P. OPERATOR, P. O. Box 1372, New Haven, Conn.

EXPERIENCED.—Feature film man would like to open Philadelphia branch. Knows how to get the business. Salary or commission. Address FEATURE, care of M. P. World, New York City.

THOROUGHLY EXPERIENCED.—Combination trap drummer, pianist and live wire manager. Complete outfit, traps, sound effects. Orchestra bells; will buy Xylophone. No vaudeville or orchestra work. State best salary, full particulars. References? Yes. Address COMBINATION, Martinsville, Ind.

CAMERAMAN.—With own outfit, experienced photographer, wants engagement. PHOTOGRAPHER, care of M. P. World, New York City.

MOTION PICTURE SHOW.—Manager desires position. Will buy part interest if business proves O. K. Address I. T., care of M. P. World, New York City.

OPERATOR.—And electrician, New York and New Jersey license, sober and reliable. L. W., 4392 Park Ave., New York City.

YOUNG MAN.—25, with 5 years' experience, desires position as manager of large photoplay theater. G. I., care of M. P. World, New York City.

MANAGER.—Live energetic young man, thoroughly experienced for moving picture or vaudeville house, desires position as manager, can get results with novel ideas of my own. Address "A.," care of M. P. World, New York City.

HELP WANTED.

CAMERA MEN—Owning camera, everywhere, to join animated weekly news service. Confidential. M-M COMPANY, 929 Tribune Building, N. Y.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY.

MANUFACTURERS' STATE RIGHT PROPOSITIONS.—I am able to dispose of state right privileges on good subjects. Address ABILITY, care of M. P. World, New York City.

RESPONSIBLE MAN.—Visiting Europe soon will represent manufacturers offering suitable inducement. Address RESPONSIBLE, care of M. P. World, New York City.

WANTED.—Proposition from moving picture man. Population 5,000. Have building 114 x 32½, best location, lease. Salary or commission on profits. Or expert operator who understands the business. MRS. IVER LARSEN, Decorah, Ia., or E. B. LARSEN, 1702 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, phone Lincoln 6061.

BOOKINGS.—For the "Passion Play." Rent per day $5, $6 and $7, with or without lecture. LUBACK, 1109 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

EXPERT.—Moving picture pianist wants experienced operator as partner to join him opening a theater. Both to put up same amount, and share profits equally. Don't answer unless you mean business. Address L. A. N., care of M. P. World, New York City.

FOR RENT.—Hall for moving pictures, summer 1914, Catskill Mountains. A. N. GRAHAM, Hunter, N. Y.

THEATERS WANTED.

WOULD LIKE.—To buy good paying moving picture business in town of 1,5 0 or more. Iowa or Nebraska preferred. Write J. P. WINTERS, Creighton, Neb.

WANTED TO BUY.—A motion picture theater in town of from 5,000 to 50,000, near New York City. Give seating capacity, average business, opposition, service being used, size of screen and throw, in fact all details in first letter. Quick action if you have the goods. Address replies to G. C. F., care of M. P. World, New York City.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Seating capacity 300 to 1,200—some suitable or vaudeville—guaranteed O. K., with Chicago Ventilation ordinance. HUME, Room 513, 608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in town of 700. A bargain if taken at once. Address BESSIER V. KING, Wakefield, Kan.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER.—In mining town of 7,500, running seven days a week, admission 10 cents straight; two machines and first class equipment, clearing from $125 to $170 a week; best location. Price, $4,000. No trades. WM. H. MUSSELMAN, Rock Springs, Wyo.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, 300 seats, 10-cent house. Doing big business. Reasons for selling, sickness. Call on Sundays. No. 34 Coeyman St., Newark, N. J.

A BEAUTIFUL NEW.—Vaudeville and moving picture theater, seats 900, big stage, best location in city; built last fall; making money. Sale to dissolve partnership account of friction. $40,000 net cost, fifteen year lease, or will sell any portion of stock at par. No trade; nothing but cash. If interested address L. H. RAMSEY, Lexington, Ky.

FOR SALE.—New ground inclined floor theater, 800 orchestra chairs, full equipped stage, fly gallery, dressing-rooms, booth, 2 machines, indirect lighting, good lobby, 2 stores, 2d floor only general assembly hall, 300 chairs, smoking room, ladies' parlor, check room, private office. Central location manufacturing town, 12,000 inhabitants. Rented at $3,436 per year. GEM, care of M. P. World, New York City.

KUHN THEATER, OF LANCASTER, PA.—At public sale Friday, Feb. 13. This is a new theater, and been in continuous operation since built. Has a seating capacity of 1,000, is a money maker. Cost $20,000 to build. Must be sold to settle estate. For information address MRS. MARY J. KUHN, Lancaster, Pa.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

NEW AND SECOND HAND CHAIRS.—At cut prices. Equipments bought and sold. We save you money on outfits. Designs and plans free. REDINGTON CO., Scranton, Pa.

FOR SALE.—1913 Edison Underwriters' model, used three weeks. Price $130 complete. C. LOSSON, 2251 N. Spaulding Ave., Chicago, Ill.

250 CHAIRS.—Whole or part for sale, Andrews fine ply, used only short time, $1.00 each. H. P. CLARK, Ossining, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—New and second-hand machines, all kinds. Write for bargain list. 300 reels at $5 each. Wanted, "Passion Play." WICHITA FILM & SUPPLY CO., 117 No. Topeka Ave., Wichita, Kan.

POCKET SOLDERING TORCH.—Mentioned by Richardson. Have a few on hand, cost a dollar apiece. Will send postpaid. Address BUSINESS MANAGER, THE PHOTOPLAY, Roswell, Ga.

CLOSING OUT SALE.—Of machines, brand new Edison type B mechanism, with chain drive and outside shutter $85, complete machine $140. Special built machine Edison mechanism. Power's 6A equipment $195. Other bargains. CRESCENT FILM EXCH., Washington, C. H., Ohio.

FOR SALE.—Complete moving picture outfit, one hundred fifty dollars. Machine, chairs, screen, etc. F. J. REMBUSCH, "The Mirror Screen Man," Shelbyville, Ind.

FOR SALE.—130 Veneer seat and back opera chairs, three-ply oak, fair condition. Chairs can be seen at N. C. R. Co., or photographs will be forwarded to interested parties. Write PURCHASING DEPT., N. C. R. CO., Dayton, Ohio.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE.—Double film cabinet. Address REGAL FEATURE FILM CO., INC., 381 Sixth Ave., New York City.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

PROFESSIONAL MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS.—Two sizes. Tripods, Zeiss-Tessar 50 m. lenses, $150, $225. Special cameras to order. Repairing all makes. R. W. PITTMAN, 50 West St., N. Y. CITY.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture camera, Tessar 1c 3.5 lens. Tripod revolving head and tilt. P. E. BRANDT, 1243 N. Frazier St., Philadelphia, Pa.

FILMS WANTED.

FILM WANTED.—Would like to rent "Custer's Last Fight" in three reels as produced by the N. Y. Motion Picture Company in 1912. Address BOX 802, Watkins, N. Y.

FILMS FOR SALE.

WILL SELL.—Twelve 2 and 3-reel features with paper for $400. Will ship upon receipt of $50 deposit. JOS. SEIDER, 162 Maujer St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

WRITE FOR OUR LIST.—Of commercial reels, for sale, cheap. All in A1 condition. ROYAL, 145 West 45th St., New York City.

WE HAVE SOME.—Good 2, 3, and 4-reel features with full line of paper in first class condition which have played our circuit. We will sell cheap. Also several new open market samples with full line of paper. None of these subjects shown west of Pennsylvania. FIDELITY FILM CO., 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE.—Have for sale the stock of large exchange retiring from business. 500 commercial with paper in good condition; also 75 features, projection machine, camera, film safe, cases, etc. No reasonable offer refused. Call ROOM NO. 1406, 110 West 40th St., New York City.

FOR SALE.—60 reels from $3 up. Gas-making outfit, stereopticons, etc. WHITE & FLINT, McIndoes Falls, Vermont.

FOR SALE.—3-reel feature "Gypsy Blood," with posters, $45. Wanted, "Washington Under the American Flag." LEVINE, 58 West 118th St., New York City.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE

PIPE ORGANS—Specially constructed for moving picture theaters, with all modern accessories, by Henry Pilcher's Sons, Louisville, Ky. Recent installations: 2Hoppodrome Theater, Dallas, Texas; Queen Theater, Galveston, Texas; Vaudette Theater, Atlanta, Ga.; Newsome Theater, Birmingham, Ala.; Queen Theater, Houston, Texas; Hippodrome Theater, Waco, Texas; Tivoli Theater, Beaumont, Texas. Correspondence solicited.

ELECTRIC PIANOS.—With keyboards, $90 to $125. Orchestrion pianos with pipes, $220. All guaranteed to be in first class condition. 44-note electric players, $70. Must be sold to close out piano business. Send for circular. J. F. HERMAN, 1420 Pa. Ave., Washington, D. C.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AGENTS WANTED—Flame arc lamp. Our new enclosed, long-burning lamp is ready. Superior to any now on the market. Longer life, more candle power, better distribution, lower price. Attractive proposition to responsible agents in position to properly push the sale of this lamp. Write for exclusive territory. HELIOS, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

FEATURE BUYERS.—Get on our mailing list. Brand new two and three-reel features, also second-hand features in perfect condition. 8,000 feet of comedies, brand new. We will act as your representative and save you time and money. 20th CENTURY FEATURE FILM CO., 248 West 35th St., N. Y. City.

SONG VERSE SLIDES.—For rent, reasonable prices; beautifully written and tinted; the newest and best popular songs. Postal for terms. JACKSON SLIDE CO., 3820 Morgan St., St. Louis, Mo.

FILM CLEANING FLUID.—$1.50 per can, makes old film like new, preserves new film. FILM RENOVATING CO., Hartford, Conn.

CAMERA.—Professional instrument of good make wanted. Send full particulars to WM. D. KELLEY, 105 Liberty St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

CRITICAL EYES

HAVE INSPIRED CRITICAL PENS TO CLASS AS THE ZENITH OF ART THE

BETTY NANSEN — RITA SACCHETTO

SERIES OF PHOTO-DRAMAS KNOWN AS OUR

"PREFERRED FEATURE ATTRACTIONS"

BETTY NANSEN
Appearing in:
Princess Elena's Prisoner
Released in January
A PARADISE LOST
For Release in February

The Great Northern Company is to be thanked for as well as congratulated on bringing to the screen Miss Betty Nansen, the justly famous Danish actress. * * * * In the first of the series in which Miss Nansen is seen, her work is superb. It shows quality throughout. The title of the four-reel production is "Princess Elena's Prisoner." * * * It is a rare picture.—Moving Picture World, Dec. 19, 1913.

With Miss Betty Nansen playing the leading role in the absorbing four-reel photo-drama, "Princess Elena's Prisoner," the Great Northern Film Company is to be congratulated upon bringing the photo-drama closer in touch with the stage. * * * * The appearance of Miss Nansen in the screen picture lends a dignity and appeal that is calculated to win its way to the hearts of lovers of genuine photo-dramatic production. — Motion Picture News, Jan. 3, 1914.

STARS OF INTERNATIONAL FAME

Rare Productions for Discriminating Exhibitors

WRITE FOR LIST OF EXCHANGES HANDLING THEM

EXHIBITORS
PLEASE TAKE NOTE

The Territory of New York and New England for our Features is now controlled by the

Box Office Attraction Film Rental Co.
130 W. 46th Street
New York City

RITA SACCHETTO
Appearing in:
The Ghost of the White Lady
Released in January
The Gambler's Penalty
For Release in February

The part of Lady Vera in "The Ghost of The White Lady" is played with infinite charm by Miss Rita Sacchetto. In her we see the hoydenish, resourceful young woman of her own times. * * * * She plainly puts her whole heart in her play and her portrayal becomes a living thing, pulsating with the real red blood of youth.—Moving Picture World, Jan. 13, 1914.

After one has seen "The Ghost of The White Lady" so many pleasing impressions have been created that it would be difficult to recall the faults, if any exist, in this absorbing four-reel photo-play. It is the latest of the Great Northern's "Preferred Feature Attractions" and the particular feature in this instance is Miss Rita Sacchetto, an actress of international repute. * * * * In this limited space it would be impossible to convey the emotions aroused by this photo-play as a whole and the splendid art of Miss Sacchetto. — Motion Picture News, Feb. 7, 1914.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 110 W. 40th St., New York

Think Twice Before You Decide to Get Along Without

Warner's Features

Winning New Converts Every Day Through Sheer Merit

23 Branch Offices to Serve You --- One in Every Large City

Executive Offices:
130 West 46th Street, New York City

Ambrosio

SOME TERRITORY STILL OPEN

FOR THE QUEEN'S HONOR FEATURE IN THREE REELS

PUBLICITY—1, 3, 6 and 8 sheet posters, heralds, cuts, photos and slides.

ATTENTION

Watch for Something Coming

AMBROSIO AMERICAN CO. 15 EAST 26th STREET NEW YORK

SOCIETÀ ANONIMA Ambrosio TORINO

Canadian Bioscope Co., Ltd.

H. T. OLIVER, Vice Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

Presents the Film Classic from beginning to end

EVANGELINE

(Adapted from Longfellow's Immortal Poem)

FIVE REELS

TINTED AND TONED

Made in Annapolis Valley amongst the actual scenes described in the poem

STIRRING — ENTHRALLING — IMPRESSIVE

STAR CAST, PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY, NATURAL SCENERY

BEAUTIFUL PAPER I'S, 2'S, 3'S, 6'S, 12'S, HERALDS, PHOTOS, SLIDES.

When in the harvest heat she bore to the reapers at noon-tide flagons of home-brewed ale.

STATE RIGHTS Now Selling

ADDRESS: 1209 Candler Building
220 West 42d Street, New York City

CLARENCE SCHOTTENFELLS, Sales Manager PHONE 3559 BRYANT

The Symbol of Superiority in Screens the World Over is

Over 7,000 in Universal Use MIRROROIDE Over 7,000 in Universal Use

Get our large free samples. Get the evidence with the eyes that God gave you. Surely, seeing is believing?

IT DOESN'T COST YOU ONE PENNY

MIRROROIDE is the only screen in the world sold under a bona-fide 5-year guarantee. It won't crack, peel, tarnish or oxidize.
No other manufacturer dare make this statement, much less try to substantiate it.

Even Ireland fell into line. Read—

THE J. H. GENTER CO.,
Newburgh, N. Y.

Confirming our cable of yesterday, Jan. 20th, ship two B. Grade Mirroroide Screens, sizes 18 x 13 and 14 x 11, to Picturedrome, Mount Pottinger Road, Belfast, Ireland, and one 18 x 12.6 to Picturedrome, Widness, England.

Yours faithfully,
PICTUREDROME COMPANY.
6 Portland St., Southport, England.

This company has over 40 MIRROROIDE screens in use alone. Why? Ask them.

The largest theatres in the States have installed MIRROROIDE. Why? Ask them.

MIRROROIDE

Is made to fill any requirements as to width of theatre, close up or angle view as to seats. It is made to fill your requirements and conditions. Your choice in Pure Silver White, Silver Amber (Pale Gold), or Silver Flesh (Rose Pink).
If you desire perfect projection,

IT MEANS INSTALL MIRROROIDE

Made, guaranteed and backed up by the largest and only real screen factory in the world. 35,000 feet of floor surface. We make and ship a complete screen every 30 minutes. Your order on the way 5 hours after it is received.

33⅓ CENTS PER SQUARE FOOT Think It Over 33⅓ CENTS PER SQUARE FOOT

Let us show you the evidence, the

RESULTS, WITH YOUR OWN EYES

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc., NEWBURGH, N. Y.

"BE DIFFERENT"

"Let Your House Be The Theatre Beautiful"

Artificial (Electric) Flowers
Delicately Colored—Perfectly Formed

THEY ADD LIFE AND BEAUTY TO A GLOOMY STAGE

THE EFFECT IS SOFT AND ARTISTIC

All flowers are made from French Fireproofed Muslin, Illuminated by one candle-power miniature lamps.

WRITE FOR NEW STAGE DESIGNS

The Schroeder Art Flower Mfg. Co.
6023 Superior Avenue Cleveland, Ohio

POWERS

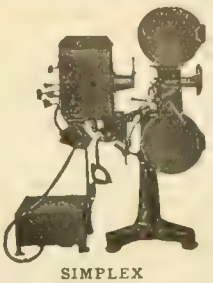
Leadership Implies Some Sort of Superiority

A man or business that stands conspicuously at the head doesn't get there by chance or accident.

That's Where We Stand To-day in the Selling of Motion Picture Supplies.

The explanation is simple---we have done more than make good, we stand behind every article that you purchase from us.

IF IT ISN'T RIGHT---SEND IT BACK
WE'LL MAKE IT RIGHT



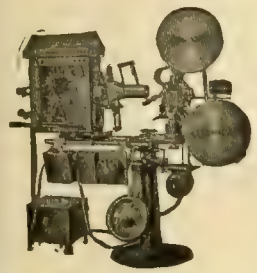
SIMPLEX

We Are Distributors of These Machines and Modern Motion Picture Equipments also Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre

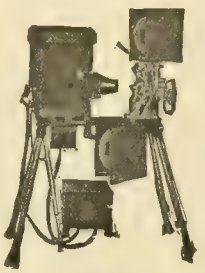
Prompt Shipments Our Specialty

WE SEE TO IT
ACT ON IT
AND SHIP IT
At Once No Delays

Let us convince you we've got what you want



MOTIOGRAPH



EDISON

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

21 East 14th Street New York City

DID YOU SEE OUR SALESROOMS?

PASQUALI AMERICAN CO. Inc.

110 W. 40th St.
2004 World's Tower Building
New York City

G. ALBERT AMATO, Pres.
WILLIAM J. LEE, Mgr.

"UNDER SUSPICION"

IN THREE PARTS

A Sentimental Drama

Ready for Screen Examination at our Show Room

RELEASED FEBRUARY 20th

JUST THREE PRINTS LEFT OF

A SOUL'S TEMPEST

A Psychological Drama In Three Parts

Don't Fail to see our Posters!!!

ALL PASQUALI PICTURES COPYRIGHTED

STATE RIGHT BUYERS

Order Now

THE TYRANNICAL GOVERNMENT

RUSSIA In 4 Reels

Beautiful Lobby Display, Photos, Heralds, Etc.
Act quickly and don't let any one get ahead of you. Buy now and don't regret later

JACOB BERG

145 West 45th Street New York City

AMERICAN—ECLAIR

FEATURE FILMS

DON'T "MUFF" THIS!!!

The American Eclair Company is spending thousands of dollars weekly to produce good pictures.

They have the Camera Experts, the Factory Facilities, the Stock Company and the Directors which only real money can get.

ARE ECLAIR PRODUCTIONS GOOD?

Send for the [Eclair Bulletin] and read the Answer!!!

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY
225 WEST 42nd STREET NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

225 W. 42nd ST., NEW YORK CITY.

"A MARRIAGE OF CONVENIENCE"

In three parts. A wonderful dramatic offering, with a unique story in perfect photography. Featuring Enid Markel, who played the lead in "The Mexican Rebellion." Write or wire for state rights.

"THE MEXICAN REBELLION"

In three parts. Territory sold: Conn., Del., D. C., Ill., Iowa, Kan., Me., Md., Mass., Mich., Mo., Neb., N. H., N. J., N. Y., Okla., Pa., R. I., Va., Vt., W. Va., E. Canada. For open territory address

AMMEX M. P. MFG. CO.

H. J. STREYCKMANS, Sales Mgr.

CANDLER BUILDING NEW YORK CITY

PRISONER OF THE "OWLS"

OR

THE VICTIMS OF REVENGE

A Sensational Feature in 4 Reels

The story is based on the inner workings of the world-known secret society of "Owls," and their methods.

Full of Thrills and Heart Interest

A picture that holds interest in every foot and brings out the power of

BLOOD TIES

State Right Buyers, get busy if you want a live one. Paper, Heralds, Photos, etc.

ITALIAN-AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

FITZGERALD BUILDING

1482 BROADWAY Tel. 7395 Bryant NEW YORK CITY

The New York Olympia Theatre, just opened, seating capacity 1600, up-to-date in every respect, USES THE AUTOMATIC

1500

Moving Picture Theatres in the United States and Canada

USE AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTERS

WHY NOT YOU?

Features—

RAPID, SAFE and CONVENIENT.

ISSUES, COUNTS, REGISTERS and PROTECTS.

If you are interested in

Moving Picture Theatres
Amusement Parks
Baseball Parks
Dancing and Bathing Pavilions
Railways and Ferries
Soda Fountains

Write for Prices and New Booklet which explains fully

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO.

1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK
THIRD NAT'L BANK BLDG., ST. LOUIS

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

ARE you interested in increasing your box office receipts? Are you interested in giving your patrons clear, natural and lifelike pictures, without subjecting them to any glare, or eye strain? If you are, write for particulars about the RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN.

It Will Reduce Your Light Bills Over 50%

IT not only improves your picture wonderfully, but at the same time it allows you to use a lower amperage, thereby cutting your light bills in two and more than paying for itself in a very short time. Write department 17 for complete information.

American Theatre Curtain and Supply Co.

Nulsen Bldg., Olive and 6th Streets, St. Louis, Mo.

G. H. CALLAGHAN
7th floor
Heidelberg Bldg.
New York Office

F. P. BLOOMFIELD
Suite 8-9-10
Hartley Bldg.
Pittsburg Office

BING'S Home Entertainer

Have Motion Pictures at Home

Inexpensive, serviceable and simple to handle. Admirably adapted for use in the home, and throws a picture 3x4 feet on a screen at 3 yards distance under proper lighting conditions.

This Machine can be Retailed at $25—$30
ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED

The Bing Home Entertainer is constructed according to the safety laws of all countries. Parts and repairs given immediate attention by our Service Department.

Write for Terms, etc.

BING BROTHERS, Manufacturers
JOHN BING, Sole Representative
381 FOURTH AVENUE NEW YORK

It certainly is remarkable how well defined the lines in a picture are brought out with

Bio Carbons

Without a question of doubt they are

"The Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. | MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. | SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

EMPRESS

Posters
Photos
Heralds
Slides
Cuts

Competition Forms
Postal Cards
Advertising Cards

SIX SHEET POSTER

The territory remaining open for

The Mystery of the Fatal Pearl

is limited. Do not put off your inquiries until tomorrow, but address them today to

American Kineto Corporation

1018 LONGACRE BUILDING
Broadway at 42nd Street NEW YORK CITY

Posters
Photos
Heralds
Slides
Cuts

Competition Forms
Postal Cards
Advertising Cards

SIX SHEET POSTER

NORTH WESTERN NEW YORK.

(Correspondence Continued from page 829)

M. B. SCHLESINGER, manager of the Academy, recently visited New York to have special scenery built for his new moving picture theater, which he terms "Visions of Art." Special curtains of rich materials are arranged and when they are parted, there are disclosed on the stage a beautiful conservatory, or Roman garden scene, a fountain, flowers and other embellishments. After music by the orchestra, which is seated on the stage, and selections by trained singers, appropriate moving pictures, surrounded by this elaborate setting, are shown. The curtains are then closed. After an intermission the pretty scene is again presented, followed by music and other pictures. This plan is repeated until the pictures have been shown. This novelty was introduced at the Theater Francais, Montreal, by Mr. Schlesinger's brother, G. S. Schlesinger, and proved a decided hit.

Sunday is known as Vitagraph Day at the Happy Hour Theater. Manager Harry Marsey features Vitagraph releases on that day and his Sunday admission has been advanced to ten cents. The plan is proving a success. Mr. Marsey has a wide experience in the moving picture business. At one time he was at the head of a chain of theaters in Niagara Falls, Tonawanda and St. Catharines. Before becoming proprietor of the Happy Hour he managed various houses in Buffalo. He says the Buffalo Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, of which he is president, will hold a smoker in February.

J. Robson Stevens, secretary and treasurer of the Buffalo Feature Film Corporation, recently recovered from a six weeks' illness.

The Buffalo office of Warner's Features, Inc., is booking "The Loyalty of a Savage," produced on Miller Bros.' 101 Ranch. An excellent demand for this production is reported. D. J. Chatkin, manager of the local branch, is at his desk again after an illness of a few days.

Peter Hofmeister, formerly owner of the Majestic Moving Picture Theater in East Ferry street, is now munting posters for local film exchanges. He sold his house to W. J. Bean.

The All Theater Club, of which Grover Bagg is president and George De Rade vice-president, recently held its annual ball. Attaches of all theaters, including moving picture houses, are eligible to membership in this organization. Among the features at the ball were a cabaret show, tango dances and a beauty contest, in which women appearing at local theaters entered. Prizes were given.

Keith's Theater recently presented for the first time in Buffalo Lubin's four-part feature, "The Battle of Shiloh." Special advertising and extra music were used by Manager Davis. This was given on a Sunday only and the house was crowded.

E. Meadows, manager of the special feature department of the General Film Company's Buffalo branch, recently gave a private exhibition of "The Lion and the Mouse," Charles Klein's production, at the Globe Theater. This exhibition was for exhibitors only. The picture was enthusiastically received. Among those present was Mr. Wood, of the new Winter Garden Theater of Jamestown, who reported prosperous business at his house. His patrons appreciate his efforts to secure the very best material in the film market. William H. Kneib, of the new Wilkay Theater, Erie, Pa., was also present. The features which he has been booking have proved crowd-bringers.

"The Third Degree," the first of the special features released by the General Film Company, was shown to crowded houses at the Strand. So great was the congestion in the lobby and sidewalk in front of the house at the opening show that policemen had to prevent the blocking of traffic. On account of the popularity of the pictures Manager Harold Edel, of the Strand, extended the engagement of the feature. He has also booked "The Lion and the Mouse."

Mr. Edel has promoted a company which will build in Buffalo a large dance hall. In the center will be suspended a huge screen, on which moving pictures showing the latest steps in dancing will be presented. These will take the place of regular dancing instructors. The pictures will be visible on both sides of the screen. Mr. Edel says he is planning to use "The Dances of Today," by the Universal Company, and "Motion Picture Dancing Lessons," by the Kalem Company. After the various steps are shown and practised by the dancers, the instructions are ended. A varied program of regular pictures is then given for the delectation of the patrons, who at the same time may indulge in dancing to their heart's content. The hall will be 100 by 150 feet and will accommodate 1,500 couples. The location will be announced later. There will be an orchestra of fifteen pieces. There will be an entrance 20 feet wide and 118 feet deep and in connection with this will be a cloak and wash rooms, refreshment stands, etc. The price of admission to the pavilion will be ten cents and checking will be free. Each dance will be five cents extra.

Mr. Edel has been using a large ad in the Buffalo Sunday Times to boom "The Adventures of Kathlyn" in moving pictures. His advertising has been used in connection with a serial story on the same subject in that paper. Ten thousand copies of The Times, containing the story and advertisement, were given free in the Strand lobby and the returns from this enterprise were very satisfactory. Mr. Edel has increased his Strand orchestra to ten pieces.

S. S. Webster is meeting with success as manager of the Globe Theater in Main street. His house is conceded to be one of the best equipped and best managed in this part of the state. His operating booth is a model and the other equipments are thoroughly up-to-date.

"The Second Adventure of Kathlyn" has been drawing crowds to the Marlowe Theater, Virginia and West avenues. William Leyser has been manager of this house since its opening a few months ago. Before coming to Buffalo he had had experience in moving picture theaters in Long Island.

Kate Burr, a writer for The Buffalo Times, recently interviewed Foster Moore, Buffalo manager of the George Kleine attractions, and used his picture. The subject discussed was "Antony and Cleopatra," the spectacle offered by Manager Laughlin, of the Majestic Theater.

Manager Cornell, of the Star, has booked "Quo Vadis?," the George Kleine pictures, for four Sundays. The public has responded generously to the offering. Mr. Moore has issued a brochure on "Quo Vadis?"

Mitchel H. Mark, of the Mark-Brock Theatrical Enterprises, reports that his company is planning to begin this spring the construction of a new playhouse on the site of the Academy Theater, Buffalo, and adjoining property. It is estimated that the building and location will cost upwards of $1,250,000. He says there will be a roof garden in connection with the theater. The orchestra will seat 1,300, the balcony 900, and the gallery 900. The roof, which will have a capacity of 1,900, will be like a palm garden and there will be a wide promenade around the outside. There will be a fine view of Lake Erie. The roof will be arranged so that it can be opened or closed without delay. High class vaudeville and moving pictures will be put on in the main theater and musical offerings will be the feature in the roof garden. Mr. Mark will cater to refined patronage. The new theater will be strictly fireproof and modern in every detail.

Work on the new Palace Moving Picture Theater at 327 Main street, Buffalo, will begin shortly by the Mitchel H. Mark Palace Theater Company. The building will be three stories high. The Mitchel H. Mark Theater Company will have its offices on the upper floors. The theater will seat 1,200. The building will cost $100,000 and will be completed next fall. An expensive organ will be a feature. The officers of the company are: President, Mitchel H. Mark; vice-president, Samuel Weill; secretary and treasurer, Eugene L. Falk. Simon Stein and Moe Mark are on the board of directors.

"Our Mutual Girl," released by the Mutual Film Corporation, has proved a big drawing card at the Family Theater, managed by Walter H. Foster. Hundreds of Buffalo men and women enjoyed the varied experiences of Norma Phillips, the interpreter of the role. Her costly gowns were especially admired by the female patrons. There is a story of rare heart interest running through the production. Mr. Foster recently spent a week in New York, searching for big features for the Family Theater.

The Garden Theater, Buffalo, which plays burlesque during the week, with moving pictures on Sundays, has been bought by the International Railway Company and a station will be erected on the site. The future plans of the Garden Theater Company have not been announced.

Moving pictures were used by Emery C. Kolb in his lecture on "The Canyons of Colorado," delivered here recently. The films were made in the fall and winter of 1911-12, when the Kolb brothers made a trip of 1,400 miles through the waters of the Grand Canyon country. At some places where they camped, there was no fuel and yards of moving picture film, it is said, had to make up the deficiency. Many pictures and films were lost when the boats overturned.

Manager Marcus, of the New Lyric, recently had as an extra feature at his regular Sunday concert an Irish moving picture, entitled "For Ireland's Sake." Mr. Marcus has introduced a change in policy by which every seat in the theater at matinees will be sold for 10 cents. In the future Monday night at the New Lyric will be known as Tango night and there will be a contest for cash prizes. Wednesday night will be "country store night." All kinds of gifts are given, from feather beds to valuable watches. The only condition is that the winner has to take his gift from the stage. There will be professional try-outs at the New Lyric on Friday nights.

The Niagara Falls Board of Health has issued an order closing the theaters there indefinitely. The action was practically forced by the Protestant clergy of the city, who on a recent Sunday voluntarily closed their churches until health conditions improved.

In an effort to prove to Mayor Edgerton and the members of the common council that the sentiment in Rochester, N. Y., is overwhelmingly in favor of Sunday moving picture shows, the proprietors of the Rochester moving picture theaters have sent out to patrons 10,000 cards which, when filled out, will be submitted to the council. The cards will be given out at all the moving picture theaters and patrons will be asked to sign. The statement on the card is that the subscriber, a citizen of the city of Rochester, of full age, is in favor of an amendment to the city ordinance, permitting the exhibition of moving pictures on Sunday afternoons and evenings.

A report from Manchester Village, N. Y., says: "A vacant lot in Main street here has been purchased from A. W. Hawkes by John Gilman, manager of the Pastime Theater, who will erect a moving picture theater on the site. The building will cost about $5,000. It will be built of tile, and will seat about four hundred.

Managers of Rochester, N. Y., theaters have received from Commissioner Owen, of that city, a letter asking their co-operation in a plan for the prevention of panics in theaters and places of amusement. The managers are asked to display on the picture screen or on the theater programs the following:

"Fire notice. Look around now. Choose the nearest exit to your seat; in case of fire walk, not run, to that exit. Do not try to beat your neighbor to the street."

On account of a number of complaints from school teachers and others, Humane Agent Koerbel, of Binghamton, N. Y., has warned the owners of all moving picture theaters in that city that the law regarding the attendance of children at such places will hereafter be enforced to the letter.

The new Beekman block in Dundee, N. Y., will be completed in February. On the second floor will be the Beekman Theater, which has been leased to James M. Porter, of Canandaigua. Moving pictures will be shown on nights when no regular performance is given.

Attaches of the Shubert Theater, Rochester, recently presented Elmer Walters, retiring manager, a loving cup.

M. F. Beier has succeeded H. G. Segal as manager of the Buffalo office of the World Special Films Corporation. Mr. Beier was formerly connected with the Pathe Freres and Gaumont companies and was in business under the firm name of the Emby Feature Film Company, New York City. Each week he is sending out a "reel talk" to all the exhibitors in this territory, advising them just what he offers and telling them how to advertise big productions.

BILLY BISON.

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

IT is reported that the ministerial association of Wichita, Kan., at a recent meeting, advocated a plan whereby children under sixteen years of age would be barred from moving picture theaters unless they are accompanied by their parents.

Hartley Palmer, who owns a moving picture show at Fairport, Ohio, has purchased the Casino Theater at Geneva, Ohio, from C. W. Mathews.

Dr. A. L. Noble, medical superintendent of the state hospital for insane at Kalamazoo, Mich., recently made public announcement of the benefits received by the unfortunate wards of the state through the judicious use of moving pictures. The policy of giving them three photoplay shows a week has proven very helpful.

The draft of an ordinance to be sponsored before the city council of Springfield, Mo., was prepared by the Good Mothers Club of that city, which is anxious to see certain features, such as murder, suicide, marital unfaithfulness and subjects which deal with the birth of illegitimate children, eliminated from the moving picture theaters. Their proposed censorship also is directed at the vulgar vaudeville numbers and other improper stage attractions. The ordinance contemplated vests the power to judge shows in the police and other city officials. A fine of not less than $5 for each offense is provided and the right of the mayor to revoke licenses is offered for clubbing the exhibitors into good conduct.

Municipal inspectors of Omaha, Neb., have reported themselves as very well pleased with what they found on a tour of moving picture theaters preliminary to the renewal of licenses. Two houses were mildly criticized for allowing rubbish to accumulate.

The Muncie Lyric Theater Company of Muncie, Ind., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $10,000, to operate theaters. The incorporators are: George D., J. B. and D. M. Williston.

First-run Mutual service and a popular concert orchestra are the features of the new policy at the Butterfly Theater in Milwaukee, Wis.

Construction of the new $45,000 auditorium at Waukesha, Wis., has begun. Two theatrical attractions a week probably will be played and the rest of the week devoted to vaudeville and moving pictures.

Mayor Dahlman, of Omaha, Neb., has proposed an annual tax of ten cents a seat a year for moving picture theaters of that city instead of a flat rate fee—now $75 a year. As few of the photoplay houses seat as many as 750, the revenue of the municipality would be reduced under the new plan.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE
Moving Picture World
Domestic $3.00 per Year
Canada $3.50 per Year
Foreign $4.00 per Year

THIS TRADE MARK IS YOUR GUARANTEE

THIS trade mark on a package of carbons is your guarantee that they are the most satisfactory and efficient projector carbons made. The best picture is dependent on clear, steady, brilliant, white light for perfect reproduction. Of this you may be assured when using "ELECTRA" Pink Label Carbons, and if you are not already using them, samples will gladly be sent on request.

HUGO REISINGER

Sole Importer, United States and Canada

11 BROADWAY NEW YORK

ELECTRA

NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA.

MESSRS SMITH & Hablow are hard at work on their new Palace Theater, Calais, Me., which is due to open by February 15. The Palace has been built as a strictly high grade photoplay theater, with no expense spared in construction. The theater will seat about 500. The color scheme is a soft red, with cream colorings. C. Hablow has decided to open with the Universal program, and states that it is his intention to run his house along high-class lines.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts is giving its entire attention to the First Annual Ball, to be held at Symphony Hall, Boston, on February 17.

Mrs. Josephine Clement, who has managed B. F. Keith's Bijou Dream Theater, Boston, has severed her connection with that house.

Benjamin E. Pickett, manager of B. F. Keith's Theater, Lowell, Mass., and Miss Franklin E. Wood, of Dorchester, Mass., were married this week.

"Les Miserables" was the feature attraction at a benefit given under the auspices of the Boston Council of Jewish Women, at Tremont Temple, this week. The picture was secured through the courtesy of the Gordon Brothers Amusement Company, which has the rights for this nine-part subject for New York and New England.

Nathan Gordon will present "Les Miserables" in New York City at the Carnegie Lyceum, beginning January 26. Richard Henry Warren, now at the keys of the Gordon and Lord Olympia theaters, Boston, will be transferred to New York City, in order to handle the organ at the Carnegie Lyceum. It is possible that "Les Miserables" will play a return engagement at Tremont Temple, Boston, as the feature did unusually well there during a six weeks' engagement, this fall.

A new theater is now nearly ready for its opening performance at Woodland, Maine. The house has installed a Power's 6A Cameragraph machine, secured from Charles Stern, of the Universal's Bangor, Me., office.

Another theater, to be devoted to vaudeville and pictures, will be erected directly opposite Franklin Park, Boston. The house will have a large frontage on Blue Hill avenue, Elmo street and Old Road. This Property was formerly owned by the Boston Elevated Railway Company, and was purchased some time ago by Abraham Kurinsky, who sold a part of it to the Franklin Park Theater Company. There is 11,000 square feet of land. Work on the new theater will be begun at once, from plans by Funk & Wilcox, which will call for a house of concrete and stone, to seat 1,500 persons, to contain every modern improvement. The estimated cost is about $150,000, and a thoroughly modern theater is anticipated.

Sherman L. Whipple has sold to C. W. Rowell the brick buildings and 5,000 square feet of land at 136-144 Court street, Boston. This property was formerly occupied by the Jolliette Theater, and is now known as the Empire Theater, using General Film Service.

A new incorporation is the New Columbia Amusement Company, at Bath, Maine. This is a $10,000 concern, with O. F. Frye, Scott. R. Frye and F. C. Cox as the promoters.

The New Orpheum Theater Company incorporated this week at Cambridge, Mass., for $1,000, with David Kasanof, John Herbert and William Hurwitz, as the promoters.

The Boston Local, Moving Picture Operators' Union, met this week and unanimously voted against the "faked" sensational pictures of a certain class, and every member pledged himself to do all in his power to discourage their use. The meeting, which began at midnight, concluded at 4 P. M. Each session approved the vote of the first, on the objectionable films. The local's officers, in explaining the action of the organization, said: "Certain film makers are making a specialty of producing 'feature' pictures designed to appeal to a particularly morbid class, portraying recent catastrophies, tragedies, etc. The display of these questionable fakes cause criticism by people who are at all times ready to decry the moving picture business in general. There is also a general agitation at present, by clergy, press, and the general public, for civic advancement and purity, much of which is absolutely proper and for the best interests of all. While these exaggerated, sensational, and in many cases, morbid feature films are exhibited, the public is entitled to criticize not only them, but the moving picture business in general. We will notify all the unions of moving picture operators of the country, and also all film exchanges, of our action, and ask the co-operation of all in this movement." The Boston local is insisting on uplift—as much as lies within its power, and is growing in strength.

Business Agent William Franke of the Boston local of the Operators' Union, reported this week on conferences with the Boston School Committee regarding its employment of non-union operators at the evening centers. Mr. Franke stated that the school officials reported that, as some licensed operators who are friendly to the committee, were willing to give their services gratis, they would like an expression from the union as to whether it objected to persons working for no compensation for the school board. The union answered that it did object to gratis services, and also objected to any non-union man doing any work for the City of Boston. Treasurer Barrows was presented by the union with a stick-pin, as a mark of appreciation. Proposed legislation in the present Massachusetts Legislative session was also discussed.

The American Feature Film Company, Boston, filed its certificate of incorporation this week, as a $2,000 concern, with L. B. Mayor, M. M. Mayor and C. H. Poor named as the owners.

Arthur Allen, of Bangor, Me., has again joined forces with Pope McKinnon, and once more is managing both the Star and Palace theaters. The Star Theater Company has been formed, with $10,000 capital, and Pope D. McKinnon, Paul C. Turner and M. W. Hynes as the officers. Manager Allen has decided to use the Universal program in both the Star and Palace theaters, with features now and then as added attractions.

J. W. Greely, of the Greely and Casco theaters, Portland, Me., visited Boston this week, to look the general field over. Mr. Greely has two successful houses in Portland, and is a first class showman, knowing the moving picture business from A to Z.

Messrs. Jones & Clark, of the Huntington Avenue Theater, Boston, have taken a lease on the Lynn Theater, Lynn, Mass., for a period of fifteen weeks, as a try-out. On January 24, this concern tendered the Lynn Board of Trade a complimentary entertainment. Stock company attractions and Universal pictures will be used at the Lynn house.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union, Local 182, Boston, has decided to hold a banquet for the members, their wives, mothers, daughters and women friends.

J. J. Hayes, of the Victoria Theater at Greenfield, Mass., reports excellent business at his Cosy Theater. Mr. Hayes is now using the Universal program, having switched recently.

V. R. Landry is ready to open his new Crown Theater, 76 Lafayette street, Haverhill, Mass., and states he anticipates good trade.

Harry F. Campbell, of Warner's Features, Boston, says: "The response to our decision to rent features to all houses, without contracts, has been tremendous. Many houses are now booking with us who formerly would not, due to their objection to signing for our entire output." Mr. Campbell feels that this move is in the best interests of exhibitors as a whole.

Scholz & Marsh are booking the Kalem six-part feature "From the Manger to the Cross," from their offices at the Olive Theater, Bridgeport, Conn. These people have the state rights for Connecticut and Rhode Island.

The World Special Films Corporation intends to open three offices in Canada to supply theaters in that country with their features.

The Eastern Feature Film Company, Boston, has purchased the New England State rights for "The Mysteries of Richmond Castle," a four-part production of Midgar Features.

George Kleine attractions now have a New England office located at 849 Old South Building, Boston.

"Antony and Cleopatra," is booked for His Majesty's Theater, Montreal, starting February 16.

Ray S. Averill, who has been manager of Poli's Theater, Waterbury, Conn., for two years, left this house on January 11, and is now in charge of one of Mr. Poli's theaters at Springfield. Before leaving, Mr. Averill was presented with a gold cigarette case, and a gold cigar cutter by the employees. Manager Eugene Wilson, of the Garden Theater, Waterbury, has succeeded Mr. Averill.

Edison's talking pictures are being exploited by Manager A. R. London, of the Grand Theater, Hamilton, Canada.

Manager M. C. Blumenberg, of the New Portland Theater, Portland, Me., finds business vastly improved since reopening after alterations and renovations have been made.

J. W. Greely opened the Casco Theater, Portland, Me., under his management, on January 19. General Film Service is used at the Casco.

Lubin's "The Third Degree," was offered at the Empire Theater, Portland, Me., this week, to good returns.

Poli's Theater, Springfield, Mass., has given up stock-company productions and has inaugurated a policy of six vaudeville acts and six reels of pictures. Mr. Stewart Lithgow, who was managing this house, has severed his connections with the theater, being succeeded by Ray S. Averill.

The mayor of Springfield, Mass., has a new set of rules and regulations that must be observed by all moving picture theaters desiring to continue giving Sunday performances, a copy of which was sent to each exhibitor.

Victor Roberts reports that business at the Lowell, Mass., Opera House, has improved by leaps and bounds, since it was reopened on January 5, under new management. Vaudeville and pictures are offered by Manager Roberts.

Manager L. H. McDuffee, of the Scenic Theater, Rochester, N. H., is now using the Universal service, and reports fine business.

The Rutland, Mass., State Sanitarium, is about to install a moving picture machine.

Mrs. Emma Hood, the busy manageress of the Tremont Theater, Claremont, N. H., has changed her name to Mrs. Hood-Therian—which means that Mrs. Hood has married! The Tremont Theater has switched its film service and now uses Universal pictures.

The pictures of the Captain Scott South Pole expedition started an engagement at Tremont Temple, Boston, on January 26.

HENRY.

MISSOURI.

JULIUS SINGER has taken hold of the World's Leader Feature Film Company in Kansas City, occupying the offices in the Gloyd building, formerly used by the American Feature Film Company. The latter has abandoned Kansas City as far as maintaining a branch office is concerned, and will transact all of its Western business from St. Louis.

Moving pictures have proved so popular at the Lyric that Manager Joe Donegan has decided to make this form of amusement permanent. Box office receipts have increased steadily since the silent drama was inaugurated.

The Dixie Theater, which led a precarious existence on Westport avenue for several months, has been closed. The house was a small one and could not hold its own in competition with more modern ones in that section of the city.

Visitors to the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco in 1915 will have the opportunity of touring Missouri via the moving picture route. The exposition commissioners in charge of the Missouri exhibit, have decided to utilize somewhere between 1,000 and 5,000 feet of film to show the resources of the State. An auditorium is to be erected for the display of the film, which will be made in the near future and censored by the commission.

Animated pictures formed an important part of the program of the Western Retail Implement and Vehicle Dealers' Association, which recently held its twenty-fifth annual convention in Kansas City. The convention was held at the Lyric Theater, where special pictures were shown for the implement men.

The opening gun of the Universal campaign of advertising recently was fired in Kansas City, that company taking half pages in the daily papers to convince the public that there is more than one high grade distributor of film in the business. The Universal copy was as attractive as that utilized by the Mutual Film Corporation, a cut of the globe being shown, surrounded by Universal stars. Photographs of the latter were included in the Universal displays with the name of the company to which the various actors are associated.

H. W. Glickauf has met with marked success during his initial term as manager of the new Kansas City office of the George Kleine attractions. These productions have built up a sterling reputation among Kansas City exhibitors, and are proving as popular as ever. The new Kleine branch is located in the American Bank building.

The city council of Joplin, Mo., has passed an ordinance designed to prevent panics among audiences in moving picture theaters in case of fire. According to the new measure, exhibitors are required to flash the following notice on the screen prior to each performance: "For Public Protection—Fire hazard is principally confined to the fireproof booth and does not imperil the spectators. Protection is ample. In event of any alarm, avoid excitement. Take time. Move quietly to exits marked by red light." The ordinance seems to have a good many good features and few bad ones and exhibitors are inclined to think that this sort of legislation is worth while from all viewpoints.

The Orpheum, Cozy and Best theaters, of Topeka, Kan., have signed contracts with union stage employees and musicians, ending a disagreement that threatened to develop into something serious. All three of the moving picture theaters will utilize union help exclusively in the future. Advertisements to that effect were run in the daily papers of that city and the situation again is serene.

MURRAY.

IOWA.

JOHN M. PETERS has opened a moving picture theater at Dumont.

A five and ten-cent store in Dubuque recently gave away with purchases, tickets to the Amuse-U, Royal, Family and Woodland photoplay theaters.

The ordinance requiring moving picture machine operators to have municipal permits has gone into effect at Sioux City. The age of the operators is restricted, and new rules regarding the conduct of operating rooms are promulgated.

Hall & Mitchell, of Vinton, who operate a string of photoplay houses in Iowa, have purchased the Orpheum at Marion, from B. W. Umreit, and will locate in that city.

F. J. Smid has purchased a site on Fourteenth avenue in Cedar Rapids, and next spring will erect a moving picture theater which will seat 500 persons.

E. L. Ball, who has been operating a moving picture show at Blockton, has also opened a show at Diagonal, giving performances each Thursday and Saturday night.

E. G. Fargo, president of the Iowa state association of exhibitors, who has been in the photoplay business at Algona the last three or four years, has purchased a house at Redwing, Minn., whic he will operate.

A. W. Keeling, of Minneapolis, Minn., has purchased and assumed charge of the Royal Theater, on North Main street, in Charles City, which has been conducted by C. J. Calvert. Calvert probably will go West in the spring.

Porter Reeves has purchased the Opera House at Leon, from Van Werden & Ogilvie.

The Majestic Theater, at Onawa, was recently purchased for one show by a local druggist, who was celebrating his tenth anniversary in business, and wished to entertain all the children of the town.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

All Star Feature Corporation

Presents America's Popular Star

DUSTIN FARNUM

in a Six-Part Moving Picture of

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS' POWERFUL STORY OF REVOLUTION AND ADVENTURE

"SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE"

By Courtesy of Charles Scribner's Sons Co.

Produced in Cuba with the Aid of the

CUBAN ARMY AND UNITED STATES NAVY

under the personal direction of

AUGUSTUS THOMAS

A Complete Story of the Making of this Picture in

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE FOR MARCH

NEXT RELEASE

EUGENE WALTER'S GREAT THEATRICAL FIVE SEASON HIT

"PAID IN FULL"

With members of the original Broadway cast, including

TULLY MARSHALL

— 5 PARTS —

A WONDERFUL LINE OF ADVERTISING MATERIAL

Especially Written Musical Scores by

MANUEL KLEIN

Musical Director of the New York Hippodrome

Art Photos, Lobby Frames, Post Cards, Brochures, Heralds, Press Notices and Stories, 1-2, 1, 3, 6, 8, 12 and 24 Sheet Lithos.

There is a Booking Office in Your Territory.

ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION

HARRY RAVER
President

220 W. 42d St., New York

AUGUSTUS THOMAS
Director General

LICENSED FILM STORIES

EDISON.

THE ADVENTURE OF THE EXTRA BABY—(Second story of Octavius—Amateur Detective—Feb. 16).—One morning while on his customary walk in the park, Octavius was confronted by the tragic spectacle of a mother who had lost her child. The mother, Mrs. Brown, explained that her little darling had wandered off while her back was turned for a moment's gossip. His sympathies and detective instincts alike aroused, Octavius immediately set forth on the search. The only data with which the bereaved parent was able to furnish him was the fact that her precious pet was clothed in a white sweater and leggings.

Oddly enough, there were a good many children in the park that morning who were clad in white sweaters and leggings. Each time Octavius encountered one he slyly appropriated it and carried it to Mrs. Brown, but without rousing that lady from her gloom. At last the prodigal lamb returned of his own accord. The grateful mother snatched him up with loud cries of delight and departed hastily. Octavius was left on the bench with an assorted variety of white sweatered children. He was not left long. An outraged army of nurse maids and mothers descended upon him in wrath and claimed their own with many threats of vengeance. After all the furore was over, Octavius prepared to take his leave when he suddenly discovered that one baby remained on the bench beside him. Octavius was in a fix. It was getting late. He could not very well leave the child on the bench and his pride forbade him to inform the police. So he took the baby home.

The next morning, after a strenuous afternoon and evening with the baby, the delighted Octavius discovered an advertisement in the newspaper offering a large reward for the return of the Van Allen baby. Octavius took the child to the address, gently called the Van Allen's attention to his marvelous detective ability and refused the reward. Out of gratitude, Mrs. Van Allen's beautiful sister invited the detective to dinner the following night. Octavius thought he had made quite a hit, but his delight was nipped in the bud when, just before dinner, the girl introduced him to Mr. Douglas, her fiance.

SOPHIA'S IMAGINARY VISITORS (Feb. 17).—Senator David Beasley had the reputation of being a reticent man, which was the principal reason why he received his party's nomination for the governorship. Beasley accepted the honor with his usual quietness, and set about his campaign with apathy. Among the people who were angered by Beasley's attitude was Kate Robinson, his fiancee, and she broke her engagement with him. Before Beasley was able to comprehend all that the loss of Kate was going to mean to him, he receives a surprise from an entirely unexpected quarter. The death of a relative threw the entire care of little Sophia Brown upon him.

Sophia was a nervous, delicate little thing, with a distinct tendency toward melancholia. In the first few weeks after her arrival, the anxious Beasley was at his wits' end to discover a way to amuse her. Then he found that Sophia had one of the most delightfully sensitive imaginations in all the world.

Kent Hardman, a newspaper reporter, passed Beasley's home one evening, and discovered the senator on the front doorstep talking affectionately to a dog, which the closest observation on the part of the puzzled reporter failed to materialize. From that date the report gradually spread that Beasley was a trifle queer. Then suddenly the news came to the machine candidate for governor that Beasley was giving a large entertainment at his home. Filled with contempt for his opponent's methods of gaining popularity, the rival candidate went up to Beasley's house to investigate. He was joined outside the house by Kate and the reporter. A man was driving an empty carriage around the block in which Beasley's house was situated. Each time the carriage drew up before the door, Beasley appeared, shook hands with the empty air, and escorted invisible people into the house. The watchers looked at each other in bewilderment. Then they went to the window and peered in. What they saw was a small child, whose dreamy eyes were filled with utter happiness, because a "grown up" had entered her game of make believe. The machine candidate stole quietly away, and Kate entered the house. "You have so many lovely people here tonight," she said to Beasley and Sophia. "Haven't you room for—for just one fool?"

COURTING BETTY'S BEAU (Feb. 18).—If one happens to be young, pretty and attractive, an elder sister is not always absolutely imperative to one's happiness. For, in the best regulated families, it is considered a matter of considerable importance that the daughters should enter into the holy state of matrimony in the order of their seniority. Hence, an unmarried elder sister is sometimes a source of bitter tears to her junior, who is obliged to wear short dresses and go to children's parties, when her whole inclination is to capture a young man for herself. If one elder sister is unfortunate, it may readily be imagined what it would mean to have three. That was the case with Betty. She was, by all odds, the prettiest in the family, but as she was also the youngest in the family, she was generally regarded as a mere infant.

Thus, one morning, when Betty twisted her ankle, and a young man picked her up and carried her home in his automobile, none of the sisters would have believed for a moment that any romance could result, so far as Betty was concerned. To be sure, the young man called the very next day, but the older sisters assumed quite naturally that he was calling on them, and monopolized him to such an extent that he could not get a word in edgewise with Betty. Every time he called, the same thing happened. His arrival at the house was a signal for a general rush in his direction by three girls he had no interest in at all. One day he sent Betty a note advising her of the fact that he intended calling on her that afternoon, and that he could probably survive the disappointment if she could manage to get rid of her sisters. The sisters intercepted the note, sent Betty away on an errand, and going into the kitchen, started preparing dainties for Jack.

The dainties were not an entire success because each sister endeavored to help her own cause by covertly putting vinegar, pepper or salt in the preparations of the other two. Jack tasted the awful results, and fled. A little later he met Betty. They bought a lot of groceries, stole quietly into the kitchen, and prepared a Lusullian banquet for themselves. The sisters found them, and decided that the only thing left was a graceful surrender. So they went away and left Betty with her beau.

ALL FOR HIS SAKE (Special—2 parts—Feb. 20).—When his daughter, Fanny, married George Archer, Edward Thornton, the wealthy connoisseur of gems, shrugged his shoulders. Archer was a nice enough chap, to be sure, but he was actively engaged in business. Thornton always felt somewhat suspicious of business men. His suspicions were brought to a certainty when his son-in-law asked him for a loan of $30,000 some months after the marriage. Thornton refused him the money. He believed a man should stand upon his own feet, and moreover, he suspected Archer of speculating.

Archer had long been interested in a risky western land venture. The venture failed, and he found himself deeply in debt to one of his business friends, Paul Bruce. Unknown to Archer, Bruce had fallen in love with his wife. Although the affair had never gone as far as an open declaration on Bruce's part, Fanny sensed his feeling toward her, and feared him. When she learned that her husband was in debt to Bruce, and that Bruce refused to grant him an extension on his loan, she realized that a net was closing about her.

When Thornton refused to give Archer the money, Fanny decided on a desperate plan. She stole eight valuable fire opals from her father's collection and sold them. But because the jeweler would not give her quite enough on the opals, she added to them a valuable ring of her own. She gave the money thus gained to her husband, lightly passing off her means of getting it. The desperate Archer took it gratefully, but after he had paid Bruce, was tormented with doubts. Who had given Fanny the money? Long brooding on the subject at last convinced him that Bruce could have been the only source. Confronted by the angry husband, Bruce neither admitted nor denied his guilt. Meanwhile Thornton, by accident, had recovered possession of the jewels and had recognized Fanny's ring. He arrived at Archer's house in time to interrupt a strong scene between Bruce, the husband, and the wife. For when the anguished husband, after denouncing wife and friend, demanded that the stricken Fanny confess where she got the money, Thornton entered and said quite simply, "Why, from me, of course."

THE POWERS OF THE AIR (Feb. 21).—Bill Winters, the keeper of Lighthouse No. 21, had a remarkably attractive daughter, Alice. The two men to whom Alice seemed peculiarly attractive were Jim Francis, the assistant light keeper, and Ned Redmond, the wireless operator at Shore Haven. Alice did not care for Jim Francis. Ned Redmond was different—so different, in fact, that Alice became deeply interested in wireless telegraphy. One day, when the regular shipment of oil had not arrived at the lighthouse, Winters sent Francis ashore for a few gallons to replenish his depleted supply. Two hours later, Winters came ashore to discover what had delayed his assistant, and discovering him in an advanced stage of intoxication, discharged him on the spot.

While Winters went up town to buy the sorely needed oil, Francis came upon the keeper's boat, and decided that he would be revenged. Accordingly he rowed out to the lighthouse with the full intention of wrecking the entire place. When Francis entered, Alice locked herself into the wireless room directly below the great light. By this time the sun had set, and the light was still dark. While Jim, shouting hoarsely, battered upon the frail door, Alice sent a message to Ned Redmond at Shore Haven, "Lighthouse 21, S. O. S., S. O. S., S. O. S." Ned received the message, and rushed to the shore, where he found Winters searching vainly for his stolen boat. They procured a light dinghy and set out for the light.

Meanwhile, in the midst of her terror, Alice remembered that the great "Carolia" was due to pass. Without the light she might easily be wrecked. So even while the door was splintering under Francis' blows, Alice sent a message out through the void to the "Carolia," "Light dark in Lighthouse 21." The door fell, and the infuriated Francis savagely attacked the girl who had baffled him, but Ned and the keeper arrived in the nick of time, and while Ned was throttling Francis, Alice sped upstairs, filled the lamp, and lighted it. Then together the two lovers watched the "Carolia" steam safely past.

KALEM.

A MILLION IN JEWELS (Special—2 parts—Feb. 16).—Feeling death's approach, Rajah Mizpah bequeaths his jewels to his daughter, Princess Oonah. The Rajah bids Oonah beware of Seelam Isham, her cousin. Shortly afterward, Seelam demands the jewels of Oonah. The girl pluckily refuses and hides them. Seelam's men later ransack the palace, but fail to find the objects of their search. In an effort to escape from her cousin, Oonah leaves for America, taking the jewels with her. The man learns of her plans. Oonah meets Tom King on board the ocean liner. The two become fast friends. Later, the girl learns that Seelam is also aboard. In terror, she tells her story to Tom. The boy promises to guard Oonah against her cousin.

Tom takes charge of the jewels, thus frustrating a second attempt by Seelam and his men to steal them. On reaching America, Tom returns the jewels to Oonah, who places them in a secret cabinet. Seelam grows desperate. He and his men break into Tom's home, believing the jewels to be concealed there. The boy, however, has gone to call upon Oonah. Learning of this, the Hindoos follow. Seelam takes with him a powder, the fumes of which cause slow death.

Tom and Oonah are captured. Tom is bound and gagged. By threatening to kill the boy, Seelam succeeds in wringing the hiding-place of the jewels from Oonah. Tom has been taken into the next room. Seelam places the powder near the boy and lights it. Tom succeeds in crawling to the telephone and summons help. Seelam and his men are just about to leave with the jewels when police burst upon the scene. In the struggle Seelam is slain.

CHASING THE SMUGGLERS (Special—2 parts—Feb. 18).—While making a flight with an army aviator, Doris, Rand's sweetheart, discovers the activity of smugglers headed by Randal and Dan. The girl reports her discovery to her brother, Captain Wellington. Rand is ordered to go on the trail of the smugglers. Rand hastens to the dock where Doris has seen the smugglers at work, but finds the quarry flown. A clue enables him to trace the band to a Chinatown dive. The lieutenant is seen approaching, however. By the time he enters the place, Randal and his men have escaped. Rand gives up the hunt for the time being. Elated with his success, Randal sends Dan to the Orient for opium.

Two months later, Dan returns. As the liner nears shore, the smuggler ties the opium cans to cork floats and throws them overboard. Randal meets him at the dock. Rand sees the two in conversation. The young officer follows the men. The smugglers board their power boat, the "May," and head for the spot indicated by Dan. Rand gives the alarm and follows in his motor boat. The smugglers recover the opium. One of their number discovers Rand approaching. Turning on full speed, the smugglers attempt to escape.

A revenue cutter is sent to Rand's assistance. Rand overtakes the smugglers and leaps aboard the vessel. In the struggle that ensues, the officer and Dan go overboard. Unable to swim, the smuggler is saved from death by Rand, who holds him up until the revenue cutter approaches. With capture imminent, Randal throws the opium overboard. It is recovered by Rand. A few minutes later, the revenue cutter overtakes the "May," and the smugglers are placed under arrest.

TOO MANY JOHNNIES (Feb. 20).—The Jones' ten-year-old hopeful, Johnnie, is sent to reform school for hitching behind street cars. The news stuns his doting parents—especially when Uncle John writes that he is coming to see the boy, with the idea of making him his heir. In consternation, Mrs. Jones implores her gardener to impersonate Johnnie. The man refuses. The woman is more successful with her butler. At the same time, Jones, ignorant of his wife's endeavors, gets his chauffeur to impersonate Johnnie. The gardener repents of his refusal and decides to carry out his mistress' wishes.

Uncle John arrives at the house and is confronted by the butler wearing knickerbockers and prancing about with elephantine grace. Later, Jones presents him to the chauffeur, "Johnnie." To cap the climax, the bewhiskered gardener playfully appears as the third "Johnnie." While the dazed Uncle John regards the three, the real Johnnie enters, having been released by the judge, who has reconsidered his decision. Uncle John leaves in a rage. Later the Joneses receive a letter from their relative: "Have willed my fortune to the Orphans' Home." In anger, the doting parents turn upon

BUT ONE PRODUCTION A MONTH AND THAT A MASTERPIECE

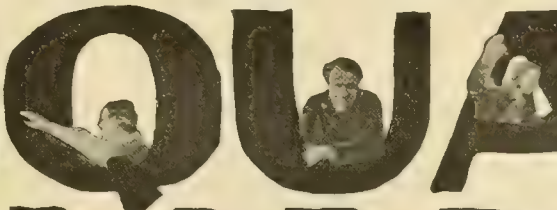
OUR FIRST RELEASE

Edwin Milton Royle's International Success

THE SQUAW MAN



A Mile of Perfect Photo Play with a Climax every inch.

Staged in exact locale of the play by Cecil B. DeMille and Oscar Apfel.

WITH

DUSTIN FARNUM

Why did America's leading State Right Buyers contract for Lasky Productions ?

Read your answer in the Stars

¶ THE CENTURY'S MOST FASCINATING DRAMA
¶ STAGED WHERE NATURE ALWAYS SMILES
¶ PRODUCED BY AN ACKNOWLEDGED ARTIST
¶ AMERICA'S FAVORITE ACTOR IN HIS BEST ROLE
¶ STAGED BY TWO MASTER CRAFTSMEN

DUSTIN FARNUM in ☆

EDWARD ABELES in ☆

EDMUND BREESE in ☆

"THE SQUAW MAN" "BREWSTER'S MILLIONS" "MASTER MIND"

Some Good Territory Still Unsold

If Responsible — Address

THE JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

LONGACRE THEATRE WEST 48th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Jesse L. Lasky, Pres. Samuel Goldfish, Treas. & Gen. Mgr. Cecil B. DeMille, Dir. Gen.

the cause of the trouble and give him the best licking of his young life.

A BOTTLED ROMANCE (Feb. 20.).—In a spirit of adventure, Helen, who is stopping at the beach, writes a note requesting the finder to meet her in front of the hotel. The missive is placed in a bottle and set adrift. Bob, her sweetheart, learns of the incident and sets a dozen similar notes adrift. The following morning, Helen is astounded to find a dozen men from all walks of life waiting for her. Her flight takes her through the various amusement devices at the resort, winding up at a boat landing. Her pursuers all go overboard, and engage in a lusty battle in the shallow water. Bob comes to his sweetheart's rescue and carries her away.

AN INDIAN'S HONOR (Feb. 21).—Big Deer and Burns get into an altercation when the white man annoys Wanda, the Indian's sweetheart. Indian police separate the men. The brave has received a rifle in exchange for some blankets. A few days later, the man goes into the woods to test the gun. Placing a piece of cloth against a tree, Big Deer shoos at it. A short distance away, Burns and Binfield get into a quarrel. Binfield shoots Burns. Later, remembering the quarrel between Big Deer and the murdered man, Binfield resolves to accuse the Indian of the crime. Big Deer is arrested by the Indian police. Binfield steals the target, which he places in his saddle bags. Unable to find the target, the Indian police refuse to place credence in the Red Man's plea of innocence. Big Deer is sentenced to death. In accordance with the custom, he is allowed to return to his people until the day set for his execution.

Binfield's horse bolts and throws him. Later, the man is arrested trying to hold up a stage coach. On the day set for Big Deer's execution, the Indian leaves for the Agency. Wanda, broken-hearted, sees him depart. Binfield's horse strays into camp. Wanda finds the missing target in the saddle bags. The girl dashes to the post. Big Deer is facing the rifles of the executioners when Wanda arrives. She shows the piece of cloth, which bears the marks of the bullets fired from Big Deer's gun. Confronted by this evidence, Binfield breaks down and confesses.

A LONG ISLAND SKUNK FARM (Feb. 21).—Skunk-raising might seem to be anything but a desirable occupation to persons who have come in contact with these animals, but the owner of a skunk farm on Long Island, N. Y., finds it a profitable—and harmless industry.

The skunks are raised until they reach a certain size, when they are killed for their fur. It is said that the animals become very docile and affectionate, and in this feature are shown being handled with impunity.

VITAGRAPH.

SAWDUST AND SALOME (Feb. 16).—To escape the designs of his mother and sister, who wish him to marry Dorothy Marr, to further their social ambitions, Walter Gray goes out West. In the West he meets Mary, a bareback rider in a small circus, and falls in love with her. He marries her and brings her back home to his parents and sister. They treat her very coldly.

The Greys give a costume dance, at which many daring costumes are worn, Dorothy, in the costume of Salome, being the most risque. Mary, unable to stand the family any longer and unhappy at the growing indifference of her husband, decides, on the night of the dance, to steal out of the house and away. Walter sees her, and asks her where she is doing. She points to the ballroom where Dorothy is dancing a Salome dance. Walter watches the dance a moment. He is struck with the unwholesomeness of it all, has a revulsion of feeling, and says, "Wait for me, Mary, I'm going with you!" Thus Mary wins out in her honest claims over his mean-spirited and hypocritical family, who tried to set him against her.

"Hallberg"

TALK No. 14

A Few Things to be Remembered

There may be other A.C. to D.C. devices offered for sale, but the "HALLBERG" A.C. to D.C. ECONOMIZER is just what its name signifies.

First—It changes alternating to direct current for the operation of one or more M. P. arc lamps.

Second—It is an ECONOMIZER—

By this I mean that it saves more than any other similar device ever produced for changing A. C. to D. C. for motion picture arcs. The "HALLBERG" is started by merely closing a line switch—you do not have to throw the switch first one way and test out your arc, and then throw it the other way in case the polarity should happen to be wrong, as is the case with the rotary converter. You do not have to buy Mercury Arc tubes costing anywhere from $30 to $40 each when they give out. The "HALLBERG" goes in on the line by closing one switch. Your arc always lights with the positive current at the upper carbon.

BACK TO BROADWAY (Special—2 parts—Feb. 17).—Fatigued from overwork, Cash, a railroad magnate, plans a long cruise with a congenial stag party upon his luxurious big yacht, cutting off all communication with the business world. A newspaper reporter gets wind of the departure and Cash's business enemies plan a great "scoop" during his absence. Cash receives a telegram from his business associates informing him of the enemies' deal and advising him to return at once. He hurriedly departs for shore, telling the rest of the party that he will return presently. He loses his traveling bag with his check book inside; and discovers himself in a strange town without a cent. Unshaven and disheveled, he is refused admittance to a hotel where he is laughed at when he claims to be the celebrated Mr. Cash. He finds himself in a strange predicament. He cannot even send a telegram, collect. He finally wanders exhausted and in despair into a public park, realizing that unless he reaches New York at a certain time, his trip would be in vain.

It happens that Bessie Williams, an ex-manicurist, of the same building where Cash's home office is located, takes a short flight in musical comedy; and finds herself stranded in the same town with Cash. She discovers him in the park, recognizes him, and reveals her identity. Cash explains his predicament and she offers to help him reach New York, although she has not a cent. By a clever ruse, they take lodging as father and daughter at a leading hotel where every courtesy is extended to them. Cash telegraphs in code to New York for a thousand dollars, which he receives, and manages to reach New York in time to frustrate his competitor's plot. Bessie is rewarded with a generous financial acknowledgment of her help and starts to do Broadway, glad that she took her flight in musical comedy and got stranded.

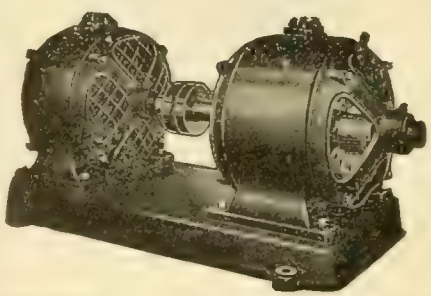
FATTY ON THE JOB (Feb. 18).—"Fatty" is very lazy, and when he goes in the morning to milk the cows and attend to his farm duties, he takes a little nap by the haystack; but his father always catches him and keeps him moving.

The object of "Fatty's" devotion is Lucy Lee. Zeke, a long, gawky young country lad, also has a liking for Lucy. He spends most of his time down by the water, fishing. Lucy, being very fond of fishing, goes with Zeke when he comes around on this particular morning, leaving Fatty looking after them longingly. Fatty cannot stand his loneliness, so he goes to the water's edge, where he finds the two young fishers. He takes a dime novel from his pocket and reads all about heroes and their daring exploits. Lucy sees it, grabs it and goes away with Zeke to read it. "Fatty" is found sitting on the boat landing and is shoved into the water by his irate father.

When "Fatty" drags his weary steps homeward he is afraid to go in to his father, and so hides in the chicken coop. A chicken thief enters and is caught by "Fatty," who rushes out and shuts the door. "Fatty" calls his father, who comes with a long rifle and catches the thief. Lucy Lee and Zeke appear and the girl realizes that "Fatty" is a hero. Immediately she forgets all about Zeke, and "Fatty" wins the day and the glory.

LUMBERING IN SWEDEN (Feb. 18).—One of the greatest industries in the world. The most essential product of all civilization in all ages, making possible all the great cities upon the face of the earth.

THE FIRST ENDORSEMENT (Feb. 19).—An adjutant comes in and lays before Colonel Allen, the charges against John Wild, a young soldier accused of theft. When the adjutant goes out, the Colonel remembers about his own wayward son; how he had left his home one evening, after a quarrel, never to return, shipping as a stoker on a big liner; and how, later, he had received word of his death in a shipwreck. As the Colonel is dreaming he is aroused by the entrance of the prisoner, "John Wild." He recognizes him as his son! Quickly getting rid of the sentinels, the Colonel questions



HALLBERG A. C. & D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS.

There is absolutely nothing to give out or to blow out. It can be used equally well for one or two lamps at the same time while transferring from one reel to the other. It is absolutely fool proof, and besides is provided with a pulley between the motor and the special generator on which you may put a belt connecting with a gasoline engine, or any other power, so that in case of an emergency the Economizer becomes a generator for lighting your motion picture arc, or your theatre. These are points not possessed by any other device, and it was the "HALLBERG" FORESIGHT in designing this machine which has made it what it is.

Don't let the other fellow tell you his is just as good, because there is only one "HALLBERG" and it takes a "HALLBERG" to beat a "HALLBERG," or even to compare with it.

I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A. C. Economizers, A. C. to D. C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWERS, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

—QUALITY COUNTS—

And There Is QUALITY in Every One of These Feature Films

The Death of a Geisha

(Copyrighted)

IN THREE PARTS Ready February 10th

ONE OF THE BEST PRODUCTIONS WE HAVE EVER RELEASED. A PHOTOGRAPHIC GEM WITH A SPLENDID SETTING AND ALL THE LUSTRE AND FIRE NECESSARY FOR A TREMENDOUS HIT. A STORY FULL OF PATHOS AND HEART INTEREST

Joan of Arc

(Copyrighted)

IN TWO PARTS Ready February 20th

A HALF-DOZEN REELS OF REAL GINGER AND ACTION BOILED DOWN TO TWO, INSURING A MAXIMUM OF SENSATION IN A MINIMUM OF FILM. EVERY FOOT SHOWS SOME EXCITING EVENT IN THE LIFE OF THE CELEBRATED FRENCH HEROINE

The Great Mine Disaster

(Copyrighted)

IN FOUR PARTS Ready March 1st

A LEADER AMONG LEADERS. ANOTHER ONE OF THOSE RARE PRODUCTIONS EMBRACING ALL THE COMPONENTS OF A SURE SUCCESS. FORCED TO CHOOSE BETWEEN LOVE AND HUMANITY, A MINER SACRIFICES HIS LIFE FOR HIS RIVAL

Our release of March 10th is going to be a hummer. That's all we can tell you for the present, but keep your eyes open for more

Exchanges now handling all of our attractions:—

Eclectic Feature Film Exchange
Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Eclectic Feature Film Exchange
Andrews Building, Dallas, Texas.

ECLECTIC FILM CO.

110 West 40th St. New York City

"THE CREAM OF THE EUROPEAN MARKET SELECTED FOR AMERICA."

his son. He learns that the charges of his being a thief are true, that he has gone from bad to worse, having drifted into gambling and fighting, and that he was in a terrible sea disaster, but managed to save himself. The son tells his father that he enlisted under the name of John Wild and shipped on the transport to the island, and that after his father was placed in command of his regiment he tried to keep from meeting him.

As the son is trying to prevent his father from signing the charges which will condemn him, his sister, Leila, riding up to the window gaily, calls her father, and then dismounting, runs in to make him come out and join her. The son, dreading the meeting with his innocent sister from which the better part of his nature makes him recoil, he dashes from the office, and is shot by the sentinels. He dies as "John Wild," and leaves the Colonel's name unsullied.

HIS LITTLE PAGE (Feb. 20).—Gerald Foster, a young artist, is supported by his rich uncle, who intends to make him his heir. Uncle George has a rooted aversion to young men marrying, so he tells Gerald if he ever becomes matrimonially entangled, he will cut him off at once. One day, while painting in an art gallery, Gerald meets Peggy Rainsforth, a struggling art student. Peggy faints while at work, and Gerald offers to see her home. On the way he draws from her the story that she has fainted from want of food, and he at once takes her to a restaurant to dinner. They become friends. Friendship turns into love and Gerald marries the struggling art student and takes her to his flat. Their life is a happy one till they get word from Uncle George that he is coming to visit Gerald and that he expects to be put up at the flat.

They are at their wits' end what to do. At last Peggy hits on the idea that she will disguise herself as a page boy. She does so. She sleeps, or is supposed to sleep, in a clothes room off Gerald's room, while Uncle George occupies the room supposed to be the page's.

Uncle George is seized with a toothache in the night and wants to send the page out for medicine. Gerald declares his page is sick and goes himself. He has to rouse Peggy first, however, and get her into her boy's suit in case Uncle George needs help. His tooth gets worse while Gerald is gone, and Peggy bathes his face with hot water and relieves the pain and Uncle George tips her fifty cents. Gerald arrives with the medicine and after many complications, they at last get Uncle to bed. The next day he falls asleep in his chair while smoking and sets himself on fire. Peggy rushes to the rescue and extinguishes the flames, but burns her hands terribly. She faints and her wig comes off. Uncle George discovers her sex, but when Gerald returns, Uncle George is so delighted with Peggy's heroism that he withdraws his objections to their marriage and gives them his blessing.

IRON AND STEEL (Special—2 parts—Feb. 21).—Herr Ludwig Kronitz is a king in his own works and rules with a controlling hand. He is known as the "Man Of Iron." He has made a fortune out of the manufacture of guns, and is hard and unscrupulous. His character is shown by various little incidents around the factory. His daughter, Hilda, returning from a trip to America, meets John Smardon, a well-to-do young American, partner in some steel works. They fall in love, but Hilda does not hold out much hope, as she knows her father has other ideas. Carl Heiner, a workman at Kronitz's place, who has an invalid wife, has invented a new machine gun. Heiner tells his plans to Bopp, a tool of Kronitz. Kronitz sends for Carl and offers to buy the invention at a small price. Carl refuses and Kronitz then gives him the choice of selling or being discharged. He refuses. He cannot get work and he and his wife are in great distress. Half crazy with desperation, he goes to the works at night, meets Bopp, and, in a frenzy of rage, attempts to hurl him into one of the furnaces, but is frustrated by other workmen. He is sentenced to prison.

When Carl is released, he finds his wife dying. He casts the dust off the place from him and wanders forth, swearing vengeance. Kronitz having received an offer for his daughter's hand from a duke, rejects John's suit, but Hilda, while she will not marry John without her father's consent, says she will be true to him. John picks up Carl, fainting by the roadside, hears his story, and takes him with him to America, to his works. There, he patents Carl's invention. Kronitz, meanwhile, with the help of Bopp, and some experts, has reconstructed the gun, and comes to New York to interest American capital in it and make a fortune, but the tables are turned when he finds the gun already patented, and is brought face to face with Carl, and vanquished. He gives up the fight, admits Carl's rights to the gun, and to save himself, gives his consent to Hilda's marriage with John Smardon. Carl, for the sake of Smardon's friendship, forgives Kronitz and tries to forget his injustice.

LUBIN.

GETTING EVEN (Feb. 17).—Harold and Percy, a couple of [illegible] counter clerks, leave the store to [illegible] for a good time. Percy, having sent [illegible] money home, Harold invites him for an auto [illegible]. To make it a party, they take along two young ladies. After hours of riding, Harold notices that the meter registers $15.00, and, getting frightened, he jumps from the machine, leaving poor Percy to pay the bill, which he has to do with his watch and stick pin. The following day the boys, while trying to flirt with a pretty girl, see a tramp steal her purse. Harold gives chase and quickly overtakes the thief. To make a hit with the girl, Harold gives the tramp ten dollars for the purse. As the theft has not been noticed by the girl, Percy sees a chance to get even. He tells the girl that Harold stole the purse. She calls the police and has Harold arrested, while Percy walks off in triumph with Mabel.

AN INNOCENT VICTIM (Feb. 17).—Dr. Chisolm sees that Sam, his butler, is drinking his very best whiskey, so he dopes it with tartar emetic. Sam gets a big dose. So does Major Leigh, who comes to call. This is something the doctor does not know about, so when Sam tells him that he doesn't feel very well, he is told if he wants to live he must keep moving. Sam is on the run with Mandy, his best girl, after him with a whip to help him on the move. Sam and Mandy meet the major, who is also sick. Sam passes the advice to him. Mrs. Leigh and Mandy keep the two men moving.

Meantime, the doctor tells the joke to Brooks Mannor, an acquaintance. Brooks meets the major and tells him of the joke, just at the time when the major has decided he would rather die than keep running. The major gets a shotgun, captures the doctor, forces him to drink the rest of the doped whiskey and starts him on the run.

THE PRICE OF A RUBY (Special—2 parts—Feb. 18).—Amy Lester is employed in a department store. One day she faints just as Mary Starr, a rich young philanthropist, enters. Miss Starr takes her into her home for a few days. Yielding to a kindly impulse, Miss Starr takes a box of jewels and shows them to Amy. The heiress' attention is called away and in that moment Amy succumbs to temptation. She hides a ruby ring under the pillow of the couch and Miss Starr does not miss it. A few days later, Amy leaves the house. With the money which she gets for the stone, one thousand dollars, the girl buys new clothes and goes to a hotel. There she meets Ralph Johnstone, a rich man, who falls in love with her and asks her to become his wife. Realizing that she is a thief, her better nature urges her to tell him the truth, but she stifles her conscience and accepts.

One day Amy reads in the papers that the ring has been missed and the theft traced to Miss Starr's maid. Repentant, she cannot let another woman go to prison for a crime she has committed, so she goes to Mary Starr, tells her the truth and begs for forgiveness. The other woman assures her that she will keep the secret and sends Amy back to her husband.

A year passes. With the coming of her child and a deeper love for her husband, Amy makes up her mind to confess to Ralph. His pride is hurt. With cold sternness he puts her from him. Next day, when she approaches him for forgiveness, he hands her a check for $1,000, bidding her send this to Miss Starr. She takes the check and goes to her room to think. Suddenly she makes up her mind she will not accept the check, but she will go away, out into the world and stay there until she has earned, by her own labor, the thousand dollars. She leans over her baby's crib; she wants to take him, but knows that even this she must sacrifice. That night Amy steals away, Ralph receiving her note of explanation with the torn check enclosed. Sternly, coldly, he takes her picture from his desk and drops it into a drawer. In the meantime, Amy has secured work in a sweat shop and takes work home every night and sews late at night. Each day adds something to the little store in the tin box.

The years pass. Her son, Dick, is now seven. The account in the tin box grows steadily, and her character has developed with the years. Sometimes, on Sunday mornings, she sees her little boy in the park with his nurse. One Sunday she does not see him there and learns that he is very sick with diphtheria. Frantic with grief she rushes to the home but pauses on the steps. The doctor is about to enter. Amy tells him she is a neighbor and asks about her child. She learns that he is very sick. She wants to go in; then remembers she is just a few dollars short of the required thousand. She goes back to her squalid room, and, while the doctor fights for Dick's life, she works all night. Early in the morning she is at the shop, and, getting paid for her work, adds it to her savings. Then she hurries to her old home and faints on the doorstep when she hears the doctor assuring her husband that Dick will be all right. Johnstone has her carried inside. She asks for the child; then she remembers the money and drops it on the library table. The husband tenderly gathers her in his arms. A moment later they go in to see the sleeping child.

THE HOUSE OF FEAR (Feb. 19).—John Stone, a poverty-stricken lawyer, but the trusted friend of Alice Gray, a young widow, yields to temptation, and by fraud succeeds in acquiring possession of the widow's estate when she dies. The widow's child, Agnes, he proposes to have sent to the state asylum, but is frightened from this course by a phantom of the widow. He rears the little girl in the house which is really hers, and which, to all except Agnes and Bob, Stone's son, a boy of a few years older than Agnes, has become "The House of Fear." Stone, living in constant horror of the phantom, soon grows old and breaks down. When Agnes is eighteen, Bob comes home from college. Agnes loves him, but of this he is unaware, re-

A Unique Chance

The Phenomenal Success of the Four (4) Reel Masterpiece

"WITH THE GREEKS ON THE FIRING LINE"

in Europe, has even been surpassed in the United States, as is proved by the spontaneous articles appearing in the daily Press and the Trade Journals.

There are still Exclusive rights for a few countries open: South America, Central America, Cuba, Mexico, Africa, Japan, Russia, China, etc.

Apply at once to the man who took the pictures. Will be in New York for only a few days more.

Robert Schwobthaler

BELMONT HOTEL

42nd St. New York City

Hepworth and The Turner Films, Ltd.

Releases Releases

ANOTHER HEPWORTH MASTERPIECE

A POWERFUL FOUR PART PHOTO DRAMA

JUSTICE

A story of a degenerate young man who induces a discharged employee of his father's factory to rob his parent's safe. The jewels are secured, but not until the old man is killed. The culprit sends his daughter to the young man with an earnest plea to send back money so that he may get away, but the girl is detained at the young man's home. A search for the fugitive is begun, and the guilty one is convicted on evidence furnished by the young man. Enraged at his betrayer and the detention of his daughter, he breaks jail and, with revenge uppermost in his mind, he seeks the young man and in a terrible struggle, kills him. Justice is done, and he willingly returns to prison to pay the penalty of his crimes.

ANOTHER INTENSELY INTERESTING DRAMA

TWO BLIND FATE PARTS

A broken finger and the sound of his voice are the only clues that the blind girl has to her father's murderer. Later, her sight restored, Fate brings them face to face. His voice arouses her suspicions, which are confirmed by his confession, due to a third-degree ruse.

THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD
Four Parts

COMING

THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH
Five Parts

MOTHERHOOD OR POLITICS?
Two Parts

HOW IS IT DONE? and
HAWKEYE MEETS HIS MATCH
Split Reel

TWO LITTLE PALS--Single Reel Drama

MISS FLORENCE TURNER

Of The Turner Films, Ltd., in the Following Releases:

THE HARPER MYSTERY
Three Part Detective Play

JEAN'S EVIDENCE
Two Part Drama

THE LUCKY STONE
A Single Reel Comedy

THE YOUNGER SISTER
A Single Reel Comedy

A. BLINKHORN

Two single reels released weekly —comedy and drama.

110-112 West 40th Street
New York City

Usual line of publicity matter. I help you help the exhibitor.

garding her with the indifferent affection of a brother. Soon after the boy's return, Stone dies, and, guided by the phantom, Bob discovers the wrong done by his father. He immediately arranges to make restitution and to go away, thinking that Agnes will wish never to see him again. He now realizes that he loves the girl. That the great wrong has been righted, the phantom that made the place "The House of Fear," exerts itself for the happiness of the lovers. Agnes is awakened in time. Bob does not go and the phantom departs forever from the old home.

IN THE DREDGER'S CLAW (Feb. 20).—Mike Maley, a desperate character, wanted by the police, is at large in the vicinity of San Pedro. Down the bay the giant dredger, "Colorado," is engaged in building a sea wall. Capt. Grimes has charge of the huge machine and young Phil Clark is his engineer. The captain's daughter, Emma, comes often to visit her father, but more particularly to see young Clark, the two being engaged and only postponing their marriage until Phil can accumulate $1,000. A wealthy aunt has promised them an additional $2,000 whenever the boy can show $1,000 in the bank.

Walking home together after work, Phil and Emma notice the placards which the police have posted offering a reward of $1,000 for the arrest of Mike Maley. While they are sitting on a wharf, looking across the bay, they see a disreputable looking individual intently scanning one of the posters. Both recognize him from description as Maley. Phil stalks him and after a struggle, overpowers him, holding him down while Emma goes for the police. While she is gone Maley turns the tables on Phil and escapes. Emma and the police arrive to find Phil nursing a sore jaw. Emma is disgusted with Phil because he allowed the reward to slip through his fingers, and leaves in a huff. Determined to redeem himself, Phil obtains a revolver and goes in search of Maley. Meanwhile, the desperado has also armed himself, determined to take revenge. By the time Phil gives up the search Maley is on his trail. Maley sees Phil coming along the bank toward the dredger and crouches at the water's edge, ready to shoot.

Meanwhile, Emma has been sent to the dredger with a message from the captain to Phil. She arrives on deck just in time to look ashore and comprehend the situation. Mounting quickly to the pilot house, she seizes the levers which Phil, in odd moments has taught her to manipulate, and causes the huge arm, with its hanging claw, to swing toward the bank until it is poised over the head of Maley. Then, with another lever, she causes the claw to descend and close over him, and hauls him, howling with rage, into the air. Swinging him far over the water, she holds him suspended until she can call a passing police boat, when she releases the jaws and lets him fall into the water, where the police capture him.

A WINNING MISTAKE (Feb. 21).—Arthur Hall, Peggie Dale's sweetheart, while about to kiss her, looks up and sees her father looking straight at him over the barrel of a gun (which dad is only cleaning). Mistaking father's intentions, Arthur dashes out of the house, leaving poor Peggie puzzled. Mrs. Busy, a neighbor of the Dales, persuades Mrs. Dale to become a member of the Women's Reform Leagues, whose slogan is "Down With Extravagance." While dad is seated, contentedly smoking, the reformers enter the house and start ransacking it of all articles of luxury. Dad puts up a holler when they take his pet pipe, but Mrs. Dale pulls him into another room to explain. Full of courage, Arthur returns to the house to get his kiss. He mistakes the reformers for female burglars and before anyone could explain, he dashes into the house and routs the crowd. Father is tickled and Mrs. Dale is brought to realize that the Women's Reform League is a humbug.

THE FEMALE BOOK AGENT (Feb. 21).—Benjamin Bray hates book agents. When he gets into a business scrap with Judson Jenks, Jenks promises Gertie, the book agent, that he will give her one hundred dollars if she'll sell Bray a book. After that Bray cannot shake her. But Mrs. Bray is jealous in the extreme, and the crafty Bray has the office boy write an anonymous letter of warning, which Mrs. Bray takes seriously. When she arrives on the scene, Bray sallies forth and greets the waiting Gertie very pleasantly, and they stroll down the street. Mrs. Bray does the rest. Meantime, Bray beats it back to the office and gets into a row with Jenks. Everybody is arrested, but after explanations they are released. It looks as though Bray had the best of it, when, all of a sudden, Mrs. Bray recalls that Bray caused the letter to be sent [illegible] into him and drags him home where he arrives a wreck.

ESSANAY.

TO ALASKA VIA THE GREAT RIVERS OF THE NORTH (Feb. 17).—In this excellent feature we see an expedition of explorers at Athabasca Landing, Canada, building scows for their trip into the North. We are next shown the loading of the cargo and are then taken down the Athabasca River. The natural gas at Pelican Rapids is a very unusual and interesting sight. The running of the Grand Rapids is filled with thrills. Dinner-time on the scows is indeed interesting and amusing. At Smith's Landing they portage the cargo and scows for six-teen [illegible] of logs. The running of the Cascades, and especially the Cornwall Cascade, is extremely exciting.

ONE-TO-THREE (Feb. 18).—Willie Brace, Harry Bitt and Johnny Argue are three typical hallroom boys. One bright sunshiny afternoon they meet three pretty society girls, and protect them form the insults of a tramp. The girls show their appreciation by inviting the boys to attend the charity ball. The boys are delighted, but money is scarce with them and—they haven't any dress suits. An idea then occurs to one of them to rent the necessary outfits, but the night of the ball only one suit is delivered, so the three boys have to take turns in wearing it. They are not all the same size, so the dress suit hangs peculiarly funny on their figures. They manage to have a fairly good time, but in the morning, when the suit is called for, it is in a ruined condition. Elsa Seam saves them from embarrassment when she tells her father, the owner of the dress suit renting establishment, of the brave deed accomplished by the trio. Mr. Seam hastily dispatches a boy to the home of the three, where they are presented with fashionable evening clothes. So you see it pays to be a hero—sometimes.

ITALIAN LOVE (Jan. 19).—Arrita and Sylvana are sweethearts, but Arrita's mother does not approve of Sylvana, as she wants her daughter to marry Gato or Petro, who are friends of the family and whom she knows are endowed with more worldly goods than Sylvana. Unknowing to her mother, Arrita meets her sweetheart and they have many quiet moments together, but are invariably interrupted by the outraged parent, who finally causes Sylvana to lose his position. The mother now informs Gato and Petro that they have her consent to try and win her daughter. The men quarrel and while they are in deadly combat, Arrita and Sylvana go to the parsonage and are married. When her mother discovers this she is furious and upbraids the two men for being slow, but is finally reconciled to Sylvana, her son-in-law, and everyone is happy.

SNAKEVILLE'S FIRE BRIGADE (Feb. 21).—The plot centers about a Village Board, which finds itself in need of a fire department. They receive a chemical engine from the city, with instructions to keep in a cool place and to appoint a fire chief. If you want to enjoy the best laugh you have ever had, do not fail to see this hilariously funny photoplay.

THE OTHER GIRL (Special—2 parts—Feb. 20).—A bright man, a splendid son, was in love with a simple deserving girl. His mother lorded it over him and all since he could remember, but that was her privilege, even more, it was her duty. However, he was surprised when she blighted his one right. She offered serious objection to the little lass and strongly favored another girl. And went so far as to make the little girl feel she was not wanted. Hearts began to ache.

He proposed. She asked for time until tomorrow. But mother was so determined on winning her point that even the air was unpleasant to breathe. So he wrote to the little girl. In the note he told of his suffering and of the peace his heart craved. He requested an immediate answer by return note. She answered it, writing that she would be waiting with her answer at the gate at eight. His mother suspected, intercepted the note, hid it in the pocket of her house gown. Eight o'clock came and went, but he did not come—in disappointment she suffered. An answer to his note did not reach him. He decided he was being toyed with; however, all was sadness. She went away—we found her with the Salvation Army. He gave every minute to his business trying to forget.

She entered into the good work of her associates; she was dull: her spirit gone. Bright eyes grew dim—soft cheeks grew pale and her lovely form was fast fading away into the tomb. Those about her worried; but no one could tell the cause. Until one day a large collection of clothes was brought to the army headquarters. She assisted in sorting them for repairs and distribution among the poor. One of the old house gowns caught her eye; she admired it and impulsively put her hand into the pocket and there found the note and realized it was never delivered. They thought she was dying as she lay with the note clasped in her hand tightly. On the day he was to marry the girl, his presence was necessary at the army headquarters because of a real estate deal. He saw her, she recognized him, no one could explain her illness. She showed the note and then the gown—he was stunned. Then he understood, and all ends happily.

PATHE.

WHIFFLES' BALCONY BUDS (Feb. 17).—Whiffles is engaged to a very charming girl with a charming mother, but the latter, in spite of her attractions, has within her some of the fabled characteristics that have made mother-in-laws famous. Whiffles one evening finds his servant making free with his wines, cigars and favorite easy chair. The justly angered Whiffles thereupon gives the man a week's notice. To revenge himself, the servant writes a letter to the fiancée's mother, advising her to call at Whiffles' apartments the following afternoon, as she will see something interesting. Then he inserts an "ad" in a newspaper saying that Mr. Whiffles, of such an address, desires to employ dressmakers.

The prospective mother-in-law arrives in good

OFFICIAL NEWS NO. 3.
REGARDING RELEASES.

In response to the enormous applications for the massive Anglo-American Film Masterpieces of

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS"

AND

"SIXTY YEARS A QUEEN"

THE FORMER BY THE

CELEBRATED FILM D'ART OF PARIS

AND THE LATTER BY THE

BARKER MOTION CO., OF LONDON

from all over the United States and Canada, also Central and South America, it is respectfully announced, that, after the Masterpieces shall have first been exploited in the legitimate first class theaters in the principal cities, they will be generally released.

Until this is accomplished, applicants will kindly be patient, since it is the mutually-advantageous policy of The Anglo-American Film Corporation to first project its products in the leading theaters of the larger cities.

THE ANGLO-AMERICAN FILM CORPN.
George W. Lederer, Director General.
Temporary Offices, 1482 Broadway, New York.

WHY WAIT?

Subscribe Now

for the

Moving Picture World

Domestic	$3.00 per Year
Canada	3.50 " "
Foreign	4.00 " "

"CONVICT 113"

THREE PARTS THREE PARTS

A great drama with splendid acting and scenes of sensationalism. Wonderful fire scenes and deeds of heroism and rescue.

Soon Released. Apply quickly for territory

"A SHATTERED IDOL"

. IN THREE PARTS

A story of dual life by an eminent physician who was a thief by night. He meets his death in a sensational scene in which he is unmasked before his wife.

State Rights Now Selling

Itala Film Company of America

HARRY R. RAVER, Director-General

Candler Building New York City

time, and concealing herself on the stairs, is filled with indignation as she watches the pretty dressmakers flock into Whiffles' apartments. The poor fellow, amazed at the influx of girls, is thrown into consternation on hearing the voice of his future relative in the hall. He drives the girls out upon the balcony and shows Madame an empty flat. She searches in vain and finally departs dissatisfied. From the street she sees the girls and gives Whiffles a fine tongue lashing. The victim, on returning to his apartment, learns the guilt of his servant and gains his revenge by throwing him from the balcony.

RAMBLES IN BOURGES, FRANCE (Feb. 17).—Showing Bourges, an old city in the department of Cher, famous as the birth-place of Louis XI, King of France.

WON BY A NOSE (Feb. 18).—The girl loves one man, an old and valued friend, but her father wants her to marry Count Getrich. The girl simply can't tolerate the count, and when he attempts to kiss her one day, gives his face a good, sound, American slap. Later, the favored suitor coming to call upon her, finds her with a bad nose bleed, and to stop it uses the old fashioned remedy of putting a door key down her back. In his excitement, he locks the door before he removes the key and when the nose bleed does not stop, and he wishes to leave the room, he cannot do so, as the key cannot be removed from the girl's clothing. He makes his exit by the window, and running madly down the street, is pursued by a policeman, who thinks he is a thief. Later, while a crowd of excited people, who think murder has been committed, are clamoring on one side of the locked door, and another crowd, equally excited, are arguing on the other side, the girl and the lover escape by the window, and going to a minister's house, are speedily married.

MONUMENTS OF UPPER EGYPT (Feb. 18).—Views of the Temple of Edfu, considered the most complete model of Egyptian architecture at its best; of the Temple Ptolemy Philopater, the best example of early Egyptian architecture (built about 220 B. C.), and the Temple of Kom-Omho.

WHERE THE HEART CALLS (Special—2 parts—Feb. 19).—Edwin Drake meets, at a summer resort, Ruth Borden, a charming and heartless adventuress. Deceived as to her true character, he is cleverly ensnared by the designing woman, who intends to use his affection for her as a means to secure money from him. Their engagement is announced and too late the dupe finds out the woman's true character. At the cost of most of his money he buys freedom from her and goes to a little farm which he owns in the country, sick at heart and poor in pocket. Beth, the daughter of a wealthy neighbor, becomes acquainted with Drake by chance, and there springs up in them a mutual interest in one another. Mr. Andrews, seeing his daughter, for whom he has higher plans, in conversation with the roughly clad stranger, is surprised and annoyed. His annoyance is not lessened when his friend, Dr. Wilson, who is visiting him, tells him that the stranger is a dear friend of his and so introduces the young farmer, and the haughty man of wealth to one another.

At her father's wish, Beth avoids, but cannot forget, the handsome young neighbor. In the meantime, Weston, the accomplice of Ruth, gambles away the money extorted from Drake by the girl, and makes free even with the woman's jewelry in order to get funds to satisfy his passion. Two weeks later Drake, while working in the fields, suffers a sun stroke and takes to his bed, seriously ill. His condition growing worse, his little sister goes to the nearest house for help. She finds Beth giving a lawn party, and telling her of her trouble and anxiety, easily persuades her to come home with her and give her the assistance she needs. When Drake, a few days later, is able to be up again, he writes Beth, tells her that he is poor, but that he loves her, and asks her to meet him that evening at the rustic bridge. Beth, feeling the call of her heart stronger than the admonitions of her father, responds to the note in person, and then and there promises to marry him, the wedding taking place a few days later.

In the meanwhile, Weston's losses at the gambling table have made him desperate and it occurs to Ruth and him that they may be able to get additional money from Drake. At once they start to plan with that end in view. Beth at first charmed with the novelty of her new home, soon finds the drudgery of her household tasks irksome, and when her society friends call upon her and find her in her gingham dress, she begins to be ashamed of her position. Finally she secretly leaves the house and returns to her old home, intending to remain, but Dr. Wilson tells her that she will soon become a mother and that her duty lies with her husband. Going back to the little home, she sees Drake talking with a strange woman, and jumping to the conclusion that he is unfaithful to her, and knowing that her father has practically disowned her because of her marriage, she leaves the village to hide in a distant town. Drake's visitor is Ruth, endeavoring to get more money from him. In the presence of the doctor, who knows all, Drake orders her from his house for all time. How Ruth meets Beth and repents of her ways, how Dr. Wilson brings husband and wife together again, and how the baby drives away all dislike of poverty from Beth's life, end a very interesting and appealing drama.

The Way of Success

TO be successful, a firm must have permanent customers—to have permanent customers it must give real value in every picture it produces and puts on the market.

And we attribute our success to our policy of value giving.

"The Whirl of Destiny"
OR
"The Vortex of Fate"

is a wonderfully strong and sensational drama, portraying love and adventure. The story is in four parts and is just the style and quality that is making money for the State Rights Buyers.

A full and complete line of attractive advertising matter, such as Heralds, Photos, cuts, etc., furnished.

Get in communication with us immediately and see if your territory is still open.

"The Red Diamond"

a three reel dramatic masterpiece, will be ready for delivery very shortly.

MUNDSTUK FEATURES
LONGACRE BUILDING
42nd St. and Broadway
NEW YORK
Suite 909

VICTIMS OF VANITY (Special—2 parts—Feb. 21).—Harris is the secretary and confidential man of Banker Walrath, and when Mr. Walrath is about to leave on a business trip, he asks Harris to take charge of his wife's magnificent pearl necklace for him and place it in his vault. Shortly afterward Mrs. Harris calls up her husband on the 'phone and reminds him that they are to go to a dance that night and therefore to come home early. Detained at the office by pressing work, and unwilling to disappoint his wife, Harris lacks time to place the necklace in the bank and decides, in a fatal moment to take it home with him.

On arriving home his wife, seeing the package, opens it, and greatly admires the splendid pearls. But Harris' intention of going to the dance is frustrated by a telegram from Walrath asking the secretary to come on to New York on the next express, as he needs him. The secretary hastily packs his grip, places the jewels in it, intending to take them with him. But his wife has yielded to temptation, and unknown to him, removed them from the grip, leaving in their place a note saying that the pearls are safe and that she could not resist wearing them. Later, on reaching the train, Harris finds the note, and, consumed with anxiety, leaves at once to return home.

In the meantime, at Harris' request, his friend, Wendell, has taken Mrs. Harris to the dance. Unknown to her an escaped convict has entered the house, and when on her return she is removing the pearls, she sees in the mirror the reflection of the intending thief. She hastily locks the door, and with her husband's revolver, awaits developments. Knowing that the woman is alone, the thief brazenly endeavors to force in the door in the face of her threats to fire. At this dramatic juncture, the returning Harris hurriedly enters the house. The thief conceals himself, sees Harris go to the door and receive in his body the bullet intended for another. Harris' call to his wife as he falls, causes her to open the door. The thief, seizing his opportunity, grasps the jewels and escapes to hide his booty beneath a nearby tree. Later he is captured by the police, who do not know of this last crime and sent back to prison for ten years more.

When Harris recovers the detectives question him as to the missing pearls. His story is considered weak, since he dare not expose his wife, and he has to bind himself to pay $2,000 a year for ten years to make good for the necklace. His wife, aghast at the trouble she has caused him, writes to the banker confessing her miserable share in the loss of the pearls, and decides to go away from the scene of her shame. She secures a position as stewardess on a ship and for years expiates her weakness by absence from the home and the man she loves. How finally the mystery of the missing jewels is cleared up, how the thief is struck down by the hand of God at the very moment when he is reaching out his hand to seize the fortune within his grasp, and how husband and wife are at last reunited, end an unusual drama.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 10 (Feb. 2).—Victoria, Mex.—Mexican rebels making hand grenades. Cast iron pipe, cut in short lengths, is loaded with nails, stones and dynamite. These bombs are hurled by rebel horsemen at Huerta's troops in close quarters.

Marfa, Texas.—The end of the three-day march of the Ojinaga refugees from Presidio to Marfa. At Marfa, the 4,400 men, women and children are sent by the government to El Paso.

Munich, Bavaria.—In olden times the kings hunted the wild boar afoot through the forest; now-a-days they shoot tame boars from a platform. King Louis III of Bavaria, is the royal marksman shown here.

El Paso, Texas.—The refugees arrive at El Paso and are taken to Ft. Bliss, where they are provided with tents and food by the U. S. Government.

Cape Town, Africa.—The Dark Continent is the scene of an up-to-date strike riot in which the principals are Negro natives and laborers from Bombay. The emigrants come to take the black men's jobs and the black men drive them out of the country.

Madrid, Spain.—Alfonso, Prince of the Asturias, and heir apparent to the throne of Spain, and his little brother, Prince Jaime, enjoy an afternoon with the birds and animals at the Zoo. Nearby their grandmother, the Dowager Queen of Spain, smiles her approval.

Washington, D. C.—Miss Olive May Wilson, the "Santa Claus" girl, asks Congress to allow Christmas gifts to the poor children to go through the mails without postage. She meets a friend on the Capitol steps.

Weed, Cal.—The Shasta Limited, Southern Pacific flier, is snowbound fourteen hours in the mountains as a furious storm rages. Trainmen summon aid by telephone.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 11 (Feb. 5).—Washington, D. C.—All the way from Texas on foot, 1,500 miles, comes Tony Costello to greet Samuel Gompers, the labor leader. He reaches Washington on Mr. Gompers' 64th birthday.

Yalta, Russia.—Czar Nicholas of Russia, visits Yalta to review the veteran troops of the Russo-Japanese war.

Paterson, N. J.—Construction is completed here of a model of the new magnetic mail carrying device which will convey the mails underground between railroad terminals in New York City, and may soon be built between New York and Philadelphia.

Denver, Colo.—Western bankers, backed by a

A SUPERB THREE PART STATE RIGHT FEATURE

FAMOUS BATTLES OF NAPOLEON

THE MOST ROMANTIC LIFE IN HISTORY WAS THE LIFE OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. THERE IS NO WORK OF FICTION THAT CAN EQUAL IT IN PLOT OR HUMAN INTEREST. IT IS DOUBTFUL IF ANY FICTION WRITER COULD WRITE A SIMILAR STORY AND MAKE ANYONE BELIEVE IT. YET NAPOLEON LIVED AND DID THINGS THAT NO MAN HAS EVER DARED—THEREFORE WHY SHOULDN'T THIS MAKE AN INTERESTING FILM?

COSMOS FILM COMPANY
COSMOS
145 W. 45TH ST. - NEW YORK

THESE SCENES WERE TAKEN ON THE ACTUAL BATTLEFIELDS WHERE THOSE MIGHTY CONFLICTS TOOK PLACE DURING THE YEARS OF 1806-7. IT IS A SPLENDID PICTURE AND A FORERUNNER OF MANY FINE RELEASES WE HAVE FOR PARTICULAR PEOPLE

HUGH HOFFMAN

[illegible] dollars, urge Secretaries McAdoo and Houston to establish a regional bank at Denver. This picture shows the bankers leaving after the conference.

New York, N. Y.—Lower East Side children, mostly foreigners, on leaving public school, stage an American historical pageant. From the days of the Indians and Columbus to the present time they portray the country's progress.

Juvisy, France.—High up against a bank of clouds, Pegoud, master aviator, glides through the air in feats of flight more daring than the loop-the-loop which he inaugurated.

Budapest, Hungary.—The Duke of Festetics, having a few hours to spare, decides to hunt pheasants on his estate. He and his friends have good luck, killing 7,582 birds, fifty wagon loads, during the day.

Matamoras, Mexico.—General Pablo Gonzales, rebel hero of Victoria and Matamoras, receives the mayors of nearby towns who hasten to declare their allegiance to his standard.

BIOGRAPH.

HER OLD TEACHER (Feb. 16).—All her life the old teacher had been smoothing over the rough places, but when the great need came in her own life all forgot her except one; that was the little girl whom she had last befriended. What mattered then the dastardly plot of the scheming brokers?

CRIMINOLOGY AND REFORM (Feb. 21).—At the prison the reformers obtained a picture of the very worst case on record. He was used as an example of the criminal incapable of reform. "Such people should be confined—not one redeeming trait," declared the lecturer. His baby at home and the physician knew better.

A DESPERATE HERO (Feb. 19).—He was not really afraid to kill the mouse, just his big heart prevented. It looked bad for the wife who called on him with her lady friends to protect them from Red Ned, the desperado at large, whom it took three policemen to manage. The ladies recided hubby was a "scared cat," until he played Red Ned himself. He was having the time of his life, alternating between himself and Red Ned, with whom he seemed to mop the kitchen floor, when the real Red Ned appeared—and it doesn't turn out the way you think.

SKELLEY AND THE TURKEY (Feb. 19).—Down on their uppers again, they can't even get a drink—but they do—and more. Skelley at the shooting gallery shows some fancy shots with the help of the unseen Gilly. While the shots don't get the turkey, their efforts combined get it just the same.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GOLDEN GATE WEEKLY, NO. 60 (Jan. 31).—Padre of the Rains.—Cameraman finds Father Jerome S. Ricard, celebrated savant of Santa Clara College, in midst of astronomical observations. His remarkable weather forecasts, based on sun spots, has raised a storm of controversy in scintific circles.

Prize Winners at Sonoma County Fair, Santa Rosa.—"Bella Donna," 26-year-old French Percheon mare—mother of 7 colts in last 6 years; first prize winner Chicago World's Fair. "Franklin Moody," one of "Bella Donna's" sons; 6 years old, weighing 1,960 pounds. Jack London's "Nevada Hillside," an English sire stallion.

Sutro Baths.—The largest swimming pavillion in the world; scene of many famous meets.

Last Rites of Father Prendergast.—In spite of driving rain, immense crowd attends funeral of Vicar General of Roman Catholic Church, Diocese of San Francisco.

Mission at Santa Clara.—Cross in front. A celebrated California land mark.

Mission San Juan.—One of the most ancient evidences of early Spanish days, founded June 24, 1707, wrecked April 18, 1906.

A. BLINKHORN.

JUSTICE (Hepworth—4 parts).—Paul Meredith is the profligate son of John Meredith, a splendid example of one of England's fine old merchant princes. Paul, who is a thorough young scoundrel, has been forging his father's name to certain bills, and is being pressed by a moneylender named Rossiter for payment. He is unable to meet the bills, whereupon Rossiter declares that he must inform his father and seek payment from him. He puts his threat into execution, and arrives at John Meredith's house on the anniversary of his silver wedding. As he had anticipated, the old man pays the bills rather than his name should be dishonored. Paul, arriving on the scene shortly afterwards, is informed by his father what has happened. His father hands him a check for twenty-five hundred dollars and tells him that it is the last money he will ever receive from him. Paul leaves his father's presence mad with rage, and plots with a discharged workman, Joe Prescott, who has a grudge against his father, that he shall break into the house and rob the safe. The man agrees, but in accomplishing his object he encounters Mr. Meredith, and kills the old man in the course of the struggle which ensues.

He then writes a letter to Paul, who is in London, sending him the jewels and begging him for a thousand dollars in order that he may get clear of the country. The only messenger he can trust with this letter is his own daughter, Nan, who, much against her will, undertakes the mission for her father. Paul, who has seen Nan before and has become enamored with her, has the girl detained and locked in a bedroom in his house. In the meantime Joe Prescott has been arrested for the murder and is convicted chiefly on the evidence supplied by Paul.

While all this has been going on, Nan's lover, Jack Raynor, the foreman of John Meredith's iron works, has been searching for her. Suspecting that Paul has a hand in her disappearance, he goes to London. Nan is not content to patiently wait Paul's pleasure, and she writes an appeal upon her handkerchief, saying where she is confined and begging someone to come to her assistance as her father, Joe Prescott, is in prison and unable to assist her. The message falls into the hands of the chaplain of the prison where Joe is confined, and he shows it to him in order to find out if it is likely to be true. The knowledge of Paul's double treachery so enrages Joe that he resolves to be free at any cost in order to punish the traitor and liberate his daughter. One evening he strikes down the ward keeper who comes to bring him his food and, dressing himself in his clothes, manages to make his escape. Reaching Paul's house he bursts his way in and attacks him. A terrible struggle follows. Eventually Prescott seizes a heavy table and, bringing it down with tremendous force on Paul's head, dashes his brains out. He has scarcely reached his daughter's room when the police rush in, headed by Jack Raynor, and Prescott is led back to prison to suffer the penalty of his crimes, with the satisfaction, however, that he has revenged himself on the traitor who sent him to his doom and would have at the same time betrayed his daughter, while Nan is left in the arms of her sweetheart.

OUR CATALOGUE OF
BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
contains more useful information about electric lighting in general, than any other book ever issued. Write for it today.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

FOR SALE
About 180,000 feet of new film, European manufacture.
For particulars address the Standard Film Rental Company 31 Broadway New York City

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.
Manufacturers of
SEEBURG PHOTOPLAYER
Write for "Art Catalogue."
Republic Bldg. 209 S. State St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Phone: Rector 1215 Established 1867
Henry Gerstle's Son
Specialists and Experts in
FIRE & LIABILITY INSURANCE
For the Motion Picture Industry
FORTY-FIVE BROADWAY NEW YORK

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
538 S. Dearborn Street :: Chicago, Ill.

$3.50 CRYSTAL WHITE
$4.00 SILVER FINISH
Curtain Coatings
PREPAID
ALFRED C. STANGE, 15 S Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive
There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.
We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.
Write for Catalog.
Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.
THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-721 Sycamore St.
CINCINNATI, OHIO
Branch factories:
101-103 Fourth Ave., New York City
106-8 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.
Established 1882

Bound Volumes of Moving Picture World
Serviceable clothboard binding. A few volumes still on hand.
YEAR 1909, TWO VOLUMES, $5.00
" 1910, TWO VOLUMES, 5.00
" 1911, THREE VOLUMES, 5.50
" 1912, FOUR VOLUMES, 6.00
Express charges or Postage additional.
Address all orders and remittances.
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue New York City

END YOUR Terminal Troubles
Works on any machine. Easily and quickly adjusted.
Has Exclusive Features.
ONLY .25 PER PAIR
Manuf'd by the L. B. ADKINS CO.
COLUMBUS, OHIO

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
moving picture machines, films and chairs.
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill

COMING SOON
The WRATH of the GODS
DOMINO SPECIAL IN FIVE PARTS

QUALITY AND SERVICE GUARANTEED

Erie
LITHOGRAPH CO.
12TH & PARADE STS.
ERIE, PA.

Motion Picture Posters

Executed by our most talented and versatile poster artist organization—artists that excel in portraits, character, comic, mechanical and animal pictures.

Beautiful, Brilliant Colors

PHOTOPLAYS One to twenty-four sheet lithographed posters with heralds, folders, streamers and dates, furnished by us, all complete, in from six to ten days' time, our printing and lithographing departments being specially equipped for this class of work.

F. J. WALKER, Jr., NEW YORK REPRESENTATIVE
Address, 795 East 182d Street
NEW YORK CITY Phone, Tremont 3485

Get the best music for the pictures by using

The FOTOPLAYER

The Musical Marvel

Full Orchestral Effect, with Piano, Reed Organ, Pipes and Traps

Controlled by one operator. Has two rolls player-piano music. Can follow pictures with instant change to appropriate music. Built to fit the pit; looks right, built right, plays right.

PRICE RIGHT

American Photo Player Company
Factory and Offices, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

What Next? We'll Tell You

Beaten paths lead to overcrowded places and discarded opportunities. Every house shows films; so do you. Your extra inducement for a bigger patronage is a PHOTO PLAYER PICTURE POST CARD. Give them away and you'll see the increase in your receipts.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 350 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards
For the better class of Souvenirs, 30 of the most popular Association players, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards
For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—30 Association Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 350 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.
Special 22 x 28 Hand Colored Pictures of Favorites.

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 350 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights and we will send you a remedy.

LOOK

ATLAS What's This? Yes, Another! ATLAS
Big Sensation! The Best Money Maker Produced Since the JAMES Picture

LOOK HERE
A Few States Open on the Following:
SAPHO
DEADWOOD DICK
DALTON BOYS
WAGE EARNERS
PAUL REVERE
SECRET SERVICE STEVE
TRACKED BY BLOODHOUNDS

Plenty of Printing For All These

DRIVEN FROM HOME
or, WAGES OF SIN
3 Reels 2500 Feet Every Scene a Thriller
GREATEST Line of Printing Ever PRODUCED
Also Don't Forget the
JAMES BOYS IN MISSOURI
THE BIG MONEY MAKER 3 REELS

TAXICAB MYSTERY
HIDDEN HAND
Ten Nights in a Barroom
MIDNIGHT EXPRESS
COWBOY'S REVENGE
SING SING to LIBERTY
NICK CARTER 3 Reels

Write. Wire Quick ATLAS MANUFACTURING CO., Gayety Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL.

VICTOR.

VOTES FOR MEN (Two Parts—Feb. 16).—In the year 1927 the entire social order is reversed. Mrs. Mayfair is a traction magnate and the boss of the city. Her friend, Mrs. Millions, is the mayor and comes to the office of Mrs. Mayfair to enlist her support in the fight the mayor is making against the militant suffragettes, of whom Mr. Mayfair is the leader. Maggie Millions, the daughter of the mayor, while calling at Mrs. Mayfair's office, falls in love with the beautiful young and innocent stenographer and makes a date to meet him.

In the meantime, Gwendolyn Jones, a young reporter, and a friend of Maggie's, calls on Mrs. Mayfair at her home in the interests of her paper. While there she falls a victim to the charms of Clarence, the unsophisticated scion of the house of Mayfair. He returns her ardent glances as she leaves the room, but being caught by his father, is sent ignominiously to bed. Percy Pinhead, Mrs. Mayfair's stenographer, overhears Mrs. Mayfair and one of the ward heelers plot to stuff the ballot boxes at the next election, and so deprive the men of their vote. He 'phones this terrible news to his new sweetheart, Maggie Millions, who, with the aid of Gwendolyn Jones, the reporter, gets this incriminating evidence on a dictagraph. The young women therefore confront Mrs. Mayfair and Mrs. Millions with this evidence, which they threaten to publish unless they can marry the boys they love and give mankind its vote. They succeed.

Mr. Mayfair had supped, not wisely, but well, and he turns and tosses wildly in his bed. Mrs. Mayfair, waking up, arouses him. He stares wildly about; then, coming to himself—but there, the big scream is at the finish.

LOVE'S VICTORY (Two Parts—Feb. 20).—Lil, concealing her identity, goes into the same office with her husband to work, Marsden, the employer, has been gambling heavily on the stock market; he finds himself heavily involved. Money must be had. He returns home and practices the writing of a signature. He fixes up a check to be forged. Arriving at the office the next morning he gives it to George, Lil's husband, to cash at the bank.

George presents the check. It is questioned. George is arrested. He explains, but Marsden, realizing his position, denies all knowledge. George is jailed; he explains the affair to his horrified wife. She comforts him with the assurance that she will right matters.

She does so in her own way; she enters Marsden's rooms and secures evidence, and then she fights him. Marsden's foot slips and he takes a fall down the elevator shaft. He is forced to bed, mortally injured. He repents, and his stocks having gone up, he turns them all over to the young couple for the injustice he did them in, shouldering the blame onto George. In the end we see the couple in their own home.

FRONTIER.

THE FATAL CARD (Feb. 21).—Of Edythe's two suitors, she favors Ralph, a neighboring ranchman, while her father prefers Harley, his foreman. Bill, one of the ranch hands, is discharged. He learns that the ranchman is to dispose of some stock and resolves to hold up the foreman. This he does, disguising himself with a bandana stolen from Ralph. Bill is hurriedly fleeing from the scene of the hold-up, when he runs into Ralph. Bill takes refuge up a tree. Attempting to count the money he has stolen, he drops the coat and gun, which are shortly found by Ralph. Meanwhile the ranchman has been notified and with his daughter, hurries to the scene.

Ralph is captured and accused of the robbery. This he denies, but the fact that his coat and gun were used by the robber convinces the men that he is the guilty party. He is led to a tree, and despite Edythe's pleading, is about to be hung. One of the men climbs the tree, which happens to be the same tree in which Bill has found a haven. Bill is discovered, and searched. The money is found on his person. He insists that the money is his savings, and this is believed, until the foreman happens to remember that in the roll of money from the sale of the stock, he had inserted the Stockman's card, and when this card is found there remains no question as to who was the hold-up man.

REX.

THE BOOB'S HONEYMOON (Feb. 19).—Mrs. Van Jessalyn-Smythe and her daughter are annoyed at the prospect unfolded by the receipt of a letter from her married sister, saying that her daughter, Jennie has married Bill Simpkins, because they are expecting a distinguished visitor, Lord Brighton, on whom the daughter intends to impose all her feminine charms. However, the boob and his bride arrive. The following evening there is to be a ball in honor of Lord Brighton. The hostess sends a complete set of full evening dress to their apartment. The boob and his bride manage to get into the clothes, but in each case, the shoes are too small. They limp into the ball room. Mrs. Smythe is disgusted with the boob's awkwardness.

When the tight shoes become unbearable, the bride goes into the conservatory, and attempts to take them off. She is seen by Lord Brighton, who immediately runs to her assistance. While he is tugging at her shoe, the boob happens upon the scene. "How dare you make love to my wife," the boob roars, and chases him through the ball room. He follows the aristocrat until he is well down the driveway, and then returns to relate the joke to his wife. The boob and his wife decide that fine clothes are not for them, and they return back to Spoonville on the first train.

ECLAIR.

THE CROSS IN THE CACTI (Two Parts—Feb. 18).—Jack and Mark, brothers, are suitors for the hand of Rose, the belle of the Eastern village. Jack is an upright fellow, while his brother is inclined to seek the crooked path, though he is a fine looking chap. Jack enters a saloon brooding over his love affair, and falls asleep. Mark enters, is given a knock-out drop by the bartender and struck on the head. His pockets are then rifled, and into the hand of the sleeping Jack a gun is thrust. Jack awakens and imagines that he has killed his brother; he flees West. There he buys a worthless mining claim. He falls in love with the hotel keeper's daughter in time, and she returns his love.

In the meantime, Mark's health has broken down and the doctor advises him to go West. By chance he goes to the same town which his brother lives in. Immediately he returns to his evil ways and joins a crowd in holding up the paymaster. A letter which Mark drops is found and compromises Jack. The cowboys and miners start out for Jack, but his sweetheart reaches him first. There is a wild chase; Jack and the girl manage to ensconce themselves behind a barricade of rocks. A lively battle begins and the girl is wounded.

Meanwhile, Mark, in an argument with a gambler, is shot and fatally wounded. Just before he dies he writes a confession of his crime. Jack's faithful Indian servant rides furiously to save his master. He arrives in the nick of time. Jack and his sweetheart return with the boys, the hero and heroine of the day. The body of Mark is borne out to the desert and laid to rest beneath the cacti. A rude cross is erected, which marks the end of a wayward and misspent life.

IMP.

THE PRICE OF SACRILEGE (Three Parts—Feb. 19).—The play opens with a beautifully colored scene of an Italian village. We are introduced to Teresa, the village coquette, who is the despair of the rustic beaus. Luigi is passionately in love with her; his passion blinds him to all else, even to the love of his mother. He is poor and Teresa is poor. Teresa wishes to go to the land of promise, America; she deplores her hopeless poverty. Luigi, to furnish her with money to go away, sells his cart and horse. His mother pleads against it; she curses him and the girl for their disloyalty.

Teresa sails for America. Luigi goes on the boat as a deckhand. As the steamer passes into the horizon the old mother stands on a rock and, silhouetted against the setting sun, calls down a curse upon the woman of temptation. On the boat, Teresa flirts with Guiseppi, a dandified Americanized Italian. Luigi observes but is powerless to interfere. In America Teresa continues the break by flirting with Guiseppi. In the depth of his despair his mother arrives. Together they attend the holy parade. Luigi hears Guiseppi tell Teresa that for her he would steal the sacred jewels. The audacity enchants her and she puts him to the test. He refuses. She flouts him as a braggart and leaves.

Luigi says that he will steal the jewels to win her. In a scene of intense suspense he accomplishes his purpose and brings the jewels to the girl. At first she is appalled with the audacity of the thing; and then fear of the holy mother takes hold of her. She rushes to the house where the Italians are having a festival. They curse her for an arch thief. The church bells toll and the people flee from her. She is left alone when Luigi finds her. She repulses him and in the confusion her mind grows blank. She goes out to the hands of a mob, and Luigi, his heart broken, dies by his own hand before the holy picture and the Madonna. The old mother rushes in and takes his lifeless form into her arms. Teresa is taken away by the police to a lonely life in an asylum.

NESTOR.

A FLASH IN THE DARK (Feb. 18).—Randall is a rich mine owner whose business affairs cause him to neglect his somewhat frivolous wife. There is a mutual friend whom Randall carelessly allows to entertain his wife. As a result, the friend pays more than natural attentions to the woman. The three visit one of Randall's mines. The wife and friend go down the mining shaft in a bucket. While they are yet underground, a quantity of dynamite explodes. The mine is filled with poisonous fumes. Randall has himself lowered into the smoking shaft. He finds his wife and friend almost overcome. There is room in the bucket for two persons only. Randall places the two in the bucket and they are hoisted to the surface. The bucket is again lowered and Randall is brought up. The long period in the poisoned atmosphere has rendered him stone blind.

The young wife soon tires of her blind husband. One day Randall overhears their plans for elopement. He goes to the friend and the faithless wife and explains that he has overheard. He then gives the man a revolver and tells him: "Turn out the lights and our chances will be equal. The woman turns off the lights. Both men fire and miss. The friend sneaks to the switch and turns on the lights, intending to change the duel into a murder. But the woman by this time has discovered which of the two is the man. She wrenches the revolver from the friend's hand and tells him to go and never return.

SCOOPED BY A HENCOOP (Feb. 20).—Possibly no one ever loved so deeply as Jim Hick and Mandy Lane. But alas, the course of true love is only too often rough. Mandy's pa hates Jim. Each time Jim steals a blissful moment with his beloved, he expects to receive a shot of red pepper in the center of his specific gravity. However Jim decides to emulate Falstaff. He takes Liza Green, the washerwoman into his confidence, and she smuggles him into Mandy's yard in a clothes basket. Unfortunately, Mandy takes pa into her confidence and Jim is dumped into the lake. Jim returns to Mandy and he and pa come to destructive blows. In the meantime, some thieves are chased out of pa's chicken-coop by the neighbors. The thieves drop the chickens in their flight, and pa picks them up. He is then pursued as the thief. Mandy locks him in the chicken-coop for safety. Once pa is safe Mandy summons Jim and they compel him to consent to their marriage under penalty of remaining in the chicken-coop for the remaining days of his life.

CRYSTAL.

HAROLD'S BURGLAR (Feb. 17).—Harold is in love with Viola. She tells him to make a name for himself. He reads an ad which promises to make men detectives for a trifling sum. He invests and gets his badge. A burglar is about to enter Viola's home. Her father chases him away. Harold sees the old man with the tools and arrests him. Explanations don't go with him. The old man is jailed. He is incarcerated for a day. Viola gets him out. Harold visits her and tells her of his great capture. The old man enters, recognizes his captor, beats him up. Harold throws away his badge, resolving that "detectiving" is no business.

McSWEENEY'S MASTERPIECE (Feb. 22).—Antonio McSweeney's masterpiece was a beautiful life-size portrait of Cleopatra. It adorned a special niche in Antonio's studio. One evening Antonio falls asleep in the studio. He dreams Cleapatra comes to life and the snake around her neck also becomes imbued with life. She charms the snake

COMING SOON
The WRATH of the GODS
DOMINO SPECIAL IN FIVE PARTS

FIRE AND SWORD!

MAMMOTH SIX REEL SPECTACULAR PRODUCTION

GREATEST AMERICAN FEATURE! 10 ACRES of FLAMES!

ACTUAL PHOTO ENLARGEMENT FROM THE FILM

Two Arab Armies An Original Story of Love, Courage and Red Blood
Wonderful Cast : : Staged by T. Hayes Hunter

SIX REELS OF THRILLS!
With Dramatic Action That Eclipses Anything Ever Seen Before in Photo Plays

BEST STATES FOR SALE NOW!
If You Are Looking for a Real Feature, This Is It

SENSATIONAL LINE OF PAPER!
From One to Twenty-Four Sheets, Photos, Enlargements, Cuts

A FILM ATTRACTION THAT WILL LIVE FOR YEARS

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF!
Before Your State Is Gone.

Kismet Feature Film Co.
145 W. 45th Street Suite 908 New York

FOR 35 YEARS THE NAME HAS REPRESENTED QUALITY

We guarantee everything we sell. You are assured of a square deal, the right prices and prompt shipment of good goods.

ERKER

We are the largest motion picture supply house in the West. A complete stock of everything but the film. Write for catalogue.

608 Olive Street St. Louis, Missouri and then tells Antonio that if he wants her to love him he must wear a suit of armor. This Antonio does. The bear rug comes to life as a great big bear. Things happen. Antonio is just about to embrace the fair Cleo and tell her how much he loves her when his wife, missing him, comes down to the studio and rudely awakens him.

POWERS.

ALMOST A WHITE HOPE (Feb. 16).—Mr. Wouldby Strong is a prizefight fan and spends most of his evening trying to convince the boys what a great fighter he is. His wife becomes disgusted with him and they quarrel. Strong tells her she doesn't understand him and that he is going to find someone who will. With this he leaves her and goes down town to the boys. In the meantime, Mrs. Strong's uncle visits her and she explains her marital woe. They leave a note on the table signed by the wife saying that she has left him for a better and handsomer man. They then go to the theater. Strong returns home after a good time with his friends. He falls to sleep and dreams prizefight nightmare until, in a cold sweat, he awakens. He finds the note and completely breaks down. His wife and her uncle return and Wouldby Strong starts in to thrash the elderly man when the truth comes out.

MY MOTHER'S IRISH PAISLEYS (Feb. 20).—M. and Mme. La Croix are the proprietors of an art store at 6 Rue de La Shelle, Paris. A party of wealthy Americans visit the shop in search of genuine Paisley shawls. The art dealer has none, but if the customers will return he will inquire from his London agent. La Croix learns that the Burkes, Old Forks, County Cork, Ireland, have a few genuine Paisleys in their possession. La Croix and his wife set out for Ireland. They visit the home of Terry and his old mother, and examine and learn the hiding-place of the Paisleys. That night they enter the house and steal the entire collection.

The following morning the old woman discovers that they have been robbed. Near the strong box Terry finds a vanity card case, upon which is inscribed "Mme. La Croix, Objets d' Art, Paris." He and his mother leave for Paris. In the meantime the Americans have called at the art store, examined the shawls and left a deposit on them. Terry and his mother enter. He shows La Croix the vanity card case and demands the return of the shawls. At this moment the party of Americans enter the shop. La Croix puts on a bold front, and tries to drive Terry from the shop. Terry takes up a chair with which to strike the thief. A false bottom falls out and the stolen shawls are revealed.

GOLD SEAL.

THE HONOR OF THE MOUNTED (2 parts—Feb. 17).—In a small town in the Rockies, Mac, Jacques and Jacques' sister, Marie, have grown up in an atmosphere semi-criminal. Mac, who is Jacques' best friend, is a serious and well-read man, superior to his surroundings. Mac loves Marie and she returns his affection. Desiring to make something of his life Mac goes to the city. He soon wearies of the city life, however, returns to the mountain wilds and joins the mounted police. Forrest, a comrade, is detailed to investigate the smuggling activities. He goes to the country where Mac lives and makes advances to Marie. In the complications which follow, Forrest is killed by Jacques.

When the news of Forrest's death is brought to headquarters Mac is sent to bring the murderer in. He starts out eagerly to avenge his friend's death, never suspecting that it was Jacques who did the killing. He goes into the country wearing the despised "red-coat." His former friends scoff at him. Marie scorns him. Jacques' betrayer, a "Canuck" whom Jacques had once knocked down, comes to Mac and tells him where he will find the murderer. Mac follows directions and finds Jacques. Then comes an intense mental battle. Mac wavers at the thought of taking Jacques prisoner. Jacques' deed was done partly for his sake. Marie stands near. With a mighty effort he decides and in the face of the girl's scorn he leads his prisoner away. The townspeople try to rescue Jacques. Jacques' only thought is for his friend's safety and he lights by his side. When his friend falters in his duty Jacques compels him to remember his word. The two men understand each other—Jacques will not let Mac go back without his prisoner. Mac cannot take his friend to the scaffold. They clash, struggle and go down to death together into a pool beneath the treacherous "Devil's Slide."

JUST RECEIVED

400,000 Feet of Choice Films

Excellent for commercials. Every reel has titles and in good order. No broken sprockets or worn out stock. Will sell entire lot for $1400.00, or will sell in lots of 10 Reels at $4.00 per Reel.

Feature Exchanges, New Exchanges and Others } HERE'S YOUR CHANCE

Shipped C. O. D., with privilege of examination, upon receipt of 25% deposit.

50 Features, with good paper, very cheap.

International Film Traders

5 West 14th St. New York

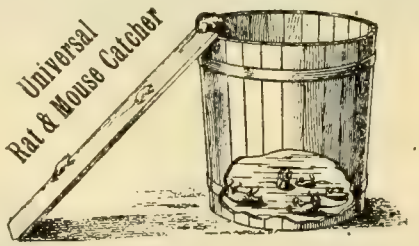
NO Motion Picture is the acme of perfection, or has the elimination of haze, and the softness so delightful to the eye which makes projection an Art but those that are shown upon a "Mirror Screen."

Our New Prismized, Snow-White Surface has the World beaten. We will give $500.00 to anyone who can produce a surface equal to it.

Write for our new catalogue.

MIRROR SCREEN CO.

F. J. REMBUSCH, Pres. SHELBYVILLE, IND.



Cleans a building of Rats and Mice in short time, keeps it cleaned, for it is always ready for use Made of galvanized iron, can't get out of order, lasts for years. Large number can be caught daily. Go to Catcher mornings, remove device inside, which only takes few seconds, take out dead rats and mice, replace device, it is ready for another catch. Small piece cheese is used, doing away with poisons. Catcher is 18 inches high, 10 inches diameter. When rats pass device they die, no marks left on them. Catcher is always clean. One of these Catchs set in a livery stable in Scranton, Pa., caught over 100 rats in a month. One sent prepaid to any place in United States upon receipt of $3. Catcher, 8 in. high, for mice only, prepaid $1. On account of shipping charges being prepaid, remittance is requested with order. H. D. SWARTS,

Inventor and Manufacturer, Scranton, Pa.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 100 (Feb. 4).—Million Dollar a Day Bank Run.—False rumors start run on Fifty Million Dollar Bank, one of the oldest and safest in New York City.

Home from India.—The First Battalion Middlesex Regiment after eighteen years' absence arrives at Southampton, England.

Exciting Motorcycle Races.—Noted riders from all parts of the world compete for the speed championship at the Houston Motordrome, Texas. Sub-Title, Fred Suther, of Fort Worth, Tex., riding 70 miles an hour with arms outstretched.

With the Boy Scouts in Florida.—Under the leadership of Lieut. Commander Young the Boy Scouts spend vacation camping on Eleven Mile Creek, Pensacola, Fla.

Unemployed Women Start Campaign.—A committee representing the Unemployed Women of New York City parades from Cooper Union to City Hall to present their petition to Mayor Mitchel.

Fashions.—Frilly summer clothes. Made from Ladies' Home Journal patterns.

New Tuberculosis Hospital.—President Poincaire and many notables attend exercises at opening of the Tuberculosis Hospital, Paris, France.

Fire Destroys Shopping District.—Flames create great havoc in business section of Manchester, New Hampshire, causing a loss of over $500,000.

Scenes on the Border.—After a march of five days Mexican refugees are safely installed in their camps at Fort, Bliss, Texas.

International Bird Hunt.—Many fine shots mark the day's trials at the International Gun Dog League, London, England.

Ohio Exhibitors' Convention.—Motion Picture Exhibitors from all parts of Ohio gather in Cincinnati for their annual convention.

World's Greatest Prize Fighter.—Bob Fitzsimmons, former middle and heavyweight champion, and his son, the new coming "White Hope," training for "Bob" to come back, at the age of 53 and regain the championship.

Cartoons by the World Famous Caricaturist, Hy. Mayer.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

MAJESTIC.

A TURN OF THE CARDS (Feb. 8).—John Richards was a hard-working man with a pretty wife and a little boy, whom he idolized. Taylor, his assistant, was a bachelor who lived far beyond his means and already, unknown to his trusting chief, had embezzled some of the bank's funds. Taylor was cowardly and he endeavored to involve Richards in his thefts, so that when discovery came he would share the blame with him. Craftily he tried to induce Richards to "borrow" some of the money for a "sure thing" in a certain gambling house he frequented, but the paying teller indignantly refused, and then, reassured by Taylor's laughing manner, believed that his assistant was only joking.

The embezzler bided his time and it soon came. Richards' little boy was seriously injured, and the services of a specialist were necessary for the little boy's life to be saved. The president of the bank refused the advance his paying teller requested, and then with despair gripping Richards, the voice of the tempter was heard, and Taylor bent Richards to his will. Richards took the money, the specialist was paid and prepared to perform the operation in the paying teller's home. The speculations of both Richards and Taylor were discovered and officers sent to arrest them. Richards was arrested as he awaited the result of the operation in his child's bedroom, but his wife was left in merciful ignorance of his plight.

COMING SOON

The WRATH of the GODS

DOMINO SPECIAL IN FIVE PARTS

William Fox Features

Box Office Attractions

Watch the Crowds Grow Where Fox Features Are Shown

William Fox, President of the Box Office Attraction Film Rental Co., announces the following releases for the week of February 16:

Monday, Feb. 16, "Princess Elena's Prisoner," a Great Northern Preferred film of four parts. Miss Betty Nansen in the title role. All star cast in a gripping love story.

Wednesday, Feb. 18, "Fortune Hunters," a Blache production of unusual merit and daring. Thrilling aeroplane rescue scene—four parts.

Friday, Feb. 20, "Vengeance Bequeathed," a story of stage life and false love. The dying request of a beautiful girl and its result. A Luna film in three parts.

Saturday, Feb. 21, "Fangs of Hate," a stirring drama of American life. Big scenes and splendid action. A Ramo production in three parts.

RELEASES

Monday, Feb. 9

"Wives," a Ramo production in three parts. Story deals with a domestic problem and is presented in striking New York style.

Wednesday, Feb. 11

"The Lotus Dancer," produced by the True Feature Co. A romantic four-reel subject with scenes in India and England.

Friday, Feb. 13

"Ben Bolt," a Solax masterpiece in three parts. A thrilling shipwreck scene and smooth-running story.

Saturday, Feb. 14

"By Whose Hand?" a Great Northern special in three parts. A remarkably well-acted crime mystery, with wonderful photography.

EXHIBITORS, ATTENTION!

Every Tuesday and Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Academy of Music, Fourteenth Street and Irving Place, special exhibitions given of our features.

Exhibitors are cordially invited to be present. The features shown on these days are for release two weeks later.

This arrangement gives the exhibitor an opportunity of judging the merit of our features, and deciding the value of their audience-drawing power.

Now prepared to book New York City and State, Northern New Jersey and New England

The Box Office Attraction Film Rental Co. invites exhibitors to visit its spacious offices and projection rooms, No. 130 West Forty-sixth Street, near Broadway.

Notice of the opening of branch offices in Boston, to supply the New England territory, and Buffalo, to serve the western part of New York State, will be given shortly.

BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION FILM RENTAL CO.

130 West Forty-Sixth Street, New York City

WILLIAM FOX, President TELEPHONE, 7340 BRYANT

Poster Mounting Cloth
Headquarters.
Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.
TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY, 62 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

The two culprits were brought to the bank president's office. The evidence was conclusive and they could not deny it. Their employer was a grim man, who hardly regarded his clerks as human beings, so he made a proposition to them which was as unique as it was startling. "You men shall stake your liberty upon the cards," he said, as he tossed a pack of cards upon the table. "The loser goes to prison, the winner retains his position." It presented the one path to freedom, and the men eagerly accepted it. And so John Richards, while the doctors fought for the life of his child, battled to his liberty, and the final turn of the cards brought defeat. The impassive officers seized him, and Taylor nonchalantly strolled toward the door. But at the door his employer halted him. The banker's hand darted swiftly into Taylor's sleeve, and returned holding several cards. "You cheat," he said scornfully, and he motioned to the officers to release Richards and take Taylor in his place. As the door closed behind Taylor and his guards, Richards sank into a chair, but at that moment the telephone rang, and the paying teller heard the glad tidings that his child's life was saved.

JUST A SONG AT TWILIGHT (Feb. 10).—Granddad and his three grandchildren, Helen, Tom and Lucy, live a happy, simple life in their little cabin in the mountains. But the little circle is broken when a rich lady summering at the mountain hotel sees Helen, and taking a fancy to her, takes her with the reluctant consent of Granddad to her city home.

In the excitement of society life with the beautiful clothes provided her by her benefactress, Helen's head is turned and she drops home ties, foolishly ashamed of her humble mountain home. In the course of time, she marries Roger Leonard, a wealthy young man, but does not tell him of her granddad and the children, thinking that he would be ashamed of them.

Letters from home are unanswered, and granddad mourns, thus neglecting the other two, though unintentionally. They ponder how to find their sister and thus make him happy once more. One day they gather their little hoard together and start on their mission. A teamster comes along and thus they are taken far away before granddad misses them.

Reaching the city, their funds give out and they are forced to sing in the streets. Various adventures befall them and they finally sing outside Helen's home. Alone in the twilight she hears the childish voices singing the same old songs that she had taught her brother and sister at home. Belated remorse overwhelming her, she sends the maid out to bring the singers in, and to her surprise, it is Lucy and Tom. Roger enters and Helen confesses and the whole deception and her cruel neglect. Roger gladly welcomes the children and the whole party immediately go to granddad, where everything is forgiven and happiness is once more supreme.

FATE'S DECREE (Feb. 14).—Madge Rivers, the daughter of an old prospector, marries George West, a young miner. Jim Dunn is also a suitor for Madge's hand, and when she accepts George West, he determines to be avenged.

The young couple marry. Dunn never forgets his animosity, and finally discovers a way to gratify it. Overpowering the wife, he binds and gags her and places her in the room above the kitchen, then places poison in the water pitcher on the kitchen table. Familiar with the husband's habits, he knows that he will drink from the pitcher when he returns from work. The wife realizes her husband's danger and strains vainly at her bonds.

West enters his home, discovers his wife's absence, but attaches no importance to it. He is about to drink when his life is saved by a man who comes to him determined to take it. He discovers his wife's plight and sets out to punish Dunn. But fate takes the matter out of his hands and punishes Dunn in its own way.

RUY BLAS (Three parts).—The scene is laid in Madrid at the Spanish Court at the close of the seventeenth century. Victor Hugo, as he himself states in his preface to the play, intended it to be an exposure symbolic of those troublesome times, when the throne was held by a weakling, a defective, the last of a long line of degenerate rulers, and the kingdom itself was a prey to the cupidity of the nobles. The three leading male characters Victor Hugo meant to personify were the three contending forces in the tottering kingdom Don Sallusto, the unprincipled covetous element; Don Caesar, the adventurous but still chivalrous element; and Ruy Blas, the People, who still revered the Crown. As for the story of the play itself, it may be briefly stated. Ruy Blas is a poet reduced by poverty to the position of lackey to the unscrupulous Don Sallusto, who, at the opening of the play, is banished by the Queen for refusing to marry a serving-maid whom he had betrayed. Ruy Blas is secretly in love with the Queen, and Don Sallusto on learning this, wishing to be avenged for his disgrace at Court, palms off on the nobles, the Queen and Ruy Blas, his servant, who is disguised as the adventurer Don Caesar de Bazan, a cousin who returns unexpectedly to Madrid, and with whom he surreptitiously makes away. The ruse succeeds so well, against the wishes of the noble-hearted Ruy Blas, that he becomes the Queen's favorite and her Prime Minister. At the moment when he reaches the limit of his power Don Sallusto returns, relieves him of his office and takes his vengeance on the Queen by disclosing to her the fact that her favorite is none other than his lackey. Ruy Blas resents this insult to the Queen and kills his master. The Queen refuses to pardon the luckless poet for the part he has played in this deception, and Ruy Blas takes his life. At the last moment the Queen relents and pardons him, and he dies happy in the knowledge that the Queen loved him and has forgiven him.

J-M ASBESTOS BOOTHS AND CURTAINS

Made in styles to meet all requirements. They meet the approval of fire underwriters of every city. Write for Booklet. H. W. JOHNS MANVILLE CO. New York and Every Large City.

AMERICAN CAMERAS
MOTION PICTURE
are acknowledged by the leading expert film producers to be the finest and most accurate Cameras in the world.
We also manufacture a complete line of Studio and Dark Room Equipment.
Distributors for Eastman Raw Film
Send for Catalogues
American Cinematograph Co.
617-631 W. Jackson Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

A G-E Rectifier
will make your pictures more brilliant and at the same time reduce the cost of electric current.
General Electric Company
General Office Schenectady, N. Y.
4488

Sargent's Photoplay Service
To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:
Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.
Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.
Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.
EPES WINTHROP SARGENT
Box 70, Madison Square Station, NEW YORK CITY

THANHOUSER.

PERCY'S FIRST HOLIDAY (Feb. 8).—Away over on the other side of the world is Australia, or as they say in Australia, away over on the other side of the world is America. Anyway, Australia boasts of a theatrical star—W. S. Percy, who is firmly entrenched in the affections of the theater-going public. Percy came to America on his first holiday and found much to enjoy and many things to wonder at. The traffic went the wrong way, he said, and it does, judged by English and Australian standards? Also it seemed peculiar to him to have cold weather in December, for that is the middle of summer on the other side of the world. He had a great many adventures while in and about New York and "Percy's First Holiday" tells the story of some that happened, some that might have happened, and some which it is only imagined happened. Just the same he enjoyed his holiday very much and went back to Australia well pleased with what he saw and heard in America.

PRINCESS.

THE TANGLED CAT (Feb. 13).—Fanny, a rural old maid, lives with her niece, May, and has a primitive fear of tramps, burglars, and the male sex in general. She has, according to traditions of her kind, a cat, and as the cat wandered at night it brought trouble to Fanny. Silas, a neighbor, entertaining home folk at a reunion, needed Ford's bed for the company, and sent him to Fanny's house to seek shelter for the night. Fanny and May had just spread fly-paper to catch a pesky fly, and the cat getting into it, after Ford had retired, and Fanny and May got neath the coverlets. Fanny was sure it was Ford prowling around. Ford imagined it was the old maid with designs on his freedom, and he escaped before she had a chance to drag him to the marriage market. Fanny and May get out to go to Silas's, and after a brave party returns to Fanny's house, they discover that Fanny's fear of burglars as unnecessary, and Boyd, a city "feller" captivated with the rosy-cheeked May, made known his intention of protecting her till death did them part.

AMERICAN.

THE CRICKET ON THE HEARTH (2 parts—Feb. 16).—Caleb and Blind Bertha are seen at work. John Perrybingle and his sweetheart, Dot, are seen at the May Pole dance. John takes Dot to see their future home. Old Tackleton, who wants Edward's sweetheart for his wife, is insulting in his action to May and is knocked down by Edward,

FILM TITLES MADE TO ORDER 6c PER FOOT
Negatives Developed FREE
GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th Street NEW YORK CITY
PRINTS FROM YOUR NEGATIVE 5c Per Foot

APEX

IT'S A CINCH

APEX

MOTION PICTURE MEN WHO HAVE THE PROPER BALANCE GO FROM ONE APEX TO ANOTHER IN A BEE LINE THE REASON IS THAT THEY ARE TAKING NO RISK IN DEPENDING ON THE SOLID FOUNDATION OF MERIT.

APEX

APEX

FROM GUTTER TO FOOTLIGHTS

An Original Creation in 3 Parts, by Barker of London dealing with the havoc an unscrupulous woman can work in the lives of pliable men.

HARI-KARI

In three parts. A romance of the Japanese-Russian war, with a hard punch and the most beautiful settings

THE DOCK DISASTER

A Drama of Business and its effect upon the minds of men. In three thrilling parts, entirely unique in plot and development.

THE GREAT BULLION ROBBERY

Another big Barker sensation in three parts. A constant succession of high tension scenes forming a strong drama of London police work.

IN THE HANDS OF LONDON CROOKS

A tremendously absorbing story of the complex life of the World's greatest city. A five part tale of great action—produced by Barker Co., London.

IN THE PYTHON'S DEN

An altogether different play, in three parts, revealing the impassable barrier that lies between the white man and the Hindoo.

THE BLACK THIRTEEN

The swiftest moving detective story ever filmed. Exhibitors and renters are going daffy over these three remarkable reels.

APEX FILM CO.

145 W. 45th ST., NEW YORK—P. P. CRAFT, Mgr.

HUGH HOFFMAN

who really fears he has killed him. This compels Edward to escape and we see Tackleton on his recovery avenging on the poor father the son's action. Caleb is rendered poorer and poorer, but through it all he maintains a stout heart in order to conceal the real situation of their poverty from his blind daughter.

Dot and Joan are married and oh! what a wonderful baby Tilly Slowboy has to take care of, and my! how the cricket chirps in their happy home. May, to save her father, consents to marry old Tackleton, and we see them on the way to the church. Edward comes back, though, and old Tackleton turns out better than we thought. Edward and May are married and then what a homecoming they all have! And how happy old Caleb is to find his son has come home to him! And the cricket never stops his chirping. You know Dickens says, "To have a cricket on the hearth is the luckiest thing in all the world."

THE "POTE LARIAT" OF THE FLYING A (Feb. 21).—May West's uncle dies and leaves her a ranch out West. She and her parents arrive at the ranch with Walter Crandall, an artist, and a European poet laureate, and are welcomed by the cowboys of the ranch, who are known as the roughest bunch of cowpunchers in the state. While on a tour of investigation with her guests, the poet is inspired by the scenic beauty of the landscape to extemporize a poem, which he recites with elaborate gestures. This makes a great impression on the cowboys, who have heard wonderful tales of the fabulous remuneration the poet receives for his verse. Buck Higgins is particularly impressed and decides he too, will be a "pote lariat," and make enough money to buy a saloon, he having a great fondness for intoxicating beverages. The finer beauties of nature being a sealed book to Buck, he goes for inspiration to something he can understand and indites his first poem about "the big red stere." The other boys marvel at his poetic talent.

May's gentle ways has won the heart of the boys, they worship the ground she walks on, and the indignation of Hank, the foreman, is great when Buck in an intoxicated condition attempts to intrude on her guests. May interferes as Hank is about to use rough tactics, and the gentle reproof she administers causes Buck to forswear liquor. On May's birthday the boys buy a bunch of flowers for her and have Buck write a "pome" to accompany it. Down deep in Buck's brain there is a feeling that with a woman age and beauty are subjects of great consequence as having an important bearing on her popularity. So he composes his crude poem with a view to tactfully allay May's fears on that score.

May is pleased and gives the boys a half holiday and they start for town. Buck is obliged to remain to mend a broken saddle girth. Accompanied by May, Crandall goes out on the ranch to sketch a bit of landscape and on the way out, while lighting a cigarette, drops a lot of matches, which subsequently catch fire and start a small prairie blaze. As a result the cattle stampede and make for the spot where May and Crandall are sitting. Crandall, terrified, tries to escape without a thought for May; in the excitement he mounts May's horse, is thrown off and both horses run away. Their predicament is noticed by Buck, who is about to follow the other boys to town, and he rides to their rescue, letting May and Crandall have his pony and escape. Buck is trampled by the cattle and before he dies writes his last poem.

RELIANCE.

PAT FANNAGAN'S FAMILY (Feb. 11).—Pat Fannagan, a department store delivery man, plans to retire and go back to Ireland and live on the money he has spent a lifetime of toil to acquire. On Pat's last day of work he delivers a package of toys by mistake to the miserable home of Mary, Dan, and Nellie, three children of the slums, whose mother has died and left them to the mercies of a drunken stepfather. Pat discovers his mistake, but the sight of the children's happiness over the toys, the most wonderful things they had ever seen, touches the soft spot in his heart. He pays for the toys out of the precious hoard and lets the waifs keep them.

The stepfather loses his job, takes a doll away from the little Nellie, with the intention of selling it for a drink. In the meantime Pat, who has bought his steamship ticket for old Ireland, meets the stepfather, recognizes the doll, buys it back and takes it home to the children. At the close of his last day of work, when the ambition of his lifetime is about ready to be fulfilled, the thought of the three helpless children comes uppermost in his mind, and impelled by a splendid spur of self-sacrifice he gives up his cherished plans, hands over his steamship ticket and part of his savings to the stepfather, who agrees to leave the country and never return. Pat adopts the waifs, goes back to work at sixty-five dollars a month, but happy over his little family, that has found such a warm place in his heart that he could not give them up.

THE IDLER (Feb. 14).—Sheldon Lewis, a young society man and an idler, is in love with Miriam Morris, a society girl with advanced ideas. She refuses to marry him on the ground that he is an idler a "mollycoddle"—and she wants a strong man, not a weakling. He is dismissed and goes home only to meet with an accident which deprives him of his faculties temporarily. He disappears from his haunts and the papers tell of the young millionaire's disappearance and the matter remains a mystery for over two years. Miriam has mourned him, for she cares for him in spite of his apparent weakness. Lewis wanders into a poor section of the city and foregathers with workmen and a still lower class which leads him into accepting an offer from Jerry Morgan, a burglar, to assist in robbing a house which Morgan has spied out as a good "lay." The house turns out to be that of Miriam's father, but Lewis does not recall it. His memory is gone. He goes to the house with Morgan and meets Miriam, who recognizes him, but he does not know her. He is led by her sweetness to turn on Morgan and refuses to allow him to harm her or rob the house, and they fight. After a terrific battle, in which Morgan triumphs and escapes, and Lewis puts up a good fight, he is hit on the head, and the blow knocks him unconscious. Morgan is captured and brought back to the house, where in revenge he implicates Lewis, but Miriam denies this and tells the police that he was hurt protecting her—that he was a friend of hers. He is taken to the hospital; the surgeon discovers the old fracture and an operation restores him to former power. Miriam realizes he is no longer a mollycoddle, and they marry.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (Fourth Release—Feb. 9).—The fourth reel opens with a scene showing the dispersing of a street crowd which had been attracted by the unusual sight of a limousine car filled with fashionably gowned ladies being stopped on the broad highway while detectives and the police climb aboard in a vain effort to find stolen property. John, the country boy, is seen to leave Margaret's automobile downhearted and shamefaced at his failure to find the missing D'Rida jewels upon Count D'Orley. Margaret and her aunt return to their home after a pleasant ride through the city streets. The Count arrives at his home in a disheveled condition and vows vengeance on the country. Meanwhile the detectives have shadowed the Count and are watching his house. The next morning, Margaret and her aunt decide to attend the races at Piping Rock and all unconscious of the duplicity and villainy of Count D'Orley, who is using Margaret as a dupe, the two ladies leave the house and start for the races. As they pass out of the front door, the stolen necklace drops from Margaret's muff out on the pavement, where for twenty-four hours it had been secreted unknown to Margaret.

A detective, standing across the street, sees the necklace drop and after Margaret and her aunt drive away, picks it up, vowing vengeance on the Count, whom he is certain had placed the necklace in Margaret's muff. Margaret and her aunt decide to go shopping before attending the races, and stop at Bonwit Teller & Co.'s famous store on Fifth Avenue. The scene shows the interior of Bonwit Teller's store with live models trying on gowns.

The next scene shows the races at Piping Rock with scores of the most notable personages in New York's four hundred. While at the races, the detective calls upon the Count and flashes the neck-for the summer season. You will want the best fans because the best are the cheapest.

Get Ready Now

Westinghouse Electric Six-Blade Fans

are the quietest electric fans you can get. They give the most breeze for the least money. Their construction is so good that you need not touch them from the beginning of the season to the end.

Divide the price by the years they last

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

ISIDOR WENIZ FILMS CO.
Special Features and Regular Service
MACHINES—FILMS—SUPPLIES
PASSION PLAY For Rent—1,3,6 Sheets 12 Styles of P.
100 REELS FOR SALE WITH POSTERS
Office: 133 N. Gay St. Baltimore, Md.

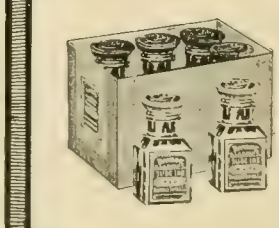
VISCO PICTURE MACHINE OIL
If your dealer will not supply you send us $1.50 and we will send you a 128-ounce can of Visco Picture Machine Oil direct. 6-oz. bottles, 25 cents at your dealer's.
THE VISCO MOTOR OIL CO., Cleveland, O.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176 N. State St., bet. Lake and Randolph, Chicago, Ill.

BRAND NEW

Davids' Glassine Announcement Slide Ink

Put up in boxes containing six one ounce bottles of different colors, viz. Red, Green, Blue, Violet, Black and White. Price per box, $1.00. This ink can be used with an ordinary pen and is manufactured by the oldest ink and adhesive concern in America. Established 1825.



THADDEUS DAVIDS CO.
Main Office and Factory, 95 Van Dam St., New York
Western Branch and Warehouse
18 West Kinzie St.
Chicaog, Ill.

THE COLOSSEUM IN FILMS

These Motion Pictures of

THE COLOSSEUM OF ROME

one of the Seven Wonders of the World, mark a new departure in the production of Educational Film Subjects. They are the first motion pictures directed solely for educational purposes and constitute the first installment of a series of specially directed and systematically prepared educational motion pictures, entitled

"THE GLORIES OF ROME"

The pictures were made with special permission of the Italian Government and according to instructions of W. STEPHEN BUSH of The Moving Picture World, who was in Rome at the time. The Vero Educational Society has purchased the negative.

Of the "GLORIES OF ROME" none is greater than the COLOSSEUM, which after two thousand years is still standing, the greatest structure ever erected by human hands. It is the object of awed admiration by the hundreds of thousands who visit the Eternal City every year. Byron has finely called it: "A Noble Wreck in Ruinous Perfection."

These pictures cover every point of interest in the immortal edifice. There are four divisions:

I.—The Exterior and the Entrances. Views of Rome from Different Stories of the COLOSSEUM.
II.—The Lower Floor and The Arena.
III.—The Stories and Lodges.
IV.—What was Hidden Beneath The Arena.

The total length of the pictures is three thousand feet. Titles and all literature have been prepared by Mr. Bush. The titles are full and exact and a lecture goes with certain parts of the film. The films are perfect in photography and suitably tinted.

These pictures combine the highest educational value with all the pleasure of a refined entertainment. THEY WILL BE USELESS TO NICKELODEONS. They are suitable for high-class theatres; but most suitable for schools, ranging from the grammar school to the university.

For all further information address

The Vero Educational Society

Room 704, World's Tower Building 110 West 40th Street, New York City

COMING SOON

The WRATH of the GODS

DOMINO SPECIAL IN FIVE PARTS

lace in his face, demanding an explanation. Having no real evidence against the Count, the detective is compelled to withdraw.

That evening, on Margaret's return, the detective calls upon her and demands an explanation of how the necklace found its way into her muff. Frightened at the detective's presence and his accusations, she goes to the telephone and calls up District Attorney Whitman. The last scene shows New York's fighting District Attorney in his office in the Criminal Court Building answering the telephone and assuring Margaret of his co-operation.

BRONCHO.

REPAID (Two parts—Feb. 25).—In love with her father's chief vaquero, Pedro, Nell Worth, fearing that her father will discharge her lover, meets him clandestinely. John Benton, superintendent for the railroad, visits Job Worth, hoping with his influence to persuade the Indians to sell a right-of-way through their land. Benton meets Nell and falls in love with her; he tries to make love to her and proposes, but she refuses. Pedro, who is on his way to meet Nell, sees this action and, thinking that this is the reason Nell will not meet him openly, decides to leave the ranch. The Indians refuse to sell their land or give a right-of-way and Benton attempts to put the road through, notwithstanding. The Indians attack the railroad men, killing most of them. Benton is taken a prisoner, but Pedro saves him by throwing his lariat over him and pulling him over the cliff. Pedro is wounded and is nursed back to health by Nell and her mother. It is through the aid of Benton that Job Worth is made to see his mistake and allows Nell to marry Pedro.

DOMINO.

THE MYSTERY LADY (Two parts—Feb. 12).—Living in Jamestown early in the 16th century is the aristocratic family of Durkin, consisting of mother, father and two daughters, Ruth and Ann, who are very homely. John Page, living near Jamestown, is married and has a beautiful daughter named Mary. Indians attack the cabin of Page and kill him and his wife. They then set fire to the cabin and carry Mary off in captivity. Mary escapes in a canoe and makes her way down to Jamestown. She is adopted by John Durkin, but in reality is made a servant. Living in the colony is a Lady of Mystery. None of the colony know her history. She is, however, a lady of royal family who has been forced to leave the continent. She is taken ill with fever and everyone refuses to nurse her. Mary visits her and she becomes very much attached to the girl. A big masquerade ball is given in honor of the new governor. Mary has helped the Durkin girls dress and secretly envies their fine clothes. Mary goes to visit the Mystery Lady later in the evening. As she sits beside the bed she thinks of the ball. Noticing her sad mien the Lady of Mystery questions her. Mary tells her of the ball. The Mystery Lady tells her to go to the old chest, get the gown and jewels there and don them. She does as bid and goes to the ball, where she is courted by all the gentlemen, and the governor in particular. At midnight Mary makes her escape before the unmasking, leaving part of her fan. The next day the governor searches for the other part of the fan and the owner, but fails. He later receives word from England to arrest the Lady of Mystery. In her cabin he finds Mary, who has dressed in the ball gown again to please the Mystery Lady. The old lady dies and Mary is taken "captive" by the governor.

KAY-BEE.

THE SECRET LODE (Feb. 6).—John Acton and Jeff Fulton are partners in a mining claim. Dick Carew's claim adjoins the Acton-Fulton claim, and he is in love with Mary Acton, daughter of John Acton. Mary is about to leave for a long visit to her aunt. While she is packing Fulton comes in and makes love to her. He is repulsed, as she is in love with Carew. Fulton discovers a rich lode in the claim and determines to keep it a secret from John Acton, hoping to buy out his interest, but Acton refuses to sell his half interest in the claim, so to punish his rival, Carew, and also to get his partner out of the way, Fulton changes the boundary claim monument, which separates the Acton-Fulton claim and Dick Carew's claim. Action grows suspicious of Fulton and writes his daughter, Mary, deeding her his interest in the mine. Carew discovers that the monument has been moved to benefit the Acton-Fulton claim. He calls Acton and Fulton and tells them about it; Acton resents his insinuation and Acton and Carew quarrel violently. Fulton writes to Dick Carew demanding satisfaction for the insult at the claim and signs John Acton's name. He then writes John Acton accepting his challenge and tells him he will meet him at 6 o'clock in Buzzard Gulch, where they will fight it out. Jeff Fulton hides at the meeting place and as John Acton comes up he shoots him, wounding him, and drags his body away. Dick Carew comes up and hears the shot, but thinks someone is hunting. He wonders at Acton's apparent failure to keep the appointment. Fulton, behind the tree watching him, fires into the air. Carew fires back, not knowing whether he has hit the man who fired at him or not. Fulton runs to tell the sheriff that there is a shooting affray in the canyon. Carew, believing that he has killed Acton, prepares to run away. Carew is locked up on circumstantial evidence. Mary Acton comes home and discovers the challenge from Carew in her father's vest. They find that Fulton is guilty of writing the notes and frighten him into confessing his guilt by telling him that he has only an hour to live. Fulton is put in prison. Carew is freed and he and Mary are reconciled.

Interfilm Features

Represent Standard Excellence—NOW READY

HER LIFE FOR LIBERTY In Three Parts

No. 1 of the famous Garibaldian-Bourbon photodramas made in Rome by former associates of the Cines Company.

This production is in seventeen beautiful tints: cost of production, $50,000. Book it if you want a superior feature. Special musical program.

Inter-Continent Film Co.

110-112 W. 40th Street NEW YORK CITY

Telephone: Bryant 2305 Cable INTER-FILM

For following territory—New England, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, D. C., Delaware, Virginia and West Virginia—address

Inter-Urban Amusement Company

1123 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia

1402 World's Tower Building, New York

State Rights for the South, Middle and Far West still open. WIRE.

As Always

Our Titles Lead All

in both quality and service at reduced price of 7c per foot.

JUST TRY US!

PREMIER TITLE COMPANY

326-330 East 35th Street, Chicago, Ill.

FILMS MADE TO ORDER

DEVELOPING, PRINTING, PERFORATING, TINTING

BY MY NEW FILM FINISHING PROCESS.

Film Titles, Plastic and Regular Lantern Slides.

38 PATENTS. 30 YEARS EXPERIENCE.

Don't Entrust Your Film Work to Amateurs Using Junk Cameras

I EXCLUSIVELY USE AND SELL THE Junior Professional Camera

GREATEST CAMERA ON EARTH

NEGATIVES REALLY BEAUTIFUL

Exclusively used by the U. S. GOVERNMENT, Museums, Institutions, WAR DEPT., PATHE-FRERES, Travellers and small Mfgrs. Developing Outfits, Printers, Polishers, Counters.

RAW FILM, ALL SUPPLY. Original CARL ZEISS TESSAR LENSES. All Repairs.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES Kinema Laboratories STEEL BUILDING 9 FLOORS

Eberhard Schneider 710 SECOND AVE. New York

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 58 (Feb. 4).—Madame Jenee in Australia.—Famous danseuse is royally received in the antipodes.

A Festival in Turkestan.—One day each year is given over to children's amusement at Merv.

First Michigan Skiing.—Upper peninsula country enjoying unusual sporting conditions.

The Last Landing.—Vessel wrecked in unusual position on Welsh coast.

Carl Browne Buried.—Famous Coxey Army lieutenant passes away in Washington.

Refugees Reach Presidio.—Thousands of Mexicans cared for by U. S. government.

Irrigation in Egypt.—Primitive methods of watering land still used in Pharaoh's country.

"The Santa Claus Girl."—Miss Olive May Wilson, of Philadelphia, seeks free postage for Christmas gifts for Nation's poor.

Ice-Boating.—Shrewsbury river, N. J., scene of exciting sport.

Madrid Firemen's Review.—Spanish smoke-eaters give a demonstration of their ability in ladder scaling.

Industries of Prince Edward Island.—Foxes, worth $7,000 a pair, are raised in captivity.

The Storm in Los Angeles.—Tremendous downpour causes great damage in western city.

Making the Columbia River Navigable.—U. S. government cleaning upper channel with tons of dynamite.

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION.

GAUMONT.

THE TELLTALE FOOTPRINT (Feb. 19).—Persistent misfortune followed John Briton, a florist who had a fair business. More than once his wife's brother had helped him over a stile, but business was none too good, and try as he would, Briton found it impossible to keep his head above water. He got seriously behind with his rent, and, although his landlord exhibited much patience in granting him respite, his patience was at last ex-

LOOK HERE, MR. EXHIBITOR!

We will pack your house every performance for 30 to 60 days at a time and the low cost for this service will surprise you. The scheme is a brand new one and will certainly delight you and your patrons.

We only give this swell "stunt" out to ONE EXHIBITOR in a town—Will you be first to write for full details? BEAT YOUR COMPETITOR TO IT—Today—Now is the time before you forget.

Address all communications to A. H. STEGER, 905 OHIO BLDG., TOLEDO, OHIO

ANOTHER DAY
THE DUKES TALISMAN
AND ANOTHER GREAT GAUMONT
Mr. Exchange and Mr. Exhibito, watch this space every week. It will be original and specially drawn for you. But—
"THE DUKE'S TALISMAN"
A great drawing card.
EVERY SORT OF PUBLICITY BOTH FOR EXCHANGE & EXHIBITOR.
Gaumont Co.
110 WEST 40th STREET, N. Y.
GAUMONT

A HARD FIGHT
is what every exhibitor has until he uses Gaumont Films. This week Jack Marriott excels in his sensational elopement
"MARRIAGE BY AEROPLANE"
3 Reels—Released Jan. 31st.
A great box office attraction.
EVERY SORT OF PUBLICITY BOTH FOR EXCHANGE & EXHIBITOR
Gaumont Co.
110 West 40th Street, N. Y.
GAUMONT

SATISFACTION AND $
GAUMONT
is what every exhibitor gets when he uses Gaumont Films. Why not get in the running and secure
"ANGEL OF THE HOUSE"
3 Reels.
Release (Shipping) Date, Feb. 7.
A heart-gripping story.
EVERY SORT OF PUBLICITY BOTH FOR EXCHANGE & EXHIBITOR
Gaumont Co.
110 West 40th Street, N. Y.
GAUMONT

PHOTOS OF ARTISTS

A Handsome Set of 24 Single Photos in Brown, Blue or Green. To Sell for 20c a Set. Ask us for Trade Prices. A Sure Seller. This is the Best Line Ever Offered to Your Patrons

THE GAUMONT POLICY IS NOW TO ISSUE A BIG FEATURE EVERY WEEK. EITHER THREE OR MORE REELS

January 24th—"THE DUKE'S TALISMAN"—Four reels. A romantic costume drama of the Revolutionary Period in France.

January 31st—"MARRIAGE BY AEROPLANE"—Three reels. A Comedy-Drama of great interest, featuring aeroplane elopement.

February 7th—"THE ANGEL OF THE HOUSE"—Three reels. A beautiful domestic drama, featuring little Marie, who "made" "IN THE CLUTCH OF THE PARIS APACHES."

February 14th—"HER GUILTY SECRET"—Three reels. A very strong dramatic story of a mistaken identity.

February 21st—"THE JUDGMENT OF THE JUNGLE"—Three reels. Another of Gaumont's unparalleled animal dramas, exciting from start to finish.

February 28th—"THE BETTER MAN"—Three reels. Full of gripping interest.

COMING

The Greatest of all Detective Dramas -- FANTOMAS, The Crook-Detective

110 West 40th St. GAUMONT CO. New York City

haunted, and he placed the matter in his lawyer's hands.

In his extremity, Briton wrote to his brother-in-law, stating that unless he came to their assistance once again, they would be sold out. Verder, the brother-in-law, was a miserly person, and when Briton followed closely upon the delivery of his letter, he refused to render him any assistance. Exasperated at his relative's refusal, the florist left the house in a rage and was overheard by his neighbors to make threats against Verder. Angered by Briton's appeal to him, Verder was not in a good mood when a tramp called and asked his assistance. The tramp put his case plausibly, but he made no impression on the hard heart of the miserly Verder, who ordered the man off the premises. He went. Curiously enough, in the course of the morning, the tramp called at Briton's house, and the florist, in spite of his own sorrow, and the black outlook that threatened the happiness of himself, his wife and child, assisted the man as best he could, and his little daughter, seeing that the man needed boots, gave him a pair of her father's.

Later on in the day, the body of Verder was found at the entrance of his house. News of his death spread quickly. Footprints had been discovered by the police. The size and style of the footprints corresponded to Briton's, and he was arrested. The child was quick-witted and remembered her gift of the boots to the tramp. This she explained to the police, and after diligent search, the tramp was discovered. But he stoutly maintained his innocence until the little daughter of the accused man made a desperate appeal to him to save her father. Then the callousness of the man broke down, and, in confessing that he had struck down the miser, he showed that all feeling of chivalry was not dead in him. The confession was sufficient to clear Briton.

A CRUEL LESSON (Feb. 24).—Dolly Warley was left a fortune by her uncle on condition that she spent six months at Oakland Farm as a servant without divulging her identity. The farmer and his wife treated her badly and made life hard for her. Dolly met George Glass, an artist, and grew to like him. The farmer, however, wished George to marry his daughter, and Dolly's life became a harder burden than before. Thoroughly disheartened, she one evening put on an old favorite dress and went out for a walk. She met George, who immediately decided that he loved the farmer's maid and not the farmer's daughter. When the six months were over the solicitor appeared at the farm and read the will to the astonished family. Then the farmer and those of his household understood whom they had been treating harshly for so many months and sought her pardon. Dolly forgave them, and left them happy in the knowledge that she was going to marry the man of her choice.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

GAUMONT.

THE ANGEL OF THE HOUSE (Three parts—Feb. 7).—A phrase that has often been misinterpreted, is Wordsworth's dictum "that the child is father to the man." In this case, however, it is the literal suggestion that is most appropriate, for the actions of little Marie, the heroine of the story, indicates that she knows what is not good for her father better than he knows himself. The story is charmingly played throughout, and the naive and sweet part played by Marie will endear her to the heart of all cinema goers.

THANHOUSER.

JOSEPH IN THE LAND OF EGYPT (Four parts).—Jacob, the Hebrew patriarch, had twelve sons, but the one he loved the best was Joseph, who was next to the youngest. Joseph was more obedient than the others and his father, impressed by his filial devotion, made him a coat of many colors. This sign of the father's preference angered the older brothers and they grew to hate Joseph. The older brothers journeyed away from their home with their flocks, and Jacob sent Joseph to them with a message. When Joseph came to his brothers they seized him and cast him into a pit. A caravan passed on its way to Egypt and the cruel brothers sold Joseph as a slave. The caravan took Joseph to Egypt, while the brothers, dipping Joseph's coat in goat blood, brought it to their father, telling him that they could find no trace of Joseph. Jacob, grief-stricken, believed that his son had been devoured by wild beasts and would not be comforted. When the caravan reached Egypt, Joseph was sold as a slave to Potiphar, captain of Pharaoh's guard. His master treated him kindly and placed him at the head of his household. But Potiphar's wife, resentful of Joseph's authority in the household, turned Potiphar against him and Joseph was cast into prison.

In the prison Joseph's charity and kindness was enjoyed by all the inmates. Even the stern keeper liked him and gave him many favors. And when Pharaoh, wrathful at his chief butler and baker, decided to punish them it was into this prison that they were cast. The chief butler one night dreamed of a vine with three branches, which budded and blossomed, and from the clusters ripe grapes came forth, and that he took the grapes and put them in Pharaoh's cup and gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand. He asked Joseph the meaning of this dream and Joseph told him that in three days Pharaoh would restore him to his place. The chief baker also dreamed. In his dream he had three white baskets on his head, and in the top basket there were bake-meats for Pharaoh, and birds ate them out of the basket. Joseph, asked for the interpretation, said that within three days Pharaoh would hang the baker. And on the third day both predictions were fulfilled, and the chief butler, restored to his place, speedily forgot about Joseph.

Two years have passed since the chief butler left the prison to return to Court, when Pharaoh himself had a curious dream. He believed he stood by the river, and that seven fat cattle came out of the river, and they were followed by seven lean cattle, who devoured the fat cattle. And he dreamed again that seven good ears of corn were devoured by seven thin ears. None of the Egyptian scholars could tell the monarch what the dreams signified, but the chief butler suddenly remembered the young slave in the prison and told of his prophesies. Pharaoh sent for Joseph and when he appeared before him, related his dreams and asked what they signified. Joseph told Pharaoh that there would be seven years of great plenty in Egypt followed by seven years of famine. He advised that Pharaoh appoint a capable officer to collect food during the years of plenty so that when the years of famine arrived, there would be provisions to sustain his people. Pharaoh, greatly impressed by Joseph, declared that there was no one as capable as he and appointed Joseph ruler over all of Egypt. During the seven years of plenty Joseph had great granaries filled with corn and other provisions so that when the years of famine followed, Egypt, unlike the other countries, would not suffer. But in the land of Canaan where Joseph's father and brothers lived, the food was scarce, and hearing of the abundance in Egypt, they journeyed there. Joseph recognized the brothers who had treated him so harshly, although they little dreamed that the personage could be their long forgotten brother. He gave them corn, questioned them as to their families, and then, keeping one of his brothers as a hostage, bade the rest return to their homes, telling them that if they desired more corn they must bring their youngest brother, Benjamin, with them. Benjamin was the brother whom Joseph loved the best. The brothers returned in dejection to their homes and told Jacob, their father, what the great lord has said. The supply of food was soon exhausted and they returned to Egypt, taking Benjamin with them. Joseph received them and gave them the food they asked for, but he ordered a servant to secretly place one of his costly cups in Benjamin's bag, and then, when the brothers had journeyed some distance from the city, Joseph's guards overtook them. The cup was found in Benjamin's bag and the brothers were brought prisoners before Joseph for judgment. Joseph fiercely upbraided them for a moment, then sending his attendants from the room, he told the brethren that he was the long lost Joseph and freely forgave them for their sin against him.

SOLAX.

BENEATH THE CZAR (Four parts).—The story revolves about a young woman who is forced to enter the Russian Secret Service on the threat that if she did not do so her father, an active Nihilist, would be put to death. Before her own eyes he is tortured in the prison and to stop these inhuman tortures, she falls in with the plan to rout out the Nihilist organization. In the furtherance of their designs, the Secret Service authorities introduce her into the home of Prince Cyril, who is suspected of being in sympathy with the Revolutionists. She unwillingly does her task, which is made very easy by Prince Cyril's admiration for her personally and his sympathy with her father's plight. He introduces her into his circle of radicals, but before very long a dramatic scene develops that places her under suspicion. During a meeting of the radicals, she disappears in the secret recesses of their subterranean meeting-place and the most vigorous search for her proves of no avail. After the meeting breaks up and the conspirators leave in a spirit of unrest, she emerges from her hiding-place in a well and guided by an image of her father suffering in his prison, she purloins evidence for the Government. In the meantime, Prince Cyril, guided by traces she had left, follows her to her home and persuades her to return the incriminating papers. However, when Government officials arrives and are told that she had been unsuccessful in her attempt to aid them, her servant, who is spying on her, betrays Prince Cyril's visit. They bind her and leave her in charge of two soldiers, while the others in haste gallop off after the Prince. In the meantime, one of the soldiers, who is secretly in league with the Revolutionists, aids her in making escape. Prince Cyril, after a very sensational chase, is captured and imprisoned. With the aid of this soldier she is able later on to meet the Government General, who, completely disarmed by her innocent charms, falls a victim to her scheme to liberate her father and the Prince. However, before she succeeds in this plan, she undergoes considerable suffering and agonizing suspense. The Cossacks trace her and those whom she had liberated from prison to their subterranean hiding-place, but by vigilance and careful planning they make their escape to America after blowing up their former abode with bombs planted by the Russian soldiers.

FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA.

THE MYSTERY OF 13 HILL STREET (Three parts).—Barry Hill, leader of a band of desperadoes, by fraud obtains a position of trust in a bank. He sends a false cipher message to an associate bank instructing them to send $25,000 by automobile immediately. With accomplices he watches for the automobile to start from the bank. They pursue cautiously. The mechanism of the first automobile has been tampered with, and so timed that the break will come when the occupants are in a lonely, isolated district. Luckily for the conspirators, a band of gypsies by the roadside gives them opportunity. When the chauffeur and the guard get out of the car containing the treasure, one of the bandits steals the treasure and diverts suspicion by accusing a young gypsy standing by. The guard puts him under arrest and speeds onward, hoping to later learn, by enforced confession, the whereabouts of the treasure.

Zara, the sweetheart of the accused gypsy, divines that his accusers were the real thieves. She gallops after and overtakes them. She shouts to the occupants of the car that the men ahead are the real thieves. A train approaches and the thieves cross just in time. The nose of the engine just brushes Zara as she hurdles the crossing rails. She is grasped by the thieves as she gallops by and is dragged from the horse into the automobile. She is taken captive to No. 13 Hill Street, a notoriously bad neighborhood. As she hears a movement of the thieves in the room below, with a knife she scrapes a hole through the floor, and sees them hide the treasure in the floor.

The police when notified do not believe that the young gypsy is guilty. They find evidence of Hill's work, who escapes and joins his accomplices at Hill Street. By the imprint of a blotter, the police learn that he has an engagement that night at the Red Lion Inn. They have also learned that 13 Hill Street is the probable rendezvous of the gang. They are interested in a pile of sawdust lying on top of a table. Looking upward they see a hole in the floor of the room above, two eyes peering through. The girl reveals the hiding-place of the stolen money. The police raid the Red Lion Inn. Hill almost escapes after a series of daring feats, and an exciting race on a motorcycle. He finally dives off a high bridge, only to be captured later by the police, who man a motor boat. The gypsy is released to enjoy the love of the girl whose efforts liberated him.

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION.

JOAN OF ARC (Five reels).—At Domremy, a town situated close to the river Meuse, little Joan, the daughter of Jacques d'Arc, heard the tales of the war which was then devastating her country. Mercenary troops of the Duke of Armagnor fought in defense of King Charles VII. They were opposed by the soldiers of the Duke of Burgundy, allied with the English. Devastation and pillage followed in their wake. The peasantry passed their days in wretchedness and terror, hanging round the castles imploring aid and assistance. It was a constant din of battle, galloping horses and the clash of arms. All houses were solidly barred.

Joan lived thus in the midst of trouble and anxiety. At times the sound of distinct and melodious bells reached her ears when tending her sheep and cattle in the meadows. She knelt for hours, listening to those mysterious and sweet sounds. One evening she heard a voice calling her in the sweetest tone imaginable. The maiden knelt: a great flood of light dazzled her: St. Michael was standing before the bewildered girl and spoke to her. His words sounded like music to her ear: "Beloved Joan, hearken to the duty that lies before thee. Go to Lord Baudricourt and then to the King. Ask for arms and soldiers, and fight the enemies of France." Some days later, St. Margaret and St. Catharine appeared to Joan and confirmed St. Michael's order, encouraging her and recommending, at the same time, virtue and resolution. Joan was now firmly assured of her mission.

The Lord of Baudricourt receives Joan's supplication with derision. "I do not believe a word of all this," says he to Joan's uncle, who has accompanied her. "She is dismissed."

Bertrand de Poulangy, a young man secretly in love with Joan, entreats her not to despair. He accompanies her on a second visit to the Lord of Vaucouleur and she finally succeeds. Baudricourt consents to furnish Joan with a small body of knights who will accompany her to the King.

Joan, accompanied by Bertrand, puts on a coat of mail, girds her sword and mounting her steed rides at the head of her squires to the castle of Chinon, the actual residence of the King. More than three hundred barons and feudal lords of

"TRAFFIC STOPPED!"

Messrs. LEVY & McGUINESS

The two world-wide famous police inspectors crush the White Slave Trust.

After all the millions and efforts spent by a public-spirited millionaire resulted only in a mass of interesting material and data, and after our own confreres in the profession have produced such splendid, though innumerable, "Moral" pictures, all about White Slave Traffic from the INSIDE, OUTSIDE, and all AROUND, it looked next to impossible—sheer folly—to attempt a radical reform in the problem of

"TRAFFICKERS ON SOLES" (In 3 Parts)

But then a stroke of Genius illuminated the fertile brains of

Messrs. LEVY & McGUINESS

"Why not try RIDICULE—FUN?"—and Fun it is!

A CLASSIKER OF FUN

The greatest three-reel Burlesque Comedy of the Season.

Limited Territory left on "THE GREAT LURE OF PARIS"

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 West 42nd Street, Candler Building, Phone Bryant 8486, NEW YORK CITY

the realm were then assembled at the King's Court. Desirous of judging for himself whether Joan's mission was really inspired, the King disguises as a courtier, among whom he mixes. Joan enters amid the assemblage. Her rustic beauty causes quite a flutter . . . the ladies whisper, the knights admire her. Without the least hesitation, she walks straight up to the King, before whom she kneels and says: "Kindly Dauphin, I am Joan the Virgin, from Domremy. The King of Heaven has sent me to say that through my humble offices you will truly become King of France." Joan not only convinces the King of her heavenly mission, but also the King's councilors, all learned prelates, who ply her with numerous and intricate questions.

The brilliant career of the Virgin Warrior has begun. At the head of ten thousand men Joan starts for Orleans. The French army was defending the city heroically, but has been reduced to extremities through lack of provisions. Joan crosses the Loire, gives battle, and on the evening of May 1, 1429, the glorious Virgin makes a triumphant entry into the beleaguered city. The next day she discusses with Dunois, commander of the city and the officers of the garrison, her plan of defense and studies the position of the enemy. Anxious and filled with pity for the many lives which must necessarily be lost through warfare, Joan shoots a missive into the English camp. She implores the Englishmen in the name of Heaven not to shed blood ruthlessly, but to raise the siege and depart in peace. This message is received with jeers and taunts, which affect Joan to tears.

For fourteen hours the battle raged. One after the other the strong towers on the birdge were taken, and finally the English were forced to raise the siege. Joan, following up her advantage, pursues the flying horde and completely routs the English at the battle of Patay. Talbot was taken prisoner. Night falls on the field of battle. The heroic maiden helps the wounded. The tidings of Joan's magnificent victory stirs the Court and the vacillating King. Joan is received with unusual honors and succeeds in persuading Charles to go to Rheims, there to be crowned King of France in the sacred cathedral of that ancient city. The imposing pageant of the Dauphin Charles' triumphal procession, led by Joan holding aloft her standard, fills the population with enthusiasm and joy. As Joan proceeds, women and girls kiss the hem of her mantle; her path is strewn with roses.

On July 11, 1429, the Dauphin Charles is duly crowned King of France, and thus it came to pass that the second part of Joan's mission was fulfilled. Joan is on the eve of returning to her native home when renewed activities of the English convince her that her task is not yet completed and cannot be until she has driven them all from French soil. However, the King's inborn pusillanimity, fostered by the envy, malice and hatred of both the Court and the Clergy, causes him to take an unwise and undignified course. He commands Joan to lay down her arms and retire in one of the royal residences. With intense sorrow, Joan places her sword and spurs and armor on the altar of Saint Denis. Many of her companions and soldiers are in tears. The people hold her in veneration and accompany her, singing hymns and acclaiming her frantically. Mothers bring their sick children to her; she blesses and restores them to health.

Joan frets over her inactivity; the Duke of Burgundy's troops are still active and Joan longs to go out and meet them. One morning she starts at the head of her army and leads it under the walls of Paris. Despite the fact that she has been wounded, she again leads her forces to the attack, but is again repulsed. Finally she retires to Compiegne, when, falling into a trap, she is taken prisoner by John of Luxembourg.

Joan's star is fading. She is kept a prisoner; her faithful Bertrand succeeds in reaching her in prison and endeavors to make a way for her escape. Joan of Arc heeds not the divine "voices" that remonstrate with her. In her rash attempt she falls on the rocks at the foot of the tower where she was imprisoned and is once more a captive. John of Luxembourg, greatly terrified, the effect of a demoralizing dream, delivers Joan into the hands of the English for the paltry sum of $10,000. Joan is accused of witchcraft. In her prison she is subjected to the insults of her guards and noblemen. Her confessor, the priest Loyseleur, betrays her.

She is taken before the Inquisition tribunal, which cross-examines her severely. Her replies to the subtle questions of the judges are dignified. The tribunal is confused, but inexorable. . . . Joan is condemned to death by fire. Joan, dressed in white, is led to her doom. Loyseleur, the groveling monk, implores her forgiveness for his treachery. Bertrand, her faithful attendant, showers roses to her as a last tribute of love and respect. She ascends to the scaffold and is tied to the stake. She asks for a cross, which is given to her and which she kisses, praying at the same time for her enemies and invoking the saints. The flames surround Joan; her head droops, her lips faintly murmur the name of the Crucified and her noble and immortal soul appears to be borne up to heaven by heavenly messengers. Even her enemies wept and were heard to say, "We have burned a saint."

PLEASE CONSIDER

when the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

states that its circulation is actually

18,000 copies

that means that cash has been received for an average of that many copies a week. Direct trade circulation and no waste.

You know that the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

circulation in point of quality is unexcelled by any newspaper or other trade journal catering to the film industry, which in its entirety can be reached only through the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Advertising Department

APEX.

THE GREAT DOCK DISASTER (Three parts).—It was not love, but necessity that brought Anna to accept Gersau, the great engineer, and to marry him. Her father's death had brought financial difficulties, and Anna was a young lady of culture who loved to be surrounded by beautiful things. Therefore when the rich and renowned Gersau proposed to her, she promised to become his wife, though it broke the heart of Roland, her chum since childhood. Roland was a promising young engineer and he aroused the jealousy of Gersau by the way he ran after the woman he loved, even when she was a wife. But the friendship between the two was renewed and strengthened when Roland, avoiding all efforts to detain him, dashed into Gersau's burning residence and saved some valuable plans. The house had been set afire through the carelessness of Gersau, who, tortured by jealousy, had left a light under a retort in his laboratory in order to go to watch over his wife. The result was an explosion and soon the whole building was in flames. Roland, who rescued the precious plans, only saved himself from death by jumping from a high window, and sustaining several injuries.

A little while after, when Roland recovered somewhat from his injuries, the great docks, Gersau's master work, were opened. But while the engineer was making the opening speech the dam burst. Tons of water dashed over the dock, washing away the fine banquet which had been laid out and overwhelming the people who attended the opening ceremony. Many were able to save themselves by clinging to the banqueting table, but Gersau was swept away by the surging waters and only rescued with great difficulty.

This terrible catastrophe drove him mad. His wife's anguish is indescribable, for she had learned to love the quiet, strong husband she had chosen for other reasons than affection. Then they took the demented man away. They put him in an asylum and in agony of mind she visited him there, but he did not recognize her and would have nothing to do with her. There was nothing else for her to do but join in a wild round of pleasure-seeking in order to try and forget.

After a while of careful attention at the asylum the great engineer showed signs of recovery. Gradually his right senses returned to him, and eventually the medical men pronounced him quite well in mind and body and gave the order for his release. It was on his way back that he saw what sent a thrill of disgust through him; his wife in the gay throng of merry-makers with Roland. The old jealousy returned, and he followed them and watched till he saw Roland pleading his love. He could stand it no longer and he burst in on them and drove the traitor away. Then he left, a prey to mixed emotions. Tearing off her finery Anna followed, pleaded forgiveness and confessed her love—and was forgiven.

BRASS FRAMES RAILINGS OF QUALITY

You will admit a fine lobby display draws business. Our goods are the best and at prices that are right. Get our new catalogue and quotations before you place an order. We can give you a one-sheet easel-poster frame of brass, complete with glass and compo board back—for $7.00—this No. 12.

THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO.
1232 East 3d Street Cleveland, Ohio

MELIES "GENERAL" FILMS

SUSPENSE AND SUSPENDERS

COMEDY

FEATURING AMOROUS ALGIE

A LAUGHABLE TALE OF JEALOUSY
AND THE DISCOVERY OF ANOTHER MAN'S SUSPENDERS

HANDSOME HARRY

AMOROUS ALGIE

ON THE SAME REEL

WINKY WILLY'S BIRTHDAY GIFTS

COMEDY

AGAIN FEATURING
THE INCREASINGLY POPULAR

WINKY WILLY

WINKY WILLY

BATTY BILL

1000 FEET RELEASED FEB. 12th HIGH CLASS 1-SHEETS

GENERAL

MELIES FILMS
204 E. 38TH STREET
NEW YORK

GENERAL

PICTURE THEATERS PROJECTED.

Akron, Ohio.—A. C. Ross, 103 North Howard street, has awarded the contract to W. B. Lahr Company, 94 East Market street, for the erection of a one-story brick moving picture theater, 31 by 74 feet, to cost $7,000.

Alliance, Ohio.—Karl E. Wilhelm, Albright building, Masillon, Ohio, has prepared plans and specifications for a two-story moving picture theater and store building, with seating capacity of 600, to cost $25,000. There will be two stores on the ground floor.

Albert Lea, Minn.—William Nelson, 421 East Fourth street, contemplates in the spring erecting a modern theater building.

Albany, N. Y.—A. Eddy, S Stanwix street, and F. H. Clark, 269 Second avenue, are planning to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 98 feet, to cost $4,500.

Baltimore, Md.—Cramp & Company, Philadelphia, Pa., are estimating on plans for the erection of a theater building at Eutaw and Garrett streets, this city, for the Hippodrome Company.

Choteau, Mont.—It is reported that an opera house is to be erected in this city. As soon as the architect is selected, plans and specifications will be prepared.

Detroit, Mich.—Philip Brybyn, 371 Hamilton avenue, will erect a one-story moving picture theater, with seating capacity of 400, 30 by 116 feet.

Irvington, N. J.—Michael Melinick, 544 South 15th street, Newark, N. J., has had plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 46 by 100 feet, with seating capacity for 650 persons, to cost $10,000.

New York, N. Y.—Platt Estate, care F. B. Chedsey, 320 Broadway, have had plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater and office building, to cost $17,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—C. B. Govrin, 6th and Wylie avenue, has had plans prepared for the remodeling and additions to his moving picture theater, billiard and lunch rooms, to cost $12,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Clark & Howland, Empire building, are planning to erect a one-story theater building, 62 by 160 feet, with seating capacity for 1,000 persons, to cost $50,000.

Rochester, Minn.—J. E. Reid, 27 South Grant street, has had preliminary plans completed for the remodeling of store properties into modern theater building, to cost $20,000.

Randolph, Kan.—Randolph Electric Light and Picture Show Company, W. H. Sechest, president, have had plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater and electric light plant, 72 x 30 feet, with seating capacity for 275 persons, to cost $25,000.

South St. Paul, Minn.—J. J. Flynn, R. D. O'Brien, O. M. Raths, Gates A. Johnson, Jr., have had plans prepared for a three-story moving picture and vaudeville theater, 60 by 130 feet, with seating capacity for 1,200 persons, to cost $35,000.

Syracuse, N. Y.—M. Colasarda, 942 Grape street, will build a one-story moving picture theater, 34 by 70 feet, with seating capacity of 400, to cost $6,000.

Sandusky, Ohio.—S. H. Shively, 317½ Croghan street, Fremont, Ohio, has prepared plans for a two-story moving picture theater, 100 by 38 feet, to cost $15,000.

Trenton, N. J.—William Rumph, of Langhorne, Pa., and David Rabinovitch, of Philadelphia, Pa., have been awarded the contract for the erection of a moving picture theater on North Clinton avenue, near Hart avenue, this city, for Mayer and Harry Robinson, of Trenton, to cost about $25,000. The building to be completed in about three months.

Utica, N. Y.—Lumberg & Mackie, of the Lumberg Theater, have had plans prepared for a one-story theater and store building, 45 by 120 feet, with seating capacity for 800 persons, to cost $25,000.

White Plains, N. Y.—Frederick Berges, 89 Railroad avenue, is planning to build a $25,000 theater, with seating capacity for 1,200 persons.

Waukesha, Wis.—George and Gustave Frellson have had plans and specifications prepared for a $50,000 theater building.

Webster Grove, Mo.—R. K. Kauffman, A. J. Meir and associates, have had sketches completed for a two-story theater and natatorium, 80 by 127 feet.

Wheeling, W. Va.—George H. Dieringer & Co. will erect a one-story theater and amusement building, 50 by 120 feet, to cost $20,000.

Washington, D. C.—J. H. de Sebour, Hibbs building, has completed sketches for a $75,000 moving picture theater. Also prepared plans for another, one-story, to cost $10,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Johnstown Trust Company, representing Isabella Rutherford, has sold to Walter R. Flaherty the abandoned church property on Stenton avenue, east of Sprague street, which is now used as a garage. It is on a lot 42 by 92 feet, and is assessed for $3,600. On the site will be erected a moving picture theater having a seating capacity of about 500 and costing about $12,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Seldman & Getz have been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 53 by 108 feet, at the northeast corner of Miller and Aramingo streets, for Solomon Cohan, to cost $20,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Turner Concrete Construction Company are estimating on revised plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater, 128 by 80 feet, to seat 1,000 persons, to be erected on Hunting Park avenue, to cost about $26,000.

East Cleveland, O.—E. H. Goldfein, 225 Reserve Trust building, Cleveland, O., has prepared plans and specifications for a two-story moving picture theater, store and apartment building, comprising two stores and four apartments, to cost $30,000. Theater to have seating capacity of 700.

Summit, N. J.—P. R. Tracey, Montclair, N. J., will build an addition to his moving picture theater.

Englewood, N. J.—Hyman Rosensohn, 800 Broad street, Newark, N. J., will erect a two-story theater building in this town, 50 by 134 feet, with seating capacity of 1,500, and cost $30,000.

Hackensack, N. J.—Bijou Theater Company, care R. R. Decheet, 144 Main street, have had plans completed for a $55,000 theater building, to seat 1,000 persons.

Newark, N. J.—Charles Knopf, 523 Springfield avenue, has prepared plans for a one-story moving picture theater and roof garden, 35 by 115 feet, to cost $20,000. Seating capacity of theater, 600.

Lockport, N. Y.—Henry F. Thurston, Temple Theater, will take bids this winter and build in early spring, a one-story theater building, 84 by 140 feet, with seating capacity of 1,200, and cost $50,000.

Paterson, N. J.—M. B. Kitan, 15 North Main street, will erect a modern theater building to seat 1,500 persons. Preliminary sketches have been prepared. Max Gold is the lessee.

Paterson, N. J.—Greiman & Griggs will erect a one-story $6,000 moving picture theater in the near future.

Worcester, Mass.—Geisha Amusement Company are planning to erect a one-story $15,000 theater building in this city.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Joseph Bonda, 329 East Onondaga street, has had plans and specifications prepared for a two-story moving picture theater and store building, 78 by 132 feet, to seat 1,200 persons and cost $50,000.

New York, N. Y.—Plans have been completed for A. C. & A. M. Hall Realty Company, Broadway and 168th street, for a two-story theater, store building and dance hall, 200 by 90 feet, to cost $150,000. Theater will have seating capacity for 1,500 persons.

St. Joseph, Mo.—E. D. Forcum Real Estate Company, Lincoln building, have obtained the contract to construct a two-story moving picture theater, 20 by 100 feet, to cost about $20,000, for C. T. Phelps, 216 Francis street.

Lake City, Minn.—Fred Besler, 1174 Broadway, Winina, Minn., has been awarded the contract to remodel the theater of B. A. Gerness, 179 East 4th street.

St. Paul, Minn.—Louise Friedman, 893 Portland avenue, will build a one-story moving picture theater, 38 by 119 feet, to cost $10,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—W. F. Neumann, 1130 Twenty-sixth street, has prepared plans for a one story moving picture theater, 33 by 150 feet, to cost $10,000.

Stanberry, Mo.—James Mulholland will erect a two-story moving picture theater, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000.

Albion, N. Y.—M. M. Gantz is planning to erect a modern moving picture theater, with seating capacity of 900, and cost $15,000.

Akron, Ohio.—James Dunn, 22 East Center street, will build in the near future a one-story moving picture theater, 66 by 180 feet, with seating capacity for 1,000 persons, to cost $18,000. National Amusement Company, 120 South Main street, are the lessees.

Washington, D. C.—B. F. Myers, Bond building, has prepared plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 20 by 116 feet, with seating capacity of 300, and cost $8,000.

Baltimore, Md.—Mrs. E. L. Schrecken, 3230 Eastern avenue, has had plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater to cost $5,000.

Baltimore, Md.—Suburban Amusement and Development Company contemplate building a one-story $15,000 moving picture theater.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Harry Davis Amusement Company, Farmers' Bank building, have planned to build a modern two-story theater building.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Anderson & Haupt have completed plans and specifications for a moving picture theater to be erected at 412 South Fifth street for the Boulevard Amusement Company, building to be one-story brick and terra cotta, 40 by 112 feet, with a seating capacity of 500.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. Whitshead, Inc., has been awarded the contract for the moving picture theater on Germantown avenue, south of Grover's lane, building to be two-story brick with marble trimmings, 35 by 115 feet, with seating capacity of 500.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Walter R. Flaherty, Drexel building, is having plans prepared for a moving picture theater to be erected on Stenton avenue and Sprague street, Germantown. Building will be one-story brick, 40 by 90 feet, with seating capacity of 500.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John D. Allen is preparing plans and specifications for a large moving picture theater to be located at Frankford avenue and Margaret street. Building is to be of fireproof construction, brick and terra cotta, 60 by 120 feet, cost, $60,000.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Theater Owner Company, James B. Fenton, treasurer, Erie County Bank building, contemplate erecting a modern fireproof theater building in the spring.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Mark & Brock Amusement Company contemplate erecting a theater building, 60 by 150 feet, to cost about $100,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Herman Weingarden, 676 Humboldt street, is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 61 by 88 feet, to cost $8,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Bertha Conicneg, 118 Graham avenue, has invited subbids for interior and exterior alterations to her moving picture theater. The alterations will cost about $10,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Frank Follner, 1507 DeKalb avenue, will erect a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $20,000.

New York, N. Y.—S. & R. Amusement Company, care Irwin Simon, 66 Broadway, are planning to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 170, with seating capacity of 600 and cost $12,000.

Chicago, Ill.—S. Linderoth & Co., 5844 Elizabeth street, have prepared plans for a two-story theater, store and office building, 50 by 125 feet, to cost $30,000.

A FEW STATES MORE LEFT. WIRE OR WRITE NOW!

With the Greeks in the Firing Line [In 5 Parts]

THE BLOODY STRUGGLES BETWEEN GREEKS AND BULGARIANS

The Only Real War Picture Ever Made Since the Invention of Cinematography

ALL BATTLE SCENES ACTUALLY TAKEN 40 YARDS FROM THE FIRING LINE

FOR STATE RIGHTS

APPLY TO

E. V. Trading Service Co., Masonic Building, 382 6th Ave., Room 708, New York

NOW SHOWING IN WEBER'S THEATRE

"LET THE MERRY SUNSHINE IN,
"OPEN ALL THE WINDOWS—OPEN ALL THE DOORS,
"LET THE MERRY SUNSHINE IN"!

IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING THAT IT CAN'T BE DONE WITH THE ORDINARY SCREEN—BUT IT CAN BE DONE, AND IS BEING DONE WITH

"THE PEERLESS"—THE DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN—"THE PIONEER"

THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM—THE SCREEN FROM QUALITY STREET THE SCREEN THAT'S BUILT TO ORDER

THE MONEY SAVER ——— THE MONEY GETTER

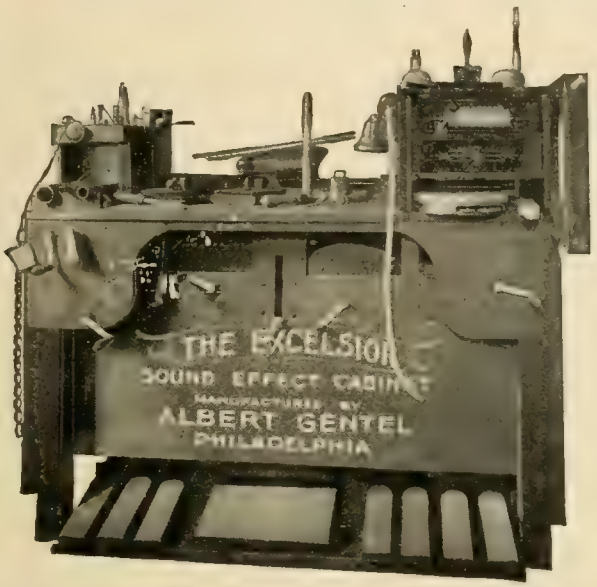
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE ARRANGE FOR COMPARATIVE TEST

DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

NEW YORK—NEW ORLEANS—PHILADELPHIA—ATLANTA—BERLIN—PARIS—LONDON

Sound Effects Produce Natural Shows

It is unnatural to see something happen that naturally produces a noise and hear nothing



The Excelsior Sound Effect Cabinet

Produces a combination of more sounds at one time than any other method.
ENLIVENED PICTURES MEAN SUCCESS
Send for Descriptive Pamphlet
Albert Gentel, 1503 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia

Clear, Clean-Cut Pictures Mean Bigger Profits

This means that you must have up-to-date pictures—the kind that attract day in and day out audiences.

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses mean bigger profits for you because they bring out vividly. and with a distinctive quality, the best elements of your pictures, portraying with an unusual clearness each detail.

You will get the best results and derive the maximum amount of profit and pleasure if you use the Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers.

The Edison and Nicholas Power Machines are regularly equipped with our lenses. Procurable through any film exchange.

Write for our interesting free booklet which is of real value to owners and operators.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.
566 ST. PAUL STREET ROCHESTER, N. Y.

WE WANT
SEVENTY-FIVE
Managers, Operators and Cameramen

to get in touch with us immediately. Makes no difference where you are located or what you are now doing. State your age, vocation and experience. A postal is sufficient. All correspondence strictly confidential. Address

MOTION PICTURE TECHNICAL ASSOCIATION
BOX 562, EL PASO, TEXAS
WE HAVE NOTHING TO SELL

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.....800
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....832
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES.....836
"CELEBRATED CASE, A" (Kalem).....814
CHICAGO LETTER.....811
"COMEDY AND TRAGEDY" (Edison).....788
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).....808
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent).....809
CORRESPONDENCE.....827
FACTS AND COMMENTS.....783
FEATURE FILM STORIES.....880
FINAL PROCEEDINGS OF OHIO CONVENTION.791
"FIRE AND SWORD" (Kismet).....815
FLICKERS.....810
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES.....795
"FROM GUTTER TO FOOTLIGHTS" (Apex).....788
HODKINSON, ICONOCLAST.....816
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....870
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....888
INDIANA.....829
IN THE MIDDLE WEST.....854
IOWA.....856
"JOAN OF ARC" (World Special).....780
JOSEPH FORNAS VISITING NEW YORK.....780
JUST COMPLAINTS OF EXHIBITORS.....784
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....858
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....890
LOUISVILLE.....827
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES.....821
"MERCHANT OF VENICE" (Gold Seal).....813
MISSOURI.....856
MONTREAL.....827
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.....791
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR.....798
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE.....796
"MYSTERY OF THE FATAL PEARL" (Empress).....789
NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA.....856
NORTH WESTERN NEW YORK.....854
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN.....797
PHILADELPHIA.....828
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE.....862
PITTSBURGH.....829
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT.....804
ROTHAPFEL REHEARSING.....787
"RUBY OF DESTINY, THE" (Warner's).....815
SCREEN CLUB BALL, THE.....818
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....858
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....870
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features).....880
VITAGRAPH PICTURE THEATER.....786
YOUR PROGRAM.....785

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, CHARLES L. & CO.....853
REISINGER, HUGO.....855

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.....895
BELL & HOWELL.....894
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO.....893
DEARBORN NOVELTY CO.....897
DETROIT MOTOR CAR CO.....895
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.....895
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.....896
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.....893
GENERAL ELTCTRIC CO.....874
HALLBERG, J. H.....860
HOKE, GEORGE M., SUPPLY CO.....876
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO.....896
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO.....849
PREDDY, WILLIAM G.....894
STERN MANUFACTURING CO.....896
STRELINGER, CHARLES A., & CO.....868
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MFG. CO.....876

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.....857
AMBROSIO AMERICAN CO.....846
AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION.....853
AMMEX MOTION PICTURE MFG. CO.....851
ANGLO-AMERICAN FILM CO.....864
APEX FILM CO.....875
ATLAS MANUFACTURING CO.....869
BLINKHORN, ALBERT.....863
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS.....873
BARKER, CHARLES V., CO.....840-841
CANADIAN BIOSCOPE CO.....847
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.....897
COSMOS FILM CO.....867
CRITERION FEATURE FILM CO.....838
ECLECTIC FILM CO.....861
E. V. TRADING CO.....884
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....770-71
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.....881
GENERAL FILM CO.....774-75
GENERAL SPECIAL FILM CO.....895
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.....845
INTER-CONTINENT FILM CO.....878
ITALA FILM CO.....865
ITALIAN-AMERICAN FILM CO.....851
KENNEDY FEATURES.....839
KISMET FEATURE FILM CO.....871
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURES.....859
MUNDSTUCK FEATURES.....866
PASQUALI AMERICAN CO.....849
SCHWOBTHALER, ROBERT.....862
SUPREME F. F. CO.....850
TRUE FEATURES.....877
WARNER'S FEATURES.....846
WORLD SPECIAL FILM CORPORATION.....842-43

FILM BROKERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS.....872
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.....868

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
JOHNS-MANVILLE, H. W.....874

FILM EXCHANGES.
A. & B. MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY CO.....826
BRADENBURG, G. W.....894
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO.....890
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....893
LAKE ERIE FILM EX.....894
LIBERTY FILM RENTAL CO.....897
MAGNET FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....894
MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.....831
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM SERVICE.....893
STANDARD FILM RENTAL CO.....868
SUPERIOR FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....887

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....889
ECLAIR FILM CO.....850
GAUMONT FILM CO.....879
MAJESTIC FILM CO.....898
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP.....776
SOLAX FILM CO.....834-35
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION.....762
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.....764-5-6-7-8-9

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL CO.....885

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH CO.....891
EDISON, THOMAS A.....779
ESSANAY CO.....763
KALEM FILM CO.....782
KLEINE, GEORGE.....777
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....780
MELIES FILM CO.....883
PATHE FRERES.....772-73-78
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.....899
VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA.....781

MISCELLANEOUS.
ADKINS, L. B.....868
AMUSEMENT SALES CO.....896
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO.....852
BING BROTHERS.....852
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.....844
CUSHMAN WORKS.....893
DOMINION SPECIAL.....878
EASTMAN KODAK CO.....896
GERSTLE, HENRY, & SONS.....868
GUNBY BROTHERS.....874
HORSLEY, DAVID.....896
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO.....869
MOVING PICTURE TECHNICAL ASS'N.....885
NATIONAL TICKET CO.....888
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....893
PHOTOPLAY, INC.....893
PREMIER TITLE CO.....878
SARGENT, EPES, WINTHROP.....874
SCHROEDER ART FLOWER CO.....848
STANGE, A. C.....868
STEGER, A. H.....878
SWARTS, H. D.....872
THADDEUS DAVIDS CO.....876
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE.....868
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.....894
TURNER, HALSEY.....874
VERO EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY.....826
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO.....876
WALKER, F. J.....869
WENIZ, ISIDOR, CO.....876

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO.....874
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO.....895
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD.....878

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO.....869
DEAGAN, J. C.....897
GENTEL, ALBERT.....885
HUME, T. D., CO.....895
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO.....892
SINN, CLARENCE E.....897
WELTE, N., & SONS.....887
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH.....897

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO.....897
ANDREWS, A. H., CO.....897
BENNETT SEATING CO.....897
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO.....897
STEEL FURNITURE CO.....897
WISCONSIN SEATING CO.....897

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
A. B. C. CO.....886
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO.....832
GENERAL FILM CO.....833
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO.....868

PROJECTION MACHINES.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.....887
PHANTOSCOPE CO.....894
POWERS, NICHOLAS, CO.....900
PRECISION MACHINE CO.....837

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN & SUP. CO.....852
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO.....885
GENTER, J. H.....848
MIRROR SCREEN CO.....872

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROTHERS.....872
NIAGARA SLIDE CO.....894
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.....826

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.....895

ONE, THREE and SIX SHEETS

NOW READY for

BIOGRAPH'S Two Reel Release of February 26th THE MASSACRE

KALEM'S Monday Multiple A MILLION IN JEWELS February 16th
Wednesday Multiple CHASING THE SMUGGLERS* February 18th

LUBIN'S New Wednesday Multiple THE PRICE OF A RUBY February 18th
Thursday Multiple *THE HOUSE OF FEAR February 19th

GET YOUR ORDERS IN EARLY ON ALL OF THE ABOVE

A. B. C. COMPANY Cleveland, Ohio

Our Introductory Offer

HAVE YOUR FILMS CLEANED, NEW TITLE PUT ON AND INSPECTED ALL FOR

$1.00 a Reel

By our SUPERIOR CLEANING PROCESS we remove every particle of dirt, clean out the scratches and put new life in the film. The most delicate colors not affected. LET US PROVE OUR CLAIMS TO YOU. Special price on 12 reels and up.

Film Titles, catchy borders, clear lettering, any frame, colored, 8 cts. a foot

SUPERIOR FILM MFG. CO., 714 W. Grand Ave., Des Moines, Iowa

MUSIC — THE VERY LATEST — MUSIC

ORGAN ORCHESTRIONS

PLAYS TWO WAYS

AUTOMATICALLY
AND
BY HAND

MEETS EVERY REQUIREMENT

An instrument of this kind will meet the requirements of any first-class picture theatre. You can play popular, classic, sacred or dance pieces, as the instrument is only limited to the kind of music desired.

BUILT FOR ANY GIVEN SPACE.

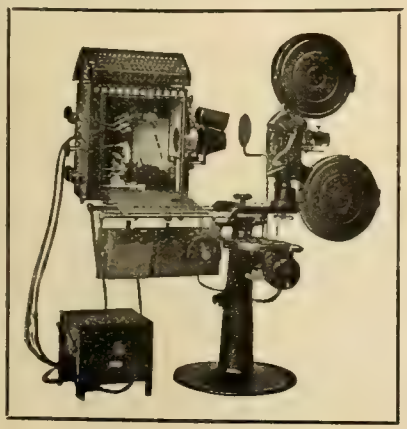
THEY REPRODUCE THE PLAYING OF THE GREATEST ORGANISTS

ELIMINATE EXPERIMENTS

When you purchase a WELTE instrument you eliminate experiments. Your value is represented in every detail, as is attested by being in the homes of the wealthiest and most representative people in the world.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

M. WELTE & SONS, Inc., 273 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. City
ESTABLISHED 1832



THE MOTIOGRAPH
MOTION PICTURE MACHINE

Always used when the best is needed.

If your show is on the toboggan—if your attendance is falling off night by night, you can lay it to your Machine. NOBODY wants to look at flickering Pictures, or wait while the Operator repairs the Machine.

Pull the people back to your Theatre by projecting a clear (painted on the wall kind) Picture, such as projected by the MOTIOGRAPH, a Machine of Quality, with no breakdown and a small up-keep.

Guaranteed and Manufactured by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Eastern Office: 21 E. 14th St., New York — 564-572 W. Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. — Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Jan. 31—Calamity Anne in Society (Comedy)..1000
Feb. 2—The Hermit (2 parts—Drama).....2000
Feb. 7—True Western Hearts (Drama).....1000
Feb. 9—The Lost Treasure (3 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 14—The Money Lender (Drama).....
Feb. 16—The Cricket on the Hearth (2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 21—The "Pete Larrat" of the Flying "A" (Drama) 1000

AMBROSIO.

Jan 10—The Silent Hero (2 parts—Drama)...

APOLLO.

Jan 11—A Swell Dish (Comedy)... .....
Jan. 11—Whose Baby Are You? (Comedy)
Jan. 18—An Accidental Baby (Comedy).....
Jan. 25—It's a Bear! (Comedy)..... ...
Feb. 1—The Great Pasadena Rose Tournament (Topical) .....
Feb. 8—One Round O'Brien In the Ring Again (Comedy) .....

BEAUTY FILMS.

Jan. 21—Fooling Uncle (Comedy).....
Jan. 28—Bess, the Outcast (Drama).....1000
Feb. 4—Sally's Elopement ,Comedy).....1000
Feb. 11—The Wife (Drama).....1000
Feb. 18—The Sacrifice (Drama).....1000

101 BISON.

Jan. 31—The Mad Hermit (Three parts—Drama)
Jan. 31—In the Dolomite Alps (Scenic).....
Feb. 7—The Vagabond Soldier (3 parts—Dr.)
Feb. 14—Unjustly Accused (2 parts—Drama)...
Feb. 21—Her Father's Guilt (2 parts—Drama).

BRONCHO.

Feb. 4—New England Idyl (Drama).....
Feb. 11—Romance of the Sea (Drama).....
Feb. 18—Yellow Flame (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 25—Repaid (2 parts—Drama).....

CRYSTAL.

Feb. 1—A Grateful Outcast (Drama).....
Feb. 3—What Didn't Happen to Mary (Com.)
Feb. 3—Gee, But It's Great To Be Stung! (Comedy) .....
Feb. 8—For a Woman (Drama).....
Feb. 10—Getting Reuben Back (Comedy).....
Feb. 10—Baldy Belmont Picks a Peach (Com.).
Feb. 15—A Sure Cure (Comedy).....
Feb. 17—Some Doings (Comedy).....
Feb. 17—Harold's Burglar (Comedy).....
Feb. 22—McSweeney's Masterpiece (Comedy)..

DOMINO.

Feb. 5—O Mimi San (Drama).....
Feb. 12—The Mystery Lady (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Play's the Thing (Drama).....
Feb. 26—The Courtship of O San (2 parts—Drama) .....

ECLAIR.

Feb. 1—At the Crossing (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—Into the Wilderness (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 8—Valentine's Day (Comedy) .....
Feb. 8—The Black Sea (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—The Good in the Worst of Us (2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 15—The Legend of the Lilacs (Drama)....
Feb. 18—The Cross in the Cacti (2 parts—Dr.)
Feb. 22—The Electric Girl (Comedy).....
Feb. 22—Colombo (Scenic) .....

FRONTIER.

Feb. 5—Slim Becomes An Editor (Comedy)..
Feb. 7—Put Yourself In His Place (Drama)
Feb. 12—Slim to the Rescue (Comedy).....
Feb. 14—The Heart of Smiling Joe (Drama)....
Feb. 19—Slim Joins the Army (Comedy) ..
Feb. 21—The Fatal Card (Drama)..... ...

GAUMONT.

Jan. 22—Oscar's Heroic Poses (Comedy).....
Jan. 27—Calino As a Stage Prompter (Com.)..
Jan. 27—Excursion in Old Paris.....
Jan. 29—Miss America .....
Feb. 3—The Tell-Tale Footprint (Drama)
Feb. 5—Oscar's Disappointment (Comedy)....
Feb. 10—Tiny Tim and the Lion (Comedy)...
Feb. 10—Scenes in Costa Rica (Travel)..
Feb. 12—Simple Simon Deals in Antiques (Comedy) .....
Feb. 12—Excursions in Old Paris (Travel)
Feb. 17—Two Miniatures (Drama)..... ..
Feb. 19—The Magic Salesman (Comedy) .
Feb. 19—Bee Farming (Industry)..... .

GOLD SEAL.

Jan. 6—The Lie (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 13—A War Time Reformation (2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 20—The Unsigned Agreement (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 27—One of the Bravest (2 parts—Drama)
Feb. 3—In the Fall of '64 (2 parts—Drama).
Feb. 10—The Bride of Mystery (3 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 17—Honor of the Mounted (2 parts—Dr.)

IMP.

Jan. 19—Getting Rid of His Mother-in-law (Comedy) .....
Jan. 22—Absinthe (Drama) . ...
Jan. 26—A Doctor's Deceit (2 parts—Drama) .
Feb. 2—A Hot Finish (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—King the Detective in Formula 879..
Feb. 9—Jane Eyre (2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 12—The Elixir of Love (Comedy) .....
Feb. 16—The Box Couch (Comedy)..... ...
Feb. 19—The Price of Sacrilege (3 parts—Dr.)

JOKER.

Jan. 31—In the Year 2014 (Comedy).....
Jan 31—Historic Bremen (Comedy) ....
Feb. 4—Love and Politics (Comedy).....
Feb. 7—The Midnight Alarm (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—Universal Ike's Wooing (Comedy)....
Feb 14—The Chicken Chasers (Comedy).....
Feb. 18—A Narrow Escape (Comedy). .....
Feb. 18—Lumber Industry of California (Indus.)
Feb. 21—The Tender-Hearted Sheriff (Comedy).

KAY-BEE.

Jan. 23—A Kentucky Romance (Drama).....
Jan. 27—For Her Brother's Sake (Drama)....
Jan. 30—Divorce (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 6—Secret Lode (Drama).....
Feb. 10—Colonel's Adopted Daughter (Drama)..
Feb. 13—Arrow Maker's Daughter (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb 20—The Raiders (2 parts—Drama).....

KEYSTONE.

Feb. 2—Making a Living (Comedy)..... .....
Feb. 5—Little Billy's Strategy (Comedy).....
Feb. 7—Kid Auto Races at Venice (Juvenile)..
Feb. 7—Olives and Their Oil.....
Feb. 9—Mabel's Strange Predicament (Comedy)
Feb. 12—A Robust Romeo (Comedy).....
Feb. 16—Raffles, Gentleman Burglar (2 parts—Comedy) ....
Feb. 19—A Thief Catcher (Drama)..... ...

KOMIC.

Jan. 22—What the Burglar Got (Comedy).....
Jan. 22—The Wild Man from Borneo (Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Physical Culture Bug (Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Scheme That Failed (Comedy)..
Feb. 5—My Wife's Away (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—The Sleepy Head (Comedy)..... ..
Feb. 12—That Spring Lock (Comedy).....
Feb. 12—The Plumber and Percy (Comedy) .

LUX.

Jan 2—His Twin Soul (Comedy).....		855
Jan. 9—Bill and the Compass (Comedy).....		560
Jan. 9—From Nice to Monte Carlo (Scenic)..		350
Jan. 16—Bill, the Electrician (Comedy)...)...		585
Jan. 16—A Sticky Proposition (Comedy).....		380
Jan. 23—An Alarming Dinner Party (Comedy).		670
Jan. 23—Winter Scenes in Switzerland (Scen.).		300
Jan. 30—Bertie Has a Free Ride (Comedy)....		600
Jan. 30—Picturesque Corsica (Scenic).....		350

MAJESTIC.

Jan. 20—The Power of the Mind (Drama)....
Jan. 24—The Thief and the Book (2 parts—Dr.)
Jan. 27—(No Release This Date).
Jan. 31—A Riot in Rubeville (Comedy).....
Feb. 1—The Vengeance of Najerra (Drama)..
Feb. 3—The Portrait of Anita (2 parts—Dr.)..
Feb. 8—A Turn of the Cards (Drama) .
Feb. 10—Just a Song at Twilight (Drama)....
Feb 14—Fate's Decree (Drama)..... ...

NESTOR.

Jan. 23—Snobbery (Drama).....
Jan. 28—The Wheel of Life (Drama).....
Jan. 30—When Billy Proposed (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—Fires of Conscience (Drama).....
Feb. 6—Twixt Love and Flour (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—The Greater Devotion (Drama).....
Feb. 13—His Royal Pants (Comedy).....
Feb. 18—A Flash in the Dark (Drama).....
Feb. 20—Scooped By a Hen Coop (Comedy)...

POWERS.

Jan. 26—The Saint and the Singer (Comedy)..
Jan 30—A Coincidental Bridegroom (Drama)..
Feb 2—The Germ in the Kiss (Comedy)....
Feb. 6—Into the Lion's Pit (2 parts—Drama)
Feb. 9—An Academy Romance (Comedy).....
Feb. 13—Withered Hands (Drama).....
Feb. 16—Almost a White Hope (Comedy).....
Feb. 20—My Mother's Irish Shawls (Drama)..

PRINCESS.

Jan. 16—When the Cat Came Back (Com.-Dr.)..
Jan. 23—The Vacant Chair.....
Jan. 30—The Loser Wins (Comedy-Drama)....
Feb 6—Where Paths Diverge (Drama).....
Feb. 13—The Tangled Cat (Comedy).....

RELIANCE.

Jan 24—The Hidden Clue (Drama).....
Jan 26—Our Mutual Girl (Second Release—Drama) .....
Jan. 28—Tricked By a Photo (Drama).....
Jan 31—Too Proud to Beg (Drama).....
Feb 2—Our Mutual Girl (Third Release—Dr.)
Feb. 4—The Janitor (Drama).....
Feb. 7—For His Master (2 parts—Drama)....
Feb. 9—Our Mutual Girl (Fourth Release—Dr.)
Feb. 11—Pat Flannagan's Family (Comedy)..
Feb. 14—The Idler (Drama) .....
Feb. 16—Our Mutual Girl (Fifth Release—Dr.)
Feb. 18—A Working Girl's Romance (Drama)
Feb. 21—An Interrupted Seance (Drama).....

RAMO.

Nov 5—Wives (3 parts—Drama).....
Nov 26—The Fangs of Hate (3 parts—Dr.)..
Dec 10—The Devil Within (3 parts—Drama)..

REX.

Jan. 25—The Leper's Coat (Drama).....
Jan. 29—From Father to Son (2 parts—Drama)
Feb. 1—The Fourth Proposal (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—A Race With Death (Drama).....
Feb. 8—The Coward Hater (Drama).....
Feb. 12—The Law of His Kind (2 parts—Dr.)..
Feb. 15—An Old Locket (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Boob's Honeymoon (Comedy)....
Feb. 22—Woman's Burden (Drama).....

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 13—Adrift In a Great City (Drama).....
Jan. 16—Coals of Fire (Drama).....
Jan. 18—Turkey Trot Town (Comedy).....
Jan. 20—Her Love Letters (Drama).....
Jan. 23—The Elusive Diamond (Drama).....
Jan. 25—The Elevator Man (3 parts—Drama)...
Jan. 27—The Woman Pays (3 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 1—Why Reginald Reformed (Comedy)....
Feb. 8—Twins and a Stepmother (Com. Dr.)..
Feb. 6—The Success of Selfishness (Drama)....
Feb. 8—Percy's First Holiday (Comedy).....
Feb. 10—The Dancer (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 13—(No Release This Date).

VICTOR.

Jan. 28—Dances of To-day (Topical).....
Jan. 30—The False Bride (Drama).....
Feb. 2—U. S. Government Inspection of Beef (Educational) .....
Feb. 6—Irene the Onion Eater's Daughter (Comedy) .....
Feb 9—The Man Who Slept (Drama).....
Feb. 13—The Law's Decree (2 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 16—Votes for Men (2 parts—Comedy)...
Feb 20—Love's Victory (2 parts—Drama)...

FEATURES— (A. Blinkhorn).

Jan 5—The Vicar of Wakefield (Hepworth Mfg. Co.) 4 parts (Drama).....
Jan 8—The Younger Sister (Florence Turner, Ltd.) (Drama).....
Jan 12—Jean's Evidence (Florence Turner, Ltd.) 2 parts (Drama).....
Jan. 19—Motherhood or Politics (Hepworth Mfg Co.) 2 parts (Comedy-Drama).....

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

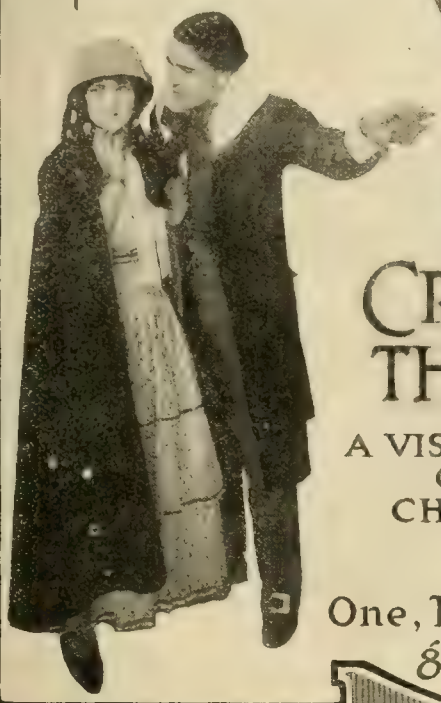
Five Thousand - -	$1.25
Ten Thousand - -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand - -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand -	$5.50
Fifty Thousand - -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand -	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

See
AMERICANS FIRST
FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

RELEASE MONDAY FEBRUARY 16, 1914.



The
CRICKET ON THE HEARTH

A VISUALIZATION OF THE GREAT NOVEL BY CHARLES DICKENS.

Two Parts

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs, Photos, Slides and Heralds

"THE 'POTE LARIAT' OF THE 'FLYING A'"

A FARCE DRAMA, FEATURING SYDNEY AYRES and VIVIAN RICH

ONE AND THREE SHEET LITHOGRAPHS
RELEASE, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, 1914

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.
CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Pathe, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Jan 29—Out of Sight, Out of Mind (Comedy).
Jan 31—The Fallen Angel (Drama).....
Feb. 2—If It Were Not For Polly (Drama)..
Feb. 5—The Dilemma (Drama).....
Feb. 7—Beating Their Board Bill (Comedy)..
Feb. 7—The Faddists (Comedy).....
Feb. 9—One Thousand to One Shot (Comedy)..
Feb. 9—Skelley Buys a Hotel (Comedy).....
Feb. 12—As It Might Have Been (Com.-Drama)
Feb. 14—A Nest Unfeathered (Drama).....
Feb. 16—Her Old Teacher (Drama).....
Feb 19—A Desperate Hero (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—Skelley and the Turkey (Comedy)....
Feb. 21—Criminology and Reform (Com.-Drama)

EDISON.

Jan 28—How Bobby Called Her Bluff (Comedy)
Jan 28—The Call of the Footlights (Comedy)..
Jan. 30—The Silent Death (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Jan. 31—The Perfect Truth—First of the "Dolly of the Dallies" series (Drama).....1000
Feb 2—How the Earth Was Carpeted (Com.).1000
Feb 3—A Treacherous Rival (Drama).....1000
Feb 4—On the Lazy Line (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 6—An American King (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) 2000
Feb. 7—The Man of Destiny (Drama).....1000
Feb. 9—A Story of Crime (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 10—The Story of the Willow Pattern (Dr.).1000
Feb. 11—Andy Goes on the Stage (Third of the Andy Series) (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 13—Rorke's Drift (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Feb. 14—His Grandchild (Drama).....1000
Feb. 16—The Adventure of the Extra Baby (Second story of Octavius—Amateur Detective—Comedy) 1000
Feb. 17—Sophia's Imaginary Visitors (Comedy-Drama) 1000
Feb. 18—Courting Betty's Bean (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 20—All For His Sake (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 21—The Powers of the Air (Drama).....1000

ESSANAY.

Feb. 3—Dawn and Twilight (Drama).....1000
Feb. 4—Into Society and Out (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 5—A Gambler's Way (Drama).....1000
Feb. 6—The Grip of Circumstance (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 7—Broncho Billy and the Red Man (Dr.).1000
Feb. 10—Speak No Evil (Drama).....1000
Feb. 11—Miss Milly's Valentine (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 12—The Weaker's Strength (Drama).....1000
Feb. 13—Sophie Pick's a Dead One (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
Feb. 14—The Calling of Jim Barton (Drama)...1000
Feb. 17—To Alaska Via the Great Rivers of the North (Scenic) 1000
Feb. 18—One-to-Three (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 19—Italian Love (Comedy-Drama).....1000
Feb 20—The Other Girl (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 21—Snakeville's Fire Brigade (Comedy)..1000

KALEM.

Jan. 30—The Medicine Show at Stone Gulch (Comedy) .....
Jan. 30—Making High Grade Paper (Indust.).
Jan. 31—Playing For a Fortune (Drama).....1000
Feb. 2—The Convict's Story (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 4—The Hand Print Mystery (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 6—Vaccinating the Village (Comedy)...1000
Feb. 7—The Indian Ambuscade (Drama)....1000
Feb. 9—The County Seat War (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 11—Indian Fate (Special— 2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Feb. 13—Out in the Rain (Comedy).....
Feb. 13—The Gun Behind the Man (Comedy)...
Feb. 14—The Fatal Clues (Comedy-Drama)..... 800
Feb. 14—Flood of the Dal River (Topical).....200
Feb. 16—A Million in Jewels (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 18—Chasing the Smugglers (Special—2 parts (Drama) 2000
Feb. 20—Too Many Johnnies (Comedy).....
Feb. 20—A Bottled Romance (Comedy).....
Feb. 21—An Indian's Honor (Drama).....
Feb. 21—A Long Island Skunk Farm (Ind.)....

GEORGE KLEINE.

Jan. 6—The Smuggler's Son (Cines—2 parts—Special—Drama) .....
Jan. 13—The Heart of a Gypsy (Cines—2 parts—Special—Drama) .....
Jan. 20—Who Was Guilty? (Special—Cines—2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 27—Wrecked In Mid-Air (Eclipse—Special—Three parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 3—The Marriage of Figaro (Special—2 parts—Ambrosio—Drama) .....
Feb. 10—After Death (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 17—The Artist's Model (Cello—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 24—The Money Sharks (Cines—Three Parts—Drama) .....

LUBIN.

Jan. 30—An Unintentional Hero (Comedy).... 400
Jan. 30—A Stage Door Flirtation (Comedy).. 600
Jan. 31—The Pale of Prejudice (Drama).....1000
Feb. 2—Her Wayward Son (Drama).....1000
Feb. 3—The Catch of the Season (Comedy-Drama) 1000
Feb. 5—Out of the Depths (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
Feb. 6—The Vagaries of Fate (Drama).....1000
Feb. 7—Her Side-Show Sweetheart (Comedy).. 400
Feb. 7—Pat's Revenge (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 9—Antidotes for Suicide (Comedy)..... 400
Feb. 9—Taming Terrible Ted (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 10—The Measure of a Man (Drama).....1000
Feb. 12—Fitzhugh's Ride (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 13—The Sleeping Sentinel (Drama).....1000
Feb. 14—The Reward (Drama).....1000
Feb. 17—Getting Even (Comedy)..... 400
Feb. 17—An Innocent Victim (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 18—The Price of a Ruby (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 19—The House of Fear (Special—2 parts—Drama) 1000
Feb. 20—In the Dredger's Claw (Drama).....1000
Feb. 21—A Winning Mistake (Comedy)..... 400
Feb. 21—The Female Book Agent (Comedy)... 600

MELIES.

Jan. 1—Temples of Japan (Architecture)....1000
Jan. 8—The Somnambulist (Drama).....1000
Jan. 15—Wooing the Sales Lady (Comedy)...1000
Jan. 22—Monte Cristo Up-to-Date (Comedy)..
Jan. 29—Batty Bill's Honeymoon (Comedy).. 600
Jan. 29—Winky Willy and the Fisherman (Com.) 370
Feb. 5—Playing With Fire (Comedy-Drama)..
Feb. 5—Winky Willy's Disappearing Stunt (Comedy) .....
Feb. 5—Dippy on the Boston Dip (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Suspense and Suspenders (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Winky Willy's Birthday Gifts (Com.).
Feb. 19—A Fable and Its Moral (Comedy)..... 300
Feb. 19—A Hobo Philosopher (Comedy)..... 700

PATHE.

Jan. 21—Three Pairs and a Cat (Comedy)....
Jan. 21—At Home with the Heron (Zoology)..
Jan. 22—Pathe's Weekly, No. 7 (News).....
Jan. 22—A Sword of Damocles (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 24—God's Warning (Drama).....
Jan. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 8 (News).....
Jan. 27—A Two Family Affair (Special—2 parts—Comedy) .....
Jan. 27—The Oasis of Gabes—Tunis (Scenic)..
Jan. 28—The Patched Adonis (Comedy).....
Jan. 29—Pathe's Weekly, No. 9 (News).....
Jan. 29—The Power of Print (Drama).....
Jan. 29—Seringapatam—Southern India (Scen.)
Jan. 31—The Lunatic's Child (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 2—Pathe's Weekly, No. 10 (News).....
Feb. 3—Wooing the Cook (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—The Fat Man's Burden (Comedy)....
Feb. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 11 (News).....
Feb. 5—Behind Comedy's Mask (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 7—In the Mesh of Her Hair (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 9—Pathe's Weekly No. 12.....
Feb. 10—Orphans of the Wild (Drama).....
Feb. 11—All on Account of Polly (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—A Typical Buddhist Temple (Typical)
Feb. 11—Scenes Along the Canvery River (India) (Scenic) .....
Feb. 12—Broken Lives (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..
Feb. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 13.....
Feb. 14—Chains of Honor (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 16—Pathe's Weeklyn, No. 14, 1914 (News)
Feb. 17—Whiffles Balcony Buds (Comedy)....
Feb. 17—Rambles in Bourges, France (Scenic)..
Feb. 18—Won By a Nose (Comedy).....
Feb. 18—Monuments of Upper Egypt (Architec.)
Feb. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 15—1914 (News)
Feb. 19—Where the Heart Calls (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 21—Victims of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....

SELIG.

Jan. 23—Doc Yak, Moving Picture Artist (Com.)1000
Jan. 26—The Adventures of Kathlyn—No. 3—The Temple of the Lion (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Jan. 27—The Conspirators (Drama).....1000
Jan. 28—The Old vs. the New (Drama).....1000
Jan. 29—Bringing Up Hubby (Comedy).....1000
Jan. 30—A Splendid Sacrifice (Drama).....1000
Feb. 2—A Modern Vendetta (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 3—At the Eleventh Hour (Com.-Dr.)....1000
Feb. 4—The Heart of Maggie Malone (Dr.).1000
Feb. 5—The Little Sister (Drama).....1000
Feb. 6—Tony and Maloney (Comedy).....
Feb. 6—Italian Games and Dances (Typical)..
Feb. 9—The Adventures of Kathlyn—No. 4—The Royal Slave (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 10—Reconciled In Blood (Drama).....1000
Feb. 11—A Strenuous Scoop (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 12—The Mistress of His House (Drama)..1000
Feb. 13—Their Lesson (Drama).....1000
Feb. 16—The Uphill Climb (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 17—Through the Centuries (Drama).....1000
Feb. 18—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....1000
Feb. 19—Venus and Adonis (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—A Mad Marathon (Comedy).....
Feb. 20—Memories (Drama).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Jan. 28—Scotland Forever (Comedy).....1000
Jan. 29—The Little Bugler (Drama).....
Jan. 30—The Lucky Elopement (Comedy).....1000
Jan. 31—The Love of Tokiwa (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 2—How God Came to Sonny Boy (Dr.)..1000
Feb. 3—Caught With the Goods (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 4—How Burke and Burke Made Good (Comedy) 1000
Feb. 5—Lincoln the Lover (Drama).....1000
Feb. 5—Marrying Sue (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 7—Tainted Money (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 9—The Winner Wins (Drama).....1000
Feb. 10—Master of the Mine (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 11—Sonny Jim in Search of a Mother (Comedy) 1000
Feb. 12—Some Steamer Scooping (Com.-Dr.).... 700
Feb. 12—Niagara Falls (Scenic)..... 300
Feb. 13—Bunny's Birthday (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 14—Children of the Feud (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 16—Sawdust and Salome (Drama).....1000
Feb. 17—Back to Broadway (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) 2000
Feb. 18—Fatty On the Job (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 18—Lumbering in Sweden (Indus.)..... 400
Feb. 19—The First Endorsement (Drama).....1000
Feb. 20—His Little Page (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 21—Iron and Steel (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied 116-118 East Fourteenth Street, New York
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

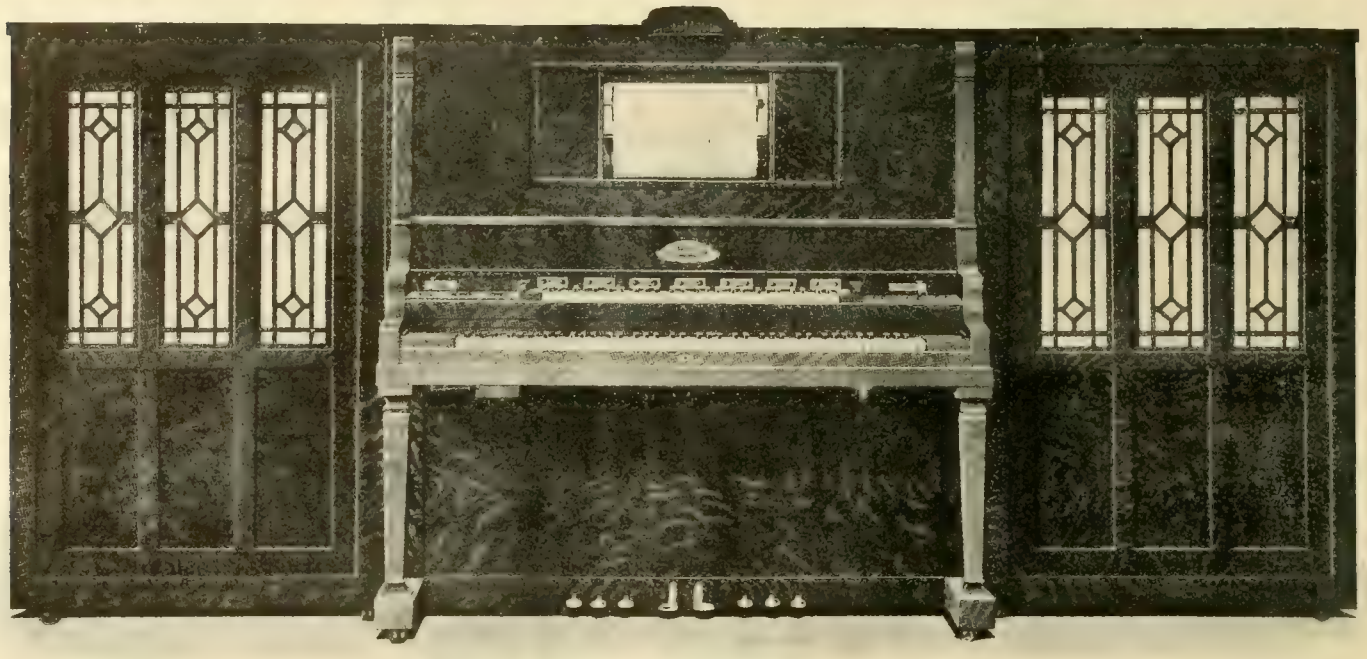
BIOGRAPH COMPANY

Judith of Bethulia

In Four Parts

BIOGRAPH COMPANY announces that this special feature film, arranged by permission of Houghton Mifflin & Company, from the book by Thomas Bailey Aldrich, "Judith of Bethulia," will be released through GENERAL FILM CO.

SEEBURG PHOTOPLAYER



The Wonder of Them All

WE revolutionized the automatic piano, and we have now perfected a combination organ and orchestra with all the effects necessary for producing better enjoyment of pictures.

For further particulars write for our new "Art Catalog" and prices.

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.

Manufacturers

209 S. State St., Republic Bldg.

CHICAGO, ILL.

SIMPLICITY · RELIABILITY · SEEBURG · ENDURANCE

SIMPLICITY · RELIABILITY · SEEBURG · ENDURANCE

POSTERS!

The posters made for all Universal films are far superior to the kind of posters known as "moving picture paper"—in fact they are the finest class of lithographic art. My offices lose money on every poster they sell, but I'd rather stand the expense than have my service advertised with poor posters. I want the best paper for the best films, and that's what I've got and what I offer you!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229

PHOTOPLAY COMPANY, Inc.
19 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
The headquarters for all standard projecting machines. Full line of accessories and supplies.
Expert Repairing on All Machines
Write us for terms and catalogues.

From the Patrons View Point

What Causes People

to continually patronize one Picture Theatre in preference to another? Of course, location, appearances, films, etc. have a great deal to do with it, but quality of the picture is what builds up a steady patronage that makes the business profitable.

This depends largely on your light and if you are using any other device than a

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC

to step down your current you are not getting best results.

With our machine you can produce a clear, white, steady light that won't worry your "house" by continuous flickering and will surprise you with the difference it makes with the films.

It is the only device that can be changed instantly to any of the three intensities without breaking the circuit between adjustments.

But this is not all. We will guarantee that our Compensarc

Will Cut 65% from Your Light Bill and we'll send you one on 30 days' free trial to prove it.

We have a little 22 page booklet that explains all the reasons why If you want a better light at ⅓ your present cost, send for it today. It's free.

FT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Ind.

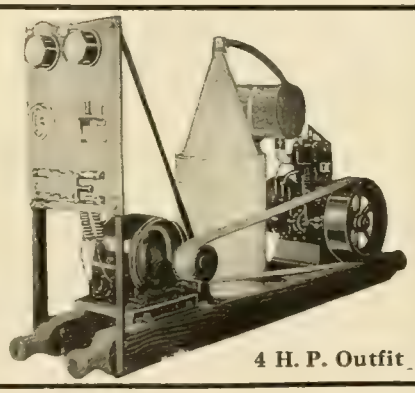
C5

Better Light At Less Cost

Cushman Engines Are Throttle Governed

Complete Engine Generator sets
All requirements for picture show work met. Lightest weight, smoothest power. Steady lights. 4 to 20 H. P.
Literature sent on request.

Cushman Motor Works
2115 N Street : : Lincoln, Nebr.



4 H. P. Outfit

BARGAIN-MACHINES-BARGAIN

Order one for Emergency. Slightly used machines, in first-class running condition. Powers No. 6, $135.00; Edison Model B, $150.00; Edison Exhibition Models, $50.00, $60.00 and $75.00. All complete with lenses, rheostats. Ticket Choppers, Mirror Screens, Chairs, etc.

Order at once. First come, first served.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO., Inc.
1301 Race St., Philadelphia

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson Blvd. NEW YORK—505 Fifth Ave.

MAGNET FILM MFG. CO.
INC.
ALHAMBRA BLDG., EVANSVILLE, IND.

Feature, Educational, Industrial, Scenic Historical and Scientific FILMS

We make MOTION PICTURES of HOME-COMINGS, CARNIVALS, CONVENTIONS, CELEBRATIONS and ATHLETIC EVENTS

SLIDES

Announcement, Player and Release Slides. The best made at the lowest prices. Ask about our premium with $10.00 cash business. Catalogue of course.

NIAGARA SLIDE CO. Lockport, N. Y.

FEATURES FEATURES

Emotional Dramatic Melodramatic 2-3-4-5 reelers

All makes of European exclusives
Write for list and prices

LAKE ERIE FILM BROKERS
No. 229 ERIE STREET TOLEDO, OHIO

Speed Regulator for Motor Driven Machines

Any speed from 5 to 30 min. to Reel. 1500 used. Price $12.50. Quickly attached to any head. Get circular. Has Oilcups, Indicator and Clutch. Very rugged, practical, silent running, and will last a lifetime.

PREDDEY, 669 HAIGHT ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service.
Nearly 3,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

110 Volts, 60 Cycles.....$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles..... 60.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltages and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
317 West Illinois Street :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

670 Film Exchanges, U. S.	$3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S.	1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers	1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries	3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries	3.00

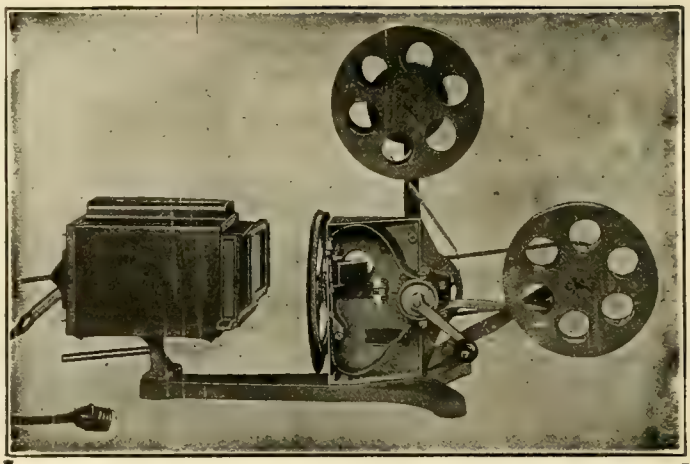
Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

G. W. BRADENBURGH
802 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Phone, Walnut 534. Cable, Bradfilms, Phila

TITLE	LENGTH	MAKE	ADVERTISING		PRICE
Three Drops of Poison	3800	Luna	1-3-4	sheets	200
Cell 13	2250	Gt. Northern	1-3	"	75
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)	4500	Monopol	1-3-4-6-8	"	250
The Bank Note Forgers	3000	Luna	1-3-6	"	300
Secret of the Safe	2750	Cines	1-3-6	"	150
On the Steps of the Throne	3500	Pasquali	1-3-6	"	150
Strength and Cunning	2700	Cines	1-3-6	"	150
Last Days of Pompeii	1350	Ambrosio	1-3-6	"	75
Custer's Last Fight	2150	Bison	1-3-6	"	125
The Yellow Peril	3000	Continental	1-3-6	"	75
The Mysterious Shot	3400	Luna	1-3-6	"	150
The Black Viper	3600	Pyramid	1-3-6	"	100
God of the Sun (Colored)	2100	Pathe	1-3-6	"	125
Life's Bitter Failure	3000	Deu Bois	1-3-4	"	100
Siege of Petersburg	2005	Kalem	1-3-6	"	75
Pauline Cushman, Federal Spy	3000	Selig	1-3-6	"	125
The Czikos	1500	Drankoff	3	"	75
The Fatal Necklace	1600	Itala	3	"	75
The Yellow Man	2250	Ambrosio	1-3-6	"	75
The Black Mask	2950	Dansk	1-3-6	"	60
Wandering Folk	3000	Dansk	1-3-6	"	75
Caprice of Fortune	2000	Eclair	1-3	"	40
Fire at Sea	2000	Gt. Northern	1-3-6	"	50
For the Guilt of his Friend	3000	Deu Bois	4	"	45
Adventure of Lady Glane	2700	Treuman Larsen	1-6	"	60

One Hundred Commercial Films O. K. Condition Without Posters $3.00 per reel.



THE PHANTOSCOPE

is a Motion Picture Projecting Machine

It takes standard motion picture film, film standard the world over.

It takes electric current from the ordinary incandescent lamp socket, either current.

It may be stopped anywhere, and the picture examined at leisure; the film will not be ignited.

It also projects standard magic lantern slides, changing without interruption.

It is light, portable, weighing in its carrying case about twenty pounds.

It projects an eight-foot picture, well lighted, with the usual film and slides.

It works equally well in rural districts without electric current.

It is a machine medaled by the Franklin Institute on the recommendation of some of the most eminent mechanical engineers of this country.

It is a standardized, blue-print machine, composed of interchangeable parts, made in dies, moulds and drill-forms.

Your order may be for one, a dozen, or a hundred, it will be filled promptly, and from stock on hand.

The Phantoscope is remarkably simple, easy of operation, and costs but $75, complete.

The Phantoscope Mfg. Company
WASHINGTON, D. C., U. S. A.

REBUILT PICTURE MACHINES

Power's No. 6	$150.
Edengraph	75.
Power's No. 5	75.
1913 Model Motiograph No. 1-A	175.
1912 Model Motiograph No. 1-A	165.
1911 Model Motiograph No. 1-A	150.
Power's No. 6	160.
No. 2 Motiograph, nearly new	100.

All machines complete with electrical attachments. A-1 condition guaranteed. Time or Cash.

We also have all makes of new machines and supplies. Send for catalog today.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160 North Fifth Avenue, Chicago

PIPE ORGANS FOR THEATRES

Prompt delivery.
Write for illustrated Catalogue or telephone Harrison 1476.

T. D. HUME & CO.
Suite 513-522, 608 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Our Supreme Program Includes

ALL HELEN GARDNER RELEASES
ALL FLORENCE TURNER RELEASES
ALL MARION LEONARD RELEASES
ALL KENNEDY'S FEATURES, INC.

A Feature Every Day or Any Day

GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO., Inc.
POWER'S BLDG. CHICAGO

$75.00

buys a first-class, excellently constructed

Motion Picture Camera

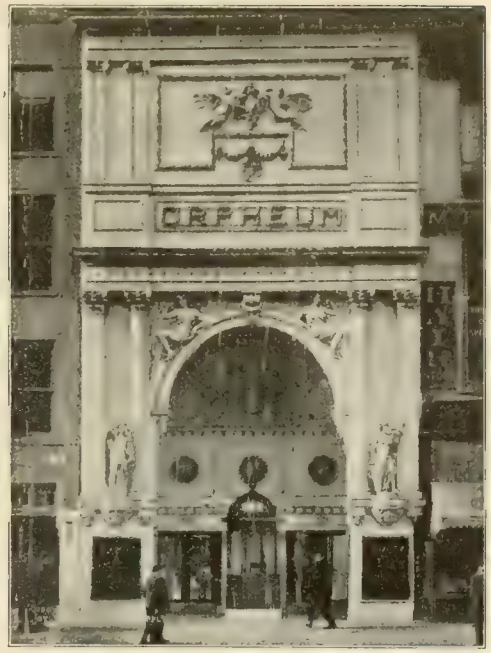
with 200-foot magazines and Bausch & Lomb Zeiss Teesar F 3.5 lens. Beautifully finished; produces perfect pictures. Send for catalogue.

Motion Picture Camera Co.
5 West 14th Street NEW YORK

The Only—— Trade Journal Moving Picture World

Subscription

Domestic	$3.00
Canada	3.50
Foreign	4.00



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St. CHICAGO, ILL.

Good Light Means Big Crowds

The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 201 tells you how and how much. Want it?

Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price, with carrying case, $35 00.

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valve to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale Direct or Through Dealers.

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 West Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

O. K. CHECK SELLER

The Showman's cash register—sure and speedy. Will take care of patrons 50% quicker than by any other way. Saves all the trouble and expense of buying tickets.

Fully guaranteed or money refunded. It is absolutely accurate, and every sale is registered. Has often paid for itself in a week's time.

This little machine holds 1000 checks, and they cannot be issued unless registered. Total amount of business is under lock and key and can be seen only by owner.

Made of brass, nickel plated, and wearing parts of tool steel. Send for special circular and prices.

Made only by

AMUSEMENT SALES CO.

Woodward and Warren Aves. Detroit, Mich.

This One Ventilating Fan Fills Two Purposes

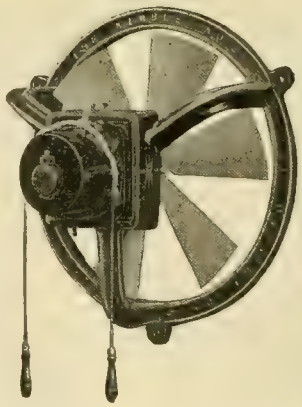
Use it to draw out foul air. Then reverse it and use it to force in fresh air. The

KIMBLE

Alternating Current

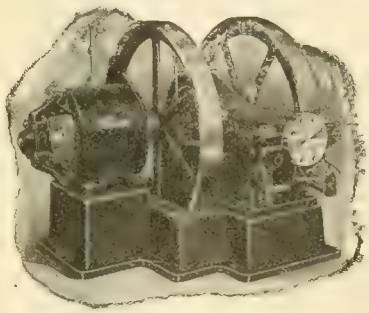
FAN

is the only alternating current, variable speed, reversible fan. You can run it at any speed and it reduces current consumption in proportion to speed reduction. It gives better ventilation at less cost. Our Red Catalog tells why. Write for it.



Kimble Electric Co.

633 Northwestern Ave., Chicago.



PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.

Springfield, Ohio.

EXHIBITORS NOTICE

We have on hand at the present time the following machines, which are guaranteed to be good bargains, and sold under the conditions that if not satisfactory, money will be refunded upon return of the merchandise at your expense.

ONE MOTIOGRAPH, NO. 1A, slightly shop worn, never used, absolutely new, guaranteed, complete with lenses.....$185.00

ONE NO. 6A, slightly shop worn, never used, complete with loop setter, motor drive, motor attachment and motor for 220 A-C, guaranteed complete, absolutely new.....$250.00

ONE NO. 6A complete, new, less rheostat.....$195.00

ONE EDISON, TYPE B, absolutely perfect, used only six months, inside shutter.....$100.00

ONE NO 5, second hand, complete, guaranteed absolutely perfect, including lenses, but no rheostat.....$ 85.00

ONE POWER'S MACHINE in perfect running order, guaranteed absolutely complete, with lenses.....$65.00

ONE EDISON, EXHIBITION MODEL, second hand, in perfect running order, guaranteed.....$ 60.00

THE STERN PERFECT TICKET CHOPPER, $45.00, F. O. B. your city, the best ticket chopper in the country.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND TICKETS, with nickel plated polished ticket holder, for.....$ 7.00

We are importers of condensers, lenses, carbons, and everything pertaining to the moving picture business. Our catalogue will be sent on request.

THE STERN MANUFACTURING CO., 109 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Broadminded Business Man who, in search of the best, has tried all brands of film, is the man I am selling now. You want the best, too. When you buy Lumiere, you get it.

DAVID HORSLEY

American Agent for Lumiere Film

NEW YORK - - 1600 Broadway
CHICAGO - - Schiller Building
LOS ANGELES - - - Opening

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Played from Piano Keyboard

WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"

J. C. DEAGAN

DEAGAN BUILDING

1776 Berteau Ave.

Chicago, Ill.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. The A. H. Andrews Co. Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave. So.

San Francisco Office, 780 Mission St.

THE "STANDARDIZED" THEATRE CHAIRS

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

Largest Stock and Quick Deliveries on Motion Picture Seating

Pleasing Designs. Reasonable Prices
Write for Illustrated Books

V-2, Veneer Seating. V-3, Upholstered Seating.

Send floor sketch for Free Seating Plan

American Seating Company

"Public Seating Exclusively"

218 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago 18 E. 32nd St., New York
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

ORCHESTRA MUSIC

FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts, 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Mr. Commercial Photographer, for best work and rates, send to

The Chicago Feature Film Co.
4108-22 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

FILMS FOR SALE

$3.00 per Reel Up

Send for our new revised list. 50 features for sale, low prices. Second-hand machines, all makes.

ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Steel or Iron STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

H. S. Ansley, 31-33 East 32nd Street, New York City. Telephone 1488 Murray Hill.

California Seating Co., 1110 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave., Seattle, Wash.

L-B Mfg. Co., S. E. Cor. 6th & Vine Sts., Phila., Pa.

Steel standards will not break.

The Wisconsin Seating Company, New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.

Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissell Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Boston: 69 Pearl St.

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH OUR NEW 1913 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT

DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS

COMPLETE TRAVELING OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES AND SMALL TOWNS A SPECIALTY

EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED

WE FURNISH YOU WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING AND START YOU INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT DOWN. THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF YOUR PROFITS. WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG

Dearborn Novelty Co., Dept. M. P. 507 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Every Day 1,500,000 People

IN Motion Picture Theatres

of the United States listen to the Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra. Have you one? It pays.

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES

CINCINNATI

Going! Going! Go---

—Your chance for the "first showing" in your town of Victor Hugo's "RUY BLAS," by New Majestic, Makers of Florence Roberts' "Sapho," unless you book immediately.

"THERE ARE NO FAVORITES LIKE"—Ours, of course, and No New Majestics like THESE New Majestics!

"A TURN OF THE CARDS." Human interest study. Out Sunday, Feb. 8th. With William Garwood, Jessalyn Van Trump, Ednamae Wilson, William Nigh, Howard Davies, Lee Hill, Dave Gilfeather, Florence Vincent, Fred Hamer, W. A. Lowery, and J. W. Cornwall. "JUST A SONG AT TWILIGHT." After the famous song. Out Tuesday, Feb. 10th. With Dick Cummings, Ernest Joy, Elsie Greeson, Parker Oliver, Ednamae Wilson and Clara Beyers. "FATE'S DECREE." Unusual drama. With Billie West, Billy Garwood, Dick Cummings, Justin McDonald and Fred Hamer.

"NEW MAJESTIC"

"There Are No Favorites Like New Majestic Favorites."

All-Year-Round Studios:
Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Offices:
New Rochelle, N. Y.

Selig

"The Uphill Climb"

Success in Business

Depends Upon

Retaining the Confidence of the Consumer.

Selig Regular Releases

Have Achieved This Enviable Distinction

"THE UPHILL CLIMB"

A sorrowing mother impresses upon her ward the fact that her son must be redeemed through her, and makes it her dying wish that the girl marry the young man. How this is carried out, makes a striking and absorbing story.

In Two Reels. Released February 16th

February 17th "THROUGH THE CENTURIES"

The theory of transmigration is cleverly and picturesquely worked out by two exploring Egyptologists.

February 18th "THOU SHALT NOT KILL"

Action and environment in a feud play in the mountains of Tennessee suggest stirring times and attractive surroundings.

February 19th "VENUS AND ADONIS"

A rip-roaring comedy of the seashore, in which a suit made of a barrel figures amusingly.

On the same reel with

"A MAD MARATHON"

Another funny one.

February 20th "MEMORIES"

A charming fancy that revives a dead romance and makes it glow and come true.

N. B.—Get the SELIG selections of interesting and attractive pictorial printing for lobby illustration. One-sheets on every release; three and six-sheets on all multiple releases.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

20 East Randolph Street

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

BE CONSISTENT

MANY Motion Picture Exhibitors equip their theatres with the best screens, chairs and illumination, appropriate music and handsomely decorated lobbies, and do not give sufficient attention to the most important factor of their exhibition, i. e., Perfect Projection.

Knowing that you, as an exhibitor, desire to attain the best results on the screen as far as the picture is concerned, we, having gained the confidence of the trade through the satisfaction obtained by the use of Power's Cameragraph No. 6A, recommend that you inform yourself regarding the merits of this incomparable Projector, illustrations and complete description of which are given in our Catalogue G.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

Ninety Gold Street New York City

Vol. 19. No. 8 February 21. 1914 Price 10 Cents

H. E. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Shadow" (Kalem).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

Thanhouser's "JOSEPH IN THE LAND OF EGYPT" Plays to a Half-Dollar Audience!

We've always claimed it! We've always had faith in it! We've always been positive of it! THAT A "THANHOUSER 'BIG' PRODUCTION COULD GET ANY ADMISSION AN EXHIBITOR CARED TO CHARGE"—and that fifty cents wasn't too much! Why, the famous, high-class Wieting Opera House of Syracuse, N. Y., booked in our "Joseph in the Land of Egypt" at fifty cents admission for a half week—that's as long as they "house" the best legitimate shows—and held it over for the full week! The takings were simply enormous! The best people in town turned out, as they do for the regular high-grade legitimate shows. The Syracuse Post Standard said: "The film deserves, as compared with the trash which many moving picture entertainments offer, the support of those who wish to encourage efforts to make this form of entertainment something more than mere sensationalism." Better see the nearest Continental or Mutual feature office for the attractive arrangement that gives you for EXCLUSIVE first-run use for a FULL YEAR in your locality. Absolute protection is yours under this system. No more advertising a feature heavily to learn the fellow down the street is going to get it, too.

"THANHOUSER 'BIG' PRODUCTIONS"

"THANHOUSER 'BIG' PRODUCTIONS"

"ONE A MONTH, ON THE FIRST OF THE MONTH" are FOUR REEL films that are BIG in story, setting and cast. Always released on the first day of the month and always yours on the first day of the month, if you make that arrangement now.

Always on the "First" JAN. FEB. MAR. APR. MAY JUNE 1 JULY AUG. SEPT. OCT. NOV. DEC. Always on the "First"

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

Sunday, Feb. 15—"THE SKATING MASTER," portrayed by Billy Noel, who swam in icy water last winter in "Her Nephews from Labrador," and who falls in love with "Miss Beautiful," the mystery of the movies. It's a delightful comedy love story. It would have been more delightful for Billy hadn't it been for Little Leland Benham! Why? Oh, see the picture!

Tuesday, Feb. 17th—"A LEAK IN THE FOREIGN OFFICE," TWO REELS, giving an adventure of THE DIPLOMATIC FREE LANCE, by Clarence Herbert New, after the famous series of the same name in the Blue Book, running for nearly a half-dozen years and accounted one of the most popular magazine features ever printed. Ten million persons are estimated to have read them. Think of reaching this high-class clientele with your picture theatre! The next Adventure will appear shortly.

with James Cruze and Flo LaBadie through the entire series.

Friday, Feb. 20th—NO RELEASE because of extra-reel release of preceding Tuesday.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION
NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

Head European Offices: Thanhouser Films, Ltd. 100 Charing Cross Road, London, W. C., England.

COMING FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th

"THE OTHER GIRL"

(IN TWO PARTS)

A unique drama of love, jealousy and ambition. Frank Dixon loves Ruth Thomas, a poor but honorable girl. Frank's mother wants him to marry Alice Williams, a girl of social standing. The son balks at his mother's interference, and many complications arise. The photography and portrayal of characters are excellent. This is a worthy feature.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and RUTH STONEHOUSE Featured

Released Tuesday, February 17th.

"TO ALASKA VIA THE GREAT RIVERS OF THE NORTH"

This is a splendid scenic picture that gives a good idea of the methods used in reaching the far north.

Released Wednesday, February 18th.

"ONE-TO-THREE"

An excellent comedy filled with excruciatingly funny situations. One dress suit for three "hall-roms." It's a scream.

Released Thursday, February 19th.

"ITALIAN LOVE"

A drama of a true love that failed to run smooth. A prospective mother-in-law makes trouble.

Released Saturday, February 21st.

"SNAKEVILLE'S FIRE BRIGADE"

You will laugh until you cry, you will shriek until you sigh—honest to goodness you will nearly die when you see "Snakeville's Fire Brigade." This is the funniest Western comedy on record.

MARGARET JOSLIN, VICTOR POTEL AND HARRY TODD FEATURED

COMING FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th

"LET NO MAN ESCAPE"

(IN TWO PARTS)

This is an exciting and sensational police drama which shows the efficiency of our up-to-date police departments, in handling and capturing men who break our laws. There are many scenes which make "Let No Man Escape," a powerful box-office attraction, while the photography is superb. If your audiences crave a feature of thrills, book this one.

RICHARD C. TRAVERS, RUTH STONEHOUSE and WILLIAM BAILEY Featured

OUR POSTERS ARE DISTINCTIVE. They will boom your business. Lithographs are in full four colors. You can order these from your exchange or direct from the Essanay Film Manufacturing Co. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of ESSANAY players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the PLAYERS' PHOTO CO., 177 N. STATE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

THA
OF THE PAPERS
ARRAN
PENDO
F O R

PATHÉ R

DAY BY DAY, WILL APPEAR IN
AS RELEASED) IN ALL OF THE
IT'S THE GREATEST STUFF EV
THERE ARE FREE SLIDES IF WILL BE FREE POSTERS—BUT
FILMS AT YO

IF YOU DON'T GET 'EM, TELL US! WE'LL

T'S THE BUNCH

WORLD'S GREATEST NEWS-
WITH WHOM WE HAVE MADE
GEMENTS FOR THE MOST STU-
US ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN
YOU, MR. EXHIBITOR!

ELEASES

STORY FORM (THE SAME DAY
GREAT HEARST NEWSPAPERS!
ER DEVISED FOR EXHIBITORS!
YOU WANT THEM AND THERE
YOU MUST INSIST ON PATHÉ
UR EXCHANGE

HELP YOU! PATHÉ FRÉRES 1 CONGRESS STREET JERSEY CITY, N. J.

IT IS TIME T

(A STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER TALK

A rear view of a bow-legged runt of a cow-boy, with the Universal trademark flapping in the breeze—that's the "Universal Ike" brand trademark! First "Universal Ike" release March 3rd!

We are making the most wonderful moving pictures in the world.

Not merely one, two or three a week, but TWENTY-EIGHT REELS EVERY WEEK!

Day after day as I see the superfine product of our various studios, the powerful melodramas, the clean-cut comedies, the astounding features on which vast fortunes have been lavished; day after day as I see release after release with great big universally-known stars instead of unknown in the principal roles; day after day as I see gorgeous stage settings, infinite care of detail, strong, stirring stories and clear, clean photography I WONDER HOW IN GOD'S NAME ANY EXHIBITOR CAN USE ANY FILMS BUT UNIVERSAL FILMS AFTER SEEING OUR PROGRAM!

The only answer I can find to the question is this:—It must be that you are not taking the trouble to see that Universal program! Think of it! Not taking the "trouble" to look after your own welfare LIKE A REGULAR BUSINESS MAN!

Why, man alive, if you conducted any other kind of business as some of you conduct (or misconduct) your theatres you'd smash your bankroll to smithereens in two shakes of a lamb's tail. It's only because you HAVEN'T HAD THE COMPETITION THAT YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE

MOVING
UNIVERSAL
PICTURES

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING

CARL LAEMMLE

"The Largest Film Manufacturing

If your name is not on our mailing list, get it there so you will receive

O WAKE UP!

BY CARL LAEMMLE, PRESIDENT UNIVERSAL)

MIGHTY SOON THAT YOU'VE SUCCEEDED SO FAR!

And NOW it's time for you to wake up! It's time for you to get that Universal program. Not tomorrow or the day after but NOW! The Universal program is absolutely incomparable and WHEN YOU SEE IT YOU'LL KICK YOURSELF FOR YOUR ASININITY IN NOT HAVING PAID CLOSER ATTENTION TO IT.

Never fear that we're going to ease up just because we're making by far the best program and the best features on the market! We're going to keep right on improving. We're going to keep right on setting a pace that no one else can follow. We've got endless ambition, boundless energy and BRAINS AND CASH ENOUGH TO CARRY OUT OUR LOFTY INTENTIONS.

Go to the nearest Universal exchange NOW and make arrangements to protect your future. If you don't do so, the time will come when you CAN'T GET UNIVERSAL FILMS BECAUSE YOUR TERRITORY WILL BE ALL SEWED UP BY COMPETITORS. That's one of the straightest tips I ever gave you and I never gave you a crooked one in my life.

You've had a good long restful snooze. NOW WAKE UP AND DO SOMETHING!

Boost the "Universal Ike" comedy and begin right away. No matter how strong you make it, the pictures will more than make good everything you say about them! First "Universal Ike" release March 3rd!

COMPANY, 1600 Broadway, New York

PRESIDENT

Concern in the Universe"

our weekly publication "The Universal Weekly." You need it every week!

MOVING UNIVERSAL PICTURES

SPECIAL UNIVERSAL FEATURE

Superb Special Posters for "The Merchant of Venice"

THE two illustrations on this page give but a poor idea of the gorgeous 3-sheet lithographs which the Morgan Lithograph people have made for the 4-reel masterpiece, "The Merchant of Venice," directed by the Smalleys and released the last week in February. But they show you enough to warrant you in buying extra quantities of posters for this great big release.

This Feature Will Cost You Extra!

But it is worth all the extra money your exchange will ask. Book it and boom it for all you are worth. Begin showing the advance advertising immediately. Your exchange can get the posters from the Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

This 6-Sheet

was reproduced from one of the actual scenes on the film. Universal posters never misrepresent. It contains the most beautiful color work it is possible to use in a lithograph. Order enough 6-sheets of "The Merchant of Venice" to plaster your whole neighborhood. Your exchange also has special window cards and other special advertising matter.

This Feature

is NOT a part of the regular Universal program. It is a special 4-reel release and will cost you an extra rental. Don't quibble about that. You'll get your money back over and over again and your house will gain a prestige it never enjoyed before. Remember, this special will be released the last week in February. Lose no time in starting your advance advertising. Start NOW!

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

1600 Broadway, New York

CARL LAEMMLE, President "Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

IN FOUR REELS

Daniel Frohman Presents

"THE PRIDE"

BY ABBY SAGE RICHARDSON

A Dramatic Conflict of Hearts & Swords Enacted By The Famous Players Stock Company in Motion Pictures

"YOU HAVE TRICKED ME, YOU ARE NOT THE PRINCESS!"

JENNICO MISTAKES THE MAID FOR THE PRINCESS

PRINCE EUGEN OBTAINS THE CONFIDENCE OF MICHEL THE GYPSY

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-219 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

RELEASED FEB. 20th.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

The Famous Romantic Play

of JENNICO"

AND GRACE LIVINGSTON FURNISS

"The Pride of Jennico" is a stirring tale of the gallant days of old, of romance and roses and cold steel, when fortune and glory were carved by the sword and daring deeds performed for the smile of a lady fair.

PRINCESS OTTILIE CHANGES PLACES WITH THE MAID.

THE SIGN FOR SILENCE.

"HER ROYAL HIGHNESS, PRINCESS OTTILIE OF DORNHEIM!"

FILM COMPANY

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

JOAN OF ARC

(Copyrighted)

IN TWO PARTS Ready February 20th

The Martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans

THE SIEGE OF ORLEANS, THE CORONATION OF CHARLES VII, THE TAKING OF LES TOURELLES, ARE ALL GRAPHICALLY AND REALISTICALLY PORTRAYED IN THIS HISTORIC DRAMA

The Great Mine Disaster

(Copyrighted)

IN FOUR PARTS Ready March 1st

YOU SIMPLY CANNOT AFFORD TO MISS THIS FEATURE. IT STARTS OFF WITH A RUSH THAT LASTS RIGHT TO THE END

Exchanges now handling all of our features:—

Eclectic Feature Film Exchange
Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Eclectic Feature Film Exchange
109 Kazota Bldg., 4th and Hennepin Sts.
Minneapolis, Minn.

Eclectic Feature Film Exchange
Andrews Building, Dallas, Texas

Eclectic Feature Film Exchange
5 South Wabash Avenue
Chicago, Ill.

ECLECTIC FILM CO.

110 West 40th St. New York City

"THE CREAM OF THE EUROPEAN MARKET SELECTED FOR AMERICA"

HEPWORTH AND THE TURNER FILMS, LTD.

RELEASES

A THRILLING FOUR PART MELODRAMA OF THE USUAL HEPWORTH EXCELLENCE

JUSTICE

ACTION FROM BEGINNING TO END
IT'S A HEPWORTH PRODUCTION ENOUGH SAID

DON'T MISS THIS BEAUTIFUL PHOTO DRAMA

TWO BLIND FATE PARTS

A DRAMA THAT IS NOT EASILY FORGOTTEN

Coming! THE CLOISTER AND THE HEARTH—Watch for It!
Five Parts

A Few States Still Open for HEPWORTH'S

FOUR THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD PARTS

THE TOPIC OF THE TIMES

MOTHERHOOD OR POLITICS?

Two Parts—Hepworth's, London

THE TURNER FILMS, Ltd., PRESENT

MISS FLORENCE TURNER

In the Following Feature Releases:

JEAN'S EVIDENCE
Two Part Drama

THE LUCKY STONE
Single Reel Comedy

THE ROSE OF SURREY
Two Part Drama

A. BLINKHORN

Two single reels released weekly—comedy and drama.

110-112 West 40th Street
New York City

Usual line of publicity matter. I help you help the exhibitor.

PHOTOPLAY

JUDITH of BETHULIA

By Thomas Bailey Aldrich

From the story of the heroic defense of Judea by the Jews of Bethulia and their final triumph over the vast army of Nebuchodonosor after Judith had outwitted and slain his general, Holofernes.

In Four Reels BIOGRAPH Coming Soon

THE THIRD DEGREE

By Charles Klein

The record breaking success of this thrilling drama on the regular stage has been duplicated in the picture houses throughout the United States.

In Five Reels LUBIN Released

THROUGH FIRE TO FORTUNE

or THE SUNKEN VILLAGE

By Clay M. Greene

A dramatic story of wonder moving occurrences, such as a mine explosion and the sinking of a whole village into the bowels of the earth.

In Five Reels LUBIN Coming Soon

Controlled Exclusively by the General Film Company, (Inc.)

GENERAL

MASTERPIECES

GERMINAL

or THE TOLL OF LABOR

By Emile Zola

Graphic story of a great labor strike and the harrowing experience of a man and woman entombed in a flooded mine.

In Five Reels PATHE Coming Soon

The LION and The MOUSE

By Charles Klein

The complete triumph of a clever and beautiful girl over a powerful money-mad financier who has ruined and discredited her father.

In Six Reels LUBIN Released

THOR, LORD of the JUNGLES

Romance and Adventure in an American circus and in the depths of the African Jungles. One of the most daring wild animal features ever produced.

In Three Reels SELIG Released

Branches in all large cities. Main Office, 200 5th Ave., New York

FILM CO. [INC.]

MELIES "GENERAL" FILMS

STILL ANOTHER COMEDIAN ADDED TO OUR LIST

HANDSOME HARRY

FEATURING IN

A HOBO PHILOSOPHER

A REAL GOOD LAUGH

STRONG FULL OF ACTION

EXCELLENT PHOTOGRAPHY

AMOROUS ALGIE

ON THE SAME REEL

A FABLE AND ITS MORAL

GOOD FOR ONE AND ALL

HIGH CLASS, FOUR COLOR ONE SHEETS

WINKY WILLY

THESE COMEDIES ARE WHAT YOU WANT, TO GIVE TONE TO YOUR PROGRAM

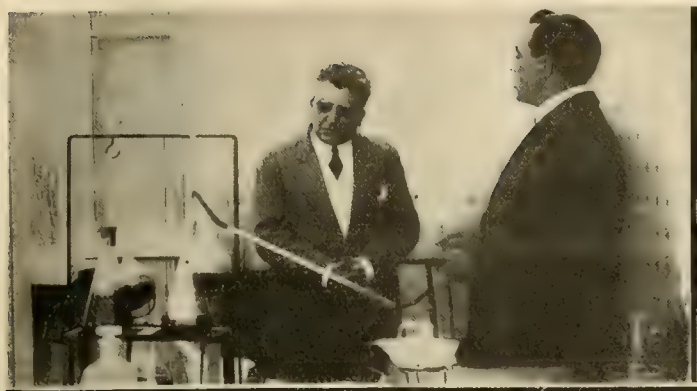
BATTY BILL

1000 FEET RELEASED FEB. 19th

GENERAL

MELIES FILMS
204 E. 38TH STREET
NEW YORK

GENERAL



An Engrossing tale of chemically made diamonds, a girl, an adventure and a marriage

KLEINE-CINES

(In Two Parts)

THE DIAMOND-MAKER

(Copyright, 1914, by George Kleine)

For Release Tuesday, March 3rd, 1914

Albert Duran spends his days in the hope of making chemical diamonds. Occasionally he calls upon Louise Bernard, daughter of a family that had long maintained friendship with the Durans.

Thus a day came when Albert realized his dream of manufacturing diamonds. He hurried to the Bernard homestead with the good news and a few hours later embarked for another country to obtain capital. That day, Madam Bernard lost a mammoth diamond necklace and the fatal coincidence apparently branded Albert a thief.

Falling into the hands of sharpers, Albert proved easy prey for an unscrupulous woman and a designing thief. A detective who had followed him quickly gathers the facts and becomes Albert's quiet ally. How his friendship served Albert in a dark nook of the garden—how Albert's justification was brought about and his return to a waiting bride made possible, makes a delightful story noteworthy for its zest of adventure, its splendid acting and superfine photography.

RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY

One, three and six sheets with this subject

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State Street

CHICAGO, ILL.

KLEINE

·LONDON·PARIS·NEW YORK·BERLIN·VIENNA·BRUSSELS·ROME·MILAN·HAMBURG·

TRADE MARK

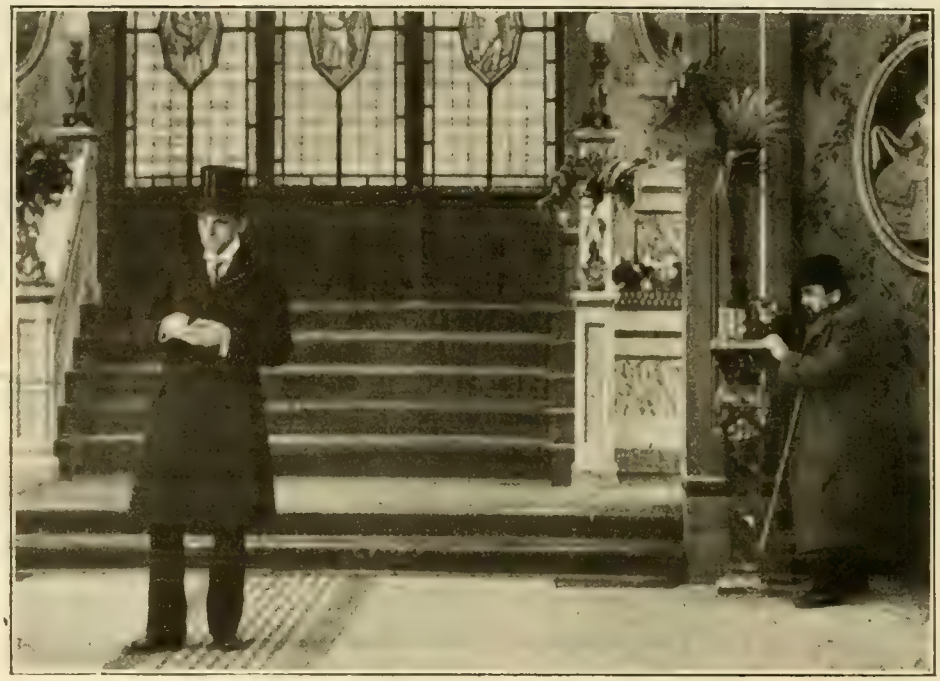
PATHÉ

TRADE MARK

·BUENOS AIRES·MEXICO·RIO JANEIRO·BARCELONA·BELGRADE·BUCAREST·ZURICH·WARSAW·SOFIA·MARSEILLES·BUDAPEST·

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

·AMSTERDAM·MUNICH·ATHENS·ROSSTOFF·SYDNEY·ALGIERS·SINGAPORE·SHANGHAI·MANILA·CAIRO·HONGKONG·BACOU·



Scene from "A Spoiled Life."

A SPOILED LIFE

IN TWO PARTS

A powerful drama telling the story of a man with every gift but that of a pleasing appearance. Through pity which she mistakes for love a beautiful woman marries him and so comes to wreck his life.

RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 12th

AGAINST HEAVY ODDS

IN TWO PARTS

A Western drama built around a Mexican Peon who, despite his lowly origin, through native worth and sheer ability, rises to the heights of success and finally wins the hand of a beautiful high born girl.

RELEASED SATURDAY, MARCH 14th

NOTE — Insist upon these films at your exchange. If you can't get them, write us. Pathé Frères, 1 Congress Street, Jersey City, N. J.

TRADE MARK

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

COVERS THE WHOLE WORLD

PATHÉ FRÈRES 1 CONGRESS ST., JERSEY CITY, N.J.

TRADE MARK

·ST PETERSBURG·STOCKHOLM·DRESDEN·MADRID·ODESSA·MOSKOW·KIEW·

EDISON

Two "Dolly of the Dailies" pictures a month, beginning with the third story — Saturday, March 14th

THE ANDY SERIES and ANDY CLARK

Andy Clark leaped into popularity as "that tough little bell-boy" and he is steadily gaining popularity. In this series he is inimitable as a self-sufficient youngster who will tackle anything—man or job. We are already receiving enthusiastic letters from exhibitors who find that Andy draws the money. He will make good in your theatre—book him.

Third story—"Andy Goes on the Stage"—released Wednesday, February 11th.

Each film a separate incident.

COMING SINGLE REELS

Courting Betty's Beau
Comedy. Released Wednesday, Feb. 18th.

*The Powers of the Air
Drama. Released Saturday, Feb. 21st.

The Beautiful Leading Lady
Third "Wood B. Wedd" story.
Comedy. Released Monday, Feb. 23rd.

*The Mystery of the Ladder of Light
Fourth Cleek story.
Drama. Released Tuesday, Feb. 24th.

Love's Young Dream
Cheese Mining
Comedies. Released Wednesday, Feb. 25th.

*The Ghost of Mother Eve
Second "Dolly" story.
Comedy-Drama. Released Saturday, Feb. 28th.

COMING MULTIPLE REELS

The Drama in Heyville
In Two Parts.
Comedy. Released Friday, Feb. 27th.

Comedy and Tragedy
A revival of the celebrated Edison drama.
In Two Parts.
Drama. Released Friday, March 6th.

One sheet. One and three sheets. One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.*

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope, Type "D."

LUBIN

Presents

ANOTHER MASTERPIECE

"Through Fire to Fortune"

or, "THE SUNKEN VILLAGE" IN FIVE REELS

By CLAY M. GREENE

Read the Criticism of The New York Dramatic Mirror, of February 4th

"A new thrill has been filmed. With conflagrations, war's horrors, and Roman arena scenes, we are familiar. It remained for Lubin to give us a new and peculiarly American thrill in 'Through Fire to Fortune.' It consists of an unusually realistic portrayal of a fire in a coal mine, a miner's torch having come in contact with a newly discovered oil well, and the crowning triumph of big scenes, the destruction of an entire village, when the walls of the mine over which it is built begin to crumble. Here we see whole houses sink into the earth, the panic-stricken villagers, and, lastly, the fire that follows the cave-in and completes the destruction. These scenes of the conflagration, and the people huddled about the camp fires on a safe spot, are remarkable examples of night photography, and deserving of the highest praise. All in all, 'Through Fire to Fortune' marks a distinct step in the productions of American features, and should not be missed."

COMING FEATURES

"The Daughters of Men" — Five Reels — By Charles Klein

"THE GAMBLERS" — Five Reels — By Charles Klein

Important Change in Lubin Programme! Two Lubin Features Each Week!

Beginning with week of February 16th, the regular Monday release will be discontinued. The New programme assures a comedy every Tuesday and Saturday, a two-reel feature every Wednesday and Thursday, and a drama every Friday.

ARRANGE YOUR BOOKINGS ACCORDINGLY

Tuesday--A Comedy
Wednesday--A Two Reel Feature
Thursday--A Two Reel Feature
Friday--A Drama
Saturday--A Comedy

FIVE RELEASES EACH WEEK - - INCLUDING TWO MULTIPLES

"SEALED ORDERS"--Drama, Special in 2 Reels - - - - - Wednesday, February 25th
"THE TWO ROSES"--Drama, Special in 2 Reels - - - - - - Thursday, February 26th

"GETTING EVEN"—Comedy—	TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th
"AN INNOCENT VICTIM"—Comedy—	TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th
"THE PRICE OF A RUBY"—Drama, Special in 2 Reels—	WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18th
"THE HOUSE OF FEAR"—Drama, Special in 2 Reels—	THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th
"IN THE DREDGER'S CLAW"—Drama—	FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th
"A WINNING MISTAKE"—Comedy—	SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 21st
"THE FEMALE BOOK AGENT"—Comedy—	SATURDAY, FEBRUARY, 21st

LUBIN'S ATTRACTIVE POSTERS

One and Three Sheets with Single Reels—One, Three and Six Sheets with all Multiple Reels—in Five Colors. Order from your Exchange or A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Lubin Manufacturing Co.
Philadelphia, Pa.

VITAGRAPH

Every Week
Two Vitagraph
Special Features
Each in Two Parts
Tuesday and Saturday
Every Week
A Comedy
every Wednesday and Friday.

"SAWDUST AND SALOME"

Comedy-Drama. Monday, February 16th

The hypocritical pretensions of her husband's relatives are all exploded. They fall into the snare of the modern dance craze and overstep the limits of propriety. Her husband learns to appreciate the virtues of his wife. Norma Talmadge and Leo Delaney are the leads.

"BACK TO BROADWAY"

Comedy-Drama. Special Two-Part Feature
Tuesday, February 17th

He got there through the aid of a young actress. They were both broke, but she had nerve enough for two. Anita Stewart and E. K. Lincoln are the two.

"FATTY ON THE JOB"
"LUMBERING IN SWEDEN"

Comedy and Educational. Wednesday, February 18th

1. Fatty (Hughie Mack) was there. Merely an accident. He is hailed as a hero and received with open arms by his sweetheart. 2. One of the greatest industries in the world.

"THE FIRST ENDORSEMENT"

Military Drama. Thursday, February 19th

He never deserved commendation, but after all, he wins the endorsement of his own conscience when he sacrifices his life rather than bring reproach upon others. James Morrison and Charles Kent are the principals, assisted by Dorothy Kelly and Donald Hall.

"HIS LITTLE PAGE"

Comedy. Friday, February 20th

Uncle George will not accept his nephew's wife. As a page, he likes her. When he learns who she is, he is glad she is his niece and does everything he can to help her and his nephew. Norma Talmadge, Van Dyke Brooke and Leo Delaney are the cast.

"IRON AND STEEL"

Drama. Special Two-Part Feature
Saturday, February 21st

His underhanded methods of doing business and his iron will in his dealings with others bring upon him a just retribution. He is completely humiliated and conquered. To make amends he reimburses the poor inventor and consents to the marriage of his daughter with the man who brought him to terms. Maurice Costello and Mary Charleson sustain the leads.

SIX A WEEK

"IN THE OLD ATTIC"
Drama.....MONDAY, FEBRUARY 23rd

"DOCTOR POLLY"
Comedy-Drama—Two-Part Special Feature..TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24th

"THE HERO" }
"CRAWFISHING" }
Comedy and Educational.....WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25th

"THE OAK'S SECRET"
Drama.....THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26th

"A CHANGE IN BAGGAGE CHECKS"
Comedy.....FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th

"THE DRUDGE"
Drama—Special Two-Part Feature.....SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28th

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY RELEASES A SPECIAL FEATURE IN TWO PARTS EVERY TUESDAY AND SATURDAY AND A COMEDY EVERY WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY.

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS—7 x 9 PHOTOS OF VITAGRAPH PLAYERS.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES, SURPASSING ALL PREVIOUS VITAGRAPH ACHIEVEMENTS.

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

CHEST OF FORTUNE

A powerful Two-Part story of Morgan's Raiders

The fight between Morgan's Raiders and the Federal Cavalry, the destruction of a bridge—just two of the incidents of a feature crammed with action.

Released Monday, March 2nd

For better business, get the superb 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters

THE INTRIGUE

In Two Parts

The father strives for years to find the son who mysteriously disappeared when a child. The search ends when Bob Austin, about to commit a terrible crime, finds that his intended victim is his father.

Released Wednesday, March 4th

Get the special 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters for this feature

HIRAM'S HOTEL

His revenge upon a grasping hotel man, will give your patrons the heartiest laughs of the year.

Released Friday, March 6th

Coming in time for St. Patrick's Day

"THE COLLEEN BAWN,"—Kalem's superb three-part adaptation of Dion Boucicault's immortal drama of Irish life. Produced in Ireland. Released Monday, March 16th.

THE HOPI RAIDERS

(Length 905 feet)

The desperate struggles between the redskins and soldiers provide a succession of exciting incidents.

(On the same Reel)

UNVEILING THE MAINE MONUMENT

(Length 95 feet)

A series of superb views showing the unveiling of the monument at New York dedicated to the Maine heroes.

Released Satur., March 7th

Special 1 and 3-Sheet Posters

KALEM

KALEM COMPANY

235-9 W. 23rd St., NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published Weekly by the

CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY

17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers .....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie .....Vice-President and General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—169 West Washington Street (Post Building), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 a year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The index for this issue will be found on page 1026)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, February 21, 1914.

Facts and Comments

TIME was when the motion picture was clogged in its progress by all sorts of foolish handicaps. We are speaking of the illustrated song as it was generally sung, of effects as they were generally perpetrated and of the various attempts to imitate the human voice as an "added attraction" to the picture. The motion picture survived the illustrated song, which was always more or less an insult or, at least, an annoyance to an intelligent audience and the effects, except in cases where there is leisure and talent to utilize them artistically, have gone out of fashion. Those of us who remember what a real menace vaudeville was to the motion picture will rejoice with us in the fact that we certainly have taken the devil out of vaudeville.

*

Analyzing the reasons for these changes in moving pictures we are forced to the conclusion that these barnacles on the good ship Kinematography have been discarded for the good reason that they were worse than useless. You cannot supply quality by means of tricks. The picture of quality needs no bolstering up though, of course, even the best of pictures may be greatly improved by artistic presentation. That, however, is another story. As a proof of the vitality of the motion picture nothing stronger could be urged than the discarding of the petty tricks which at one time were thought essential to a good motion picture entertainment.

* * *

WHILE properly rejoicing in the protection which the laws of copyright afford to authors and their heirs, we cannot repress a feeling of deep sympathy for the names of the great masters in the world's literature whose works are at the mercy of any vandal or ghoul. We have, within the past six months, seen great classics in fiction and in the drama seized by a cheap director and dragged wailing before the camera to be hanged, drawn and quartered. A famous name is taken in vain and paraded before the public which concludes that the film must have some good in it as long as it treats the well-known work of a master. Attracted by the great name, which the law no longer protects against irreverent hands, the public come to see the film and find it little better than a sacrilege. The harm which is thus done to the name of the motion picture by incompetent men attempting to film a great subject is greater than many of us would be inclined to believe. We all know that the educated and intelligent classes of the population are being drawn more strongly than ever before to the kinema, but the travesties and parodies of great subjects repels and alienates them.

*

How can the evil be cured? There is but one way: One of these days an especially flagrant case of desecration will occur and then it will be the duty of the critics to come to the defense of the outraged author who, at the worst, can do no more than turn in his grave. There have been recent instances closely approaching such a desecration and on the next offense something must be done to put a stop to a too frequent repetition.

* * *

MANY exhibitors deplore the comparatively small number of patriotic films. An examination of the last six months' releases show a very small percentage of films that could be used to advantage on the days dedicated to commemorating the heroes of our history and the great events in our national life. One exhibitor declared to the writer that he has to arrange his Fourth of July program weeks ahead and then does not feel any too sure that his bookings will go through. It is not easy to discover the reason for this lack of patriotic pictures. With the possible exception of the British and Canadian markets, American patriotic and historic pictures are well liked in foreign countries.

* * *

IT is, of course well known to all who are interested in the subject, that THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, consistently refusing to accept any advertising of a questionable nature, has barred its columns against the persistent offers of "white-slave" advertisements. We take occasion to mention this fact for the first time because of insinuations by owners and promoters of a notorious film to the effect that hostile criticism of their effort was due to their failure to advertise. The contrary is true; for two weeks these men offered pages of advertising to this paper, all of which were declined because we believe that motion pictures were made for something better than painting the realities of the sewer. We have great respect for our readers and for the good name of the industry. We want to keep our advertising pages just as clean as the text, and we have never knowingly deviated from this rule. Naturally all advertisers seek the pages of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD first because it is the recognized medium for announcing things to the motion picture men of the country.

Films in Education of Adults

By W. Stephen Bush.

IN the cause of popular education few men have accomplished more than Dr. Henry Marcus Leipziger, who has just celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary as Supervisor of Lectures and who is still in the saddle. Dr. Leipziger has always pleaded for the education of the adult. If there are any doubters willing to question the necessity of the truly educational motion picture, I would like them to peruse and meditate upon these utterances of Dr. Leipziger:

> "That the education of the adult is a necessity is proved by the demands that are now constantly being made for its extension by the thousands of letters which tell of benefits to the auditors, which tell of sacrifices that are made by the auditors to attend lectures and which are accompanied by suggestions for all kinds of lectures on all kinds of topics. Out of every one hundred and twenty men and women who enter the American schools only one attains to the college or the university. All the opportunities of intellectual treasures await this favored son of fortune. But shall nothing be done for the one hundred and nineteen?
>
> "The reason why they have been so long neglected is because we are still under the spell of the medieval idea of the aristocracy of education, that the common people have no desire for the higher life and that if any of the common people desire educational advantages they must get them the best way they can."

While Dr. Leipziger did not use these words in connection with the subject of educational films, it is plain that they apply with particular force to the educational film. In arriving at the percentage of adults who have had no opportunities for higher education, we cannot exclude the number of boys and girls who have never been able to finish their common school education, nor must we forget the large proportion of immigrants who have never enjoyed any educational advantages at all. Summing up we arrive at the conclusion that the percentage of adults without any higher education is large and that the percentage of adults deprived of any but the poorest educational facilities through being forced into the battle of life at too early an age is, to say the least, considerable. Perhaps it would be best to have the proper statistics before us, but the facts are really a matter of common knowledge the source of which are accessible to all. They are, therefore, a safe basis for a careful consideration of the whole subject.

The first question to consider is this: How many of these adults having suffered from a lack of opportunity in the days of their youth are anxious to improve their education? All are not, but we firmly believe that a very considerable number of these adults are most anxious to add to their knowledge. Dr. Leipziger speaks of sacrifices that are made by such adults to attend lectures. Of course the lectures do not reach these adults as the motion picture reaches them. The main object of all education intended for the benefit of adults must be to make knowledge easy of absorption. The slide greatly aids the lecturer, but far more effective than the slide is the picture in motion. Curiously enough the motion pictures seem up to the present time to have found no definite place in the system of public lectures. No doubt the time for the introduction of suitable motion pictures as an essential part of the lecture course is bound to come.

How is a neglected education to be repaired and made complete? Up to the time of the new invention of kinematography there were but two ways. One was to read books, and the other was to listen to competent teachers who possessed the rare faculty of specializing in cases of neglected education. The motion picture has added a new and most potent method. We are not theorizing on the subject; it is generally conceded that the poorest motion picture has some educational value however slight, and that a skilful producer has no difficulty in increasing the educational value without impairing its entertaining powers. While we all know that we have so far fallen behind in the production of truly and specially educational pictures, there is a good supply of desirable pictures of this nature now on hand. Three of the greatest foreign producers—Pathe, Gaumont, and Eclair—maintain educational departments under competent direction and at great expense, while our own American producers have not been absolutely barren in educational films. This we realize is negative praise, but that is the only kind of praise which the facts will justify.

There is not a film expert, whether you look for him in the producing or the distributing or the exhibiting division of our industry, who will not tell you that the educational film is "about to come into its own." Nobody, however, seems to be willing to assist in the development, hoping that Providence will be kind enough to take the actual work of creating and supplying the educational market off our hands, which are too busy producing drama and comedy. I for one could never understand why it would not be possible to do the one without at all neglecting the other. There are so many subjects that fairly cry to be filmed for the use of the schools. Take geography, for instance. As this article, however, deals with ambitious adults anxious to fill up the gaps in their education, I will not digress into the question of films for schools.

What Dr. Leipziger says about "the spell of the medieval idea of the aristocracy of education" is well worth the attention of all who want to use the motion picture for educational purposes. The idea that education is a privilege of the rich is not only medieval, but it is especially repellant to American ideas and ideals. We have always proceeded on the theory that it was the business of the commonwealth to make education easy for all and to destroy all the red tape and all the barriers which in bygone ages have hedged in the acquisition of knowledge. We have accomplished much in this respect and our progress has been swift. Take the State of New York as a type and you must admit that every thing humanly possible is done to smooth the path for the learner. There is but one exception. We have so far failed to enlist kinematography in behalf of official education. It is not for us to place the blame for this neglect; indeed, the word neglect may be altogether too strong in the characterizing of the situation. The introduction of new and improved methods is always slow and the old ways are firmly entrenched in practice and in tradition.

It is time to make a beginning. We cannot expect the schools to take up the question of kinematographic courses of instruction without our co-operation. We really ought to take the initiative. When we are ready with our plans the schools will only be too glad to give us a hearing and the civic forces concerned in the education of the adult will be very likely to take almost any thing of quality that we will be in a position to offer them.

It has seemed to me that even on the commercial side the production of good educational and well-directed motion pictures would help to advertise all the other films made by the same manufacturer.

Visualization

By Louis Reeves Harrison

AT a private exhibition the other evening, some one remarked that the aeroplane success of moving pictures had carried a lot of men into the air who might have otherwise kept both feet on the ground. This may be true, but it is not the whole truth. Behind the remark was little more than envious comment on the sudden financial rise of individuals who might have, like Mark Twain, remained "poor and respected by all." No matter how rapidly a man may go ahead, he is invariably shadowed by the malice and all uncharitableness of those left behind. So few of us get what we go after that probably the largest organization in the world is the Society of the Unappreciated.

Things unappreciated by those one-eyed individuals who can only see the financial side of any proposition, even when it is founded on artistic production, is that vision is by far the most intellectual of senses. It not only serves to scan the credit side of a ledger and the cheering side of a bank account, or to contemplate more tangible possessions with an accompanying glow of self-congratulation, but it enriches the mind with finer susceptibilities and broader modes of thought, and, by means of this sense, the camera or screen portrayal seems destined to enlarge the mental scope of the entire human race. It is certainly unfolding the historical record of human achievement, the attitudes of varied individuals toward one another, and presenting the first scenes of our mental evolution. Yet one might be led to think, from the discussions of penurious vanity, that its sole object and ultimate destiny is that of a good business proposition for the elect.

The year 1913 saw a wild break from the ranks of the unappreciated to stake claims in what appeared to be an entirely new field of effort. There was a mad rush of the fit and the unfit to prompt rights of visualization, as though there was only a limited amount of it to be had, whereas its choicest bits will inevitably go to those who have something worth while to visualize. It is true that a vast territory was, for the first time, thrown open to those in earnest about settling down and improving a portion of it, but many who are rushing in blindly have no clear idea of the difficulties to be encountered. Not the least of these difficulties is that certain standards of quality have been established by motion picture pioneers.

What are these standards? New producers cannot go back and review pictures already shown in order to study the new art—an act that would tend to make them misanthropic—nor is it necessary, but many will fail and fall from lack of full comprehension of what they have undertaken. A wise thing for any man investing capital in the production of motion pictures is to entirely dispense with that unsafe form of reasoning which argues that what has been will always be. Progress is the keynote of evolution, and it often involves decided changes of condition. The fact that manna fell upon the heads of the just and the unjust during the infancy of the new art is merely a matter of history, and it can only be regarded as a natural condition suited to early conditions of development. It was at that time simply unplanted soil, whereas we are now engaged in cultivating what it grows of largest benefit, and this means the elimination of weeds.

Using both eyes, and examining the art of producing moving pictures from all points of view, we can possibly appreciate its full meaning when we consider man as predominantly a visual animal, developed very largely through eye-mindedness. Consider him also as an individual, living in a little world of his own, looking out upon the actual world with powers of observation proportioned to his inherited capacity and general training. A great deal that he sees arouses his curiosity because it is not easily comprehended, hence he is eager to learn as much as possible about people and conditions in their relations to himself. The eye is his principal medium of impression, quite as well as of expression, hence pictures of these conditions and of the subjects and objects he wishes to study may ascend to idealistic heights or to great depths of meaning, but they must contain some meaning well calculated to grip and hold his interest.

Taking this comprehensive view of moving pictures, it would appear that they constitute an art of visualization requiring high forms of critical, artistic and selective taste in both subject and treatment. Success in the future means that every department—creative, critical, directive, interpretative, artistic and those purely commercial—must be conducted with knowledge and judgment. Instead of expecting to stumble upon mother lodes of gold, it is safer at this stage of the game to consider standards already established and attempt to win favorable recognition by improving on them, keeping well in mind that the principal object of the art is to transmit in clear or beautiful form what is of the greatest interest to the greatest number.

The exhibition of these pictures, it must be remembered, constitutes an entertainment in the broad sense of that word. What is offered may cheer and refresh the human mind, because that kind of support is most often needed; the pictures may charm through their beauty; they may kindle sympathy and thought presentation of social deformity; they may offer mental enjoyment, amusement or instruction, but this certainly does not mean that what is either stale or commonplace can be counted on to arouse interest unless treated from some new and fascinating point of view. The dynamic force back of general success is success in every department, and back of that is nothing more or less than high intelligence.

Too many intelligent men are now engaged in production, and too many combinations are being formed by those who have mastered the principal departments, for the lucky accident to meet with more than temporary success. The brands that may be expected to win and hold public recognition will be those backed up by brains as well as money. The year 1914 will see the gradual weeding out of the insincere, the unscrupulous, the unfit, and the gradual rise of those who can provide exhibitors with releases calculated to win the sympathetic and appreciative regard of all classes of people. Pictures of power, of live significance, of beauty, of cheer, of intellectual charm, will draw millions to the little theaters who prefer the visualization of ideas to other means of transmitting them from mind to mind.

Myth, science, poetical fiction, evident fact, amusing situation, interesting problem, new view of what is old, it matters little, so that the public longing for this form of entertainment is adequately realized, and that means that the pictures must testify to our continual progress. They must treat the eye of the mind to all that is new, delightful and thought stimulating; they must open it wider to the best purposes and possibilities of existence. We may look to visualization for the finest the world of thought has to offer for common welfare.

"The Adventures of Kathlyn" (Selig)

Numbers Five and Six of the Series. Released Through General Film Company.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

THE vogue of the Kathlyn series of pictures keeps on increasing, and congratulatory letters are pouring into the Chicago office of the Selig Polyscope Co. from all parts of the country. Contrary to the opinion of many, this serial photodrama has met with great success, but it must not be overlooked that to achieve this a unique, far-reaching and continuous publicity campaign has been necessary to keep up public interest. This publicity campaign, clever as it is and ably and resolutely as it has been conducted, would have fallen short of the mark had it not been for the well constructed scenario, with its thrilling interest and incidents, its well connected story and the electrifying climax at the end of every set thus far. These climaxes are almost exasperating, so eagerly do they leave us guessing and floundering when the "To be continued" announcement flashes on the screen.

Scene from "A Colonel in Chains" A. of K. No. 5 (Selig).

Set No. 5 strikes me as being the most sensational so far. It is fairly crowded with action, and the two reels unfold themselves without any perception on our part of the passing of time. For half an hour one is actually oblivious both of time and environment. We are away off in the fabled Allaha, close in touch with the heroine, her misfortunes and triumphs.

Scene from "Three Bags of Silver" A. of K. No. 6 (Selig).

Like her we are astonished to find Colonel Hare, her father, who was supposed to be dead, a prisoner in chains, in the dungeon of the royal palace. As the purchased slave of Umballah we see her rush into the arms of her parent, while the rascally Umballah tortures the old man with the information that his child is now chief slave in the royal harem.

The terrific struggle as the colonel attempts to strangle his enemy with his bare hands makes our breath come fast, and our jaws snap with disappointment when the deed is interrupted by the intercession of Kathlyn. Then we snarl at the scenario man for balking us of our prey and immediately afterwards forgive him, knowing that he has further use for the fellow, although such use may again contribute to our mental torture.

Another sensational scene in this set is the rescue of Kathlyn from the prison. A big baboon lights on a window sill of the prison one day, from a tree nearby. The alert mind of Kathlyn sees in the presence of the creature a chance to communicate with her friends, Bruce and Ramabai. Ripping the insole from her shoe, she writes a short message on it and ties it around the ape's neck. The animal is caught by her friends and soon they are on the way to rescue her. Unable to remove the heavy iron bars from the window of her cell they attach a chain to them, and the big elephant pulls the entire window and a section of the solid masonry out. Colonel Hare is left behind, as his chains cannot be severed in the short time allowed.

Kathlyn's plot to release her father affords another thrill. Umballah is forced to write an order for his release, having been decoyed to Kathlyn's hiding place by Pundita, where he is threatened with death by a fierce leopard. Afterward we see Kathlyn, her father and friends fleeing away from Allaha, with Umballah and his soldiers in swift pursuit. Set No. 5 closes as Kathlyn is wounded in the arm by a bullet from Umballah's musket.

Set No. 6 shows Kathlyn and her party continuing their way to the coast, after repulsing Umballah and his men. On their way they come to the great walled city in the desert, where the interesting an dcomical incident of the sacred elephant occurs. This tiny pachyderm, with the white, glaring eye, is a whole host in himself, as he is the cause of great concern, plotting and fighting. He is stolen by brigands, and is recovered by Bruce, Colonel Hare and others of the party, much to the delight of the rajah in whose kingdom the walled city prospered.

The journey to the coast was then continued. Brigands, the very men from whom the sacred elephant had been recovered, surprised the travelers and made them prisoners. They discovered in Colonel Hare the white king of Allaha and placed his ransom at three bags of silver, and messengers were dispatched to that kingdom to collect the treasure. As the result Umballah and an armed force arrived at the brigands' camp and delivered the three bags to the chief for the person of Colonel Hare. "You may feed the other two," meaning Kathlyn and Bruce, "to the tigers," he said, as he rode away with his prisoner. Thus endeth the sixth set.

The imposing backgrounds and scenes in these sets, like those in sets Nos. 2 and 3 formerly reviewed, have the true Oriental atmosphere. Many of the scenes were actually taken in India. The acting and photography are of high merit

CHICAGO PAPERS RECOGNIZING PICTURES.

The Selig Company is authority for the statement that now that the Chicago Tribune has enlarged upon its original scheme with a daily department devoted to moving pictures, as a matter of universal interest, all the newspapers have come into action and moved up to the firing line, so there is a likelihood of every paper in Chicago giving detailed attention to the moving picture industry as a matter worthy of general interest. Some time ago the Chicago Inter-Ocean was the first paper to devote a page to the minor theaters in moving pictures, and it was quickly followed by the Chicago Evening American, but both were on a business basis. The Chicago Evening Journal threatened to have a department in this line, and had it done so, it would have been interesting, for its theatrical news is very newsy and comprehensive. The Examiner announces it will start a Sunday page, devoted to moving pictures and moving picture theaters. Just how far the latter will respond in support of this call is problematical. The Record-Herald has acquired a big proposition from the Universal Film Company in heavy advertising which involves the daily printing of the story of one of their releases with illustrations. The Chicago Daily News, the paper of widest circulation outside of New York, has announced its intention of devoting a department to moving pictures on the same plan that it has its music and drama—free from let or hindrance in business matters of the business office. This new line-up shows the Chicago daily press is vastly and rapidly becoming intimately interested in the motion picture business.

HUTCHINSON AND FREULER GO TO COAST.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, and Mrs. Hutchinson, accompanied by J. R. Freuler, vice-president of the Mutual and secretary and treasurer of the American Film Manufacturing Company, and Mrs. Freuler left for California on Saturday, January 31st.

"Hearts Adrift"

Miss Pickford, Under the Direction of Edwin S. Porter, Appears in a Superb Four-Part Famous Players Subject.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

MISS PICKFORD triumphs again. Sharing with her in the honors of "Hearts Adrift," a four-part subject released by the Famous Players on February 10th, is Edwin S. Porter, the producer of the picture. The backgrounds are remarkable for natural beauty; and the photography will delight the eye of the connoisseur. The story is told in the primitive outdoors, and by the sea. Back from the beach rise great caved cliffs. From their elevation we look down at times on the gently rolling surf; at others we are among the rocks with angry waves breaking at the bottom of the screen. Some scenes there are of civilization—of spacious stuccoed homes, surrounded by lawn and garden. There are few titles—it is said there are but 100 feet of them in the four parts—and we could read the story with even less.

Nina Repulses the Shipwrecked Stranger.

In this "romance of tangled lives" it is always Little Mary that holds our interest. There are others in the cast, as there must be, but the sympathy is with Nina, the half-wild maid. In her abbreviated garb of skins she bounds from rock to rock with the agility of the chamois, and along the beach she runs with the light-footed speed of a deer. The hardships of her five years' battle for existence on the island have converted her into a half-savage. With a rod she spears fish. Yet she is always intensely feminine, "with the heart and hopes of a woman." There is the love of companionship as exemplified in her friendship with the wolf and later in her coy demeanor toward the man so strangely sent into her life.

A child of perhaps a dozen years is cast upon an island. Five years later she finds on the beach the figure of a man, cast up by the waves. He had escaped from a burning yacht. Nina brings water and fruit to the nearly dead man, but keeps away from him. As he revives he discovers a footprint, then he catches a glimpse of the girl, but he is not able to find her. There is a pursuit; there are several, in fact, when he does locate Nina, but it is not until she falls exhausted with terror at the sight of a volcano in eruption that he reaches her side. Jack had a wife when he set sail on the yacht. She had left the burning craft on the first boat. As time elapses the man tells Nina they must marry, and a ceremony is performed by the two. A child comes to Nina. Jack confesses to the mother of his little one that he had been married. When one day he sees a vessel in the distance he signals it. A boat comes ashore, and he goes down on the beach and meets his wife, who had interested the government in her husband's disappearance. Nina takes her child and climbs to the edge of the crater of the smoldering volcano. Jack and his wife, come to the cliff to find Nina, are too late to prevent her jumping with her babe into the depths.

A simple story, is it not? Yet, from first to last, it holds tight. Nina's first appearance in the likeness of Little Mary is where she breaks through thickly-leaved bushes and discovers a wolf. Her attempt to escape and her later effort to establish friendship with the animal thrill. The beast comes slowly to her. His tail is as inflexible as that of a bird-indicating pointer's. He seems about to tear her to pieces. The fast friendship is broken by the fatal injury of the beast. The grief of Nina as she falls on the grave of the animal brings the first touch of pathos in the picture.

Nina's discovery of the unconscious man on the beach is dramatic. There is a bit of comedy as the two, each seeking the other and on their hands and knees, come face to face at the side of a boulder. It is a real pursuit that ensues. Nina runs along the beach, and when she finds the stranger is gaining on her she plunges into the surf and outswims him. Later Jack, from the cliff, sees the elflike Nina dancing on the sand and playing with and talking to her shadow. When Nina relents and decides to approach the strange being it is with the absolute disregard of womankind in general for selecting the psychological moment. Jack is thinking of his wife and spurns the girl. Days later, however, when he sees far down the beach, hundreds of feet away, a tiny figure dancing in the sunlight, he tries to catch up with Nina, but she eludes him.

There is comedy and drama as the two marry themselves. In spite of her stone age surroundings, Nina develops advanced suffragette symptoms. To one of Jack's questions her swaying head signals an emphatic negative. Did he ask her to obey? The mirth is chilled as we see the figure of Jack's wife come between the two. In fact, the memory of the wife is ever present in Jack's mind. His active conscience is responsible for abrupt behavior toward Nina, who, on one of these occasions, goes to the grave of her wolf, and to the little mound of sand tells her troubles. Did she whisper to the beast, in the words of someone else, that the more she saw of men the better she liked dogs?

There is not space adequate to describe the last reel. It is crowded with dramatic situations, with deep appeal in all of them. Reference has been made to backgrounds and photography. Many of the scenes are as animated paintings. The views of the ocean, some with the camera pointing toward the sun, the waves reflecting the rays, are exceptional. "Hearts Adrift" is the first production of the Famous Players on the Pacific Coast. It is a picture of beauty, of power.

JOSEPH CANTES—AN OLDTIME EXHIBITOR.

ONE of the oldest and best known motion picture exhibitors and readers of the Moving Picture World, in Atlantic City, N. J., is Joseph Cantes, who started his career in a very modest little theater "on the avenue," called The Lura. He has since spread out considerably both in the city and county of Atlantic. Mr. Cantes was a recent visitor to the offices of the Moving Picture World, where he renewed his annual subscription with the remark that he would sooner do without his breakfast than without his copy of the World. Mr. Cantes expects to make a trip to Europe in the near future. Mr. Cantes is a native of sunny Italy, which he has not seen since he left it in early childhood. Not only will he revisit the land of his birth, but it is his intention to travel in every part of Europe and gather impressions. He may come back with some interesting contributions to the film market. Mr. Cantes is progressive and always eager to learn. His numerous friends in Atlantic City and Pleasantville wish him a happy journey and a speedy return to the country of his adoption.

Joseph Cantes.

FILMS BARRED FROM THE MAILS.

Shippers of motion picture films who have been taking advantage of the parcels post to get cheap and quick transportation of films, will not be pleased with the latest ruling of the Post Office Department, which bars motion pictures from the mails. The rule is based upon Section 472 of the Postal Laws, which forbids the transportation through the mails of inflammable or explosive material, and notice has been given to all postmasters to that effect. As considerable quantities of film have been shipped by mail since the installation of the parcels post, the new order will transfer to the express companies quite a volume of business.

Professor Frederick Starr

Incumbent of the Chair of Anthropology in the University of Chicago; Also Archaeologist, Author, Lecturer and Extensive Traveler.

By James S. McQuade.

IT WAS a very pleasant digression from the daily rounds of work to meet Professor Frederick Starr, of the University of Chicago, and listen to a brief outline of his expeditionary researches in other lands for the past nineteen years. These expeditions, all of which have been devoted to studies along the line of his chosen life work, were still further heightened in interest for me, because some of them require the use of the moving picture machine and the film to make the written word more potent, by bringing to our very doors the lives, customs and amusements — and the very selves — of people of far off lands which we can never expect to see.

Professor Starr is the author of that famous tribute to moving pictures, "The World Before Your Eyes," which was written a little over four years ago, and has been read by many millions of people, in nearly every civilized language of the earth. As the accompanying cut shows, the professor is stockily built and of medium stature, with a kind face and the pose of the student who has learned much outside of books, by coming in close contact with people and things, themselves.

To get an inkling of the heart of the man, I have only to look at a pamphlet in four leaves that lies before me, the first page of which bears the simple title, "In Memoriam, Manuel Gonzales, 1883-1912."

Manuel was a Mexican lad of fifteen years when the professor picked him up in 1898, during one of his Mexican tours, and who accompanied him in his succeeding expeditions until, and including 1911. These expeditions covered Mexico, Japan, Korea, the Congo Free State and Europe. In 1902, the boy had progressed so well that he acted as the professor's photographer, and on his last trip through Japan and Korea, in 1911, he took some excellent moving picture films of Korean life.

In the expedition through the Congo Free State, Manuel had seventeen attacks of fever, the last being almost fatal. When the trip to Sierra Leone and Liberia was outlined for 1912, Professor Starr refused to permit the ardent young man to accompany him, fearing that it might mean certain death in "the white man's grave." Manuel persisted, however; but the professor sent him back to Mexico and started without him for Africa. Only a fortnight later, Manuel was shot as he slept in bed, in the City of Mexico.

"To me he was ever faithful," writes the professor in the pamphlet. "Through half of his short life he was associated with me in my most serious enterprises. We have often had difficulties and hardships to encounter, but he never grumbled at them. More than once we have faced actual danger, but I always felt secure with him behind me. In his later years he was absolutely fearless. For me, personally, he felt the affection of a son for his father, and he regarded my counsel beyond that of any other human being. I shall miss his help and interest, his companionship, his watchful care, his love and devotion."

Professor Starr's first Mexican expedition was made in 1894, and from that date until 1904 he visited that country every year. His special work was to investigate the Indians in their mountain homes. He visited twenty-three tribes, all of whom he found were fullblooded. In sections where the blood had been mixed, he found that the white blood was fast disappearing. Ninety per cent. of the population of the State of Oaxaca is pure Indian.

In his capacity as archaeologist, Professor Starr also made a study of famous ruins, and informed himself on political questions. During his fifteen years of close observance of Mexican politics and contact with leading men in public life, he has become an authority on Mexican matters. He was an intimate friend of ex-President Diaz and had a great admiration for the late President Madero. He has also met all the important leaders of the country, and is familiar with Mexican life from the peons up.

Professor Starr's new book on Mexico, which will be out about March 1st, should, therefore, be a timely and valuable work. He states that it will deal more fully with present conditions than any other book at present in the English language.

The next important work was in Japan, which he began in 1904. In that year the professor was invited by officials of the St. Louis Exposition to serve as a special commissioner to study the Ainu people and secure a group for the Exposition. These people differ in every respect from the Japanese, being white people who have failed in the presence of a more vigorous race. He brought back a group of nine Ainus, which gave great pleasure to visitors at the Exposition.

In all, the professor has visited Japan and Korea six times. In Japan, he wore the costume of the country, ate the national food, and, in fact, lived as one of them. In 190 9and 1910 he took moving pictures showing the social life and customs of the people, and, in 1911, took several thousand feet of negatives, poor Manuel being the cameraman.

During his last trip, from September until December 31st, last year, 6,000 feet of negatives were taken in Japan and Korea, with Roy F. Barton as cameraman. These pictures supplemented what he had not formerly secured. They show Japanese theaters, dancing, wrestling, etc.; also Korean girl-dances, the dance of the Sorceress — forbidden at present by Japan because of its religious character — and magical dances which represent a religion that Japan is anxious to suppress.

PROF. FREDERICK STARR.

The first time that a moving picture apparatus was carried along by him occurred on the trip through Central Africa. No pictures were then taken, as Manuel had not yet mastered the machine, and also because native thieves broke the camera to pieces, thinking it contained valuables.

In 1912, during the expedition into Liberia and Sierra Leone, several thousand feet of film were taken, showing the life of the natives, their dances and religious ceremonials and the hazardous life of native canoe men going out to sea through the breakers and afterwards the return home.

All the expeditions undertaken by Professor Starr, since 1904, have been largely financed by William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Co., and the films taken have been, or will be, released under that brand.

In the fall of this year Professor Starr will leave on an expedition through Siam, Cochin-China, Java and Borneo. He will travel so as to be present at the Dutch Colonial Exposition at Batavia, the capital of Java. He will travel by the way of Holland, from which government he will secure assistance for touring Java. He will make similar arrangements with the French government to traverse Siam and Cochin China.

Professor Starr holds a service medal from Holland, for assistance to the royal and national museums, in Holland and Mexican work, and he also holds decorations from France, Belgium, the Congo Free State and Italy.

On this trip he will carry a complete outfit for the taking of moving and still pictures, and he expects to secure a valuable addition to the educational series already made. Professor Starr is a stanch believer in educational pictures, both for institutional work and entertainment. He has much praise for France that she leads in the use of the moving picture in education.

Professor Starr is in high demand as a public lecturer, and all his spare time is taken up by lectures given on urgent invitation. These lectures chiefly touch on the national life and customs of people, and he uses the moving pictures taken on his expeditions for illustration.

"Justice."

Four-Part Hepworth Feature.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

FORCEFUL, and characterized by tremendous action, this melodrama is founded on primitive methods of administering justice. Murder is revolting — it grossly violates our ideas of civilization — yet there is often a natural sympathy aroused in the hearts of an audience by what appears to be justifiable homicide. There are warring instincts in the breasts of those who watch the screen portrayal that excuse the extreme redress of bitter wrong, especially when the victim of wrong, as well as of fruitless revenge, goes manfully to his inevitable fate. "Justice" does not excuse crime. It presents a condition that cannot do other than incite crime, depicts the violence of a strong human creature raging under a sense of deep injury in the midst of that conflict perpetual which man has ever had with his environment, and it drives straight to a logical conclusion.

The central figure, Joe Prescott, is a bull-headed workman of powerful physique — the role is powerfully interpreted by Mr. Harry Royston — who loses his situation in a factory, and with it the sole means of subsistence for himself and daughter, through a comparatively trifling episode—a clash with the foreman of his shop. Out of that incident tragic events rapidly develop, partly through the pugnacious character of the discharged workman, but largely because circumstances conspire to bring him into close relation with a decadent of criminal tendency, none other than the mill owner's son, known in the play as Paul Meredith.

Paul is not an uncommon type. The larger part of his life is spent in the pursuit of self-gratification, at the expense of his indulgent parents and that of social welfare. He is not criminal at the outset, but he is defective, absolutely destitute of social instinct. He is a potential criminal because deterred only from committing crime by fear of punishment. He is by no means an uncommon type. He becomes involved in difficulties, forges his father's name to notes and goes to the old man for assistance. The father, about to celebrate his silver wedding, is deeply humiliated, but he makes a last effort at redemption, and, while he is taking money from his safe, the son obtains possession of his key.

That little inanimate object, the key, suggests theft to the degenerate son — there is no sense of duty left in his composition — he is as devoid of pure sentiment as a snake — but he lacks another tool until Joe, rankling from a sense of injustice, comes under his influence. Joe undertakes the robbery as a matter of retaliation, and is compelled to murder Paul's father in the accomplishment of his purpose. All that he obtains is jewelry, and he sends his daughter to Paul with the booty, requesting Paul to forward enough money to facilitate his escape.

Paul has as much sense of obligation to his confederate as he had to his parents. He takes a fancy to the girl, lures her to a house of doubtful repute, and detains her there by force. He is even destitute of that kind of honor which is supposed to exist among thieves. He not only refuses the aid needed by the man he has led to commit theft, but attempts the destruction of Joe's daughter, as well. The murderer is caught and sent to jail.

A series of circumstances, some of which are not entirely logical, make it known to wretched Joe that he has been doubly betrayed, and he breaks jail by overpowering his guards. The man is a formidable type of the battling male, all of his fights being against odds ordinarily overwhelming, but his last conflict, that with his treacherous confederate, is one of the most realistic hand-to-hand fights ever exhibited on the screen. He finally kills the decadent by smashing a table over his head. The last object of his existence accomplished, he then yields to officers of the law in a pitiful scene, relieved only by the fact that his child's future safety is assured.

The impersonation of this character, one of dogged persistency in the face of enormous difficulties, suggests a man so rugged and dauntless that he was unfitted for his duties by primitive passions, who, with greater breadth of mind and purpose, might have been a power in some nobler line of action. He is a creature of rude outlines, but one cannot help feeling that he is an actuality, that he represents tremendous human energy at odds with other forces grown beyond his primitive form of control.

GEORGE KLEINE RETURNS.

After a five months absence in Europe Mr. George Kleine returned on Saturday, February 7, at which time he arrived in New York City accompanied by Mrs. Kleine and daughter. After stopping at the Hotel Astor for a few days they left for Chicago. While abroad Mr. Kleine formed a close alliance with the Ambrosio Company, organizing a new company for the production of feature pictures for the American market. Mr. Kleine reached New York in time to attend the formal opening of the Vitagraph Theater, Saturday evening.

State of Missouri Sues Mutual.

Attorney-General Commences Action On Account of Alleged Exclusive Methods of Distribution.

The Missouri Supreme Court at Jefferson City, on Wednesday, Feb. 4, appointed Judge Henry P. Lay, of Warsaw, Mo., to take testimony to ascertain whether a motion picture trust exists in the state. This action by the court followed the filing of proceedings against seven companies who distribute through the Mutual Film Corporation of Missouri, by Attorney-General Barker. The companies named by Mr. Barker are the Mutual Film Corporation, American Film Manufacturing Company, Thanhouser Film Company, Majestic Film Company, Carlton Moving Picture Laboratories, New York Motion Picture Company and the Film Exchange Corporation.

The following contentions are made by the Attorney-General:

1. That the Mutual Film Corporation is the agent of the other companies.
2. That they operate under it in Missouri, thus shutting out competition in the film business.
3. That the Mutual has the same offices as the other companies.
4. That it refuses to sell films to motion picture companies except those operating in accordance with its plans.
5. That only those shows on the approved list receive or are able to purchase films from this company.

The Attorney-General asserted that no less than 500 complaints from Missouri exhibitors are on file in his office. He intimated that the Mutual was not the only manufacturing or distributing company complained against, and that other cases would follow the present one. He stated, however, that ouster decisions would not be aimed at, and that his office was to no degree desirous of interrupting the film business in the state.

The state's action against the Mutual Film Corporation is taken by exhibitors to mean that film exchanges will be asked to abandon certain methods which have been in vogue for some time past. Up to a year ago, the exchange catered only to exhibitors who used their programs in full. That is, no one was allowed to use a portion of the output of one exchange and complete his program with a part of that of another distributor. Something over a year ago, exchanges announced that exhibitors could, if they wished, use split programs. It is stated in some quarters that while exhibitors have this privilege, as stated, that it is a rather expensive one, and most of the amusement men have found it more profitable to make up their entire program from one exchange. The state's investigation, it is said, will be largely into this feature of the business.

W. A. BRADY IN PICTURES.

Forms a Company Capitalized at $1,000,000 to Produce Film Plays.

William A. Brady, the theatrical manager, announces that he will enter the moving picture field as a film producer, and that he has organized a company known as William A. Brady's Picture Plays, Incorporated, at Wilmington, Del. The capital is $1,000,000. Negotiations have been going on during the last several weeks under which the Brady company will take over the New York studio of a firm heretofore engaged in the manufacture of comparatively short moving pictures. A large plant is to be established in the Far West, and as soon as the deeds to the property arrive contracts will be closed for the erection of buildings suitable to the purpose in view. Mr. Brady's agents have been upon the ground for some time, and it was through them that the real estate deal was completed a few days ago.

One series of Mr. Brady's moving pictures will be known as the Robert Mantell Films, presenting this actor and company in his repertoire of thirteen of the plays of Shakespeare and other classic dramas.

Another series will go out under the title the George Broadhurst Films, embracing the principal plays of this author. The new corporation also will specialize in educational pictures.

H. E. BADER BACK FROM EUROPE.

H. E. Bader, special representative of the Ernemann Photokino Works in America, is due to arrive this week on the S. S. Pennsylvania after a three months' trip abroad. From the home office in Berlin he is bringing with him the advance sample of the new Ernemann steel 1914 model projector, "Imperator." Mr. Bader is also bringing with him Mrs. Bader, who arrives as a bride. It is said that she is a jewel and that the bridegroom is anxious about the tariff schedules on jewelry.

Edwin Milton Royle

Tells Interviewer How He Crossed the Bridge Into Filmland —For Some Kinds of Drama the Screen More Effective Than the Stage—How the Future Looks to an Enthusiastic Film Convert.

By W. Stephen Bush.

CURRENT American literature is gradually but very effectually projecting itself upon the screen. Indeed I expect the term "screen-literature" to be incorporated into Webster before long. The original bridge into contemporaneous American literature was built by Harry Raver, who led the distinguished Augustus Thomas across the pontoons into Staten Island. It was—it must have been a solid bridge. The next to follow were Charles Klein and then Jack London, and now comes Edwin Milton Royle. There is a stirring of new blood which come what may must do good to the noble art of making motion pictures.

"We authors are masonic in telling each other our experiences in this new world of films," said Mr. Royle to me as I settled in a most comfortable chair in the sunniest of libraries in his charming country home at Darien.

I know not to whom is due the credit of converting the author of "The Squaw Man" to dramatic kinematography, but I do know that his merit is great. Royle has so far done nothing for the motion picture but sell the motion picture rights of one of his most successful plays, but this fact has kindled a fertile enthusiasm in him and whenever hereafter he feels the Muse approaching he will work with at least one eye upon the screen.

"The first motion pictures I ever saw," continued Mr. Royle, "seemed to me silly, almost infantile, and it was impossible for me to understand how any one could take them seriously. I have changed my mind. Not only do I now believe that the motion picture is a new and marvelous medium of dramatic expression, but I am convinced that for certain kinds of plays it is absolutely superior to the speaking stage. The melodrama, for instance. . . . No, I don't mean the kind you mean (observing the smile on the interviewer's face), I mean the high-class Drury Lane stuff. The weakest part of the melodrama is its dialogue, that's why we let them say as little as possible in the melodrama. The situations are told better by actions than by words. Then there is the symbolic play. That kind of play is most apt for the motion picture. I have written a play, "The Struggle Everlasting," which is strictly symbolic in character, illustrating the struggle between the Body, the Mind and the Soul. It was put on with great loyalty by the late Henry Harris who went down in the "Titanic," but it failed of its expected success merely by reason of the very obvious limitations of the conventional stage. It is, of course, full of profound psychological moments which could be much better reflected into the minds of the audience by means of the motion picture. Again take the wonderful advantage of visions. How much cannot be expressed by visions? A vision on the conventional stage is next to impossible and hardly ever really effective. On the screen a vision seems more natural and can easily be utilized for the highest purposes of the dramatist. Nor is this all. In the conventional drama we are always hard put to it to keep the thread spinning and to bridge over certain periods of time without disturbing or blurring the continuity of the action. How much easier to keep the thread spinning on the screen. You need not have the spectator take any thing for granted, your audience is not required to assume so many things, you are in a position to show them. I am persuaded that in the days to come writers of plays will be found writing for the screen primarily if not exclusively. The vastness of the motion picture possibilities is quite clear." We shifted seats here because the sun in this charming country house floods the rooms more or less all day and surely seemed to follow us on this particular day. Literally and figuratively we were enjoying the rays "del pianeta che mena dritto altrui per ogni calle."

EDWARD MILTON ROYLE

"No, I would not have dared," replied Mr. Royle when I asked him whether he had taken any part in the direction of "The Squaw Man" for the screen. Then he thought a while and continued:

"Of course we talked things over and built the story for the picture which, by the way, was remarkably easy. You may rest assured, however, I will make it a condition in my next contract that I am to have the privilege of being around when the work of direction is going on. Yes, I realize that the technique of the screen is one thing, while the technique of the stage is quite another thing. At the same time I believe that the man with a considerable stage experience may be permitted to offer suggestions. Some of them may be impracticable, others may be valuable. My friend Thomas, I understand, has learned quickly. Yes, you are right; I think I am becoming fascinated with the new art, it is an art and will be greater as time goes on. It can do the same wonderful things with the novel as well as with the drama."

"Now, what did you mean," I asked coming back to the starting point of our talk, when you said before that you authors are masonic in telling each other of your experiences in the world of films."

"I will tell you that very readily," replied Mr. Royle, "I refer mainly to the commercial aspect of things. Of course Charles Klein told me what he got and I had no trouble in getting information at first hand to guide me in my demands. With all that it seems to me that the compensation of authors in your art must shake down to a deeper and more equitable basis. I get royalties from the sale of each print. I do not say that for the present this may not be a satisfactory arrangement, perhaps under present conditions it is the only kind of an arrangement feasible. I do say, however, that eventually the author ought to share in the gross receipts of the individual exhibitor. I think it is bound to come to some method like that, especially as the art rests more and more on a stable and sound business basis. I do not think that many really worth while authors would be tempted to go in under any other arrangement. I am very curious to watch the further development of things. I know the authors' league is interested and will take the matter up."

At this moment the telephone bell made a diversion and as Mr. Royal stepped to the instrument he found a very well-known actor and director at the other end of it. The other end was held in New York. The man at the other end wanted to know whether Royle still controlled "The Squaw Man," and, of course, he promptly received an answer in the affirmative.

"I may want to play 'The Squaw Man' in the near future," said the well-known actor who, by the way, has played this part with extraordinary success. Royle informed him that the play had been filmed and wanted to know whether his friend would care.

"Care?" echoed back the faithful telephone. "Why not at all. It will help to advertise me."

And here after some long distance chaffing the conversation ended in a hearty laugh on both sides.

My Royle is a man of parts besides being a gifted author and builder of dramas. He has now joined the ranks of the men who are in pursuit of the higher ideals in the field of motion pictures. I know he will keep the historian of the future fairly busy.

Opened With Eclat

Is the Vitagraph Theater to a Large and Fashionable Assemblage—Program Enthusiastically Received.

ALL the circumstance of a high social function attended the opening of the Vitagraph Theater, Saturday evening, February 7th. No dramatic theater can boast of a "first night" that was more auspicious than this one of the motion picture, nor has there been a dramatic production in some time that was better received by its audience than were the several features of the Vitagraph program. The only unfortunate circumstance was that the capacity of the house was not nearly large enough to hold the thousands who sought admission. From six o'clock in the evening until the time for the performance to begin—8:30 o'clock—the box office was besieged by a clamoring crowd of ticket seekers who had to be turned away. Those fortunate enough to gain admission were not disappointed in the character of the entertainment, for the enthusiasm they displayed in frequent applause testified to the pleasure the entertainment afforded them.

The program was practically as outlined in the Moving Picture World of last week, the variation being that the show opened with a series of views of the star players of the Vitagraph stock company. The players were introduced in appropriate scenes and made their bows to the people in front almost as though they appeared in the flesh. Each got a reception from the house according as they are known to the picture loving public, together with some hearty laughs for the bits of comedy injected now and then by the players themselves.

Following the appearance of the "stars" came the dramatic number of the program "A Million Bid," an intensely dramatic picture in four parts which has been reviewed in these columns (Page 658, Feb. 7); a sketch entitled "The Honeymooners," written by J. Stuart Blackton, presenting John Bunny, James Morrison and Mary Charleson, and "Goodness Gracious" or "The Movies as They Shouldn't Be," a burlesque on some of the mannerisms of the silent drama. The latter number was received with almost one continuous laugh. The line in the program "three thousand feet of laughter" appropriately describes the subject.

It would not have been a regular "first night" without a speech by someone; so, when John Bunny had finished his bit in "The Honeymooners," he gracefully introduced Mr. Blackton, who told the audience what his company was trying to do at the Vitagraph Theater in a few well chosen words.

While the pictures were the principal part of the program not a little applause was bestowed upon the stage effects. The setting described in last week's World was all that was expected and more. The music, which is being furnished temporarily by a special orchestra, was most appropriate and lent much to the success of the entertainment. In about a week it is expected that the big Hope-Jones Symphonic Orchestra will be in working order.

The New York papers were not lavish in their notices of the opening of the Vitagraph Theater, but Alan Dale, of the American, devoted a column in the Sunday issue of that paper to a handsome appreciation of the entertainment. We extract a few paragraphs from it:

"No swaggerer or more 'bung-tung' gathering than that which graced the opening of the new Vitagraph Theater (formerly the Criterion), has been seen at any 'legitimate' opening this season. The famous almost-old theater, of Hammerstein's brand, was crowded with a most un-'movie'-looking audience, and the house itself had been spruced and brightened up for the silent actors as it had never been for the chatty ones. Boxes were added, filled with pure white chairs, and the entire appearance of the Vitagraph Theater was cozy, ornate and chic.

"Movie actors were a great deal in evidence—just as critical as un-'movie' ones. They knew all those that appeared in the pictures last night. They gossiped about them, commented on them, scrutinized their make-up and made the filmers seem real and vitalized.

"The new Vitagraph Theater's specialty lies in the fact that 'at no time will it be possible to see elsewhere in all America anything shown at the Vitagraph Theater. Every feature will be new.' It is also promised—mark this—that the pictorial offerings will be 'clean.' Then possibly we may escape from white slavery!

'But on the admirable musical accompaniments I want to dwell. It is these that help the imagination; that foster all sorts of idealization. and that are the most valuable adjuncts that movies can know. It is the movies with cheap and evil music that offend."

A slight variation in the regular program was put on for Lincoln's Birthday when Ralph Ince, in an impersonation of Lincoln, was given.

Regarding the future of the pictures that are to be shown at the Vitagraph Theater, there has been no little speculation among motion picture exhibitors. On this subject Mr. A. E. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company, explained that after the pictures had served their usefulness at the theater they would probably be offered to other large theaters for exhibition on a percentage basis, but they would not appear in any New York House. "We hope to keep each feature on exhibition at our own house for at least a month," he said, "after that they will be for rent to any theater manager who can give them a proper presentation. Just how we shall handle them has not been fully decided, but I feel sure that we shall have no trouble in finding a market for them after a successful New York presentation."

Adrienne Kroell

When one speaks of black eyes and raven hair they are invariably in close association with a pair of charming dimples. In fact the writer thinks this an excellent formula composing the three desirable attributes linked with beautiful teeth and all governed by the guiding instinct of a sweet and demure disposition. For a reporter to get by all these alluring charms and yet know just the direction he wishes to take a car, or not get so confused that he orders an onion frappe with cranberry sauce instead of a lobster a la Newburgh, is going some. Finally when I got my bearings, I ventured to inquire of Miss Kroell if Chicago was not her home (I felt sure it must be). With another twinkle of the eye, a reply in the negative and another reef was taken in my sail.

Adrienne Kroell.

"Though born in Chicago I have always claimed St. Louis my home town, as it was there I received my education and lived for fourteen years. After graduation from the Yeutman High School of St. Louis, I made my first appearance at the suburban Garden in that city with Miss Virginia Harned in 'Trilby.' I spent three seasons as a member of the Suburban Stock Co., playing with Virginia Harned, Amelia Bingham, Henrietta Crossman, Margaret Clark, Crystal Herne, James K. Hackett and Wilton Lackaye.

"In 1907, while in stock in St. Louis, I was the winner of a beauty contest of the Post Dispatch and St. Louis Republic." I managed to mumble something that was hard to understand, but I intended to say that I admired their choice. "The same year I won a medal for making the best time in a fifty yard swim at the St. Louis Natatorium.

"I then entered musical comedy and was under the management of Mort H. Singer from 1908 to 1910, appearing in 'A Stubborn Cinderella,' and for two seasons prima donna of the 'Honeymoon Trail.' While on the road with this company I walked from Minneapolis to St. Paul in two hours and four minutes, making a record time, the distance being twelve miles. This took place on February 4, 1909.

"How did I become interested in motion pictures? The simplest way in the world. I have always admired the clean and elevating kinds of amusement. In pictures the actors do not have to submit to the introduction of suggestive or trashy lines to build up a scene. They merely picture human nature in all its simplicity. I was anxious to see myself as others see me. My present engagement with Mr. Selig is so delightful that I am almost persuaded that I am going to regret not having entered it long ago. My surroundings? Oh, yes, they are all that can be desired, equally as good and in many respects far superior to the best weeks of one night leaps." Then she sighed and shrugged her shoulders in a knowing way, for she had made Kankakee and Kokomo and possibly Hammond.

No Man Big Enough to Be City's Censor

So said the Chicago Examiner of February 6th, in the following editorial:

"If we were sure of a censor as wise as Solomon, as fair as the Greek gentleman whose constituent slew him because he was tired of hearing him called "The Just," as far above suspicion as Caesar insisted his wife should be, as independent as Diogenes and of as good judgment and taste as all of us are sure we are—if we had that kind of a censor we might be willing to trust the regulation of shows, dances, pictures and books to him.

"Somehow the description does not entirely fit Major Funkhouser—sometime insurance agent, one-time militiaman and just now civilian Deputy Police Superintendent and guardian of the morals of this town. We will not presume to say whether it is in the domain of wisdom, justice, moral unassailability, susceptibility to the will of others or taste that the major falls short, but somewhere there is a rattle in the machinery—some one of the valves leaks, the carburetor floods, there is a screw loose or a torsion rod rubbing in the administration of his official functions.

"No man is fit to be the keeper of another's conscience—neither his moral conscience nor his artistic conscience. There are plenty of penal laws to prevent indecency on films, in the theaters, in pictures or books. The place for the pander is in jail; he should not be permitted to get his vileness before the public because a heavy-set person licenses it any more than the producer of a play, a book or a picture should be barred from showing it simply because the same sort of a person elects that it is improper.

"Let the men who travel the narrow trail between art and indecency take their chances with a judge and jury; if they know that a transgression of the law will land them in jail they will be their own censors and stricter than Major Funkhouser in his most austere moments.

"Censorship is an element of monarchies, not of democracies, and curiously enough, we get the most unblushing productions from the most censored countries. It is not a good thing for a free people to accustom them to official interference in their ordinary affairs; official meddling grows on exercise. From carrying out an absurd law the official too frequently thinks he is the law; objection to him is likely to seem even more heinous than objection to his official acts. From censoring films, shows and pictures to interfering with the liberty of speech and of the press is only a step along a road well trodden in the historical road to tyranny.

"The Examiner is convinced that it would be able to find as many or more ministers of the gospel in Chicago—students of morals and educated guides to consciences, and not merely haphazard appointees to an expert's job—who would say that "The Traffic in Souls," which fell under the Funkhouser ban, for example, taught a necessary moral lesson, as would confirm the censor's verdict.

"Giving a man a palette does not make him an artist; giving him a title does not make him what our Mexican friends describe as a scientifico—which doesn't mean what our English word scientist conveys—though giving him a star does make him a policeman. Mr. Funkhouser might have been appointed secretary to the Drainage Commission, he might have been made a commissioner to condemn land for some city improvement, and he would have qualified as readily—it was only accident that the censorship and his name came out of the box together.

"It is probable that the incumbent does not like his job any more than the public likes it; in fact, this is indicated by his getting some sort of a jury to help him pass on subjects that come before him. 'Passing the buck,' to borrow the phrase of the unrighteous, does not make censorship any more palatable. It may relieve the anxiety of an uncertain man, but it does not insure either accuracy or judgment or absence of hypocrisy. These volunteer referees have no responsibility for their verdicts—why leave it to them?

"Chicago is tired of this censorship experiment. It is un-American, undemocratic and unintelligent. It is unfair to submit the enterprises of men who have invested honestly and heavily in what they think are legitimate undertakings to the hazard of an encounter with a despotic power that puts them out of business with a word.

"Censor Funkhouser, Chicago hopes you have had a pleasant visit—here's your hat."

PICTURES PLEASE CONVICTS.

Thomas Tynan, warden of the Colorado penitentiary, who is trying new ways of handling convicts and succeeding in raising the standard of the men with whom he is brought in contact, makes a pointed remark anent one of his plans. He says: "We found when we installed the motion picture apparatus at the institution, that it helped us to keep better discipline, for the reason that men who violated rules were excluded from the picture exhibitions for all the way from three to six months."

"The Gangsters of New York"

Reliance Four-Reel Feature.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

AROUND a slender thread of story are gathered realistic incidents picturing how the other half live in New York. There is at once projected on the screen a manifest desire to portray facts in the place of offering a conventional presentation of humanity. It is true physiognomy, even if the features are grim with base passions, and it requires no small amount of skill to formulate an artistic representation of the truth in these days of ultra-artistic lying

Beneath the battling of gangsters, yet not so deep as to be unrecognizable, is the undercurrent of a problem which is very successfully solved at the end. It is shown that the existence of gangsters is made possible by the saloon of disreputable character, and the evils caused by its associations are powerfully set forth from the outset. The tough resort is depicted exactly as it is, a nuisance, the caterer to all that is low in man's nature, blunting his moral sense and perpetuating organized crime.

The gangster is shown to be primitive in all his methods, a savage injected into the midst of progressive civilization, dependent upon few ideals, those of loyalty to party dominating. He knows of only one act deserving punishment, that of squealing, to which there is only one penalty attached—that of death. It is on this account that New York police find it difficult to prove crimes committed by these Apaches. To "snitch" means death at the hands of the convicted man's relatives or nearest friends.

Scene from "The Gangsters of New York" (Reliance).

The types used in this realistic portrayal are all good, some of the men remarkably so. The cast:

Biff Hogan	Mr. Henry B. Walthall
Tom Hogan (His elder brother)	Mr. Jack Dillon
Jimmie (His kid brother)	Master O. Child
Jessie Hogan (His sister)	Miss A. Horine
Hennessy (The district leader)	Mr. Ralph Lewis
Cora Drew	Consuelo Bailey
Jack Drew (Her brother)	Mr. P. Riley
Kerrigan (The reformer)	Mr. C. Lambart
Spike McGee (A rival gangster)	Mr. F. Herzog
Mrs. Murphy (A neighbor)	Miss B. Craig

Henry Walthall is not in a role exactly suited to his personality, but he makes a creditable showing as a gangster in whose mind has been kindled a spark of humanizing enlightenment. The part of his brother the gang leader, who is caught red-handed and sent to the electric chair, is admirably portrayed by Mr. Dillon. In fact, the selection of types throughout is worthy of high praise, so necessary is it in a drama of this character, dealing with a peculiar phase of contemporary life, to make no demands upon the spectator's imagination in the matter of character embodiment.

Possibly the highest merit of this production lies in the solution of the problems it presents, which is offered in suggestion to society. It plainly indicates that present punitive methods, failing to attain the desired end, are short-sighted, if not mistaken, because they fail to show progress. The root of such evil lies in an abnormal social existence, best remedied, as in this case, by a total change that will enable the embryonic criminal to reorganize himself on a better plane. Whenever this can be done in practice as it is here shown in theory, the gangsters of New York will be forgotten like other relics of barbarism.

"Joseph's Trials in Egypt"

Famous Biblical Story Finely Staged and Impressively Enacted in a Three-Part Eclectic.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE dramatic story of Joseph, the son of Jacob, his trials, and his sudden elevation to fame and power is strikingly told in a three-part Eclectic subject released on February 2. The telling is attended by the use of a wealth of accessories in the way of staging and costumes. The photography is on a par with the other factors of the production, and the picture is tinted in sepia throughout. While most of the scenes are of the studio, those that are of the open preserve the atmosphere of the story—especially the view of the caravan crossing a desert. The opening scene is of a large flock of sheep rushing down a hillside.

The story opens where Joseph, the favorite son, tells his many brothers of the dream in which it is foretold that he is to be made ruler over them. Joseph is cast into the pit, and later is sold into slavery. The brothers take back to Jacob the coat of many colors, to the great grief of the old man. In Egypt we see the wife of Potiphar, after her failure to win the regard of the captive, denounce him to her husband, Joseph's imprisonment following. Then follow the interpretation of the dreams of the imprisoned butler and baker. It is the former who suggests to Pharaoh that Joseph be called in to reveal the meaning of the ruler's strange dream. The imprisoned slave so impresses Pharaoh that he is made a ruler over Egypt. Years later, when famine is on all the land, Joseph recognizes his brothers sent into Egypt to buy corn. Unrecognized, he demands the production of their youngest brother. Jacob insists on returning to Egypt with the son, and it is then that the reconciliation takes place, and on the invitation of Pharaoh the entire family takes up its abode in Egypt.

Scene from "Joseph's Trials in Egypt" (Eclectic).

There are many dramatic situations. Some that stand out are when the brothers bring back to the venerable Jacob the blood-stained coat of Joseph; the development of the infatuation of Potiphar's wife for Joseph, the rage of the woman scorned and the denunciation of the captive; the amazement of Joseph when he sees before him and in his power the brothers who had sold him into slavery, and the many scenes leading up to the reunion of the family. The drama is well acted. The sub-titles are literal quotations from the Bible, although to those who know the story the picture would run clearly with very few.

The Death of a Geisha.

The Eclectic Company released, on February 10, a three-part subject which will be notable for the splendid acting of a mite of a Japanese woman. She is extremely plain of face, but even the coarse-grained whose first thought is as to the physical beauty of a woman will be thrilled by her remarkable portrayal of love, jealousy, dejection and—death. The little woman, barely four and a half feet in height, displays a histrionic intelligence which places her in the front rank of screen players.

The story is unpleasant, that of a wounded Russian officer nursed back to health by the geisha and later marrying her and taking her back to Russia with him. He tires of her as he is infatuated by a statuesque woman of his own race—of the heartless, the sensuous, type, with no regard for anything or anyone standing in the way of her desires. The atmosphere shifts from Japan to Russia as the newly wedded couple arrive in their northern home and are shown looking out of their window on to a street scene in Moscow. It is here that at a reception the intruder enters. After the little Japanese woman dances and gracefully in the style of her country, we see the contrasting Russian steps. The tragedy begins here. The supremely dramatic moment comes when the intruder has boldly entered the home of the couple. She lays violent and contemptuous hand upon the mite who should rule there—not once does she strike her, but twice. Quick as a flash the little woman has the larger by the wrist. The Russian falls to the couch, her arm is behind her, and being twisted. A long hairpin is drawn from the abundant hair of the midget. The sudden entrance of the husband prevents a tragedy of blood—and you will feel more than half inclined to regret the interruption.

The picture is well staged and acceptably acted. It is the face of Haneko, however, that holds—it possesses the enduring, the haunting, quality.

Grace Cunard

MISS GRACE CUNARD has been a leading woman in pictures for the past four years, and a good part of that time she has been associated with Francis Ford, of the Universal Gold Seal Company. In her greatest triumph, Miss Cunard is always the pupil, learning and absorbing from every source with the aim of surpassing all.

She is a beautiful woman with the natural talents and physique that redounds to the perfection of a woman on the stage. She leans towards strong roles, so far as her tastes and ability go, yet her lighter moods delightfully conform to the demands of ingenue in high-class comedy.

Dark hair, with an agreeable suggestion of wave in it, environs a face of classic contour, eyes that are sparkling and frank, and a nose that speaks of sauciness incidentally and dignity always. There is a charm about this young woman odd in the extreme. When she radiates roughness mostly there is an underlying seriousness that completely captivates with the "something yet to come unlooked for" which the mixture insinuates.

Grace Cunard.

This young woman gives to her work as leading woman a stage experience which started when she was thirteen years of age.

When Miss Cunard is not playing in pictures she is usually to be found driving her car at a fifty-mile clip along some quiet California country road. It is her main recreation—motoring—and she exhibits the same enthusiasm in following it up that is evidenced in her work on the screen.

MINDIL IS MUTUAL PRESS AGENT.

Harry E. Aitken, President of the Mutual Film Corporation, yesterday stated that the announcement published in a New York paper to the effect that H. Whitman Bennett had been engaged as general press representative for his company was erroneous. He said that Philip Mindil would continue in full charge of the Publicity Department of the Mutual, and that Mr. Bennett would fill a new position, booking and exploiting certain elaborate feature films now being manufactured by the Mutual and its various allied companies.

It is the purpose of the Mutual to present its extraordinary photodramas in New York City and throughout the country on a plan similar to that used in regular dramatic offerings. Mr. Bennett has been with the Shubert Theatrical Company and with Sam S. and Lee Shubert, Inc.

Moving Picture Educator

KINEMATOGRAPH FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE generation of to-day is in the experimental stage, the generation of to-morrow will be in the perfected stage. The educational film is destined to become the greatest power in the training of the next generation.

It has been truly said by an authority, "The film industry has, with characteristic alacrity, developed the educational branch of kinematography, even while its advocates were pleading the cause of its desirability."

The best interests of the moving picture are centered in its adaptability to the requirements of the youth of the land. All wisdom teaches that whatever is to the best interest of young people is of the highest importance to the nation. In all secular and religious work, emphasis is laid upon the opportunities of youth. Should not the same idea pervade kinematography?

The old idea that all that was necessary to please the children was "A comic to make them laugh" has become as senseless as the kindred thought that the clown was all they desired at the circus. The new idea is that these comicalities are only attractions to open the way to larger and more serious events—events which have within them the display of abilities and powers of all kinds. Children appreciate a serious effort to interest them, just as much as they do the desire to amuse. It must not be supposed that the child mind is different in quality to the adult mind; its required food is essentially the same, the only difference being in the method of service.

Specializing for Young People.

It would seem that in every moving picture manufactory there ought to be an expert on children's pictures whose work should be to consider the interests of the young people by seeing to it that wherever possible any picture might be made adaptable to their minds, or that suitable pictures are especially and increasingly prepared for them. The time has come when newspapers and periodicals of all kinds have their Young People's Department. The advances of kinematography cannot allow the moving picture to be lacking in this particular; indeed, in many ways it ought to be the pioneer of many ideas which are now crowding themselves into the possibilities of educational kinematography. The children themselves are good advisers of their own interests. Two or three years ago a symposium of young people's ideas was printed in THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD in which their likes and dislikes were plainly and helpfully shown; in this way, also, their desires may be learned.

Furthermore, when it becomes known that specializing for young people is a part of the developing powers of kinematography a new lead will be given to a line parallel to that which is distinctly educational, to the great advantage of both lines of work.

Juvenile Censorship Avoided.

There can be little doubt that when it becomes generally known that manufacturers are "specializing for young people," and that their interests are being specially cared for by a department organized for that purpose, the need for censorship would be much less necessary; indeed, unless the writer is much mistaken, a great deal of valuable outside help, official and otherwise, would be at the disposal of the makers, so that efforts in this direction would be made easy, and more widespread good accomplished. When it is remembered that much of the censorship war now waging everywhere is more directly related to the best interests of the young people, every decided effort put forth, not only to remedy the defects, but to create another and higher standard, will be applauded by those who now feel compelled to sit in judgment.

Previous Failures.

Many attempts have been made to force some sort of relationship between the moving picture and the young people. In every instance, however, the truth stands out that no methods of adjustment have been observed, so that failure was inevitable, and the result, instead of suggesting a search for the cause, has been taken for a sufficient reason for adverse criticism. Two conspicuous experiments are reported from England, the results of which have caused wide correspondence in the English papers. In Lancashire an effort was made to compel picture exhibiting conditions to fit the children; while in Yorkshire it seems as though they tried to make the children fit certain exhibiting conditions, both trials proving failures, with prejudicial results to educational kinematography in general. There is no doubt both these trials were crude and unfair; indeed, there seemed to be a surprising lack of that common sense which suggests the need for the molding of conditions so that the required results may be obtained. It is impossible to legislate the moving picture into educational conditions. No educational boards, magisterial council or police court can, by a series of dictations, bring together, in complete harmony, those bodies the essential union of which can only be by mutual attraction and growth. It is an established fact, and one which must be a basic truth to be considered in future efforts, that to this time, any mutual arrangement between the moving picture and the young people resulting in lasting good has not been obtained. Experimenting under legal pressure and extreme divided opinions will only increase the difficulty in arriving at the desired result.

Suggested Remedies.

Never before was the law of adjustment so essential as here. Conditions, demands and circumstances require the special application of those considerations, which shall seek to modify or enlarge, curtail, lengthen, or broaden. The introduction of essentials, the elimination of non-essentials under wise and talented self censorship, will largely contribute to the required results. In the next place special provision must be made for meeting the conditions as they are found. This can largely be accomplished as already stated by means of a special department in the manufactory. Although the name "expert" is usually given to one filling such a position, it does not follow that such should be the expectation of the office suggested; indeed, experts are too often narrow, prejudiced and self-assertive. An educated adjuster or organizer of "ways and means" would best designate the "Charge d'affairs" in the young people's department. Such a position could be as easily created, and as readily filled in the studios of kinematography, as in any other educational commercial house. Strange to say, emphasis must necessarily be laid upon the exact nature of the office and work. There are those who will read this article who will say, "Why, we have an educational department, and it has not accomplished what we anticipated." True, but the educational department is too narrow. The writer suggests a young people's department based upon those laws which constitute a "Ways and means committee" in a legislative body. The discovery of means to an end, the finding of cause for effect, the seeking of methods of attainment are all parts of one whole plan, and those devoting themselves to such a course will find many problems easy of solution, while others more difficult will always be accompanied with such conditions which will present to a capable mind some ultimate overcoming method. Is it worth while saying that nothing new is required, all the conditions and materials being at hand, ready for use? The young people are ready in their millions, the libraries contain all necessary subject matter, the kinematograph has all the power, and only a master mind to bring about an amalgamation of these forces is needed. W. H. J.

UNIVERSAL PROJECTION EQUIPMENT INSTALLATIONS.

Before leaving the League Island Navy Yard, the U. S. cruiser Birmingham, commanded by Capt. W. V. Pratt and destined to be the flagship of the torpedo fleet at Panama, was equipped with a motor drive Power's No. 6-A projection machine by the General Film Co., of Philadelphia.

The Soldiers Home, at Leavenworth, Kansas, has been equipped with a Power's No. 6-A projection machine. The Federal prison, at Lansing, Mo., has installed a Power's No. 6-A projection machine. Power's No. 6-A projection machine has been installed in the Hudson State Hospital, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

The Public Service Commission, of Jersey City, N. J., is using a Power's No. 6-A projection machine to demonstrate the use of electrical apparatus and for other purposes.

Foreign Trade Notes

BRITISH NOTES.

(Special Correspondence to THE WORLD.)

LUBIN'S "When the Earth Trembled" has been released in this country this week and, judging from the ubiquitous bookings, I venture to state that the picture will prove the most successful of the season for the Philadelphia firm. Fourteen theaters within a stone's throw of Leicester Square began it simultaneously last Monday for various periods from three days to a fortnight, and at the West End Cinema, in Coventry St., it was most effectively screened in conjunction with the Kinetophone.

* * *

A most interesting and technically instructive lecture by M. Proszynski, the inventor, whose ideas have done much to popularize amateur kinematography, was given before the Royal Photographic Society recently. M. Proszynski is one of those enthusiasts who believe that much of the expense attached to the photographic side of the industry can be eliminated by further reducing the size of the image upon the film. To demonstrate his theory, the lecturer showed a new camera and projector mechanism for using films four times as broad as the present standard. The gate arrangement moves the celluloid both vertically and horizontally and the result is a number of very small pictures, a trifle larger, and arranged similar to those of the Edison Kinetoscope.

* * *

W. W. Jacobs, the humorous nautical novelist, has permitted the recently formed London Film Company to produce for the screen a few of his outstanding works, and the first of these is promised within a month or so. Jacobs' stories are characteristically English and forcibly appeal, according to bookseller's statistics, to the American people.

* * *

Mr. Larry Trimble, the managing director of the Turner Film Co., was unsuccessfully sued for wages at Westminster County Court last week by one of his employees.

* * *

Mr. W. Millward, one of the best known exhibitors in Manchester and district, has hit upon a novel idea for attracting visitors to one of his shows. He has arranged to exhibit his own daily fashion gazette and for this purpose he invited lady patrons to apply for posts as models. Their photographs are being shown upon the screen each night and the audience furnished with voting papers so that they may decide which applicants are most physically and facially fitted for the work. The successful applicants, that is those who receive most votes, will be engaged by Mr. Millward to appear in his animated fashion gazette at salaries of ten pounds and five pounds per week. Three hundred replies were received after the first day's announcement.

* * *

Frequent expressions of surprise from the minds of most of our American visitors greet the absence in this country of a moving picture social club, or as they seem to be more popularly known in the U. S. A., a screen club. Nearly every city of any kinematographic importance in America appears to have its screen club, yet London, Manchester, and Glasgow haven't one. However, so far as the metropolis is concerned, the omission is being remedied and an institution (the exact name has not yet been decided), of this character will be opened shortly in suitable premises near Gerard St. The subscription for American cousins resident abroad will be $2.52.

* * *

The exclusive British rights of the Motograph Company's production "Maria Marten" were sold at public auction in London the other day for £650. This firm is also handling, on this side, Buffalo Bill's Wild West pictures.

* * *

One British editor marvels how Ned Finley, of the Vitagraph Company, ever got off with a friendly caution from a Brooklyn magistrate for placing a wagon across the tracks so it would be demolished by a trolley car. In England he would probably have gotten six months.

* * *

The "Vitagraph Boy," Kenneth Casey, has followed the example of Miss Florence Turner by appearing in vaudeville. He had a hearty reception on Monday at Finsbury Park where he is engaged for a week to give a musical turn. Incidentally Miss Florence Turner was presented with an illuminated address during her appearance at a Liverpool theater last week.

JOHN B. SUTCLIFFE.

CHINESE PHOTOPLAYS.

LAST year, in China, I met Will H. Lynch, Shanghai manager of the Asiatic Film Company, a man from California, whom I knew before. He is making films for this company, which has many releases each month. No plays are sent out of the country, but stay in the empire for the natives, who highly enjoy the photoplay.

This company maintains a large studio in Shanghai, where sixteen star actors are daily posing before the camera. These men—no women are allowed to do this kind of work—are the first, and, so far, the only Chinese to act before the camera. There are two directors and two interpreters who work under the supervision of Mr. Lynch. These stars are supported by a well-organized company of twenty-five actors. The laboratory and finishing plant is equipped to turn out 10,000 feet of finished film a day. The supply is for the entire country, and the releases are made just as in America and Europe. There are a number of theaters in Shanghai, two of which are operated by this company. Hongkong, the Southern city, has two cinematograph theaters, and sometimes three, when the larger theater is used for American pictures.

A Company of Chinese Picture Actors Working in Shanghai.

The Asiatic producers supply the demands of China; that is, for the films made with native actors. The rich and poor classes all enjoy the photoplay, and there is never a dull day at one of these theaters. They enjoy their own actors in their own plays, but an American would not understand a Chinese film. Neither would an average Chinese understand an American film.

The "still" picture herewith was taken in Shanghai while the company was making a great opium drama with the mysterious title of "La Ha Naung Middong," meaning "Honey." The women are really men in the pictures, and they wear wigs to make them look like women. There is not a Chinese woman to be found around the studios. Some of the men are very adept at imitating the women, and their acting is well liked by the theatergoing public of the dragon emblem empire.

CLARKE IRVINE.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

AS THE snowflakes snipped our cheeks and nose on Broadway last Friday afternoon we ran plump against Mr. William A. Reed, our old friend "Bill"—"Vitagraph Bill"—the original. There are scores of "Bills" operating projecting machines throughout the U. S. and more than fifty per cent. of them claim to be the original "Vitagraph Bill"—but they "ain't," as the "original" would say in his select Bostonese. Said Bill, "If you put 'Mr.' before my name in your write up I'll chew you up." So said modest "Billy Reed." He comes from Atlantic City. Has made his home there for a number of seasons. "How long have you been living there?" we asked. "Well, let's see. I have five children. The first was born in Nashville. The other four were born in Atlantic City: now figure it up."

* * *

When this original "Bill" flies into town there is generally something doing. We met him in the vicinity of the Vitagraph Theater at 44th Street and Broadway. "Whatyer doin' here?" we asked. "Oh nothing," said Bill. "Whenever I hear the Vitagraph is undertaking something new I just kinder meander and look things over. You know, there is a string in my sentimental make-up that spells 'Vitagraph,' and no matter what conditions are I must be at every christening.

* * *

Perhaps it is about time to introduce "Vitagraph Bill" to the reader, particularly as he is a mere operator. Let us use his own words as the introductory remarks: "Well, old scribe, I will consent to set at rest an argument that has bent the friendship of many good fellows. It has hinged upon the question of who is the oldest motion picture operator, I'll give you the answer, and I challenge contradiction. Charles H. Webster, of the Continental Feature Film Company, of Boston, was the original. He got his tips from Mr. Armat, of Washington, an inventor. Webster taught James H. White, formerly with the Edison Company. Mr. White taught Edwin S. Porter, now with the Famous Players Company, and at the same time gave your humble servant his lessons. That comprises the surviving quartette of original operators, and don't let anybody convince you otherwise. There were others—a few—but they have passed away."

* * *

Having in mind the boast made by many operators that they are among the pioneer crank turners because they worked as far back as 1900 the "old scribe" remarked to "original Bill" that he must be some old horse in the harness. Said Bill: "That year 1900 had few operators; that is, good ones. That's some fourteen years back, ain't it? Well, eighteen years ago William T. Rock, now president of the Vitagraph Company of America, and your humble servant introduced moving pictures to the people of Louisiana in September, 1896. I was the operator. There were no reels in those days. A film one hundred feet long would have been looked upon as a spectacular production."

* * *

"Say Billy," said we, "most people of your acquaintance think you are a Southerner, is that correct?" "By ginger!" exclaimed Bill, "I've heard that afore. No; I was born in that old town where one time they dumped a lot of tea into the bay to give everybody a chance to drink. I'll tell you how they got that southern sign on me. For several years I operated for the Vitagraph Company at West End Park in New Orleans and in Nashville, Tenn. For five straight years I never saw New York. When the park in molasses town closed I went to Nashville. By the way, dear old Mother Boyle, who is now managing the Gotham Theater, in Brooklyn was the controlling spirit at the Nashville house and the now famous Maurice Costello was a shining light in the stock company. Oh, yes; there are many in the harness today who can testify that when it comes to locating the original 'Vitagraph Bill' you must seek the sand lots that are washed by the sad sea waves at Atlantic City."

* * *

So we got off at Atlantic City and asked the "Original Bill" how things were going in the city of state named avenues. "Well," Bill started out, "I'll tell you. You see there are so many wise people who have gotten into the game in the last few years that the old timers are nonplussed. By golly! When some of those people who know it all get around me I feel almost incompetent to trim my lamp. Honest fact! I think that Atlantic City holds all the people who think they know all that ever was known or can be learned about the moving picture business. Gee! but they can figure. Listen just a moment. I've got a copy of the Atlantic City Daily Press dated Saturday, January 24, 1914, in my pocket. Here it is. Read for yourself. See the 'ad' of the Arcadia Theater. See the line in it reading 'Stupendous program of 15 quality reels.' That's a five-cent house. Now how do they do it? Look at the column immediately next to the 'ad' and you will see a write up on the manager of the house. It says he 'has had considerable experience in the motion picture business, starting in as one of the pioneers.' That he 'is also a producer and his own films can be seen frequently on the screen.' What do you think of that? Let's see what is the headliner announced in the 'ad.' O, yes, 'The Spider Gang'—4 reels. But on the level; what do you think of fifteen reels for five cents—three reels for a cent? It beats the slot machines three to one. Well, there you have the situation in a nutshell. Where is it going to end? All the managers are at loggerheads with each other. Quantity is the war cry. Naturally quality cannot figure. And, in addition to all this, the houses give prizes. Can you beat it?'

* * *

"Well," said the interviewer, "with such rash competition going on there must be a sharp cut in other house expenses." To this the original William replied that he paid no attention to house expenses outside of that part applying to the operators. "On that score," said he, "you may rest easy. We have a good little union down there and the minimum for operators is twenty-one dollars per week."

* * *

When asked as to inside sentiment regarding the complexion of the competition now going on in Atlantic City, Mr. Reed said: "You know as well as I do that it is killing the business. People who visit the place as a seaside resort take in the picture shows to kill an occasional hour or two and leave them disgusted. Why the backwoods towns see later and better pictures than some of the Atlantic City managers have the nerve to show. But you can't tell the managers anything. Their motto is plenty for the price."

* * *

"Have you a remedy to suggest?" asked the interviewer. "Yes," was the reply. "Give the people their money's worth. Five reels of quality will beat quantity any time. The managers should get together and realize that an audience wants to be entertained—and not bored. Most of the Atlantic City managers hail from Philadelphia and, according to their ideas, that city is the birthplace of motion pictures. Ask any of them why Philadelphia is prominent upon the map and they will tell you it is because it has six cardinal features: Independence Hall, the Liberty Bell, Wanamaker's, motion pictures, Lubin and the mint. If the city had the Chicago stock yards they would claim the United States was centered in Philadelphia."

* * *

"You say you have had eighteen years' experience in the motion picture field, Mr. Reed. Now what is your candid opinion as to the future for motion pictures? The point is to get your opinion as to the life of the pictures as an attraction." "Well," said Bill, "I wish I had a little pile invested in some responsible company. Look at that paper I gave you and you will find a notice on one of our coming attractions—'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' Do you notice that the press item says the manager promises to bring 'a company of over fifty people and a carload of scenery.' Well, since Uncle Tom has been able to weather the storm so many years with that number of people and that amount of scenery I think the movies will stand a good chance for living to a good old age. Fifty people and a carload of scenery! Why I saw in a studio today enough scenery in one setting to fill three cars and enough people in the scene to enable Uncle Tom to start a small town. The present generation will not see the passing of the moving picture. Many picture houses will go out of existence and they will materially decrease in number to make room for the larger and more pretentious places, but the pictures will go on as one of the chief factors in the field of amusement. The number of producers will also decrease and it would not surprise me if the producing and exhibiting of pictures should eventually be controlled by one great corporation. The law of absorption is irresistible and, to my mind, there is no reason why in time it should not reach out and take within its grasp the once despised moving picture. Far be it from me to wish for such an event, but when I ponder over the junk shop tactics of some people in the business I feel that something of that kind should happen to give the pictures a fair run. Every disappointed audience in Atlantic City means a handicap to the business in the home towns. There are too many 'get the coin' managers in the business. They cannot see that a benefit to the business as a whole means a permanent revenue for all."

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

On Posters.

POSSIBLY because it didn't occur to Bill to write us about poster work, it occurred to us to write him, and this is what we wrote:

Dear Bill,

You haven't asked me a blamed word about posters, but I've a load on my chest and it may as well be you as the Floradora Sextette used to say. Guess you didn't know I could quote from the classics like that, did you? Anyhow, here's the dope.

You are in the position of a man who is buying patronage. I know you think that you are selling tickets—and I hope you are, but the real business of management is not selling tickets; it's buying patrons. Just about one man in a thousand realizes that. That's why there are so few honest-to-goodness managers. Any gosh-blamed dunce can sell tickets. It takes a live wire to buy patronage.

Now hold an executive session with yourself and back into your proper stall. Buy patronage and the ticket selling business will be brisk, but if you merely sell tickets to those who want tickets you're not a manager at all; just a fourflush, and if there was a poll tax of a dollar a head on fourflushes and we got the tax, we'd be going to Yurrup next week instead of just down to Jacksonville.

But there are buyers and buyers. One man will rush into a store and ask for a collar button, slap down a quarter and scoot, leaving the shopkeeper with twenty cents and the profit he would usually make on a five-cent button. That isn't buying. That's going the soused sailor stunt. Another man might Russelsage in and haggle for an hour over the five-cent button. That isn't business, not neither.

You go into the shop and ask for a five-cent collar button. The boss tells you that he is having his annual retiring-from-business-sale and all five-cent collar buttons are four cents or two for seven. You see that they are the same that are selling for five per in most places and you buy two. That isn't business, either. You only wanted one collar button. Maybe by the time you want another some other guy will be holding his semi-annual "closed-by-the-sheriff" sale and he'll possibly be selling five-cent collar buttons three for five or two cents each. In that case you'll save a cent and the interest on the three cents you've tied up.

This may sound like silly flub, Bill, but I've found that it sinks deeper than a reasonable simile and the real answer is this:

Do not buy more than you need at one time, nor pay more for it than you have to.

Proving the Point.

Now, get back to the original proposition and make a fresh start. The proposition is that you are not in the business of selling tickets, but are engaged in purchasing patrons, and the selling of tickets to those patrons is merely incidental to their purchase. If you can buy a hundred patrons for sixty cents, and sell them $10 worth of tickets, you are making more profit than if you bought fifty patrons for three dollars and sold them $5 worth of tickets. You still show a profit, but not so much of a profit. For that matter, if you bought $15 worth of patrons for $3, you would be ahead $12 against a profit of $9.40 on the first deal, but if you buy $15 worth of patrons for $3 and have to buy them again next week for $3, and so on, they are not as good an investment as the $10 worth of patrons you pay sixty cents for each week—not in the long run.

Nix. I'm not crazy, though sometimes I wish I was. I'll elucidate: Suppose that you put out some paper in front of your house and it draws an extra ten on the day, the paper costing sixty cents. You keep on using that sixty cents worth of paper to get $10 worth of trade. Now, suppose that you pay out $3 on some fool "prize scheme." You must keep on paying three or you will pay three until you must pay four and five and six. The first week that $3 prize thing brings in $5 more than would the sixty cents worth of paper, but the prize stuff is stuff you have to build up on and keep making bigger all the time, while sixty cents for paper is a fixed cost. In the long run, you make more money with the sixty-cent paper. Take a slate and figure it out.

Paper vs Prizes.

If you have a theater and announce "three first runs to-day," you'll get a certain patronage. If you add paper, you'll get some who are attracted by that paper. If you add too much, you'll look so much like a dime museum front that no one will come except the man who thinks that this is one of those "men only" places you get down on the Bowery here and State street, Chicago, and he'll come but once because he is not looking for the sort of show you run.

Don't look on paper as an expense. Look on it as an investment; a purchase of patronage, but don't overbuy. It is just as foolish to pay $3 for paper where sixty cents worth will do as to pay five cents for a collar button that you can get for four or to slap down a quarter on the proposition that you wanted a twenty-five-cent button whether or not the man gave you a nickel one.

Figure out what you'll get in return for your investment and spend just the amount that will bring you the best returns; no more and no less. This may require some experimenting, but you can soon determine.

And buy your paper. Pay the ten cents a sheet, paste it up on your boards and when you have used it, paste it over with something else. When the layers get too thick, scrape the stuff off and start afresh.

Don't use the second-hand stuff that is all dirty and wrinkled and torn. If you use second-hand stuff, your house will look second-hand. It is better to use six sheets of fresh paper pasted up than sixty cents worth of paper that you have to use tacked. I'm not booming business for the lithograph people. I don't know a dod-blamed one of them and it wouldn't bother me, personally, if the whole raft of them had to go into bankruptcy, but as an old-timer in the theater game, it makes me sick to see an otherwise good looking house deface its front with hired paper when a few cents more would give pasted paper that even the kiddies would respect.

Hire photograph sets, if you can count on getting clean sets, but buy your posters. Don't look at the difference between the cost of your own paper and the cost of hire. Look at the difference in appearance and the effect on possible patrons. You're buying those people with appearance. Pay appearance for them if you want the best and the most.

Does It Pay?

Does it pay to give your patrons the idea that you are a cheap skate with no ice under you? I'm darned if I think it does. It's only in the last couple of years that the photoplay houses, as a rule, have done much to create the impression that they are for-sure regular theaters. They were content to look like "store fake" dime museums and run like them. Now we have theaters and some managers. You be a manager. Did you ever see Willie Hammerstein? Once Willie asked me why I didn't get a fur coat and a hair-cut, because I didn't look like a "regular" critic and I asked Willie why he didn't do ditto on the fur coat (he had a hair-cut), so I got the hair-cut and Willie bought an automobile and we both looked more like regulars, but lots of times, even now, the people pick out some fur-coated actor as the manager of Hammerstein's instead of Willie, and yet the moment I get out of a job I get a new suit and a hair-cut because that's the time I have to look prosperous. I can wriggle the typewriter just as good with six months' growth of fringe and shoes that are three weeks overdue at the cobbler's, but I've got to look like ready money when I ask for a job. Now, you are always asking for a job for your theater, so keep its hair cut and its shoes soled. Look prosperous.

Don't overdo it and load your front down with eleven twenty-eight sheets, seven sixes and as many three sheets as you can find. You don't catch the regular houses doing that. They put the extra paper up and down the street to coax people along. Have fifty frames of photographs for your lobby if you will, but do not put them all out at once. Put just a few, enough to convince and not enough to confuse. Use boards at the side and perhaps a banner across the top now and then, but keep your big stands for up and down the street, and have these stands spic and span and not stamped all over with "This is the property of" stuff.

I wonder if you will get me. I think you will. The idea is that your house is what you make it. If you appeal to decent people, keep your lobby clean and decent, attractively dressed, but not overdressed, and use no borrowed plumes. Buy your patrons at the smallest possible price, per person, but do not underbid and let the other fellow capture the sale. When you can do this, you're a regular manager.

They Won't Like It.

Mr. Farrar touches one point we forgot to tell Bill about. Nine times out of ten the man who seeks sensation shows his disgust because you cannot be as sensational as he thinks you should be. He wants the worst you can show and the worst you are permitted to show is not "good" enough for him, so no matter what business you may do you have made, if not an enemy, at least a dissatisfied former patron.

The advertising referred to is the Kleine "Quo Vadis?" We know of nothing that is a better moral disinfectant. The advertising, marked by the previous experience, is restrained and dignified. It is the sort of advertising that should generally be done for this film. We are sorry that a reproduction of a size space permits, would not give a proper idea of the display, for it is a model in many ways. We are glad that Mr. Farrar is in line—but generally he is in line with what is for the best of the business.

Fine.

Here is a letter from Steve Farrar, of Eldorado, Ill., who writes:

> I have just finished reading your letter to "Bill" in this week's MOVING PICTURE WORLD and it certainly hits the right spot and sinks in deep, and should prove to be the right thing at the right time in the right place. Now is the time for every friend of the moving pictures (not movies) to come to the front and fight these so-called "moral lesson" films. The only way to stop them is to refuse to let them come into your house. They can do no one any good, and if they are permitted to get a hold on the game, they will do us a lot of harm before we see the last of them. We have practically stopped the advertising reel, showing how (corn flakes, Winchester shells, etc., are made) and if we will follow the same course in this we will do the same thing.
>
> I passed a New Year's resolution that I would play no sensational state right features, depicting any kind of crime or slime, no more James Boys or Jack Kennedy the Train Robber films will flash on my screen. They draw a crowd, yes, but what kind of a crowd is it, the crowd that is always looking for something sensational, and after they see it nine times out of ten they call it by its first name "rotten." I had my exchange raise my film rental five dollars on the week the first of the year, and I am now getting such a program that the fellows who are looking for the sensational stuff must come and see it. I enclose you a copy of my last "ad." How is this? I put the seats on sale to-day and they are selling fast. I am putting this on to win back some of the patrons that I lost with "the moral lesson stuff."

Winstock—Second Hand.

There was a time when Melvin G. Winstock used to send us a lot of mighty good advertising stuff, but now we only get his stuff direct when he has made a speech to some people, somewhere, and that does not help a lot. We want press work for his theaters, not for Mr. Winstock himself. But Omer F. Doud, who is on the press job for George Kleine, doesn't confine his efforts to himself, and so we can show some Winstock schemes, though we are indebted to Mr. Doud for the information. This cut shows the scheme used to boom "The Last Days of Pompeii" when it played the American Theater, Butte, Mont. A trolley car was hired and moved over a prescribed route to cover the entire town repeatedly with the result that the business came close to the western record and wiped all other Butte records off the map. Our thanks to Mr. Doud. Some day we hope that Mr. Winstock will get in line again. He used to be a welcome contributor. he approaches the matter with an entirely open mind.

Foolish Advertising.

Someone sends in a copy of the Kane, Pa., Leader which carries a double-column story of an anti-panic theater chair illustrated by a two-column wash drawing of the Iroquois Theater fire, with groups of the dead decorating the house and a second drawing of a theater with these anti-panic chairs. Flame and smoke are pouring from the open ports of the projection room, but the audience is quietly walking out because they have anti-panic chairs. It can't be done.

The text is luridly written to show how dangerous any but these chairs are, and below is the advertisement of the Avon Theater that reads:

> Parents—Would you want to have your children in a panic like the first picture? Would you want to be in one yourself? The New Avon is equipped like the lower picture. Go to the New Avon and be safe.

It is a pity that the New Avon is not equipped with a manager with some sense. It is worse than foolish to run such stuff in the papers. For years every intelligent exhibitor has fought to keep out of the papers the foolish rot about "exploding" films and such stuff, knowing that the publication of such lies is a more prevalent cause of panic than anything that ever happened in a picture theater. Just at a time when this fact has seeped into the editorial offices comes a house manager to run a two-column story of the dangers of theater fires with two cuts that are even worse than the story and all for the sake of saying that his theater is safe. The Avon is no more safe than any other house in Kane or Kankakee. The danger in a panic does not lie in the seats, and fixed seats are more apt to be safe than the sort that turn on a pivot. The danger lies in congestion at the exits and in the panic of the spectators.

No theater is fool-proof and patent chairs cannot make one so. The Iroquois, like other theaters, could empty, without the fire or emergency exits, in from seven to ten minutes. A picture theater could be emptied in three, always provided that the audience kept cool and walked out. Fixed seats would help in restraining the rush, if anything, but even if it were possible to trip the seats and pull them to the ceiling at the first sign of an alarm it would not be possible to preserve safety in a crowd with its mind inflamed by stories of danger.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago we were in the theater in Washington the night of the Charleston earthquake. The rumbling and the swaying of the building were terrifying, but there was no panic because there had been no morbid and exciting stories of bad theater fires of late; but now, and particularly in a picture theater, let there be an alarm, and if there are idiots in the audience there will be a panic no matter how ample the exits. The danger is in exact proportion to the degree and date of the alarmist stories, and it is amazing to see an equipment company and a theater manager collaborate in such "advertising," and yet it would seem that the Hardesty Company supplied these cuts.

If there is a panic in a Kane theater within the next year or so, this advertisement will be one of the causes.

There is no such thing as panic-proof chairs or exits or fire extinguishing systems or anything else. The only certain preventive is a corps of alert and cool-headed attendants.

This is not advertising. It is the reverse, if anything.

Four Resolutions.

J. C. Rathbone, of the Exeter (N. H.) Opera House, heads a bill:

> Four New Year's Resolutions that will make you happy, wise and sweet tempered.

The resolutions are the four programs that follow. We hope that it is through accident that the tail-piece shows the cut of a book with its pages torn out. Surely that is not what Mr. Rathbone does when he turns over a few new leaves.

Another piece of paper can be adapted to local conditions. It is headed with a sixty-point "shouting" and reads:

> Shouting never won an Exeter-Andover football game, or made a motion picture show. However, shouting is very often required to wake some folks up in the morning, that they may not lose a day's pay—and the sunshine. We just want to whisper a few words in your right ear—you'll miss a great show at the Opera House to-night and to-morrow night if you are not careful.

His Christmas week bill is headed "A herald of surpassing joy for all our patrons. A special feature for every night of Christmas week." Some of the specials are a little old, but what you have not shown is new. The back page is given to the sayings of Santa Claus with every other line an advertisement. The alternate lines carry the eye down the column. This is a sample:

> If Willie wants to see the inside of the drum, for goodness sake let him.
>
> Also give him five cents for the matinee.
>
> It's a wise Santa Claus who keeps his whiskers away from the candles.
>
> See Hoyt's famous rural comedy, "A Midnight Bell." Special for Christmas.

Seasonable stuff always takes hold. Try the scheme next year. If you get your patrons looking for these little flashes they'll read what you want them to read while looking for what they want to read, and with a little practise and a pair of shears you can keep your stock up-to-date.

His First.

Sol. M. Sugarman, manager of the Princess Theater, Meridian, Miss., sends in his first program and asks for suggestions. We think that the page is too long for its width. It would be better to cut three or four inches from the length, though this length seems to be due to a desire to run the program down the middle of the first page without breaking. There are two ways in which this might be done, first by removing the cut, which is also used on the letter heads, showing the Princess showing the world in motion. This would gain just about the space. The other, and better way, would be to reduce the number of films on each program. Seven reels is too much, a great deal too much for a show. A paper should be well proportioned and this is almost twice as long as it is wide. It is 11 by 17 inches, too much of a drop.

In the front page heading the spelling out of the date and year and number of issue is affected. The volume should appear in Roman and the serial number in Arabic. The date should also be given in figures and not printed in full if the suggestion of a daily paper is to be preserved. On the other hand the newspaper suggestion is carried out by "heading up," or giving two or more divisions of a head to the stories instead of carrying everything with a one line head. The importance of the appearance of the head should be determined by the length and value of the item. Here good newspaper sense has been shown, and some boxes, or announcements framed in brass rule, still further help along.

Only the leading stories are written up, the rest of the space going to advertising and gossip of the players. In this Mr. Sugarman has made a wise move. If he cannot show that his publication is carried home and read, he cannot hold his advertisers, but with the arrangement as he has it now, he pays the patrons for reading his announcements by giving them enough general matter to even the account. He is generous with his cuts, as well, and by and large, he is to be complimented for a paper that looks like a paper and not like the experimental work of some printer's devil. One point where he has failed, however, is in the program heading. This is too involved, reading:

> Cut this out for reference—it is next Week's Program—Week beginning Monday, January 12, to and including Saturday, January 17.

Since each day's program is dated—as it should be—the repetition of dates is not necessary. This would be better:

> PROGRAM FOR NEXT WEEK
> Hold this. You will need it for reference.

The top line could then go in an eighteen or twenty-four point bold, the second line in a light ten point or in the twelve point face he now uses for all.

We hope that Mr. Sugarman will put us on the exchange list. We would like to watch him grow.

Making the Best of It.

The other day the Academy of Music, Selma, Alabama, did not like a two-reel sent it. The management did not get the change in time to announce it, but this is the way they made the best of it:

> A TWO-REEL PICTURE
>
> Which was not the type we care to exhibit was booked to complete the programme for this day. This, however, is being changed, and we have not been advised of the substituted picture yet. Incidentally, it is an example of the way programme here are watched that any slightly objectionable picture may be excluded.

People who read that will feel that the Academy always does the best possible thing and should anything ever actually get past, this also establishes an excellent alibi.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Writing Comedy.

The other day a friend sent us a comedy to read and we turned it back with a polite suggestion that death and a dissecting room were not the usual ingredients of a comedy and that the idea of a man being talked to death was plainly idiotic. Back he came with the remark that the man was not actually talked to death, but died of sunstroke sustained while listening to the twenty-foot conversation. Came, too, his admission that perhaps it was a little harder to write comedy. This is what he received in reply. Perhaps it will interest you:

> When you have to send me a letter to explain that not this but that was so, you're too late. It should show not only in the script but in the action. I thought I would call the turn when I said you were grinding it out. You didn't have any humor in your skin, but you decided to write a comedy and you wrote it and it was rotten because you had no comedy idea and no heart for comedy. It was a task and not a joy and there is some difference between breaking stone and writing a play. If I had the time I would be sick in bed this blessed minute, but I haven't the time and I did need to write a comedy this morning, so I made a joy of writing a comedy and wrote it.
>
> I don't believe in waiting for an inspiration. I believe in going out and getting an inspiration by the throat and making it come along, but in those infrequent times when inspiration is stronger than I am and I get licked, I don't write a story; I won't write until I feel that I have something to write and feel that I can take a pleasure in making a good job of what I write.
>
> It is not altogether and wholly easy to have a throat that makes you fear that you've swallowed a file instead of your breakfast and then knock out a comedy, but if you can't forget the throat in favor of the comedy, don't write comedy. Wait until you can. BUT don't wait too long.
>
> You get an idea that you think ought to be funny. It doesn't sound quite funny, but it must be, because you started out to write a comedy. Look at it at arm's length like a farsighted man trying to read fine print. IS it a comedy or a fluke? If it's a fluke do one of two things. Either make it a real comedy or quit for the day—and don't be in too much of a hurry to quit. You are not committed to the one idea. Switch it.
>
> Write down the figure one. Now what next? You've your choice of nine figures and a cipher. You can make it anything ten to nieteen, ten variations. Now with another figure added you can get a lot more combinations and by changing the original one to a two or three or nine you can get 999 combinations. With four points you can get 9999 and so on—and you have from thirty to fifty scenes.
>
> Instead of this you say to yourself, "I'll write a comedy. I'll write a comedy about this." Now "this" isn't funny and you know blamed well it is not, but you go ahead and write it because "this" was what you started out with. Loosen up. If "this" is not a comedy, try "that" or "those," but write something that is funny. You knew at the time that what you were writing was not a comedy, but you blundered along and insisted on finishing and then you shut your eyes and declared it to be good.
>
> When you get an idea see if it really is comedy or just a hollow sham. If it is a comedy idea, see if it can be told in comedy action, and then tell it that way. Don't have a lot of dead scenes. Make each one live. You can do it. I wanted to show a photograph the other day. Nothing funny in looking at a photograph. The chap starts to light a cigarette. He strikes a match. There is the photograph right alongside the match safe. He picks it up and looks at it. Insert the photo. Back to scene. The match burns down and burns his fingers. Now I have the laugh. On to the next scene. Let them think and laugh and then look and laugh some more. That is the art of writing comedy. Don't merely take an idea that ought to be funny and then think that it is because it should be. That will never bring you a bunch of money.

The rule for comedy is to give them something to laugh at when they look and something to laugh at when think, or, in other words, to tell a funny thought in humorous action. Don't merely say that Dan does this or that "in a comical manner." Write in the actual business and if you cannot think of any actual business, set it aside until you can think of some.

And don't "grind out" stories or you'll turn out sausage. Wait until you are reasonably certain that you have an idea. An author without an idea is like a ship in a fog without bearings. It may get somewhere or it may go to the bottom. It's all chance.

He Who Buys.

The man who buys is the man who decides. Here's a clip from a letter:

> I received my inspiration into the field through observing pictures in various cities where I have been. In many cases I observed that full reels of pictures were thrown on the screen absolutely devoid of plot and many of them not worth the time a man spent in looking at them. I declared that if such pictures could be produced I had every reason to believe I could at least produce one just as good without effort. I could better this by spending a little time. Consequently I worked out, in my own opinion, and in the opinion of newspaper friends of mine, what appeared to be perfectly good working plots filled with interest. I met with the above-named results: Rejection.

Here is a man who does not sell. He has consulted his friends and his friends—mostly newspaper men—say that his plots are good and should sell, so he comes to this conclusion:

> Of course I don't suppose the editors should be criticised, as they are the higher ups, but I do believe there are some of them producing what they want instead of what the people want. In this connection I am reminded of a newspaper I formerly worked on before coming to this one. The former editor was giving the people a paper following out his own tastes for news instead of that of the people, with the result that he had a circulation of about 50,000. Another man assumed control of the paper and gave the people what they wanted and not what he wanted. That paper today has the largest circulation in New England and has passed the 425,000 mark.

Now it is very probably true that some editors do not represent the desires of a majority of the photoplay audiences. We know one man who knows that the stuff he selects is not what the people in general want, but it is what the man who employs him pays him to pick out and so he performs the service for which he is paid and persons who expect to sell to him must provide him with precisely this material.

We were fired off a New York paper once, not because we were not making good, but because the new managing editor did not care for the phase of amusements we wrote about and frankly told us so. He was willing to admit that we had brought about 20,000 circulation to the sheet, but that did not interest him. He didn't like the stuff we wrote because he didn't like the stuff we wrote about. We didn't argue the matter. We went out and got another job. It's the same way all down the line. If you can't suit the man who buys, don't blame his poor judgment, blame your own stiff neck.

Your friends may think your stuff is great, but their opinion is not of the slightest importance until they are in a position to buy from you the stuff they like so much. You may regard the editorial judgment as incompetent, but the editor is the man who buys and it is for you to please him. He does not have to please you—he's the buyer. The man who pays is entitled to pay only for what pleases him, so try and please him if you want to sell.

Still Learning.

Most writers have heard of E. W. Matlack, who does the big railroad stories for Kalem, and probably most think that he knows it all by now, but Mr. Matlack still finds it necessary to study, which is why he is still advancing. In a recent letter he says:

> If the coming year is as good as the past, am sure there will be no kick coming on my part. For a beginner, and surely no one tackled the game who knew less about it, I cannot help feeling gratified that slowly but surely I am learning a little every day.

The man who thinks he knows it all not only stops getting ahead, but slowly retrogresses. The man who studies and keeps posted keeps on advancing, and there is not a day but that the earnest worker does not make some discovery of value, some new method of treatment, some new line of thought or some new combination of old theories.

Saving Them Up.

Here's a few remarks from Robert Donaldson, who is all right except that he is a pupil of a school of journalist. Journalism is not taught in schools any more than is photoplay. Andhow, he's on vacation and writes:

> Have put out six scenarios this week. Whoa——— Don't shoot just yet mister. I hate to think what will happen to me after what you did to Bill Wright for the same thing, or was it Bill? Well, just remember that for about two months I have had a bunch of ideas in my head, just yelling to be let out, and I didn't have the time. However, I didn't let a one go, and hence the six so far, and hope in the few remaining days I am here, to put out more. I have high hopes on some of these last I sent out. But then, you'll hear more later.

All of which means that if you get ideas and lack the time to write them, stick a pin in them so you'll have them handy when you want them. You cannot write six a week, fifty weeks a year and sell any, but if you can write two a week and have written none for several weeks, when you do get the chance you can catch up. On the other hand, if you write more than your stint under pressure, hold back until you get a rest or you'll have to take a longer rest than you otherwise would.

Interiors.

Edwin Ray Coffin writes glowingly of Phil Lang, the Kalem editor because of his helpful suggestions, and one comment suggests an error shared by others. He says:

> That man, Lang, is a dandy. I'm for him. He's recently taken the trouble to write me and point out one or two faults (due mostly to my carelessness) and it's been a great help, which I truly appreciate. Among them was one calling attention to my lavishness in the number of my studio sets—I'll admit that I was so grossly ignorant as to imagine the studios kept a number of stock sets, such as kitchen, dining-room, etc., which they could use several times—you see just a point of thoughtlessness on my part. Now, I'm so stingy with my settings that I wrote a 22-scene play to-day with only 4 interior scenes. I realize that that isn't so advisable when writing for other than California companies in winter, though. Verily, there is much to learn in this business, what?

All studios are supplied with stock sets, though these are being repainted all the time that they may not grow too familiar. The question of sets is not a question of having the scenery on hand, but of having to assemble the sets into a scene. On the stage this takes but a few minutes, because it is all done in conformity with a predetermined plan. In the studio each set is dressed differently and the usual quick "lacing" of the scenes, considered sufficient on the stage, is supplemented by clamping the pieces together and fastening the doors so securely that they cannot be shaken. And after all this is done the scene must be dressed, sometimes more than once, and the lights must be adjusted to get the proper even illumination. A small set may be made in an hour, but it is more apt to take three or four hours, and if all this trouble is gone to for a small scene it suggests a waste of time and money.

It is not so much a question of interior scenes as interior sets, and sometimes it will be found that a scene may be changed over to some set already designated, a scene in a dining-room, for example, being moved into a library or vice versa. Four to six sets should be the limit for a reel and about eight for a two-reel, save under exceptional circumstances. Sometimes the scenes may be thrown outdoors. The business interview that takes place in a library, the library not being used again in the play, might as well be played in the street, one player coming from the house and meeting on the steps the man who seeks him, they greet and chat a moment, moving out of the scene. A second street scene shows them entering and parting, suggesting that the business has been transacted in the interim, or a break scene might be used with profit. It will surprise Mr. Coffin and others to find that a little planning will materially reduce the number of sets required, and one of the factors of acceptance is always ease of production, no matter what the editor may say.

As Mr. Coffin suggests, some Northern companies want mostly inside stuff during the winter, but they want a majority of inside scenes, not a multiplicity of inside sets even here.

Typing.

Three letters in ten days have explained that their writers have not gotten ahead very rapidly as they are unable to pay to have all their stories copied.

In one way this is a good thing, since it reduces the studio mail, but in another it is bad, for the writer seldom or never is able to get a story right from the longhand script. Put in type it looks very different, yet he cannot have it copied again without an additional payment and he hesitates at the expense.

It is a simple matter to learn to operate a typewriter. It is almost as simple to learn to compose directly on the machine. A typewriter may be had on rental for $5 for three months if one goes to a rental agency instead of the agency of the machine, and sometimes even at headquarters. This money may apply on the purchase price of a machine if one is bought. In three months' time one is pretty apt to know whether the machine is a good one or not.

It is well in practising to learn to use more than one finger of each hand, though many rapid writers use only one, having contracted the habit through faulty methods of learning. It is well to learn the touch system. Books on this system may be had very cheaply, but the principle is so simple that it does not need a book. Take a large sheet of paper and a penny. With a pencil make as many circles on the sheet as there are keys on the machine. Make these circles in the same relative positions as the keys and mark each circle with the character that the corresponding key carries. Now, in learning look at this chart to place a letter and not at the key itself. In a short time the chart may be dispensed with and the keys struck precisely as the piano is played, by the sense of position and not by sight. Most writers, and particularly nervous ones, are apt to be confused by the keys and on our own machines we get them with blank keys. With a second-hand machine it is possible to get covers for the keys that just fit them and leave the keyboard blank.

Go at it with the idea that you can learn and you will be surprised to find how quickly you pick it up and how astonishingly easy it is to write if you do not have to search for the keys.

Previous Experience.

Roy McCardell declares that it is scarcely possible to win success in photoplay without previous experience as a writer. He offers figures to support his theory, but he does not realize that he states an effect and not a cause.

The writers who succeeded do not find this succcess because they are writers, but because they have been trained by their magazine or newspaper or dramatic experience to frame up their plots correctly, or in other words because they have had a properly lengthy period of practice and experience. It is not because they are writers that they have found success, but because their writing has given them their necessary practice. It does not matter in the least how this practice is obtained so long as it is had.

Change the statement, then, to say that no success may be gained in photoplay or other creative work without proper preparation and practice. Some writers require less experience than others, but all must have their training before they can turn out a reasonably good job and many writers are handicapped in that they must forget many of their writing tricks before they can turn out a reasonably good photoplay.

Advice.

Lots of the advice you get is worse than useless. It not only tells you wrong, but it prevents you from finding out what is right. Much of the advice given is applicable perhaps only to the company with which the advisor is connected, but it is stated as a broad, general fact. Make certain the advice is good before you follow it.

Lay Off on Westerns.

Lay off on Western stories, you people. There is a man who is going to glut the market. He hails from Tacoma and this is what he writes Mrs. Brandon:

> This Northwest shall be gone over by me, to bring in the type of scenario that have the punch in them; after going over them I shall want a producing firm to take same. This advertising will bring them into my hands. It shall be carried on extensively, and locally I have the visible prospects. Kindly make known the shape you receive them in the type of plot you would rather feature. Hoping that this will bear a favorable response.

What's the use of you trying to write of the Northwest when this man right on the ground is going to corner the market? We don't like the sound of "this advertising." There is a man in Philadelphia doing this and stealing what is worth while.

A Real School.

A recent correspondent, sending in a batch of literature of a school that starts at ten dollars, writes several letters that this is the one and only price and then suddenly shoots down to one dollar cash, adds: "I do not fall for the schools. My correspondence course consists in reading over the back numbers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD."

Bound volumes of the back numbers cost $1.50 for each three months. Six dollars worth of back numbers are worth more than all the school courses together, for most of these courses are no more than variants of the first course, which was written three or four years ago.

Nothing Trivial.

"Please do not think these questions too trivial," is the way a writer concluded a letter the other day. No question is too trivial if it is backed by an earnest desire to succeed through attention to the small things, as well as the great. In the last couple of years we've probably told three hundred people whether the paper they were using was too heavy or too light, and we are just as ready to tell the three hundred and first, though over and over again we have printed the simple test that, if the second page shows through the first it is too light. The proper weight of paper has no real bearing on the selling of the script, but none the less it does have a bearing, and the careful writer is careful in his selection of his paper and other materials. Please feel free to ask any intelligent question. That's what we are here for.

Can Echo Answer?

Here's an extract from a letter from Lawrence McCloskey, in which he explains he has done a five, a six, several doubles and "another two-reeler staring me in the face right now—and a lot of letters from boobs and boobesses asking me if I will consider their mss. if they submit it. Why don't they submit them and find out?"

And when you come to think that the boobs and boobesses paid someone two dollars or more to tell them that this was the proper way to approach an editor, it does seem as though something might be done.

But, on the other hand, send your stuff to Lubin and not to Romaine Fielding or Wilbert Melville, both of whom have staff writers and no arrangements for handling unsolicited manuscripts.

Only a Quarter.

One of the Chicago schools has a new stunt. Across the face of the regular contract form is written in colored pencil "25 per cent. off" and the prospective victim is entitled to the whole works for $22.50. If he doesn't take up with this glittering offer and has the patience to wait, he gets the usual 50 per cent. in the shape of a pseudo bond, which is a very much prettier piece of printing and less of a sting by seven dollars and a half. You do not even have to send any stated sum. You "simply pin $2, $3, $5—whatever suits your purse—" to the contract and then, if you want to wait long enough they'll give you a dollar book to pay another five.

Comedy.

"Because several scenes are amusing I am calling it a comedy," is the way a young man identifies his work. We hate to think what the editors will call it. If he starts out to write with so poor an idea as this we think we will presently receive a letter saying that there is no market, though he writes "much better pictures" than he sees on the screen.

Today ninety per cent. of the scenes in a comedy must be funny, and funny to the eye as well as the brain.

We Wonder, too.

At the Ed-Au the other evening Henry Albert Phillips wanted to know why we did not sell as many of his books as we used to, and we share his wonder. "The Plot of the Short Story" is a mighty useful book with which to supplement Technique.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Operators' Union Directory, I. A. T. S. E.

EACH union is entitled to have its roster of officers, meeting nights, etc., listed once per year, free of cost. Preserve this list, as it will not be republished. The mail address of the secretary should be included, and the address of regular meeting place, if any.

Local No. 305, Galveston, Texas.

J. C. Worsham, president; M. H. Snow, vice-president; H. T. Eaves, secretary, 1707 Avenue D; J. L. Downing, business agent; J. R. Tiermann, sergeant-at-arms. Meetings first and third Thursdays, above Leader Theater.

Local No. 250, Salt Lake City, Utah.

R. M. Wardrop, president; Frank Hicks, vice-president; C. A. Porter, financial secretary, P. O. Box 678; Robert Worthen, recording secretary; W. A. Ford, business agent; J. M. Stacey, sergeant-at-arms.

Important Notice.

It is impossible to reply to letters through the department in less than two weeks and sometimes three. In order to give prompt service those sending four cents in stamps to cover cost will receive a carbon copy of the department reply by mail.

The first seventy-five questions are now ready and printed in pamphlet form. They may be obtained by sending 25 cents to the editor, preferably in coin or stamps.

Question No. 20.

Best answer will be published and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Explicit permission to use the name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used.

Why have some generators more than two brushes, or sets of brushes? Why have some generators very wide commutators, and two or more brushes side by side in each holder? What amount of tension would a brush have? What troubles may be traced directly to the brushes? Give remedy for each. Which are best, wire or carbon brushes, and why? Suppose your brush tension springs lose their temper, what would that indicate, and what would be the remedy? Suppose you had several small fan motors, using ⅜ or ¼-inch round carbon brushes and you, through carelessness or otherwise, ran out of brushes right in the middle of hot weather; it would take days to get a supply. What would you do?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 14.

W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey; Chicago, Ill. (3); Fort Worth, Texas; L. C. LaGrow, Albany, New York; San Francisco, California; Oakland, California; L. S. Usher, Winnipeg, Canada; C. Banner, Brooklyn, New York; Baltimore, Maryland; Chas. E. Bender, St. Louis, Missouri; F. Alley, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Minneapolis, Minn. (2); St. Paul, Minnesota; Seattle, Washington; W. L. Johnston, Toronto, Canada, and Clarence L. Dowsley, Winnipeg, Canada.

Note—Almost every week a large number of answers comes in too late for consideration. Get a hustle on, gentlemen.

Reply to Question No. 14.

By Ernest V. Wills, Brookings, South Dakota.

The Question:

Suppose you have a motor generator set and in this set there develops a pounding. What would you look for, and what remedy would you apply?

The Answer:

Pounding in a motor-generator set may be caused by any one of the following faults, or by a combination of two or more of them:

(a) Partial short circuit in a field coil, causing it to produce less than its required quota of magnetism. This will cause a very decided knocking or pounding in a bi-polar machine. It may be tested for by applying a voltmeter to the terminals of the coils while the machine is in operation. The coils giving the high reading are all right, but the one or ones giving the low readings, having less resistance on account of the short, will show less drop. (Either you are a little twisted there or I understand you wrongly, Ed.) Remedy: Locate and remove the short or have the coil rewound.

(b) Bent armature shaft. This will throw the armature out of center and cause a stronger pull to be exerted on the armature by the pole it is thrown nearest to—a sort of fluctuating, uneven pull, since the armature is alternately nearer one pole and then the next. This causes a pound. Remedy is to get a new shaft, since it is extremely difficult to straighten a bent one.

(c) Armature out of center. This will produce somewhat the same effect as case (b). The obvious remedy is to center the armature properly so that it will have exactly the same clearance with each pole piece. This is best determined by means of a small metal wedge, but it must be used very carefully to avoid any possibility of injury to insulation. In some cases it may be necessary to chip off a little from one of the poles. Just what must be done in any one case will depend on the cause of the armature being out of center.

(d) Armature striking one or more poles. May be due to faulty construction (pole pieces uneven). In this case chipping off one or more of the poles will be the proper thing. Bearings may be worn (see worn bearings). Armature may be out of round or some part loose. Seek out the cause and remedy it, whatever it may be.

(e) Shafts out of line. This may be due to several things, such as one bearing wearing faster than another, the motor and generator out of line with each other (only possible with some types). Remedy: Line them up. Proceed as follows: First determine the cause of the trouble by careful examination and tests. Then line the shafts so that there is precisely the same amount of clearance between the motor armature and all its pole pieces and the generator armature and its pole pieces. Then stretch a fine wire or cord parallel with the shaft, attaching same to some heavy, movable object at either end. Now move the objects holding the cord until it measures precisely the same distance from the shafting at the outer end of the generator to the cord. Now if a measurement from the shafts between the motor and generator to the cord is the same as the other two, then the shaft is precisely in line that way. You must now stretch the cord directly over the shaft (above the machines) and repeat the operation. Be careful that the shafts are the same diameter throughout, or else make due allowance.

(2) Worn bearings. This will cause pounding, particularly if there be the least chance for vibration in the machine. Remedy is new bearings and fasten the machine down solidly.

(3) End play of armature shafts. End play is necessary—that is to say, a certain amount is. But if the machine be not placed level excessive end play may develop, and this will ofttimes cause pounding, due to the fact that, when working, an armature centers itself in the magnetic field—is pulled into the magnetic center of the field by the magnetism. The moral is: Keep motor-generator sets perfectly level. You must also see to it that the coupling between the two shafts does not pull one of the armatures out of place, thus causing a continual fuss between the two magnetic fields to see which is the stronger and able to pull the armature its way. A variation of one field strength might enable the other to pull the entire rotor over. Watch the coupling closely.

(4) Vibration due to set not being properly fastened down. Remedy obvious.

(5) Worn or improperly adjusted couplings. The flexible coupling between the two shafts causes much pounding, especially when machines are not perfectly lined with each other. Wear develops which soon gets noisy.

General test for locating pounds: Place a small, round stick of wood between the teeth, with the other end in contact with various parts of the machine until the pound is located. Of course the machine must be running at the time and be pounding, too.

Another Slide Ink.

C. H. A. Petersen, Superior, Wisconsin, says:

I have tried all kinds of ink for writing on glass, but the only kind which has proven satisfactory is Angel's indelible black ink, which can be used with any kind of pen. Also, if you take blacking, such as shoe shiners use on the edge of the soles, it will work very nicely for free hand drawing, or tracing out picures. I will come again with something better if I am not thrown out.

No one is ever thrown out of the projection department, my dear sir, so long as he has something interesting to say and we can find space, therefore, come again. However, correspondents must remember that space is at a tremendous premium, and we cannot always use their articles, even when they are really deserving.

Machine Trouble.

A. E. Keene, Soo, Ste. Marie, Ontario, Canada, writes:

Am using an Edison type B machine and have considerable trouble lately with the film cupping in the center, thus throwing the middle of the picture out of focus. Do you know of any tension springs that would give better satisfaction than the ordinary Edison springs?

Not for use on an Edison machine. I would suggest that you make sure that (a) your aperture plate tracks are not worn; (b) that the springs set squarely on the tracks; (c) that the springs both of them set straight up and down.

Wrong.

W. F. Van Allen, Horseheads, New York, proceeds to hand the editor one as follows:

> Ye Gods! Why so much space taken up with condenser breakage? If they are going to break they will just break and that is all there is to it. I have not broken a lens in over a year, and it is not due to my smartness either, nor do I take any pains whatever to cool them off before opening the lamp house, and there is a 12-inch fan humming right over the top of the lamp house. I keep my Edison B machine in A1 condition, replacing parts as soon as they show the least bit bad. However, I have a little bit of up and down movement which only commenced lately. I found the intermittent slipping on the shaft, and upon taking it out discovered one of the pins cut off. I stopped the jump, but this up and down movement, a sort of sway, gets my William goat. Writing on raw glass? Yes, I have used India ink (25 cents per bottle) and a common stub pen for over a year. Positively not a thing placed on the glass before using the ink.

I didn't say you could not write on raw glass, though I have never been able to do even that, and do it well with an ordinary pen. The writing question came up through a slide being sent in on which was made an elaborate drawing with a great many very fine shading lines, and I said that could not be done on raw glass without preparation. However, a part of the "preparation," it now appears, was in the shape of a special pen. As to the film jump, if it is a side sway and occurs once to each turn of the crank, that means the whole machine is moving, but if it is a side sway and occurs four times to each turn of the crank it intimates end motion in your intermittent sprocket. Be sure that your bushings are set in so that the sprocket can have no end play whatever. If you mean that the sway is up and down—a sort of slow jump, occurring four times to each turn of the crank, then either your intermittent sprocket shaft is sprung, or the sprocket itself is not true. As to condensers you are absolutely wrong. Much may be done to eliminate condenser breakage, and I feel that this department has, in the aggregate, saved managers many thousands of dollars through the information dug up concerning this one subject. I do not believe, however, that the various schemes for tempering condensers have much, if any, value.

A Real Oil At Last.

Some time ago E. R. Latchaw & Co., of Marietta, Ohio, submitted to this department a sample of oil which they had prepared and designed for use on projection machines. Following our usual custom of not giving the endorsement of this department to any untried article, we had this company send out a number of pint samples of the lubricant to carefully-selected operators in widely scattered sections of the country. To date all but one of these men have reported, and every one of them have decided favorably, while some have even been quite enthusiastic. W. G. Woods, of San Francisco, California, was one of those selected to test the oil. His report is as follows:

> I have given this oil a careful test in two of our houses, as well as in one other well-known theater. I find that it seems to be a pure product, without any addition of kerosene or acids. It has sufficient body not to fly or crawl on the machine, or show any inclination to gum up. I can recommend it highly, especially to those who have used the advertised products of the past, which, in my estimation, are totally unsuited for projection machine lubrication.

In view of the favorable reports on this oil, the tests having been made by thoroughly competent, reliable operators, I am now prepared to give the Latchaw Oil the unqualified endorsement of this department, and recommend it to all operators and exhibitors. Some time ago this department took occasion to call the attention of managers, machine manufacturers and operators to the enormous damage being done to projection machinery through the use of the much advertised patent oils. We stated that three times as much damage could be done in one month through the use of inferior lubricants, or a lubricant composed largely of kerosene, as would be caused were the proper oil used. I am of the opinion that the use of poor oils has, in the past, cost exhibitors in the aggregate many thousands of dollars annually, and besides this the rapid wear of the machine also operates to damage projection, therefore, a really good projection machine lubricant is doubly welcome, and this, I believe, we have found.

Speed of Intermittent.

W. E. Chappell, Greensboro, North Carolina, has been experimenting with intermittent movements with a view of obtaining high speed and less strain on the film as it passes the aperture plate. He wants to know what the speed of a Power's Six-A geneva is; also that of the star and cam movement. He asks if there would be any advantage in using intermittent sprockets with thirty-two teeth, instead of sixteen as at present. He states that he is making an intermittent movement which will change the picture before the aperture plate in about one-ninth of the entire revolution of the cam.

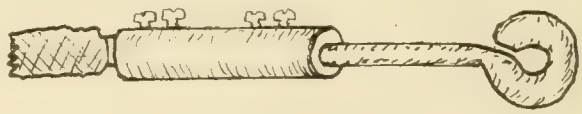
The speed of the Power's Six-A movement is six to one. I don't remember exactly what the star and cam movement is, but it is not very much slower than six to one, though the movement is a different one in that the speed of changing is differently distributed. Brother Chappell is bucking up against certain things which I fear he will be unable to overcome, viz: There must be a certain amount of tension exerted by the tension springs in order to overcome momentum and stop the film. The film itself has a certain amount of weight, though that is very slight, but the two combined mean that a certain given and considerable force must be exerted by the sprocket teeth in order to overcome the inertia of the film and the friction of the tension springs. Experiments have thoroughly demonstrated to machine manufacturers that one in six is all the sprocket holes will stand up under, therefore, it is pretty certain that Brother Chappell is wasting energy in trying to increase the speed.

Personally I believe, however, there is one thing which can be done which will enable the movement to be considerably accelerated, in that it will substitute the stiffness of the film itself for a portion of the present necessary friction created by the tension springs, and that is the absolute confinement of the film from the time it enters the top of the gate until it reaches the intermittent sprocket, so that it cannot possibly buckle in any degree at any point. It seems to me this could be done and, given this condition, I believe the movement might be somewhat accelerated, though just how much I could not say. The large intermittent sprocket with the six point, eight point and ten point star has been tried and discarded, the present sixteen tooth intermittent having proven best, all things considered. The large sprocket could not, of course, be used with a four-point star.

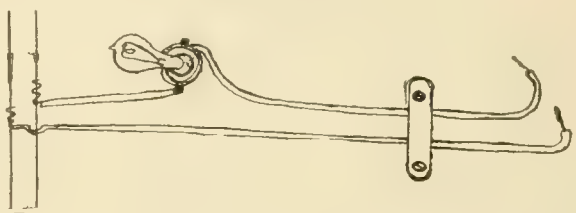
Several Things.

R. D. Marshall, Wilmington, N. C., writes:

> Here I am again on the front seat with a letter to our department. What do you think would be the result of two shutters running in opposite directions so as to cut the light directly in the center? I am using 60 amperes of a.c. with ⅝ Bio carbons. Don't you think it would be a good idea to get the next lot ⅞?



> Am sending you sketch of a lug or terminal; also of a test lamp which I find very handy for the operating room.



> The lug consists of a piece of copper wire, size OO, and an ordinary wire connector. By using this it is very easy to trim your wires often where high amperage is used. The test lamp can be used for testing fuses, grounds, globes, etc.

The double shutter running in opposite directions has been used for a long time. It was first used on the Kinedrome machine and later on the Motiograph. It works all right, but has not been generally adopted. It has no particular effect on flicker, but theoretically it closes and opens the aperture a little quicker. The best way to determine the carbon size is by experiment, but I think you will find ⅝ large enough for 60 amperes a.c. The lug you submitted is all right, and the test lamp arrangement would be very convenient.

Right Spirit.

Joliet, Illinois, orders a Handbook, and writes:

> I have been in the picture game for a long time, but am not satisfied with the way things are going and want to improve myself. I have a Power's Six-A machine in fine condition, but continue to have trouble with my light at times, and cannot find out just where the difficulty lies. I have tried everything I know, including all kinds of experiments, but in spite of me the light gets foggy once in a while and occasionally loses its brightness entirely. We are using 110-volt, 60-cycle current, ¾ Electra carbons, and something like 60 amperes at the arc. Our current comes through a Sterling economizer. The screen is muslin and the picture 14 feet at 96 feet, thrown on an incline from the back of the balcony. Condensing lenses are 6½ and 7½, with the former next to the light; objective is a 4½ e.f. Bausch & Lomb.

It is very difficult to answer your question, since you have simply told me that the "light gets dim." You have not informed me how often this occurs or whether the effect is noticeable at regular or irregular intervals. The dimming of the light may be caused by an intermittent overload on your house feeders, such as, for instance, some large assembly hall using a great many lights, or a large motor, which is used only occasionally, but which takes current from the same street lines feeding your theater. I would suggest that you either purchase or borrow a voltmeter and attach it across your lines. If, when this effect occurs, there is a heavy drop in voltage, then that is evidence that there is an overload somewhere on the lines. On the other hand, such a trouble might be caused by a loose connection. It is hardly possible, I think, that that kind of an effect could could be produced by trouble in the economizer. In asking questions concerning troubles of this sort operators must be very careful to describe the effect closely.

An Invitation.

The editor is in receipt of the following:

> Local Union No. 181, Baltimore, Md., will hold its fourth annual ball January 26th, and will consider it an honor if you would agree to be its guest on that night. Our organization will make your visit pleasant and we are positive you will never regret the time expended.

Sorry, gentlemen, but the New York operators' ball took place on the night of the 24th. "I'm not as young as I used to be," and two all-night sessions that close together would have been a little too strenuous. I hope your ball was one great big success, both socially and financially. Possibly next year I may be able to come, but must beg off this time.

Well, Well, Well!

Oakland, California, lands on Brother James, Camden, N. J., as follows:

> Relative to the question as to whether condensers should focus at the center of the objective lens, raised by Mr. James, January 3rd issue, I would like to submit the following:
>
> Condensers should, but do not always, focus on the film. (Good night! Ed.) This gives the maximum of illumination. The image of the lower carbon point should be seen on the upper part of the cooling plate. The rays at that point (the film) begin to spread. The objective lens takes up the brilliantly illuminated image at the same place (the film) and projects it to the screen. Theoretically, the rays from the condenser pass out onward through the film to > the screen, but, as a matter of fact, they don't, but are broken up and diffused by the film itself. If the condenser rays carried the image, which they do not and cannot, the said image would be many times larger than the screen. To state matters in a different way the function of the condenser, as its name implies, is to condense the light and thus raise its power much as the secondary coil of an economizer boosts the amperage received from the primary, while the function of the objective lens is to receive and re-focus the illuminated image upon the screen. Concretely an optical principle is involved which decrees that a lens in order to project an image must be between that image and the screen, human eye, or whatever is to discern and receive the same.

Good night! Oakland certainly has the courage of his convictions, but I don't think much of his "convictions," though I am terribly afraid he will be convicted of error before he gets through. I have published the views of Oakland because none of us are any too strong on the optical end of things, and while I make bold to say that Oakland's views are entirely wrong, not to say impossible, still discussion on topics of this kind will tend to increase our knowledge, and I think there is no doubt but his views will be ripped up the back in one great, big hurry. One thing I will say, however, that my own view, at one time, was that the light rays were broken up and diffused by the film, and that is one thing I have not yet been able to understand, because by all the rules of optics they ought to be and yet apparently they are not. Oakland must remember that the rays after passing the film are not taken up by the objective at that point, but have to traverse anywhere from 2½ to 6 inches, according to the focal length of the objective, before they can enter the objective, and if, in fact, they were broken up and diffused by the film but an insignificant portion of the total illumination would ever reach the objective, particularly if it be of long focal length. I have not space to discuss this matter fully and will, therefore, leave it to others, and that is not any bluff either. The department mail is piling in at a rate that is giving the editor heart failure, and it is constantly on the increase, so that sometimes I hardly know what to do, and I really don't know what I am going to do if the mail continues to get larger.

Solid Carbons.

New Haven, Connecticut, writes:

> This is my first offense and am sorry I have nothing to offer of benefit to our craft. In reading January 10th issue of "our best friend," I note that Calgary is having trouble with his light, and I am now going to upset one of your pet theories, come what will, viz.: using hard carbons. I have found by actual experience it is utterly impossible to use hard carbons and get results, and believe me we have got to show results here. My throw is only 41 feet with a 17-foot picture. I have tried every combination of carbons I could get hold of. The only hard carbon of any use was the pencil carbon used in Kinemacolor, which gave really good results, but there was a lot of trouble with constant resetting. At present I am using a ¾ cored on top and ⅝ on the bottom. The current is 60 amperes of 220 volts through a Fort Wayne compensarc. Enclosed find 25 cents for the questions, which, in my estimation is the best thing that has ever happened for the craft in general. We boast of an electrical engineer in our local.

New Haven, when the weather gets good next spring I am going to ride up there on my two-wheel go-devil and slap you on the wrist. I never in this world said you could use hard carbons on a.c. Cored carbons for a.c., and cored above and solid below for d.c. And, by-the-way, you cannot use hard carbons at all. There is quite a difference, mark you, between "hard" carbons and "solid" (not cored) carbons. Hard carbons cannot be used for projection; they produce a yellowish light and the arc is not steady. I don't know just how a ¾ and ⅝ combination would work, but it strikes me it might be better than two ¾ carbons. My regards to the boys of the new local and, as I said, some day next spring I am coming up to visit you.

The Formostat.

Cleveland, Ohio, orders a list of the questions and asks information as to the electrical action of the formostat, page 166 of the Handbook.

The formostat, Cleveland, is not used in the east, therefore, you are not likely to come in contact with it, and it would hardly be profitable to consume valuable space in a further description of that particular device, unless the query came from an operator out west where they are used. Briefly, however, the two coils are wound on cores and as these cores are brought closer together the magnetic field is strengthened, and, of course, the amperage increased.

Tension Equalizer.

Earl Wooden, New York City, submits plan of his improved tension equalizer which is designed to, and he claims will, equalize the tension on a film in the take-up magazine throughout the run. Mr. Wooden describes his patent as follows:

> Pulley 2 drives the take-up belt. It is mounted on the shaft loosely and only revolves when teeth 4 are engaged with each other, as shown in the drawing. Shaft 16 carries the lower feed sprocket and is driven by gear 1, which is attached to the shaft by means of a pin. Pulley 14, which drives the take-up shaft and reel, is attached to spring 19 in such manner that when pulley 14 revolves it winds up spring 19, the center of which is attached to the take-up shaft 15 in the drawing. The operation is as follows: Pulley 14 is loose on shaft 15, this shaft being attached to spring 19, as shown, and when pulley 14 winds up spring 19, shaft 15 must revolve, carrying with it the take-up reel and thus rewinding the film. This continues until spring 19 is wound so tightly that there is some pull on the film. When spring 19 becomes wound tightly enough to exert any considerable pull on the film the mechanism of > the lower sprocket comes into play as follows: Lower sprocket 17 is not attached solidly to shaft 16, but is free to revolve one-fourth of a revolution, or the length of slot 8, this motion being controlled by pin 9. Now, when the pull begins on the film it, of course, pulls on the sprocket teeth and pulls the sprocket over one-fourth of a revolution, which causes bevel cam 6 to slip on bevel cam 7, and in this position spring 5 pushes bushing 24 to the right, thus unlocking the teeth, whereupon pulley 2 stops revolving and, of course, this stops pulley 14 and the winding of Spring 19. Now, at this stage of affairs spring 19 is wound up strongly enough to rewind the film only as fast as it is fed to it, and no faster, and it does this until the film pull is so weak that coil spring 10 resets sprocket 17 to normal position, whereupon the operation is repeated.

Friend Wooden advises this department that his invention can be attached to any machine now on the American market, and that the attachment can be made both easily and cheaply. Pawl 21 rests in ratchet teeth, and is to keep spring 19 from unwinding or running backwards. The device seems to be fairly simple, and would, I believe, be effective. At least it can be confidently asserted that it would be a large improvement over the take-up tension devices now in use, so far as damage to film is concerned. This department recommends Brother Wooden's device to the consideration of machine manufacturers and others interested.

Troubles of His Own.

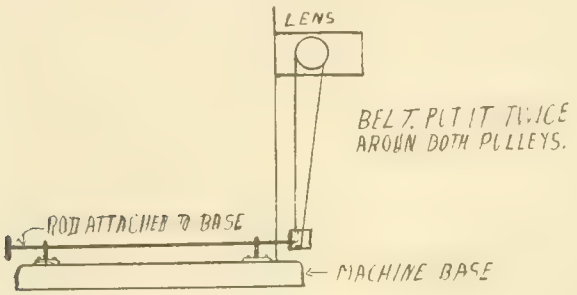
F. H. France & Son, Bethany, Missouri, order a Handbook and set forth their troubles as follows:

> We are projecting a 13½-foot picture on a 73-foot throw, using a 6½ pearl white condenser next to the arc and an 8½ next to the film, the machine is a Simplex. Are unable to get a clear field through the projection lens, though it is all right through the stereopticon. Use 110 volts a.c. Cored carbon on top and hard below. Can you tell me where the trouble lies?

I certainly can. In the first place, you have about a 5½-inch objective and I think you will get better results with two 7½ condensers. In the second place, you should not use hard (solid) carbons with alternating current; that is only for d.c. Use two ⅝ cored carbons.

Lens Adjusters.

J. E. Benton, Albia, Iowa, orders a Handbook and sends description of his scheme for adjusting (focusing) the lens. Briefly, it consists of a rod attached to the base of the projecting mechanism on the right hand side, with a handle at the back end and a pulley on its front end. He then attaches a small pulley to the lens adjusting thumb-screw and runs the belt from the pulley below to the one on the lens. This allows him to adjust his lens by turning the wheel at the back end of the rod.



The scheme is made perfectly plain by the sketch. The belt can go two or three times around both pulleys and thus all possibility of slipping would be done away with. Brother Benton says:

> The General Film Company's repair man saw it and wanted me to patent it, but I don't think it worth while. If you think it would keep any of the boys from skinning their knuckles and using words which their Sunday school teacher would not approve of, give it to them.

The idea is a good one, particularly as applied to outside shutter machines. Any operator can make one and attach it, with very little trouble and expense, and as Brother Benton suggests, it will save skinned knuckles, bad language, as well as tend to very decidedly improve the projection.

Slide Making.

S. E. Shaw, Ithaca, New York, contributes the following very complete slide making data:

> I notice, in last issue, Birmingham, Ala., wishes to know about making lantern slides. Perhaps I can enlarge somewhat upon your directions. In the first place, he should buy a good camera and learn something about the process of picture making. It would be preferable in his case to buy a plate camera, as it could also be used to print the slides, as explained later. The pocket-book will determine how much to invest in one. A 4 by 5 of any good make ought to meet his requirements. Start out with snapshots on good, bright days, in the meantime doing all the darkroom work. Follow the directions that come with the camera and don't be discouraged if it doesn't pan out well. Be careful of the composition of the subject on the ground glass, for it is quite essential when coming to the slide proposition. After having mastered the chemical processes more or less completely, start making time exposures, using an exposure table for a guide. By this time the novice ought to be ready to spoil some material on lantern slides.

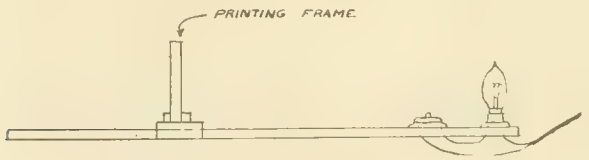


Fig. 1.

Mix the developer very carefully, according to the directions that come with the slide plates, for a poor developer may easily spoil the slide. Seed slides are cheap and give very good results. Hammer and others give as good, if not better results, but cost quite a little more. Right here I wish to disagree with you in the matter of contact prints. Do you know of any reason why they are seldom good? The only reason that I can see would be an inexperienced operator. True, that it is difficult to get the correct exposure because of the shortness of it, but where there are a lot of prints to be made it is much the quicker way. At any rate it is not a bad method to know. Select some of the best negatives, those which are not "flat," but still not too contrasty. Fix up the following in the dark room: Take a board two or three feet long. At one end place a 16 c.p. lamp, connected in series with an ordinary push button. Make another piece with projecting sides and a groove in top to accommodate the printing frame. This may be placed at any distance from the light by moving backwards and forwards. Everything is now ready to make some contact slides. Place the negative chosen in the printing frame, emulsion side up. Place the slide plate on top of it, emulsion side down, and covering the most interesting part of the negative. Do not try to have the picture cover the finished slide to the edges, but leave plenty of room for masking out. Always have the picture with its horizontal center line the longest way of the slide, for, of course, it only goes in the slide carrier in a horizontal position. After clamping the negative and positive slide in the frame, place the latter in the holder on the printing board. If the negative is of average density, place it at about fifteen inches from the lamp. Now press the push button till the lamp just lights up to its brightest (a fraction of a second), and then release it. Take the slide out of the frame and develop it so that there is a good picture on it, looking at it from the front, or until the lightest parts commence to turn gray. The degree of density will vary with the source of light with which it is to be used. A few trials will give some idea of this. The total time of development should be from one to two minutes. If any less the exposure is too great. Try another one, placing the frame further from the light. If it is impossible to get the required density, frame must be placed closer. Always keep the exposure the same. After a few trials some good slides will be obtained. That is the "contact" way. The other method is:

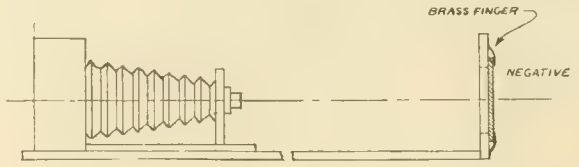

Fig. 2.

Procure a "kit" for your camera, having an inside opening of 3¼ by 4. Place a slide in this and close the plate holder. Obtain a board three feet long and ten inches wide. Fix an upright at one end with an opening nearly four by five, or the size of the negatives to be copied. Make some sort of clips to hold the negative in position over this hole, which should have its center in a line with the center of the camera lens. The parts would then have some such arrangement as in Figure 2. Take it to an open window and point it to the clearest part of the sky, but not towards the sun. Next mark out a square on the ground glass in the center, size 3¼ x 4 inches. Now focus up on the ground glass, moving the camera backward and forward until the image is well within the marks on the glass, and in the center of it. After this has been done, clamp the camera down by some means so that it will not move while placing the plate holder in position. Close the lens and stop it down to at least U. S. 32. Place the plate holder in position, draw slide and expose. This will, of course, depend upon the brightness of the day and the density of the negative; it will probably be two or three seconds, under average conditions. Develop as before. If it is desired to color the slide, procure a set of regular slide water colors, and different sizes of brushes. The coloring must, of course, be done before it is bound up. Wet the film so that it is just moist and will take the colors best. Put the colors on in very diluted form, applying several coats if necessary. Coloring requires a lot of time and patience, and the one doing it must possess more or less natural artistic ability. I am at present a student in the University here. Would like to know if there is any opening for a technically trained college man in the motion picture industry. Would like to try to work out some problem that may come up before you, that would require experimental work of some sort, either electrical or mechanical, if you have one.

We have to thank neighbor Shaw for his excellent letter on slide making. As to an opening for a technically trained college man, why, I should say there certainly is, but the man will have to search out the particular niche into which he proposes to fit himself. You are at liberty to work out any of the many problems presented in this department, and the good Lord knows there are enough of them presented, too. Go as far as you like, brother, and in this way you may draw attention to yourself and be sent for some day.

More Slide Dope.

Alfred L. Criswell, Camden, N. J., in answering Birmingham, Alabama, page 171, January 10th issue, says:

> You recommend the use of aniline dyes for coloring slides. Now, aniline dyes are exceedingly difficult to use. I would, therefore, suggest Dunns' colors, to be had at any good photographic supply house, as far superior. They are accompanied by full directions for using. The advantage of these colors is they may be readily removed, in case of mistake, by simply immersing the plate in common washing ammonia. As regards developing positives, I would suggest the use of Rodinal, diluted one to twenty; this gives an exceedingly delicate lantern slide and one full of detail and perspective. For developing photographic announcement slides I would recommend the following formula, compiled by W. S. James, Camden. It gives a surprising amount of contrast, but remember this is only for announcement slides and not for view work. Water 15 ounces, potassium carbonate 7 ounces, sodium sulphite 2 ounces, hydrochinnone ½ ounce. Dissolve the chemicals in the order named. The solution will keep indefinitely if well corked. For use, dilute one part in five parts water. (E. L. Flury, Cumberland, Md., please note.) I think this is all which will be of much use to the average operator, but if Birmingham wishes to correspond, will give him details on copying, enlarging, reducing, or intensifying. Address Lyric Theater, Camden, N. J.

I think no comment is necessary on this, except to thank Brother Criswell for the information given.

Isolated Plant.

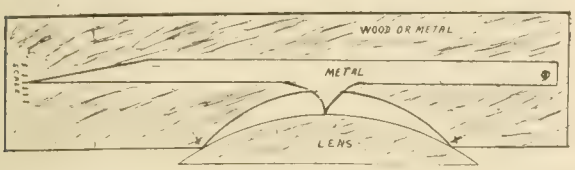
Earl Houstan, Madison, Missouri, writes:

> This little city of 600 has a picture show; I am its operator and we are doing the business, believe me. I have a 60-volt, 45-ampere generator run by an engine and certainly get some light at the arc; no trouble at all. The current costs one-half gallon of kerosene per hour. The engine is a 4 h.p. Fairbanks. I have the Handbook, and take the World.

Comment is unnecessary, except to say that you certainly are getting cheap current. It is only costing you about 10 cents per hour, and whatever the interest on the investment and the depreciation may be. More and more I am coming to the conclusion that most theaters will do well to install their own light plants

It Will Work.

John Griffiths, Ansonia, Connecticut, sends in a home-made condenser gauge which it seems to me will deliver the goods. The circle part must be deep enough so that the lens will only touch at points XX, and these points should be of metal and a little less than 4¼ inches apart. Point A must be so located that it will strike exactly at a point central between X and X. The rest of it is simple. Get lenses of various focal lengths, such as 6½, 7½, etc., which you find measure out correctly, and then make scale B by actual test of the lenses. This gauge is bound to work right because, as is set forth on page 350 of the Handbook, each lens is a segment of a certain circle, therefore if one 7½ lens (which is 7½ really), pushes the pointer to a certain spot then all other 7½ lenses, which are really 7½ lenses, must do exactly the same thing. As a matter of fact the gauge could be made true by laying out certain circles on cardboard as per page 350 of the Handbook.



Brother Griffiths also remarks:

> With regard to the theory recently advanced that when light passes through glass, a large percentage of the rays affecting glass are absorbed, I would like to say that although the rays pass through the first condensing lens, this does not prevent the second one from getting hot, too, and it is only reasonable to expect that it will not get as hot as the first one, for are we not told that condensers absorb 60 per cent. of the light? Therefore, we have about 30 per cent. less light through the second condenser.

What friend Griffiths says is correct. The second lens does heat, but it is right up against the first lens and confined in a case with it so that naturally it will absorb a considerable proportion of the heat radiated by the first lens.

The School.

There have been considerable and persistent queries from operators about the correspondence school. The writer has just been able to secure the questions and answers used in the correspondence course of a prominent operators' school, and here are some of them:

Question: How is the intermittent movement to the intermittent sprocket produced on a No. Six Power's machine? How is the intermittent movement usually produced on most machines?

Answer: By means of a diamond-shaped cam and maltese cross device with four pins that engage the diamond cam. Most machines have the star-wheel movement.

Question: How do you get more or less amperes from an adjustable rheostat?

Answer: By turning the handle so as to cut in or out resistance, being careful always to start with all the resistance in.

Question: What is the object of the handle on the lamp?

Answer: To regulate the movements of the arc so as to center the light on the condensers and get the best light on the screen. They feed the carbons, move the lamp up and down and sideways.

Question: Why do you move the lamp in the lamp-house back and forth?

Answer: To make the spot larger or smaller.

Question: What is meant by the spot?

Answer: It is the illuminated space that appears on the automatic fire shutter when the shutter is down or on the aperture of the aperture plate when the shutter is lifted and the arc burns.

Question: Do you think you could distinguish at a glance the difference between an Edison Model B machine and a Power's No. 5 or 6? The illustrations 1, 12 and 16 should show you the principal differences. The answer to this question we will have to take your word for.

There are, of course, many other questions, some of which are more enlightening than these, but after all, they are a fair sample and it does not seem to me that operators have any good reason to get excited over the school question unless they can offer instructions of far greater value than this. The questions of this school are all of the kindergarten class and most of the answers are next door to nothing so far as real information is concerned.

A Mix Up.

M. W. Reed, Charles City, Iowa, has a motor generator set with which he was having trouble. He was instructed by the installing company to run it without any resistance. He could not get results. He now sends me a copy of the name plate reading of the machine. The motor is a three phase, 14.2 ampere, 60-cycle, 220-volt machine with a no-load speed of 1,800 r.p.m. The generator is a 3.5 k.w. 28-ampere machine with a full load voltage rating of 125. Friend Reed says:

> Since receiving your letter I have been doing some experimenting. We purchased a 20 to 55 ampere adjustable rheostat and by connecting it in series on the positive wire I am now able to get good results, or at least far better than before with no resistance at all. I now run at from 70 to 85 volts and from 35 to 40 amperes at the arc. With a borrowed voltmeter I was able to run my voltage up to 130, which was the limit of the instrument and I did this by cutting out only about two-thirds of the field rheostat resistance. I have a 1910 Motiograph machine. I removed the double cone inside shutter and put in a three-wing outside shutter, but the large blade is too narrow and I have travel ghost both ways (rivet a narrow strip of metal to each side of the blade. (Ed.). Is there such a thing as a three-wing double cone inside shutter? (No. Ed.) Do you think my generator is too small? For instance, should I run my voltage up to 90, forty amperes would give me a slight overload, would it not? In fact, it takes from 80 to 90 volts to give me 40 amperes. The questions you are running in the department are certainly great and have been of large benefit to me so far; I always study up on the questions as soon as they come and put down my answer or as much of it as I can dig up and then wait for the real answer, to see how far off I am, and most always I am away off. I don't suppose I have any business with these questions and answers, however, as I am not a union man, but that is not because I do not want to be, but by reason of the fact that there is nothing doing with us small town guys.

Immediately upon receipt of Brother Reed's letter I took the matter of the motor generator up with the manufacturer, and it seems that a blunder was made by someone and that the generator is not of the right voltage. This, of course, was evident on the face of it, since a 125-volt generator would mean unnecessary waste under that condition. The manufacturer has instructed its Chicago office to change the set and give friend Reed a new one, having a generator of proper voltage. And thus through the medium of the department is another soul made happy.

Running Backward.

Jesse Bollman, Chickasha, Oklahoma, wants a little information as follows:

> I have been running four reels a week backwards on my Simplex machine. We first run a comedy reel and then run it right up back through the machine by changing the belt on the motor, removing the take-up belt and running the top reel by hand. Will that injure the machine appreciably? The audience seems to enjoy the stunt very well.

I do not think there is any danger of doing damage to your machine, but it does not seem to me as though a stunt of that kind is worth while. I think you would do better to bend your energy to the perfection of projection in the right direction. As regards the last part of your letter, you will doubtless receive a communication from headquarters.

Rectifier Connections.

Texas desires information as follows:

> Am having a little trouble of my own, therefore, don't pay much attention to the rebels across the Rio Grande. Am using a 30-ampere G. E. rectifier, 110-volt, 60-cycle service. Have the rectifier connected as follows: Looking at plate 88, page 177, of the Handbook, lead 32 is connected to stud 29. When I draw the average d.c. arc my ammeter reads about 22. Can freeze my carbons and hold them there and the ammeter only registers about 35. Am using ½-inch solid carbons below and ⅝ cored above. Would you advise moving lead 32 to stud 31? Would there be any danger of burning out my tube, which is rated at 40 amperes?

Try connecting lead 36 to stud 16 and lead 34 to stud 29, which should give you about 28 amperes. But for heaven's sake don't let those rebels monkey with your rectifier, because they tell me that Villia thing carries very high voltage, and he might queer the whole works.

Operator Loses His Sight.

A Spokane, Washington, eye specialist informs the department that Brother Rex J. Ormond, an operator in that city, temporarily lost his sight through looking at the arc. It is hardly necessary to warm operators that it is highly dangerous to look at an arc light. The arc gives off a superabundance of ultra-violet rays and these rays are highly injurious to the delicate retina of the eye. As has been pointed out in this department, operators should not only avoid looking at the arc but also, as far as possible, at the spot.

Answering Questions.

Gentlemen: You have got to move if you expect to have your answers considered. I am still receiving answers to Question No. 12 and it is too late to even consider them, since the answer to No. 12 is now in type, and No. 13 is ready for the printer.

If you want more space between the questions and answers I will drop the answers for a couple of weeks and give you more time, otherwise a little more speed will be necessary from some of you.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

420 Pages Illustrated

By F. H. Richardson

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR (Selig), February 3.—The lesson to be taught by this picture is far from wholesome, when a daughter plots with the son to rob their father, who is killed by the girl's lover, whom he finds at the safe which the daughter has unlocked for her brother to rob. The scenic effects, lighting and photography were the only redeeming features. It did not please the audience.

WOOING THE COOK (Pathe), February 3.—A rural comedy that is really laughable, although it contains two impossible farm hands—"there ain't no such animals"—who resort to all kinds of means to outdo each other to gain the affections of the buxom cook. One is a little fellow and his rival fastens him in a freight car, barrels him up in an apple barrel, etc., but he "bobs up serenely," and wins the girl. Excellent photography obtained, especially that of the trick with the barrel. It caused great laughter.

THE CATCH OF THE SEASON (Lubin), February 3.—This picture is a fish story, and like nearly all fish stories is really good, but this is a funny one. The participants are an outing party in a camp; girls, a chaperone and young chaps. One of the girls is the favorite and all the boys propose to her. She tells them she will marry the one who catches the largest fish. Many comical scenes occur. Finally, through her strategy, the one she prefers lands a whopper, and she catches an earl. A herd of cows stampede the camp. The cows proved to be excellent actorines.

DAWN AND TWILIGHT (Essanay), February 3.—This production is rather harrowing in theme. A blind violinist's sight is restored and the physician who performs the operation is paid by a girl who loves him. When he regains his sight he is disappointed in her appearance and treats her coldly, mingling with a Bohemian set and paying attention to a frivolous girl. He is again stricken blind; injuring his eyes writing an opera. The frivolous girl deserts him and the faithful one dies of grief. Some beautiful scenes and coloring are contained in the picture. The marring feature is the quick transition when in the bright sunlight the bandages are removed from the eyes after operation.

A TREACHEROUS RIVAL (Edison), February 3.—This story is rather conventional. The leading character is a mounted policeman who saves a widow's little daughter from being run over by an automobile, thereby gaining the thanks and admiration of the mother. A love story is evolved, also the machinations of an admirer who is a regular villain. The widow's father is addicted to drink and his thirst causes him to purloin the villain's pocketbook, who attempts to force the policeman to arrest him. He refuses and is suspended. The old father tells his story to the chief and pleads for him. The villain is frustrated and all ends happily. The acting was excellent.

THE HEART OF MAGGIE MALONE (Selig), February 4.—One feels like taking off his hat to the humanity in this story, even though, strictly speaking, it might have been made better. Maggie Malone, as portrayed by Stella Razetto, reminded us of Mrs. Fiske, which doesn't necessarily mean that her work is great; yet she does excellently. She makes the girl appeal to all strongly. The girl's old mother is as fine a picture and all the characters, except Grace, ring true, and Grace, in her prettiness, has a touch of pathos that will be popular. The story is fairly convincing and likable except for one scene—that of the drawn window shade, which was unnecessarily suggestive and like a smirch on the picture's white cloth. Wm. E. Wing is the author and it was produced by Edward Le Saint.

HOW BURKE AND BURKE MADE GOOD (Vitagraph), February 4.—Burke and Burke are vaudevillian, song and dance artists and their luck in making good furnishes a dandy little farce. The spectator has to wait a bit for its joke; but when it comes it is worth while. We ourselves had to roar and it gave us, as well as the whole house, a good time.

ON THE LAZY LINE (Edison), February. 4.—A laughable story of a railroad journey that is most slow (railroad journey) but in a great hurry. For full review see Page 275, issue of January 17.

INTO SOCIETY AND OUT (Essanay), February 4.—A burlesque farce with a foreign count, more or less conventional, who made three or four laugh; and two tramps, also a bit conventional, who made the majority of the audience laugh. Rather rough and broad in its humor, but it seemed to be what the audience wanted this morning. The players' work is the quality that puts it over as entertainment.

THE FAT MAN'S BURDEN (Pathe), Feb. 4.—The vapor bath farce, like others we have reviewed. Its broad humor tickled the audience and it got by all right this morning.

THE LITTLE SISTER (Selig), Feb. 5.—This is a simple Western story, in which the little girl keeps house for her brothers while they work their claim. She conceals the gold dust in the baby's bed when the bandits appear. The natural, unforced development of the story gives it considerable appeal, though it does not get up any great degree of suspense.

A GAMBLER'S WAY (Essanay), February 5.—A Western offering of about average interest, in which two men love the same girl. The girl becomes infatuated with the worthless one. Later, after a quarrel, the men cut cards, one agreeing to forfeit his ranch and the other, his wife, as the luck ran. The dissolute husband is killed at the close and the picture ends happily. A typical Western offering.

PLAYING WITH FIRE (Melies), February 5.—A well-handled little drama, enacted by French characters. The girl, to make her indifferent admirer jealous, conspires to get up a flirtation with another man in the office. She winds up by falling in love with the second man.

WINKY WILLY'S DISAPPEARING STUNT (Melies), February 5.—The little French boy creates considerable amusement by hiding under his aunt's dress form. The garden scenes are attractive and the comedy quite pleasing. On same reel with above.

DIPPY ON THE BOSTON DIP (Melies), February 5.—On same reel with above. A neat travesty on the tango craze, put on in a very artistic manner.

THE DILEMMA (Biograph), February 5.—The young wife's first husband is a dissolute fellow. He deserts her and she weds the candidate for governor. Later the first husband reappears, but is killed in a fall from a balcony. This plot material is familiar, but it is quite ably handled in this film. William Russell has the part of the political candidate and the other characters were good. The photography is pleasing.

LINCOLN THE LOVER (Vitagraph), Feb. 5.—This film is worthy of being classed with the notable short stories that have been written around the beloved figure of Abraham Lincoln. Ralph Ince gives a thoroughly satisfying impersonation of Lincoln, both as persident and also in the earlier years when he loved Ann Rutledge. The love story is pictured as a reverie by the president while sitting before his fireside. Anita Stewart was graceful and appealing as the ill-fated girl who won Lincoln's heart. A strong story of simple elements handled in a way that is sure to make it widely popular.

THE VAGARIES OF FATE (Lubin), February 6.—The district attorney receives a threatening letter from the friends of the blackmailers he has convicted. The story which follows is very conventional. He is captured and bound in a cabin beside a bomb to which a lighted fuse is attached. Later, of course, he is rescued. In spite of the familiar plot the suspense is well maintained. The photography is only fair.

VACCINATING THE VILLAGE (Kalem), February 6.—This comedy draws upon a very old plot for its fun, but proves quite amusing. The young doctor tells his rival and the girl they have smallpox. This starts a scare and he makes a great deal of money in vaccination fees. The breezy treatment of the theme infuses fresh interest into it, but the photography is only fair.

MARRYING SUE (Vitagraph), February 6.—A rather pleasing little comedy skit, in which the girl plans a double elopement, bringing two of her admirers together unexpectedly. She then weds another. Static rays appears frequently in the photography, but the film serves to amuse.

TONY AND MALONEY (Selig), February 6.—This love story of a police officer and a hired girl is entertaining. The brother, an Italian fruit vendor, is opposed to the match until the officer gets damages for him from the auto driver. The girl was scarcely an Italian type, but it makes a pretty little story.

ITALIAN GAMES AND DANCES (Selig), February 6.—Some quaint dances and social amusements, enacted by Italian players. On same reel with above.

BEATING THEIR BOARD BILL (Biograph), February 7.—A farce of the usual boarding-house kind with action that is not trite and speedy enough. It amuses.

THE FADDISTS (Biograph), February 7.—On the same reel with the foregoing, but with less quality. It made very little laughter.

THE MAN OF DESTINY (Edison), February 7.—An unusually interesting picture of Napoleon by Preston Kendall. It makes quite a distinct impression and is the kind of offering that will be remembered. Charles Sutton plays the man of destiny, and at times seems quite like Napoleon. Marc MacDermott plays an aristocrat who becomes poor. Mary Fuller has a short role. It was put on by Walter Edwin and is in many ways a graceful production. Certainly it is a good offering.

BRONCHO BILLY AND THE RED MAN (Essanay), February 7.—It tells a good story well and deals with gratitude and faithful friendship between an Indian and Broncho Billy. It will be liked surely.

THE INDIAN AMBUSCADE (Kalem), February 7.—Not quite up to the recent Kalem Indian pictures, but in general kind like them. The photography is serviceable without adding anything to the value of the offering.

PAT'S REVENGE (Lubin), February 7.—There is a touch of real Irish about this picture, written and produced by Arthur Hotaling, that pleases. It is a slight incident, but the fun in it and the humor of it get over.

HER SIDE SHOW SWEETHEART (Lubin), February 7.—A good picture with broad humor. It shows love and jealousy in a circus and then another kind of love and jealousy on a farm. Then the circus woman finds the circus man out as he works on the farm and there is more fun.

Licensed Specials

THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO (Ambrosio-Kleine), February 3.—This picture production is certainly worthy of the highest commendation, especially from a scenic and costume point of view. The man who selected the many beautiful scenes involved, the angles selected by the cameraman and the superior directorship were in perfect harmony. The acting in some cases was slightly exaggerated, but on the whole, it is an elegant production. It has been reviewed at length in the Moving Picture World of February 7.

CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS (Vitagraph), February 3.—Mildred Desmond, a female detective, discovers her maid has appropriated her furs and necklace to wear to meet a man whose letter she had answered through a matrimonial agency. Believing him to be a crook with designs on the maid, Mildred impersonates her and meets the crook, who, disillusioned, suggests she assist in robbing the house. She consents and the result is his downfall. The district attorney, an admirer of Mildred's, appears and assists her. The acting was fair, but the plot inconsistent; in some instances impossible.

THE HAND PRINT MYSTERY (Kalem), February 4.—A two-reel romance with just a touch of melodrama, and that means in this case that it is a bit conventional. In fact, the melodrama of it, the sister's helping her brother make good with his invention and the way she raises money to do it, her going through the house and "lifting" her sister's and father's jewelry as well as her own, even to her engagement ring, is like a cloud which love's understanding breaks through when her fiance hearing of it, from her, helps her cover her tracks—that mysterious hand print—until the invention is a big success and the jewelry can be restored. It is well acted with Alice Joyce and Tom Moore and other members of the Kalem staff. The photography of the Southern home and a few outside scenes is excellent. As a whole, it ought to please most spectators.

BEHIND COMEDY'S MASK (Patheplay), February 5.—Another story based upon the tragedy and heartache behind the scenes. In this two-reel story the husband proves untrue to his wife, both being actors. She turns for consolation to a playwright, and altogether the characters seemed to lack sufficient stability to hold the interest. The wife's plight in the second reel is pitiful, but her death from the sword thrust was too lingering and painful to witness. A long picture such as this, while full of attractive settings and sincerely acted, leaves an unpleasant feeling with the observer. The situations should have been relieved by lighter scenes.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS (Lubin), Feb. 5.—This two-reel number draws upon old situations to a certain extent. The half-witted daughter of the discharged night watchman steals a thousand dollars from the young cashier's grip. The latter is suspected, owing to his dissolute habits. He joins the navy. Later, when the truth becomes known, he returns to claim the bank president's daughter. This is well constructed and runs along in an entertaining manner, though it can lay no claim to especial strength or originality. The scenes on the tender boat were pleasing.

THE GRIP OF CIRCUMSTANCES (Essanay), February 6.—This follows the career of a young society man who goes broke gambling and becomes a thief. He steals plate from his sweetheart's home and gets the butler discharged for the theft, but later in the story is rounded up. The story opens rather slowly, but becomes absorbing later along. It is a successful offering of the crook type, though it contains no powerful scenes. Thos. Commerford, E. H. Calvert and Angela Dolores are among those in the cast. The photography is dark in places.

AN AMERICAN KING (Edison), February 6.—A film story, following along the lines laid by "The Prisoner of Zenda" and other novels of the best selling class. The young American, played by Benj. F. Wilson, comes of royal blood and is called to the throne of Balkia. He appoints his chum as aide and some amusing situations occur. The story is well handled and nicely staged, but it suggests many unrealized possibilities, both in the way of humor and dramatic action. It is interesting as it stands, but more play should have been given to the imagination. The photography is smooth and attractive.

TAINTED MONEY (Vitagraph), February 7.—A two-part picture that seems more of a preachment than a drama. It contrasts the over opulence of a predatory rich man with the misery and squalor his grasping causes. The bigger part of it deals with poverty and misery which, convincing, as they always are, are not convincing in this connection. The story, which brings the rich man to repentance, does not make us feel that it is a bit of life and it surely is not a romance, so we cannot term it first-class entertainment. Photography, though it serves well, is not perfect.

IN THE MESH OF HER HAIR (Pathe), February 7.—Commented on in last week's issue.

BROKEN PATHS (Pathe), February 12.—This two-reel picture is reminiscent of a big factory fire in New York City some time ago. It is a story of a heartless woman who has no thought or time for the lives and property for which she is responsible. She puts everything into the hands of her superintendent. The result is bribed inspectors; and then, through the carelessness of a cigarette-smoking workman, fire and death. Later a woman, to provide for her injured husband, steals jewelry from the factory owner, who is also her landlord, and threatening her with eviction. The story holds all the way, is thrilling at times, dramatic at others. The portrayal of life is vivid. The picture was made with the aid of the Jersey City police and fire departments. Pearl Sindelar is the owner, Irving Cummings the superintendent and Harrish Ingraham the injured employe.

THE CHAINS OF HONOR (Pathe), February 14.—This two-reel subject was made in the Italian studios of the company and is a fine production. Especially notable is the acting, there being an unusually good cast and well balanced. The settings are excellent. The work of the chief of detectives stands out. He makes much of his part. In the story he not only in ingenious fashion uncovers the guilty and turns him over to justice, but also protects the honor of the woman of the house, who through no fault of her own failed in her designs on the fiance of her step-daughter. There is a happy ending.

Independent

THE SUCCESS OF SELFISHNESS (Thanhouser), February 6.—It is what will be called a "little" picture; but it gets its lesson over with quite a punch. There is effective comedy in the cool way Flo LaBadie gets her education from her sweethearts without having to pay for tuition at a business college and then goes to the city for a good job. She becomes in time the wife of a millionaire and her extravagance ruins him so she is left at the end in the shadow to mourn alone. It is a very "cool" picture, out of the ordinary run and will be welcome.

WHERE PATHS DIVERGED (Princess), February 6.—Opening with prettily acted love scenes and a hasty marriage which the stork makes impossible to conceal, this picture has a happily romantic though not very convincing ending. The pretty leading lady acts well in the romantic scenes, but shows lack of experience in tragedy. It has the appeal of overdrawn melodramas and is a fair offering.

ONE ROUND O'BRIEN IN THE RING AGAIN (Apollo), February 8.—These Fred Mace pictures have been popular. There are plenty of fresh laughs in this. It will please.

PERCY'S FIRST HOLIDAY (Thanhouser), February 8.—Featuring the clever comedy work of W. S. Percy, the Australian actor, this picture has broad humor of a kind that is apt to become rough; but there is a pertinency in the incidents at times that keeps it alive and interesting. It makes a very fair offering.

A TURN OF THE CARDS (Majestic), February 8.—There is a novel and unexpected turn of the action in this picture's development that marks it out from the usual. Then there is feeling for character in the acting which is apt to ring true at important moments and this also helps. But it has another mercenary doctor who makes a bank employe embezzle to pay for saving the life of his only child. The average spectator will be much pleased with the Solomon-like wisdom of the bank president in finding out the real nature of the two men who are both implicated in the embezzlement.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL NO. 4 (Reliance), February 9.—A better quality is noticeable in this installment of the Mutual Girl's adventures. The country beau is coming to the fore strongly and the work of the detectives around the stolen necklace, which has been found where it drops from the girl's muff, is interesting. The villain, too, is becoming more important. Piping Rock Race Track is among the interesting places visited and we see August Belmont and Otto Kahn there. Billie Burke, the actress, comes into the picture.

JUST A SONG AT TWILIGHT (Majestic), February 10.—A little heroine, attractive in her simplicity as played, is adopted by rich people and, in her new surroundings, forgets for a time her old grandad and little brother and sister. It aims very successfully at sentiment and pleases most by its homeliness and natural human feelings. It is the old song sung by the little brother and sister on the street that is heard by the older sister in her rich home and brings about the reunion. Skillfully produced and well acted it makes a good offering.

PAT FLANNAGAN'S FAMILY (Reliance), February 11.—Pat is a kindly expressman. He is saving money to go on a visit to his old home in Ireland. It is Christmas, and by mistake he delivers a package of toys to the poor children of a drunken father. Called upon by the manager to get the package back, he can't bear to do it, so makes the loss good out of his own pocket. This kindly act leads to others, freshly conceived and convincing enough, until he finally adopts them, the father being dead. It will appeal to human sympathies and makes a very acceptable release. naturally acted and well handled.

THE IDLER (Reliance), February 14.—If it were not for the quality of the acting, this not very convincing story would have little appeal. Thomas R. Mills plays the idle rich man who is refused by the girl and then is knocked into loss of memory by an automobile. He has a hard time without his identity or riches and, with a thug, is burglarizing the girl's home. She recognizes the old lover under his rough clothing and, though not yet knowing who he is, he takes her part against the thug and later regains his memory. But it is acted with more than usual humanity and the mind is likely to forget its lack of probability in its naturalness. The photography is good.

FATE'S DECREE (Majestic), February 14.—A rather poorer picture than usual under this brand. There are trite scenes of love making and married happiness in a prospector's cabin as the opening. The development is not a pleasing story and is not convincing.

THE OLD LOCKET (Rex), February 15.—A story written and produced by Lois Weber. It contains probably the first battle scene ever staged by a woman; what is more to the point, it is mighty well done. The picture holds throughout. There are two fine dramatic situations at the conclusion.

A SURE CURE (Crystal), February 15.—This reverts to the old-style eccentric comedy, with rapid-fire chase scenes running through it. Mr. Stout and his thin wife were pleasing and, as a whole, this is full of highly diverting incidents of the nonsensical sort.

THE BOX COUCH (Imp), February 16.—A light comedy number, with King Baggot and Ethel Grandin as a pair of newlyweds. The plot is very slight and the story did not seem to round up very strongly.

ALMOST A WHITE HOPE (Powers), February 16.—This is one of Donald MacDonald's productions, a bright little comedy in which a young husband appears all too enthusiastic about his prowess as a prize-fighter. His wife conspires with an uncle to cure him.

A FLASH IN THE DARK (Nestor), February 18.—Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport, the one as a young man who goes blind in a mine explosion and the other as his wife, play the leading parts in this drama which has for its big scene a strange duel between the blind man and a man who has been wooing his wife. The duel occurs in the dark so that the sightless one and the one with eyes may have an equal advantage. The whole story is interesting and the shooting in the dark is novel and spectacular.

SLIM JOINS THE ARMY (Frontier), February 19.—This offering is a very amusing burlesque comedy. It contains many laughable scenes. Slim, in love, being repudiated by the girl's father, joins the army, or rather "a army," also the awkward squad. His antics are consistent and amusing, and he proves himself a near hero in the end. A novel feature is introduced involving his sweetheart. Many people are used in the cast, and the photography is above the average. The directing and acting deserve special mention, even to an old gray horse that kidnaps Slim's sweetheart, but returns her to him safely.

THE BOOB'S HONEYMOON (Rex), February 19.—A rough but amusing farce by Robert Leonard, who has the title role. The boob and his wife come to a party given by his wife's rich relatives and soon there are speedy doings on the carpet.

SCOOPED BY A HENCOOP (Nestor), February 20.—This is an amusing offering, with Eddie Lyons acting the part of a country boy. The girl's father dislikes him and resulting situations are full of laughable antics. Not a screaming success, but quite diverting just the same.

MY MOTHER'S IRISH SHAWLS (Powers), February 20.—Quite a pretty little Irish story, with Edwin August in the part of an Irish lad whose mother owns some valuable Paisley shawls. The theft of these shawls and their recovery in the Paris shop make a story that is quite novel and pleasing, though not very strong as to climax.

THE TENDER-HEARTED SHERIFF (Joker), February 21.—A low comedy number, by C. G. Badger. Max Asher appears as a sheriff who ejects a poor family from their home. The scenes at the beginning were not at all pleasing, but toward the close, particularly in the poor house, there were numerous funny moments.

THE POTE LARIAT OF THE FLYING A (American), February 21.—Contrasts a fine cowboy character with an artistic egoist. There is a real poet on the ranch as an honored guest and that makes the cowboy write some rough but sincere lines to the girl, who nevertheless prefers a painter, also her guest. A prairie fire with a stampede of wild cattle makes the painter show his cowardice while the cowboy gives his life for the girl and saves the painter, too. It is clearly drawn and made effective. Such a theme as this is sure to be popular and it makes a release safe to bank on.

THE FATAL CARD (Frontier), February 21.—A Western number in which the action and settings are commendable. The story itself concerns a frustrated lynching, the hero being saved at the last moment. This is lacking in probability and accordingly the suspense is not strongly maintained.

Independent Specials.

THE WAR DOG (Warner's Features).—A three-part offering made by the Milano studio. It's a picture of adventure with little to make it especially noticeable, except that it keeps action going. The situation set forth at the closing of the first reel is definite and clear, but there is much in its incidents that is not convincing. But still it keeps something going.

THE RED SPIDERS (Warner's Features).—A three-reel feature of adventure and mystery. It is quite careless of logic in its progress; but there is undeniably snap and go in much of its action. There is nothing artistic about it; it is made to please sensation-loving spectators. There is novelty in it and we think that it is just the kind of picture to entertain the gallery, and simpler audiences everywhere.

FOR HIS MASTER (Reliance), February 7.—The leading character in this two-part picture, directed by W. Christie Cabannie, is a sky pilot who has the qualities of a popular hero. There is nothing novel in what he does nor in the plot of the story, except in his astonishing method of rescuing the wayward brother of the girl from suffering with his evil companions. It is not a religious picture and has no moral tone to speak of, but depends on the central character, an earnest but rough and ready minister. It will be liked, for it doesn't drag and is pleasingly put on. Fred Burns plays the leading role.

THE DANCER (Thanhouser), February 10.—A two-reel picture of Bohemian folk and with a theatrical background. Its heroine (Marguerite Snow) is a dancer of world-wide reputation who, in the days of her struggle, has offended the story's villain. It becomes an over-drawn melodrama which could hardly be acted without its players showing, now and then, a sense of humor at it. It furnishes several very pretty scenes, including some dances; it has an interesting atmosphere all through. Perhaps one of its distinct assets is that it does amuse. The photography is clear and commendable.

VOTES FOR MEN (Victor), February 16.—A two-reel number, written by Calder Johnstone. This assumes that women are in ascendancy in the business world and pictures several thoroughly domesticated men holding down what were formerly considered women's jobs. There is considerable good-natured satire running through this, and many of the situations are ludicrous. The plot, however, is not very strong and, hence, the action seemed a little slow. The photography and acting are commendable.

THE CRICKET ON THE HEARTH (American), February 16.—Dickens is a favorite with motion picture fans and there is much in this two-part offering to please. The backgrounds and characters are pleasing and, although the story has obscure passages for those who have not read the book, it has enough humanity to get over in spite of this. Its highest merit is an illustration to such spectators as remember the novel. We think it will be favorably received by average audiences.

THE HONOR OF THE MOUNTED (Gold Seal), February 17.—This two reel drama of the Canadian Northwest mounted police has been well acted and admirably staged. The atmosphere of the Northwest woods is always interesting. Pauline Bush, as the sister of an outlaw, plays the lead. The story is good.

YELLOW FLAME (Broncho), February 18.—A stirring Western number in two reels. Chief Yellow Flame is released from prison, where he had served a long sentence for his misdeeds. The chief action in the piece pictures his vision of the old days. Some of the scenes are very confusing. The work of the Indians and the trained horses was very interesting.

THE PLAY'S THE THING (Domino), February 19.—A two-reel picture presenting a stage tragedy that is novel enough and being well put on makes a good offering. One actor has deceived and deserted a young woman to die and she has told her brother, also an actor, the man's name. The brother, determined on revenge, secures an engagement in the same company with the man, and is not known. The situation is stated concisely and without delay, although it occupies the first reel. The scenes set it before us so that the spectator feels the emotional truth of it; looks upon it as real. The result is marked suspense. It now works up to a duel scene on the stage, preceded by a perfect double exposure vision of the dead girl by the villain. The audience understands nothing of what is really going on and the villain is killed, but so skillfully that the coroner's jury pronounces the death as accidental. Up to the death scene it is good, but there the suspense drops, and the moral tone of the story is not high. The acting is good.

THE PRICE OF SACRILEGE (Imp), February 19.—This three-reel number, produced by Herbert Brenon, is a sincere production, with William E. Shay, Leah Baird and Anna Walker in the leads. Leah Baird appears as a fickle Italian girl who plays havoc with Antonio, her lover. The story has all the way through it a note of impending tragedy and is unrelieved by any lighter touches, which makes it seem somewhat tedious before the end. It is finely photographed and features an Italian festival parade. The close is very tragic. A strong production, which bears a little heavily upon the somber side of life.

THE RAIDERS (Kay-Bee), February 20.—A two-part offering that we enthusiastically recommend to the trade as a very sure popular offering. It is full of action and has plenty of tense struggle. The theme is love and moonshine with a fierce encounter with revenue men, bringing about a satisfying climax to the love story, and all of it dramatic. The emotional love interest is made appealing by the sincere and true acting of all three of its principals, but especially of the attractive heroine and the villain, both of whom are strong on acting. Then the whole production is marked by fine, convincing types. In the action there is no padding or noticeable lack of logic; the incidents are thrilling and full of snap and the local color of the backgrounds is good. It has a pleasing ending. The photography is acceptable.

LOVE'S VICTORY (Victor), February 20.—A two-reel number, written by Stuart Paton. Ethel Grandin, Frank H. Crane and Alexander Gaden play the leads, the story being one with a business setting. This gets the attention and proves very interesting, although it is not in any way a powerful production. The employer, often being found out as a forger, has a change of heart and turns over a big sum of money to the man he wronged.

THE CONSPIRACY (World Special).—This picture production in all respects should certainly give satisfaction in the majority of houses. It is well named, and contains gripping scenes that are splendidly directed. It is in four parts and as they progress, grow stronger to the finale. The backgrounds could scarcely be improved upon. The cast was made up of French actors and rendered their various roles in a superb manner. There are several big scenes, a run on a bank, a mob scene that is splendidly rendered, and a fire scene that was masterly handled. In all, though there are some trivial faults, it is a picture that will please.

A VOICE FROM "FANDOM."

Return to the Single Reels Is the Cry.

210 Wilmenth Ave., Wyoming, Ohio.
January 20, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Can you do something to urge a return to the one reel moving picture? I am a devotee, but confess to becoming a trifle weary of the long performances, perhaps half of which are totally lost for lack of time to see them through.

Have repeatedly happened in when reel was half or three-quarters shown, and before I would have to leave, nothing clear would develop.

Can we not go back to the old time method of several one reel pictures for a continuous performance, or else have the two and three reel pictures started at stated hours; in that way one could choose according to one's time and taste. These "thrillers," as I believe you call them, seem to me to be a grave detriment to the business, unless mediocre audiences are desired. Respectfully,

A. L. O. GRIMES.

BATTLESHIP MICHIGAN EQUIPPED FOR PICTURES.

Before leaving the New York Navy Yard, at Brooklyn, February 3rd, to join the fleet which will assemble in Guantanamo Bay for manoeuvers at the end of this month, the battleship Michigan, which aided in the escape of Gen. Felix Diaz from Vera Cruz during the recent troubles in Mexico, was equipped with a Power's Cameragraph No. 6-A motion picture projection machine, and thousands of feet of the latest film. Among these pictures were those taken of the West Point-Annapolis football game, which was held in this city at the Polo Grounds. As evidence of the popularity of motion pictures with the government there is hardly a day goes by at the plant of the Nicholas Power Co., in this city, without seeing mechanics from either the Army or Navy going through the various departments and receiving instructions on operating projecting machines.

Among the Picture Theaters.

News and Views of Houses Here and There.

VICTORIA THEATER, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

THE Victoria Theater, Indianapolis, Ind., just opened, is probably the finest suburban house in Indiana. It was built at a cost of $15,000 by the People's Amusement Company. The exterior is in good taste, being finished in stone and pressed brick, buff colored. Two flaming arc lights give it good display at night. It is in the same square with one of the most aristocratic churches in Indianapolis. The theater building includes two storerooms on each side of the lobby, suitable for small businesses such as might be expected to thrive at the theater.

Victoria Theater, Indianapolis, Ind.

One of the features of the lobby are two inset poster frames in the wall where they are out of the way of the crowds. Hidden lights above display the posters. The face to the frames is of glass, and they lock at the side. They are the special design of A. C. Farrell, the house manager. The house is under the is in direct contrast with the soft tints of the walls and ceiling.

The operating room is all steel and one of the best equipped to be found anywhere. It contains two motor-driven Simplex machines. The operator controls both machines at the same time. There are no stops between shows. In making a change of subjects there is only hesitation enough to permit of a mental readjustment for the next picture. A Fort Wayne motor generator set that gives alternating or direct current is used. The general supervision of S. C. Saffell, who is house manager at the Talbott Theater, another of the company's houses.

No expense has been spared to make the interior a place of comfort and beauty. The walls and ceilings have been hand painted and decorated. The colors are all soft tints, and the lighting is by the semi-direct system. There are no shadows and no lights visible that are not covered by translucent glass. The result is a suffused glow over the entire house that gives it an atmosphere of comfort and elegance. The seats, 618 in number, are of Circassian walnut, with leather backs. Their dark color throw from booth to screen is 110 feet. A radium gold fiber screen, inset to cut out cross lights, gives a perfect picture. Because of the length of the throw the lenses used are extra powerful.

The stage is deep enough to permit of vaudeville. Wine-colored velvet draperies surround the screen. The draperies beside the screen, as well as the draperies about the orchestra pit and over the windows in the side walls, are all the same color and bear a gold-embroidered monogram wreath and letter V. A three-piece orchestra is used. Uniformed ushers are all dressed in hunter's green with white gloves. The name of the theater is embroidered on the uniforms. A toilet and rest room provided for women is equipped with mirrors and every convenience to please the woman patron.

The investment is heavy but the men at the head of the People's Amusement Company have never picked a loser, and the attendance at the house has already justified their faith in the location and the way to please its patrons. The admission is ten cents, and an all-feature service from the Mutual, General, Universal and Famous Players programs is given. The regular schedule includes no matinees except on Sunday, but it is planned to run a number of free matinees for children accompanied by parents. The house is of brick, concrete, steel and other fireproof material throughout. Plenty of exits are provided.

The personnel of the company consists of Charles M. Olson, president; B. V. Barton, treasurer; J. H. Spellmire, vice-president, and J. I. Schnitzer, secretary.

Princess Theater, Roswell, New Mexico.

AS may be seen from the accompanying photo-engraving, the Princess Theater, Roswell, New Mexico, has a plain but pretty front. The ornamental effects are not obtrusive, which gives it an inviting appearance. The two big pillars which support the top cross beam break the plainness a little but do not affect the appearance. The posters are displayed in neat frames with the name of the day on which the picture is to be shown on the top of the frame. Directly above the lobby the name, Princess, has been spelled out in electric letters. The successive lighting and turning out of each one of the incandescent globes give the sign a serpentine effect.

The theater is owned by James Halper and managed by G. W. Morgan. The building is 35 feet wide by 155 feet long, and the auditorium has a seating capacity of 725. It is one of the finest and best equipped moving picture houses in the state, and although it was built before the underwriters' insurance specifications went into effect, it complies in every way with their terms. The house was opened on July 28, 1913, and has been enjoying a profitable business showing Mutual pictures with music dispensed by a three piece orchestra.

Princess Theater, Roswell, New Mexico.

The operating room is constructed of absolutely fireproof material and is equipped with trap door shutters which work automatically in case of a fire. A Power's machine is used; it projects a picture 13 by 18 feet at a distance of 92 feet. The house has a stage 18 feet deep by 23 feet wide.

The place is never in darkness, as the indirect lighting system is employed. The auditorium is supplied with nine exits. Steam heat keeps the place warm, and the air is always fresh, there being three exhaust fans and seven wall fans.

JEFFERSON THEATER, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The accompanying photo-engraving is a view of the Jefferson Theater, 811-813 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. It is owned and managed by the Jefferson Photo Show Company, comprised of George Hilkemeier, president, and William Hilkemeier, secretary and treasurer. As soon as the late Mayor Gaynor signed the ordinance allowing, among other things, that all New York motion picture theaters may have a seating capacity of six hundred seats, Messrs. Hilkemeier got busy, and soon the contractors were hard at work renovating the house to take advantage of the law. In addition to running the Jefferson Theater, the company operates four airdomes in the eastern part of Brooklyn.

The Hilkemeier Brothers have been in the business since 1904, when they bought their first picture house for the sum of $150.

Jefferson Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.

At that time some owners of picture theaters thought that it would be a good thing to use a barker and clown outside their houses to attract the public. This policy was being followed by those from whom the Hilkemeiers bought their first house. They did not like that kind of advertising and immediately abolished it, and started to "clean house." At the end of the first year in the business their ledger showed a big balance on the credit side. They have always kept their original policy of a good, clean show in the forefront, resulting in big profits. They do not believe in the "country store" inducements or any other such device to get the public patronizing their shows, and are firmly convinced that these schemes will pass out of existence in the evolution of the business.

William Hilkemeier was prominently identified during the New York Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League last July as chairman of the Entertainment Committee.

ELKS' TEMPLE TO BE PICTURE HOUSE.

Plans for a modern, first-class moving picture theater in the Elks' Temple, Spokane, Wash., are being prepared by the owner, J. W. Witheron. The change will involve an expenditure of about $40,000, according to reports. It is expected that the structure can be made to seat 1,400.

WILMINGTON, OHIO, GETS NEW PICTURE HOUSE.

Messrs. Lacy and McCoy, of Wilmington, Ohio, have opened a moving picture theater in that city under the name of "La Max," which is derived from the names of the proprietors. The structure is built of fireproof material and has a seating capacity of 500. A first-rate ventilating and lighting system has been installed. Universal pictures will be shown, but the house was opened with "The Last Days of Pompeii" and "Paul J. Rainey's African Hunt."

WILL REMODEL THEATER.

According to the plans of the new owner of the Arcade Theater, Deposit, N. Y., that house will soon be entirely renovated. The seating capacity will be increased to 500. Licensed pictures with a multiple reel feature will constitute each show.

NEW PICTURE HOUSE AT ASHLAND, PA.

Wagner & Kost, of Ashland, Pa., have commenced work on the building of a two-story moving picture theater in that city. The dimensions are 35 by 125 feet. The house will seat 700, and will cost about $20,000 to build.

PLAZA THEATER, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Plaza Amusement Company, New Orleans, La., which is operated by the same set of officers composing the Fichtenberg Amusement Enterprises, although a separate corporation, has opened its first photoplay house in New Orleans. H. Fichtenberg is the president of both companies. The house was opened in the early part of December, 1913, is one of the prettiest in the city, and, to use the words of the company, is "the only positively fireproof one in the city."

The lobby, as will be observed from the photo accompanying this article, is circular in shape. The canopy extending for some distance over the sidewalk is copper-covered and adorned with many electric lights.

Plaza Theater, New Orleans, La.

Pictures are projected upon a Day and Night Screen, which is giving entire satisfaction. A Bartola instrument furnishes the music to a program of three reels. According to information received from the company, Mr. Fichtenberg is the first man to install this instrument in a picture house in the south.

Mr. Fichtenberg was the recipient of many beautiful floral pieces on the opening day of the Plaza. These offerings were tastefully arranged in the lobby and photographed. Some of those who sent bouquets were the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, of New Orleans; the Mutual Film Corporation, of New Orleans; the local branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and many others.

ALHAMBRA THEATER, WEST DULUTH, MINN.

Carl F. Beier has built another theater in West Duluth, Minn. The name of the new house is the Alhambra, and it was erected at a cost of about $35,000, according to Mr. Beier. It was opened on September 15, 1913, and has been playing to good business with moving pictures and vaudeville since that date. It is absolutely fireproof and has a seating capacity of 500. Besides being the proprietor and manager of the Alhambra, Mr. Beier is also the owner of the Colonial, in the same city.

Alhambra Theater, West Duluth, Minn.

FAMILY THEATER, OTTAWA, ONT., CANADA.

The Family Theater, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, was originally built for a vaudeville house. It has a seating capacity of 1,142, and the total of paid admissions for the year 1913 was 504,663.

The interior decorations are pleasing, being of marble and tile, with old rose, old ivory and Moorish tints. There is not a pillar in the auditorium to obstruct the view of any one, the balcony being held by the cantilever process. The situation of the house is in Queen Street, which is just one block from the main streets of the city. The structure is absolutely fireproof. Motor-driven Simplex projection machines are used.

Family Theater, Ottawa, Ont., Canada.

An orchestra of seven pieces dispenses excellent music to a program of General Film Company pictures. Each piece of music is selected by Ken E. Finlay, who is manager of the Family. The admission prices are ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents. The house is always crowded at exhibitions It was recently purchased of the United Motion Picture Theaters, Ltd., by the Mark-Brock Enterprises, Ltd.

FRANCAIS THEATER, OTTAWA, ONT., CANADA.

Another motion picture theater which was recently purchased of the United Motion Picture Theaters, Ltd., by the Mark-Brock Enterprises, Ltd., is the Francais Theater, Dalhousie Street, Ottawa, Ont., Canada. This house has a seating capacity of Francais Theater, Ottawa, Ont., Canada.

1,352, and played to 50,322 paid admissions for six weeks ending September 27, 1913. The decorations are similar to those of the Family. The indirect lighting system is used. The Francais was built of reinforced concrete, and, to quote from Mr. Finley's letter (he being the manager of this house, as well as of the Family), "is the only absolutely fireproof theater in this section of the province." The house is situated in the French part of the city, and also uses Simplex machines. Mr. Finley also selects the music for this house to accompany a program of licensed and Universal pictures. Perfect ventilation is obtained at all times. The admission prices are the same as those of the Family, and crowded houses can be seen from the time it opens until closing time. The dimensions of the Francais are 70 feet by 140 feet.

Mr. Finley was the first man to show motion pictures in Ottawa, according to his letter, and that was about seven years ago. He started with a little store show and, with perseverance and hard work, has attained his present altitude.

TIVOLI OPERA HOUSE, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Messrs. Turner & Dahnken, of San Francisco, Cal., have added another picture theater to their growing circuit. Their latest addition is the Tivoli Opera House of that city. This house was erected a little less than a year ago by "Doc" Leahy and his associates at a cost of almost half a million dollars. It was recently acquired by the present owners, opera performances having failed after a trial of eight months. It is one of the most beautiful theaters in the city, and so far has been playing to excellent business with a program of feature films. Music is furnished by a ten-piece orchestra and a large pipe organ. Besides the orchestra there is a mezzanine floor and a first and second balcony, giving a seating capacity of over twenty-five hundred. The admission prices for all entertainments are ten, twenty and thirty cents. The Turner & Dahnken Circuit has its main office on the entire fourth floor at 942 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Tivoli Opera House, San Francisco, Cal.

IDLEHOUR THEATER, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The accompanying illustration is a front view of the Idlehour Theater, Milwaukee, Wis., taken at night. According to reports, it was built several years ago, and since then has been maintaining the distinction of being one of the foremost theaters in that city. Although it is quite some distance from the business section of the city, shrewd campaign methods in advertising, and careful management, have always kept the house in the premier class. It has a seating capacity of 700.

Idlehour Theater, Milwaukee, Wis.

Morgan-Universal Poster Contract.

Over One Million Dollars Involved In Big Deal Which Means a New Era In Motion Picture Publicity.

Through a new contract entered into last week in New York, between the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and the Morgan Lithograph Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, the former company has turned over to the latter the designing and lithographing of all of its advertising paper for a period of two years. This is without question the largest poster contract known in the history of the picture business.

The magnitude of the transaction may be realized from the fact that it involves the expenditure in the next two years of $1,300,000 and the eventual designing and printing of over 15,000,000 sheets. Someone with a head for figures has calculated that these sheets, if placed end to end, would reach over 10,000 miles, or a greater distance than from New York to Manila.

The details of the deal were arranged by President P. J. Morgan, acting for the Morgan Company, and Mr. P. D. Cochrane, head of the Poster Department of the Universal, and were adopted by the Board of Directors of the Universal in their meeting last Monday. By the terms of the agreement, the spacious offices on the fourth floor of the Mecca Building, have been rented and the Morgan Company will immediately install a corps of ten of the best poster sketch artists in the business, under the direct supervision of Ben Wells himself. As these studios immediately adjoin the premises of the Universal, the work will be at all times under the supervision of that company. This will insure a high quality of work that has never previously been attempted in motion picture posters, and much above the standard of previous theatrical lithography.

The artists who have been chosen by the Morgan Lithograph Company are masters of oil and water color, and they will devote themselves exclusively to work on the Universal posters, insuring the maintenance of their present high standard.

SENOR FORNAS SAILS FOR HOME.

Joseph Fornas, who had been in New York for several weeks as the special representative of Mr. Ambrosio, of Turin, Italy, sailed for home on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, on Thursday, February 12. Mr. Fornas, during his stay, has met many film men covering all branches of the industry. Mr. Fornas says he has been impressed with the difference in the methods of doing business in the metropolis and in Turin. In the latter city business men may begin as early in the morning as 8 o'clock, stopping at 12 for a couple of hours, and then continuing perhaps until 8 o'clock in the evening. Before sailing Mr. Fornas said that he expected to return to New York in the not distant future—that, in fact, he did not intend to be a stranger to New York. "I know my subway now, you know," he said, with a smile.

Senor Fornas in a Reflective Mood.

The accompanying five-reel photograph may be said to be a multiple view of a many-sided man. Mr. Fornas said that in his talks with film men he had found a liking for comedies and also for the dramas of the sensational sort—that is, of the exciting kind; not, however, for those bordering on the gruesome, for the adventurous as opposed to the blood-letting. In fact, the Italian visitor said there seemed to be a wide variety of opinion as to what the public did really care the most for, but sifted down a good picture of any description would "go." Mr. Fornas will take home to Italy with him the memory of many old friendships renewed and many new ones firmly established.

"Beneath the Czar."

An Effective Four-Part Solax Feature.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

HER ear keenly attuned to the demands of popular taste, Madame Blache has given us a most sensational story in films without sacrificing either art or good taste. These pictures are truly crowded with action, the interest is born with the very first scene and is well sustained; not an inch lags superfluous on the screen. "Beneath the Czar" is another illustration of the fact that American producers are quite as capable of cutting a figure in the feature field as their most redoubtable rivals on the other side.

The producer in this instance has shown a power of creating atmosphere without tiring out the patience of the spectator. The Russian atmosphere is present in this picture just as the Parisian atmosphere was plainly tangible in the last Solax release.

Miss Claire Whitney and Fraunie Fraunholz are featured in this release and both make the best of their parts. The picture opens very strongly by showing a Russian revolutionist undergoing tortures and being urged to confess . He refuses to confess despite his agonies. His daughter is then brought in, and, moved by the sufferings of her father, she agrees to act as a spy for the government if her father is freed from his torments. The daughter now believes that it is her duty to keep faith with the police and she consents to spy on a leader of the revolutionists, Prince Rubetzkoi. This prince, a noble-hearted patriot, is seeking to achieve his country's freedom. The reluctant spy becomes acquainted with him and her conscience revolts at the idea of betraying him and his associates. She therefore turns on her employers and even aids the Prince to escape. This escape is one of the thrilling parts of the play. The prince seeks to lead his pursuers astray by hiding in a tree. His hiding place is discovered and an attempt is made by one of the soldiers to dislodge him. The attempt failing, it is decided to chop down the tree and this is done in the most realistic manner, Fraunholz taking considerable of a chance in staying on the toppling tree to the last second.

The settings and the situations deserve the highest praise. The scene where the daughter of the imprisoned revolutionist lures the governor into the torture chamber and makes him place himself in a helpless position is especially strong and clever. The setting of the secret council chambers and the subterranean passage ways are well designed and convincing.

Evidences of able and conscientious direction are present all through the feature, which is undoubtedly one of the best that ever left the Solax studio.

LUCILLE YOUNGE, NOT AS A COWGIRL.

HERE is a picture that shows Lucille Younge off a horse. The girl, who has been identified with Western productions so long that you probably wouldn't recognize her in a "still" that hadn't cowboys in it, has passed up the cowboys, the Indians, the sheriffs and the bad, bad outlaws temporarily. She will be seen in real "society stuff" in New Majestics. Writing about the change, Miss Younge says: "I certainly like to work with my old director, Mr. Henderson, and Billy Garwood in my first love, society and modern dramatic stories. I'm rather tired of wild west riding, which has been mainly my line of work for the past three years. It seems good to do my acting again on terra firma instead of horseback. I love to ride horseback, but think I am better in the line of parts I had back East with Imp and Thanhouser. I have asked the Majestic scenario editor to find a blind girl part for me like the one I did in that old Thanhouser 'When Love Was Blind,' which gave me the finest chance for acting I ever had in pictures."

Lucille Younge.

"Michael Perrine."

A Four-Part Ambrosio Subject Featuring Italy's Most Famous Actor, Ermete Novelli.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

WE HAVE seen enough of Ermete Novelli in this country to class him with the greatest actors of our times. His art is subtle, profound and magnetic in its influence upon the spectator. He gives the finest illustrations of the art which conceals art.

In this Ambrosio feature, "Michael Perrine," he is very much in love with his part. This is evident from the start of the story to the finish. We see no longer Ermete Novelli, but a most charming old French priest who is guiding his rustic flock in the paths of goodness and sweetness. There is a singular delightfulness and wholesomeness about the old shepherd of souls. In the midst of his idyllic and useful work there comes a day when the soldiers of the Revolution enter his little village, set fire to his church and leave him and his humble parish in utter desolation.

Scene from "Michael Perrine" (Ambrosio).

The good father remembers he has a sister in Paris, and so he decides to make his home with her. When he reaches Paris he discovers that his sister has died, but he accepts the invitation of his niece to stay with her.

The niece, Therese, is engaged to be married to Bernard, and Father Michael, who likes Bernard, is much pleased with the plans of the young people. Alas, the marriage is still far off, for both Therese and Bernard are desperately poor, and the old priest discovers to his great sorrow that he is likely to add to their burdens, for he is unable to procure work. He hears that Fouche, Napoleon's famous minister of police, is in Paris. He and Fouche were schoolmates, and hoping that Fouche will aid him the old priest hurries to his office. Fouche is happy to renew his old friendship with Father Michael, but is at a loss how to employ him. At this moment Fouche is called into the presence of Napoleon, and hurriedly takes leave of Father Michael, charging his assistant with finding some sort of employment for the priest.

Fouche's assistant, looking at the guileless old man before him, is amused at the thought of utilizing him for the secret police service when suddenly the idea strikes him that the very simplicity of the old man might prove of value to his secret service. People would never mind the harmless old priest, and he might overhear things which it might be most important for Napoleon's police agents to know. Of course, the old man cannot be told in so many words that it is proposed to employ him as a spy—such a course would spoil everything, for, if the old man is as simple as a dove, he is also as wise as a serpent, and he would shrink with horror from any proposition to spy upon others. Fouche's assistant then makes this proposal to the priest: "Go, mingle with the people in clubs and restaurants, observe what is going on and write a report to me every day. For this we will pay you twenty francs a day."

The proposal fills the good father with amazement. "What," cries he, "twenty francs every day just for amusing myself, and writing a little report?' He rushes home wholly unsuspicious of the ulterior motives of Fouche's assistant and tells of his good luck to Therese and Bernard, and is the happiest man in Paris.

In the meantime Bernard has fallen in with some royalist conspirators who have induced him to sign a petition for the return of the Bourbons, and who have sworn to assassinate Napoleon. Bernard signed the paper, out of friendship for a comrade, without knowing its contents. The compromising paper is left at the home of Bernard, and is reposing on the table when Father Perrine comes in after his daily strolls and remembers that he has not written his daily report. He takes the back of the compromising paper, writes his report on it and brings it to the minister of police, who, by this time, has become very tired of the old priest. He is about to throw the report on the table when he glances at the other side of the paper and finds the evidence of the anti-Napoleonic conspiracy. He imagines that the priest is really a clever schemer who uses his simple ways and manners as a cloak for deep designs. "What a great idea!" the minister exclaims, "to write out an apparently harmless report on the sheet containing the names of the conspirators, for whom all the secret agents of Fouche had been hunting in vain." He rushes upon the old man, congratulates him, shakes him in his excess of joy, and takes the bewilderment of Father Perrine as a further piece of clever deception.

On this evidence, unwittingly supplied by the priest, two of the conspirators are arrested and brought to Fouche, who turns them over to Father Perrine, informing him that these young men had intended to murder Napoleon. Father Perrine, still unaware of the part which fate had thrust upon him, reasons in his persuasive, gentle way with the conspirators. He is in his element. He feels himself once more the Lord's shepherd, and he talks so earnestly and convincingly to the two young men that they become repentant and profess sorrow for their intention to kill a human being. Satisfied with their repentance, the good priest tells them to go home to their families, and opens a secret passage for them to leave by.

Scene from "Michael Perrine" (Ambrosio).

When Fouche hears that the conspirators have been let go by the priest he is in dismay, and turns in great anger to the guileless father. It turns out, however, that the priest's course really saved the life of Napoleon, because the conspirators, in return for the priest's kindness, betray the plans of their fellows in time to enable the police to act. But now it flashes upon the priest that he has been used as a spy, and his indignation is great. He did not expect this of his old schoolmate, he says, now more in sorrow than in anger. Fouche makes amends by ordering that Father Perrine's school and church be rebuilt, and that he be reinstated in all his old honors and duties. The good father goes back to Bretagne to the care and cure of souls, not a whit the worse for his contact with the world, and supremely happy among his children, from whom the cruel Revolution had separated him for a little while.

This Ambrosio feature is a gem of the "purest ray serene," a treasure of the motion picture art. No one can escape its spell, its pathos, its sweetness, and last, but not least, its humor.

JANE DARNELL THANKS FRIENDS.

My Dear Photoplayer Friends and "Motion Picture Fans":

Through the kindness of the Moving Picture World, I am enabled to thank each and every one of you who have been so kind to me during my illness. I do appreciate it more than you can imagine. I am spending a most delightful winter amid sunshine and roses in Southern Texas and have almost entirely regained my health and just as soon as the weather in New York permits me, I shall return to my old place at the Thanhouser studio. Again I thank you all, ten fold. With my very best wishes for you always, I remain,

Most sincerely yours,

JEAN DARNELL.

A Great Historical Subject.

"Wolfe, or the Conquest of Quebec," Admirably Done by the Kalem Company on Historic Ground.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

TO visualize in a befitting manner one of the greatest struggles on this continent was the task which the Kalem Company set itself when it started on its work of reproducing in motion pictures the Conquest of Canada by the English. It was a task which required time, money, much expert camera work, great bodies of men who had to be drilled and disciplined. It took even more than that. In order to make such an undertaking successful it was necessary to go to the very spots where the battles were fought, to scale the very heights of the great natural fortress, Quebec, to pay close attention to history and to dare for the benefit of the camera what had once been dared for the love of country and of glory.

The task has been done with unqualified success. For over an hour I sat enthralled by the spectacle of seeing history literally repeating itself on the screen. Once again the lilies of France waved in old Quebec; once again the two great nations fought on land and on water; once again the daring souls of Wolfe and Montcalm were embodied on the bloody field of battle; once again the fight raged about the gentle and beautiful falls of Montmorenci; once again the fire-rafts floated down the old historic river, that the French named for the martyred saint; once again the lumbering cannon of the English threw its shells against the fortifications, and once again the French replied with their equally antiquated ordnance; once again the old armed sailing craft of the English made slow headway against the hostile shores. At times the realism of the spectacle was overpowering. The attack of the French, who set burning rafts adrift in the direction of the British fleet, was reproduced with a skill which was indeed worthy of such a subject.

The scaling of the heights, however, was one of the strongest scenes in the picture. Every schoolboy is familiar with this wonderful combination of luck and daring, and our expectations when we come to that part of the feature are naturally high. We are not disappointed. The marvelous feat is acted over in the most realistic manner conceivable. The excellence is uniform; there is no flaw that I was able to detect. The uniforms of the contending armies were correct to the last button. The military movements were executed in a most convincing manner. Accuracy in all historic matters was the aim of the producer. In pursuance of this ambitious and laudable aim they hired an old fighting vessel, believed to date back to the period of the English conquest. The Canadian government set a great value on this ship and made the Kalems furnish a heavy bond for the safe return of the ancient craft. The Kalems even found their way into the interior of the old fort and were permitted to use the ancient ramparts for one hour. They certainly improved this hour and thereby added another realistic touch to their picture. The Indians who formed part of the French camp on Orleans Island were the descendants of the very Indians who fought with the French against the English in the original battles.

The Camp on the Island of Orleans.

It is impossible to imagine a more romantic and impressive setting for a great event than the Canadian scenery in and Montcalm and His Staff Planning the Battle of Quebec.

around Quebec. We see the historic portions of the old city of Quebec, faithfully recorded by the camera. The ancient wall, which at one time encircled the entire city, is now almost gone, but the gate through which Montcalm retreated into the city after the fatal issue of the struggle on the Plains of Abraham is still standing and formed one of the most important and interesting links in the historic chain of events. The very house in which the brave but unfortunate general of the French forces breathed his last after sustaining a fatal wound in the thickest of the fighting is shown in the films. Historical accuracy could go no further.

Mignon Carrying the Message to Montmorency Falls.

"How many ages hence
"Shall this our lofty scene be acted over
"In states unborn and accents yet unknown."

Applying the words to these pictures we might add, "and by a power which no mortal ever knew before."

The Flagship of the British Fleet.

Interwoven with the progress of the historic action, much in the manner of a good historic novel, is a very sweet and pretty love story which enlists our interest at the very start and makes us follow its adventurous course with unabated attention to the very end. The hero of the romance is a lieutenant in the Royal Americans, a force consisting of Colonial troops, while the heroine is a pretty little French country maiden. The acting throughout is good. The central figures in this great epic of motion pictures are, of course, the generals of the contending armies and they both look and act their part.

The educational value of such a picture, quite aside from its dramatic qualities, cannot be overestimated. In a little more than an hour we learn more of one of the decisive battles in the world's history than the most painstaking historian could teach us in many a volume of printed pages. Historic accuracy has been rarely attempted by producers and still more rarely has it been achieved. When the producer spares neither labor nor pains nor money to make sure of his history the screen becomes the most effective and the shortest road to the teaching of history. It is foolish to be afraid of producing historic pictures, for what is history but the recorded drama of the past.

H. W. Savage Allies With Famous Players.

Well-Known and Successful Dramatic Producer Brings with Him Many Famous Productions.

A joint announcement of great importance to the motion picture industry and the theatrical world in general has just come from the Famous Players Film Company and Henry W. Savage, Inc., to the effect that an affiliation has been consummated between Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, and Henry W. Savage, for the purpose of producing all the plays owned and controlled by the Savage Company, in motion pictures. These plays include such prominent successes as "The Million," "Top o' the Mornin'," "The Great Name," "The Prince of Pilsen," "Little Boy Blue," "The Galloper," "Common-sense Brackett," "Miss Patsy," "The College Widow," "Madame X," "Mary Jane's Pa," "The Little Damosel," "Con & Co.," "The Sultan of Sulu," "The Merry Widow," "The Devil," "The Stolen Story," "The County Chairman," "Excuse Me," and "Everywoman." The great success attained by these plays when produced on the stage may serve to indicate the certain popularity that will attend the film versions of these subjects.

It is necessary, in recording this significant alliance, to explain that for some time past Mr. Savage has been approached by representatives of the world's leading film concerns with the view of effecting an affiliation to produce these famous plays in motion pictures. It is a fact complimentary to the high standards of the Famous Players Film Company that before Mr. Savage closed an arrangement with any other film concern he gave serious consideration to the remarkable productions of that company, and after a visit to its studios and a careful examination of its unusual facilities, equipment and advanced methods, Mr. Savage concluded that an affiliation with the Famous Players would insure the nearest approach to the high standard of merit that distinguished the original productions.

All who have followed the amazingly successful career of Henry W. Savage in the theatrical producing business are familiar with his judicious choice of plays, his devotion to the artistic development of the drama, and his careful and close attention to every detail in the mounting of his productions. It is, therefore, easily apparent that these plays possess all the elements that should contribute to the perfect photoplay, including strong dramatic action, forceful plot, charming characterization, impressive environment and a broad and universal appeal. A casual scrutiny of the list of plays above mentioned will also disclose a variety of theme and character necessary in the selection of a film program such as is released by the Famous Players. The statements of both Mr. Zukor and Mr. Savage concerning the alliance bear an interesting parallel in that each records, as a contributory reason for the affiliation, a respectful regard for the reputation and distinction of the other's organization.

"The unusual and consistent merit of the Famous Players productions," said Mr. Savage, "was the primary inducement for my giving that concern the preference over all the other film combinations that have long desired to produce my plays in motion pictures. Until I was certain that the film productions of these plays would, in every respect, come up to the standard of the original staging, I did not consider any motion picture alliance. On the strength of the artistic excellence of the Famous Players subjects and the possibilities of varied environment offered by their film studios in New York, Los Angeles and London, I decided that an affiliation with this company would maintain in the film portrayals of my plays the dignity with which I have tried to invest the original productions."

Mr. Zukor said: "I am pleased at this alliance, because it evidences Mr. Savage's confidence in our organization, and also because I am certain that the motion picture public will receive with enthusiasm these famous plays just added to our program. My sincere respect for the artistic ideals of Mr. Savage, prominently manifested in all his productions, adds to my personal appreciation of this alliance."

DISAPPEARS WITH 101 RANCH FILMS.

We are informed by the 101 Ranch motion picture department that Chester Byers has mysteriously disappeared with six reels of the Ranch and Show pictures. Byers left the ranch after the closing of the show last season to exhibit the feature films in the State of Massachusetts. He was last heard of in Boston and anyone knowing the whereabouts of Byers will confer a great favor to Miller Brothers by wiring them at Bliss, Okla.

Arctic Hunts

Captain F. E. Kleinschmidt Produces Seven Reels of Highly Interesting Records of Life In the Frozen North.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

CAPTAIN F. E. Kleinschmidt, whose Alaskan pictures are well remembered, has once more returned from the frozen North after an absence of five months with a new and most valuable supply of kinematographic lore and material. His pictures were but recently shown in the Auditorium at Washington, D. C., before a full attendance of members of the House of Congress, who were then legislating or trying to legislate upon Alaskan affairs. The captain's information in motion pictures was greatly valued by the legislators, who freely declared that nothing less than a trip to and a long residence in the territory could have supplied them with the facts recorded by the captain's pictures. Parts of the pictures were shown last week to the Camp Fire Club, at a banquet in the Biltmore Hotel and were thoroughly enjoyed by the distinguished assemblage.

Sulphur Bottom Whale. Photo About 25 or 30 Feet Distant.

Baby Seals Taken Alive, but They Refused To Eat and Died En Route.

It is quite impossible within the short space of a hasty review to do even partial justice to the vast subject so splendidly filmed by Captain Kleinschmidt. The pictures show the eternal struggle of the titanic forces of nature in the extreme north, they give most entertaining and instructive views of the animal life in Alaska, conclusively proving it to be the greatest game preserve in the New World; they show the life of the natives, the trading and bartering, the dangers and difficulties of navigation in the icy waters, the volcanic regions and a hundred other things which cannot even be mentioned here.

Whatever has heretofore been said and written about the origin of icebergs drifting down from the North and besetting the course of the transatlantic steamers with perpetual dangers may well be discarded after one sees the genesis of an iceberg demonstrated in these films. If the pictures showed nothing else they would be of the highest educational value. Captain Kleinschmidt shows the immense glaciers, which move so slowly but surely in the northern waters. He shows the gigantic pressure behind these endless walls of ice, the gradual disintegration in consequence of the pressure and then the fall of whole ridges and columns and huge blocks of ice into the open sea. He shows several of these miracles of active nature and demonstrates the terrific force by showing, not only the thundering break in the solid walls, but also the upheaval in the waters after such a break, which looks like a tremendous explosion.

There are touches of humor and pathos in his pictures of the birdlife in the arctic regions, while the pictures dealing with the fourfooted animals abound in thrills and marvels. He has caught caribou and moose and brown deer and bears and porcupines in their native habitats, and at close range when they fancied themselves unobserved. The sight of these splendid and majestic kings of the northern woods at such close range is truly inspiring. The doings of the walrus and the sea-lions afforded matter for infinite variety to his camera. The captain tried to rope a huge sea-lion who, contrary to the timid habits of this species, stood his ground at the approach of the captain and fought him back. In vain did the captain try to lasso the beast. It had practically no neck at all and there was nothing for the lasso to take hold of. At last, however, by making a hitch in the loop, the captain succeeded in catching the big fellow. It was but for a moment. The next instant the rope was snapped asunder and the sea-lion was plunging into the water, satisfied to have made a good fight. The lives of these sea-lions are portrayed down to the minutest details, which in this case means the funny little puppies that trail in the rear of the big herds.

The results of the government's investments in stocking Alaska with reindeer and salmon are shown with convincing power. Out of a herd of 400 reindeer in 1894, there have grown up herds now totalling 38,000 head. The reindeer, as is well known, is the great food staple in the extreme north, furnishing both the whites and the Eskimos with their means of subsistence. The salmon is shown in all its graceful beauty and strength going down the rapids and rushing into the traps set for them. The whole subject of the salmon is covered thoroughly and forms not the least interesting chapter in this motion picture story of Alaska.

One of the most curious objects in the films is the appearance of the dead body of a "sulphur bottom" or "humpbacked" whale floating on the water. There were many guesses at the Camp Fire Club as to what this strange object might be. It looks like a huge black pillar somewhat inflated in the center.

The portrayal of the lives of the natives has in it much of novelty. The huts of a few Eskimos hanging to the barren rocks of a little island had never been photographed before and make an interesting spectacle.

"These poor fellows," said the Captain, "have a hard struggle to live, but they manage and I think are much happier than your dwellers in the tenements and rookeries of the cities."

At a future date more space will be given to this absorbing subject. It is entitled to a special place in the annals of educational and useful kinematography.

"THE CROSS IN THE CACTI" (Two Reel Eclair).

An entirely different western story filled with hair-raising "chase" scenes. This picture shows some of the most daring riding ever attempted and a revolver battle is filmed in which real bullets are used. It will be released February 18.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

MAINE EXHIBITORS IN CONVENTION.

A MEETING of the Maine State Branch, No. 29, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was held at the Falmouth Hotel, Portland, Me., on Tuesday, February 3, at 2 o'clock. Moxley C. Blumenberg, president of the Maine branch, presided. In the absence of J. A. Emery, the secretary, his duties were performed by J. W. Greely. Among the members present at the convention were: William Gray, A. P. Bibber, F. S. Hoy, J. T. McCarthy, and Mr. McDonough, all of Lewiston; J. W. Colby, of Sanford; A. A. Allen, Bangor; F. E. Mortimer, Freeport; C. H. Seymour, Houlton; A. V. Rosenberg, Rockland; Neil Kelliher, Waterville; P. J. Powers, Caribou; Moxley C. Blumenberg, I. M. Mosher, J. A. McConville, W. E. Reeves, and J. W. Greely, all of Portland. Two new members were admitted to the branch: A. P. Libby, of Fort Fairfield, and Frank Stanley, of Dixfield, both of whom were present.

Two special committees were appointed; one on legislation, and the other on publicity and membership. The legislation committee is as follows: Neil Kelliher, chairman; I. M. Mosher, A. V. Rosenberg, J. W. Greely, and C. H. Seymour.

The publicity and membership committee was chosen as follows: A. V. Rosenberg, chairman; J. W. Greely, J. A. McConville, Neil Kelliher, A. P. Bibber, M. C. Blumenberg, and J. A. Emery.

Routine business was transacted and consideration was given to matters relating to the exhibition end of the business. It was voted to hold the next meeting at Portland, on the second Tuesday in June, upon which occasion "Field Day" will be held at one of the islands in Casco Bay. At the June meeting officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and also delegates and alternates to the National Convention at Dayton.

Upon adjournment of the meeting, all exchangemen were invited into the convention hall. General Manager J. A. Eslow, of the Universal program, journeyed from Boston to meet the Maine exhibitors, and addressed them on the subject of how to run moving picture houses. Mr. Eslow protested with utmost vigor against the exhibition of more than five reels to a change, and pointed out how injurious such a policy has always been to the exhibitors.

Manager Appleby, of the Mutual's Boston office, dilated upon the strength of his program, and explained the present publicity campaign of his company.

Manager Fred Murphy, of the World Special Films Corporation, was present, and threw a few bouquets at the recent releases of his corporation.

In the evening the members and exchangemen attended Keith's theater as guests of Mr. Hiram Abrams.

President Moxley Blumenberg has every reason to be proud of the success of this meeting. It was not only the best attended, but the most enthusiastic one yet held, and augurs well for the future of the Maine State Branch.

The persistent efforts of Mr. Blumenberg and his associates are now showing real results. HENRY.

BRONX BRANCH OF N. Y. ASSOCIATION.

An important meeting of the Bronx exhibitors was held at the Bronx Centre Theater, on Thursday night, Feb. 5th, with a representative body of exhibitors present.

Mr. Trigger presided and stated that the meeting had been called for the purpose of forming a local branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York, in the Bronx, and that it was time that they recognized the necessity of every exhibitor becoming a member of the association.

Mr. Bauerenfreund stated that there were forty-seven exhibitors in the Bronx at present affiliated with this association, and there was no reason why they should not all become affiliated. Mr. Friedman spoke on the conditions now existing in the Bronx, and many suggestions were made whereby they could be remedied.

On the motion of Mr. Rosenthal, temporary officers were elected with Mr. Samuel Eckman, Jr., of the Bronx Centre Theater, as president and Mr. Newman of the Peerless Theater as secretary.

The meeting adjourned at 2 a.m. to meet again at the Bronx Centre Theater on Thursday night, Feb. 19th, and it is to be hoped that every Bronx exhibitor will attend.

LEGISLATION IN KENTUCKY.

State Censorship Bill Displeases Exhibitors. Theater Construction Bill Likely to Bother Those in Smaller Cities.

Consideration of a bill introduced in the Kentucky legislature proposing the censorship of moving picture plays by the chairman and secretary of the Kentucky State Library Commission was taken up at a meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Kentucky, held at Covington, January 27th. Many members of the league believe that such a law would seriously interfere with their interests and should it be passed steps may be taken to test its validity in the courts.

Louis J. Dittmar, president of the league, said: "Such an act as the one proposed would work a hardship both upon the producer and the theater owners. It would tie up all films entering the state and would naturally delay their arrival at the theaters. As all would have to be passed upon in turn, it would take considerable time to do this, and producers would not send large films into the state for fear they would be held up. This would mean a considerable loss in money. In Ohio, where a similar law was passed, the producers have managed to secure an injunction, which they hope to make permanent."

Mr. Dittmar pointed out the address of the late Mayor Gaynor, of New York, defending his action in vetoing a similar bill there. In his address Mayor Gaynor declared that the present laws against indecent literature and pictures thoroughly covered the matter, and that censorship does not belong to free government.

The proposed act places a fee of $1 for each reel of films to be censored, and for a fee of $2 on those of over 1,000 feet in length. A penalty of $25 is placed upon violation of the act.

Another Measure.

Another measure, regulating the construction of theaters, was introduced at the instance of the state fire marshal, C. C. Bosworth, and has the backing of the Kentucky State Fire Prevention Association, an underwriters' association, having in fact been drawn up by the secretary of that organization.

The moving picture people in Louisville are not particularly concerned over the measure, as their buildings have been subjected to regulation under the building laws of Louisville; but it is likely that a good many exhibitors out in the State would be required to change their buildings to conform with the law.

The bill provides for inclosing picture machines in booths not less than 6 x 8 x 7 feet in dimensions, constructed of sheet iron, or asbestos board, covered with metal lath and Portland cement plaster. The entrance shall be no larger than 2 x 5 feet, and arranged to close automatically. The opening through which the picture is thrown shall be not larger than 6 x 12 inches, provided with a gravity door, which shall normally remain closed. The fixtures and equipment of the booth shall be fireproof. Proper ventilating equipment for getting rid of hot air, generated in operating the machine, is required. Incombustible magazines for receiving and delivering the films are required.

No picture show shall be given in any building having combustible exterior walls. Openings on the street are required and the main floor shall not be more than four feet above or below the adjoining street level. It is provided, however, that under certain conditions second-floor rooms may be used. At least two exits must be provided in addition to the door used as an entrance. Exits must be at least five feet wide. Aisles shall not be less than three feet wide. Any scenery used must be fireproof.

Three chemical fire extinguishers must be placed in each room where moving picture machines are operated. No person shall be allowed to stand in the aisle. A license must be obtained from the state fire marshal, certifying that the premises are in compliance with the act, before any moving picture show may be operated. The marshal is given powers of inspection. The certificate fee is to be $25, to be applied to the funds of the office. The fire marshal is given the power to revoke certificates for violation of the provisions of the act. The fire marshal shall have authority to have the electric current cut off from any picture show which is operated in violation of the act.

The provisions of the act are to apply to picture exhibitions given in theaters, churches, schools, public halls or any other place, whether used for such purpose temporarily or permanently. A fine of from $5 to $50 for each offense is to be made the penalty on violating any of the provisions of the act.

The bill was introduced by Senator Robertson, of Louisville, and is listed as Senate Bill 86. It has been referred to the committee on public health and police power. G. D. C.

CONVENTION HEADQUARTERS OPENED.

Managing Director Wiley Engages Suite in Commercial Building, Dayton, Ohio, and the Campaign Is On.

George H. Wiley, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and managing director of the Fourth Annual Exhibitors' Convention and Second International Exposition of Motion Picture Arts, to be held in conjunction at Dayton, Ohio, next July, has secured a suite of offices in the Commercial Building, Dayton, and opened headquarters where all business pertaining to the dual event will be transacted. Matters are well in shape and Clem Kerr, promotion secretary, is hard at work on the preliminaries.

Indications are that the Dayton will be the largest that has yet been held by the Exhibitors' League. Already interest in the event is running high through the Middle West and there will be a great turn out of exhibitors.

The diagram of space in the exposition hall, the New Memorial Hall, will be ready for distribution at an early date and the campaign to secure exhibits will then be opened.

KEMPTON GREENE.

KEMPTON GREENE, for two years a valued member of the Lubin forces, has within the past six months achieved a constantly increasing reputation for versatility as a photoplay actor. Mr. Greene was first employed by the Lubin Co. to do light-comedy parts and starred in these roles under several directors for nearly a year.

Kempton Greene.

But it remained for Director Terwilliger to discover the real value of Mr. Greene—a portrayer of emotional dramatic parts of real ability. In this latter class of work the young player, who is only 26 years old, continues to improve with marked rapidity.

His first success in heavier roles was scored by his presentation of the adopted son in Mr. Terwilliger's three-reel play, "The Cry of the Blood." Following closely upon the heels of this success, Mr. Greene made another hit in playing opposite Miss Rosemary Theby, as her degenerate brother, in Shannon Fife's two-reel play, "A Question of Right."

This marked Mr. Greene's first appearance with the Harry Myers-Rosemary Theby Company. But Director Terwilliger was not prone to let go of him and immediately following this play he placed Mr. Greene among the leading players in the special company he had gathered for the presentation of the Charles Klein plays. Photoplay patrons throughout the country will thus soon have the pleasure of seeing him appear in such plays as "Daughters of Men," "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Gamblers," "The Third Degree," and other productions by Mr. Terwilliger.

MISS BELLE RUTLAND.

THERE are, among the lesser lights of the photoplay, many clever men and women whose names are seldom featured on the posters or the advertisements of the pictures in which they appear, but they, none the less, take important parts in the pictures for which they are cast, and they, too, must possess special qualifications for the work they have to do. Not infrequently do these lesser lights blossom out as real stars of the first magnitude; for, in most instances, they are "stars" in the making. This little introduction brings us to the subject of this sketch, Miss Belle Rutland, a dainty bit of femininity and a true motion picture star in the making. Miss Rutland has not had the advantage of the favoring influences that sometimes foist mediocre players into positions of prominence on the screen, yet she has made material progress in the work and has something in the way of experience to her credit. A season with the Pathe American Company gave her an excellent introduction and her advancement was rapid to parts of considerable prominence. Since then Miss Rutland has worked in different studios and under various directors with good results. As a photographic subject Miss Rutland possesses all the qualifications of face and figure that have spelled success for others of less ability. Clever, vivacious and with sufficient temperament, she should find a permanent place in motion picture stock.

Belle Rutland.

Miss Rutland has had considerable theatrical experience which is a valuable asset to any aspirant for motion picture distinction. At present she is engaged at the Universal studio in Coytesville.

KLEINE TO MARKET EIGHT-REEL "NAPOLEON."

"Napoleon," made by Cines, will be placed on the American market by George Kleine through his branch offices March 10. "Napoleon" is in eight reels and fairly bristles with spectacular battle scenes. Throughout the picture runs a love story centering about the evil influence exercised by the famous Madame De Longueville and a certain baron of ill repute in the history of those days.

Anthony Novelli, of "Quo Vadis?" and "Antony and Cleopatra" fame, and Jeanette Trimble, who played "Cleopatra," play the respective leads. "Napoleon" is played by the same actor whose body and facial resemblance to the great general has caused him to be cast in legitimate dramas as well as pictures demanding a likeness to Napoleon.

The entire eight reels are conspicuous for their remarkable photography, massive ensemble scenes and splendid acting.

SOLAX NIGHT AT WILLIAM FOX'S AUDUBON.

The exhibition of "Ben Bolt," one of the Solax star feature productions at the Audubon Theater, 165th St. and Broadway, was marked by a special program, on Friday, February 13th, consisting of the personal appearance of Claire Whitney, James O'Neil and Joseph Levering, the leading characters in the production. This feature was shown at this palatial William Fox playhouse for the three days beginning on Lincoln's birthday, February 12th. Besides personally appearing, the players did a specialty act. This is the first of a series of Solax nights to be held at the William Fox's houses throughout New York State and New England.

While one copy of "Ben Bolt" is going over the Fox Circuit, another copy is going over the Keith & Proctor time in the metropolitan district. It will be part of the program of the week of February 22nd at the Fifth Avenue house, and Manager McCune is so enthusiastic that he is planning to have all Solax and Blache productions to follow this one. This is another feather in Madame and Mr. Blache's caps.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE.

SELIG-HEARST WEEKLY.

THE whole world of filmdom will be interested to know that another great news weekly in films will be issued in about a week or so, the exact date of the first release being not yet definitely determined. Nor has it been decided upon at the time of writing whether the weekly will be christened the Selig-Hearst or the Hearst-Selig Weekly, but it will be prepared and issued by the two men mentioned, both of world fame in their respective fields.

The Selig-Hearst Weekly will be of regular reel length and will contain all important events of world interest. These world events will be gathered by means of the International News Service, which at present furnishes four hundred daily publications in the United States alone with news features and illustrations. It maintains its own bureaus in every important city of the world and is thus in a position to gather at any time, on the instant, great news features in all parts of the world.

It is needless to state that a large army of cameramen has already been utilized for the service. Every man is at his post ready for duty when orders are flashed.

I understand that one of the most qualified newspaper cameramen in the country, if not in the world, has been down in Mexico for some time taking the important engagements of the civil war. His name is Wallace, and it is said that the early issues of the Selig-Hearst Weekly will show several of these battles.

Every corner of the world has been brought into easy reach for the service of the Selig-Hearst Weekly, and it is confidently asserted that exhibitors will be able to offer their patrons every week a complete compendium of prominent news items of the entire world.

Chicago Censorship and Remarkable Campaign for Pictures.

Many letters from residents of Chicago, touching on censorship, have been printed in the daily press for several weeks past. The injustice of censorship has become so onerous and un-American that patrons of moving pictures have resented it with strong condemnation. One of the many, under the heading "Hysteria and Moving Pictures," wrote to the Tribune as follows:

"By what authority does Major Funkhouser and the small coterie of women who surround him assume the obligation to regulate our moving picture shows? The main accomplishment of this select and exclusive group seems to be an extremely highly developed sense of prudish hysteria, which they do not hesitate to have inflicted upon those unwilling to reap the 'benefit' of their pseudo interest in the affairs of our municipality.

"I feel quite certain that if the moving picture interests were to decide upon a concerted attack they would have the backing of the real citizens of Chicago and would be of incalculable value in eliminating Funkhouser and his aids, or at least wresting from him the control which he has assumed in attempting to pass upon the moral standards of patrons of film shows."

Another had this to say: "It is gratifying to note that so great a paper as The Tribune prints an editorial on moving picture censorship that is unbiased. It seems that all articles appearing in Chicago papers of late, concerning moving pictures, have been largely of a condemnatory character. Small wonder that the moving picture interests are combining against Funkhouserism.

"I am an ardent picture fan (which, to the major's notion, would probably preclude the thought of my being called sane—still, I have escaped Dunning), and I do know that many of the cutouts and rejections of films have been silly and puerile. Even Shakespeare does not escape emasculation."

It is largely due to this comprehensive expression of disapproval of the present censorship of moving pictures—the expressed will of the people—that Chicago newspapers have engaged in a campaign of remarkable strength on behalf of this form of amusement. The press, if it stands for the people—for the expressed wish and desire of the people along progressive lines—must be their mouthpiece.

Anyone who reads Chicago papers today cannot fail to be impressed by the large space devoted to stories of current releases, daily, in nearly all of them. These stories are liberally illustrated and, in some instances, fill fully half a page. The Tribune, the Examiner and the News print these stories daily without any accompanying advertisement by the manufacturers of the film subjects so treated. The Record-Herald, which is running full page advertisements almost daily for the Universal, is giving extensive daily stories of the releases of that product. The News has engaged a special writer, familiar with cinematographic work, to cover the film news of the city in daily articles. In fact the news columns of the Chicago press, just now, overlook no local film happening of importance, while the outside world is well covered by the Associated Press and by cable.

There is no doubt whatever that this flood of favorable publicity for the moving picture was largely caused by the Chicago Tribune's exploitation of "The Adventures of Kathlyn," in conjunction with Wm. N. Selig. The marvelous results of the Tribune's campaign have caught all classes of the Windy City by the ears. As the "Kathlyn" series proceed in their unraveling, the story grows in popularity. Crowded houses are still the rule, and the tremendous competition for the prints of the sets as they are released shows no abatement.

In cities outside of Chicago the same interest exists, as the following communication to Mr. Selig shows:

"The writer wishes to congratulate you on the wonderful success of the 'Adventures of Kathlyn' series. These releases have been a great boom to the moving picture business, particularly at this period when the exhibitors are complaining bitterly on account of poor business. The line of advertising has also been a great assistance in placing them on the market. We are sure if you have any other series that might be placed on the market, in the same manner, in the future, we would even anticipate greater results although we have not as yet run anything that equals the 'Kathlyn' series."

Another jubilant exhibitor sent the following telegram: "Broken seven years record with 'The Adventures of Kathlyn' tonight. Congratulations."

Chicago's Deputized Censorship.

"In the case of the moving picture people I have not been to blame," said Major Funkhouser recently. "I have not censored any pictures myself, nor have I been present when the jury has voted upon them. In each case the jury has been composed of persons of high standing, including Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton, Father Frederick Sedenberg, Dr. Graham Taylor, Miss Harriet Vittum, Miss Minnie Lowe, and other prominent citizens. This jury pronounces upon the pictures and I accept their verdict. I have been blamed for the findings of the jury and the moving picture operators are after my job, but I do not fear them.

"Every schoolhouse should have a dancing auditorium and a moving picture theater," said Major Funkhouser, speaking of preventive measures at the same meeting.

Wherein do the members of Major Funkhouser's censor jury excel the members of the National Censor Board? Perhaps they become endowed with superior gifts and inspiration because they have been appointed by the major.

Vigorous complaints against the present censorship have reached Mayor Harrison, who is ill just now, and, according to one in a position to know, the moyor is not pleased with the extremes to which the censorship has gone. These complaints, it is said, do not come from film concerns.

"I am against the idea of censorship in a free country altogether," said Charles C. Fitzmorris, secretary to the mayor, the other day. "I am not surprised that the people are complaining of it; they are not accustomed to such things."

It is known that strong interests connected with the film companies have made representations to Mayor Harrison looking to Major Funkhouser's suppression or removal, but they have obtained no definite expression from the executive.

Major Funkhouser himself appeared annoyed when he was asked about the situation and placed the entire blame for the agitation on the newspapers.

"In a few days I shall be able to name the man who is behind all the newspaper attacks on me," he declared. "The papers are acting from motive of self-interest. They think they can get my job, but they can't do it. I know where I get off in this business."

A Veteran Manager Retired by Moving Pictures.

Will J. Davis, the veteran manager of the Illinois theater, this city, announced his retirement from the theatrical field after forty years of strenuous work, on the eve of his seventieth birthday, at a banquet given in his honor by the Forty Club, Tuesday evening, February 3.

In explanation, the day afterward he said: "This is a very mechanical age. But no one can tell me that the return to the public is as satisfying as it used to be. To have their hearts touched the theatergoers must clearly see the faces of the actors and must hear their voices. Only across the footlights, in that way, can real emotions be depicted. And the performers themselves are becoming mere puppets. If they stay in the legitimate drama they are forced to accept parts that they care nothing about—as in the sex dramas that are springing up and flourishing, apparently, like the green bay tree. The moving pictures, too, are taking many of the 'stars.'

"But," continued the veteran, "these moving picture people have the money and they are willing to spend it. Of course, they will get the best actors and actresses to be had. It is the same in all lines. Sooner or later some newer and more modern ideas are injected into them—for the worse, many of us think—and some one else begins to make the moeny.

"The world is too mechanical. Wherever we go, we see the wheels turning."

Under the heading "The Spirit of a Mechanical Age," one of the editors of the Record-Herald had this to say: "'Ours,' says a veteran manager gloomily, 'is a mechanical age, in which less and less is left to the human factor, to originality, individuality and the spirit.' Ours is, indeed, a mechanical age, but it is not an age that dispenses, or is at all likely to dispense, with charm, beauty and the things of the spirit. To the broader vision a mechanical age is an age 'set free,' an age that has more time for study, contemplation and right living. There is no reason why vulgarity and gross materialism should capture the wonderful mechanical devices of the age; and there is plenty of evidence that 'the spirit' is busy trying to utilize the same devices.

"Automatic players have brought music—and good music, too—into tens of thousands of homes in small towns and rural districts. The moving pictures are doing wonders. They will soon become an adjunct of every school, museum and cultural agency. They will democratize science. They will make 'dry' studies attractive. They will steadily elevate the standards of popular entertainment, annexing the spheres of romance, adventure and beauty."

A Film "Fly Story" from Pittsburgh.

A story comes from Pittsburgh that a common house fly was the cause of a panic in a moving picture theater there. It appears that the little pest had made its way into the lens apartment of the moving picture machine.

The machine operator had barely begun to run off the "thriller" of the night when there appeared on the screen a monster with legs like the limbs of a big tree, eyes as big as saucers, and a huge body covered with hair that looked like standing wheat.

At the first appearance of the monster women and children screamed and a rush was made for the door. The attaches of the theater quickly threw open the exits. But while the audience pressed toward the doors some one yelled: "It's only a fly in the machine," and ended the panic.

The lens had magnified the fly many hundreds of times, as shown on the screen.

Moving Pictures for Recruiting Purposes Beat Posters.

"Do you believe moving pictures of army life, such as drills, ceremonials, and parades, similar to the pictures exhibited by the British army would be an aid to recruiting in the United States?" Gen. Carter was asked in Chicago last week.

"Yes, I do," he said. "At present, though, the men seem to come in without any special attraction. Moving pictures are, in my opinion, better recruiting attractions than the colored lithographs.

"The government is taking moving pictures of army life all over the country. Chaplain T. J. Dickson, of the Sixth Field Artillery has taken some and is showing them with success, I am told. There is no special fund for this purpose. The navy, I understand, has a special moving picture fund."

Chicago Film Brevities.

Louis M. Noto, of the Kitsee Talking Pictures, arrived in the city Friday, January 30th, and returned to New York Wednesday, February 11th. During his engagement here, the famous Scotch singer and entertainer, Harry Lauder, found spare time to have talking moving pictures of his songs taken and developed at the Selig Polyscope Company's plant, the use of which was courteously extended him by Wm. N. Selig. Fifteen of Mr. Lauder's best known songs, showing the singer just as he sang and acted in them, were completed. Mr. Lauder had the pleasure of seeing himself in every one of these 15 short reels and was exceedingly pleased with the fine photography and the action. Mr. Lauder's manager, Mm. Morris, was also present when these talking pictures were taken. As Mr. Lauder listened to one of the songs, he said, half to himself: "Weel! Weel! Tae think o' it! Ither people wull hear me sing when my bones are jinglin' in my coffin."

"Antony and Cleopatra" is doing big business everywhere, according to Mr. McCarrahan, manager for George Kleine. It is being shown in the best moving picture houses throughout the country. In the American Music Hall the subject was shown to very satisfactory business considering the location. Each succeeding week showed an increase in the receipts. "Antony and Cleopatra" will open in New York about March 15th.

* * *

A cable to the Chicago News recently, shows that "Quo Vadis?" is making a tremendous hit in Japan just now, as many as three thousand people viewing the pictures at one sitting.

* * *

Hruby's Dalton Theater, Dalton, Ill., had quite an experience when the first set of the "Kathlyn" series was shown there on January 30th. The Dalton is a new house which cost $25,000, and on the opening night the chowd broke the doors getting in.

* * *

F. E. Nemec, president of the Princess Theater Circuit Co., St. Cloud, Minn., called at the World office last week. He was accompanied by A. E. Adams, manager of the Milo Theater, Little Falls, Minn. The Princess Theater Circuit includes the following theaters: The Princess and Starland, St. Cloud; the Milo, Little Falls, and the Scenic Theater, Detroit, all of Minnesota. The Starland and Milo run vaudeville supplied by the Considine booking offices. The other two run straight pictures. Mr. Nemec reported that he is playing to capacity in all his houses. The Starland seats 1,000 people, the Milo 500, the Princess 260, and the Scenic 300. Ten, twenty and thirty cents are charged for mixed vaudeville and picture programs, and ten cents for straight moving pictures. The picture programs are selected from the Universal and Mutual products.

* * *

E. Harvey Brient, well known as a clever exchange man, made a pleasant call at the World office last week. He is at present establishing offices for the Eclectic Film Co. in the Middle West. The Chicago office secured by him is at 614 New Mallers Bldg. Mr. Brient went to Minneapolis to select an office and place a manager in that city. Mr. Brient is making headquarters in the New Mallers Bldg.

* * *

H. Fichtenberg, who owns the Fichtenberg Amusement Enterprises in New Orleans, was in the city since Sunday. He and Mrs. Fichtenberg arriving in the city accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Laemmle. The party left Chicago for Los Angeles on Wednesday. Mr. Fichtenberg owns the Plaza, Alamo, Dreamworld, and Picto, New Orleans; the Alamo, Vicksburg; the Isis, Pensacola, and the Isis, Houston. He reported very good business all winter. He uses the Independent service exclusively. For his St. Louis houses he publishes weekly a neat booklet called the Weekly Spotlight. This booklet contains stories of the various films shown during the week.

* * *

"Thorns of the Great White Way," was ordered condemned Monday, February 2nd, by Second Deputy of Police Funkhouser after he viewed it in the City Hall. "The play has a moral and is all right for adults," said the second deputy, "but I will not allow it to be shown before children."

* * *

Motion picture films are unmailable on account of their inflammable nature, according to instructions received by Postmaster Daniel A. Campbell, of Chicago, Monday, February 2nd. The order points out that the postal laws prohibit the admission to the mails of explosive and inflammable articles, and asks that the order be rigidly enforced.

* * *

The Alamo Theater, 4710 State St., and the Casino, 3506 S. Halsted St., this city, were closed Wednesday, February 4th, on account of ineffecient ventilation systems. The owners were instructed not to re-open them until the health requirements have been met.

* * *

J. A. Sheuerman has purchased the state rights of Minnesota and Wisconsin for the "Prisoner in the Harem." He will start out Thursday, February 13th, to arrange for bookings in that territory. His office is 410 Dapples Bldg., 167-169 W. Washington St.

* * *

The Celebrated Players Film Co. has contracted for the entire output of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co. for some of the middle western states. The first release issued by them will be "The Squaw Man."

At the Sign of the Flaming Arcs

By George Blaisdell.

THE official opening of the Vitagraph Theater on the evening of February 7 marks another step in the progression of the motion picture. The influence of this new playhouse or converted playhouse will not be local only. It will extend all over. Locally it will make friends for the screen among those who so far have for one reason or another held aloof from the picture theater. Generally it will demonstrate that the silent drama can compete with the speaking stage in the bid for patronage; that not only can it give four performances each day, but that the dramas and comedies to be shown are the product of but one of the many manufacturers of motion pictures.

Small wonder that a leading dramatic critic, in writing of the occasion, was moved to say: "No swaggerer or more 'bung-tung' gathering than that which graced the opening of the new Vitagraph Theater (formerly the Criterion) has been seen at any 'legitimate' opening this season." He says further that the house was crowded with a "most un-'movie'-like audience!" This last because evening dress predominated. The time will come, and not so far distant, either, when such an occasion will be the expected, the usual, and constitute no subject for comment.

One of the novelties of this milestone moving picture evening was the speechmaking at the conclusion of the entertainment. John Bunny, who had taken part in the really silent drama of "The Honeymooners," in response to continued applause on the part of the audience, said it seemed fitting that those present should hear from the man who had written the playlet the portrayal of which they had just witnessed—a man who, he said, "possesses a keener appreciation of art than does any other gentleman I have been privileged to meet." He referred to the attainments of the man he was introducing, and said that he was a painter as well as a writer. "The evening would be incomplete," he concluded, "without a few words from the master—James Stuart Blackton."

"This is like a regular first night—speeches and everything—isn't it?" Mr. Blackton facetiously remarked when the applause that greeted him had subsided. "I feel, ladies and gentlemen, that words are a very inappropriate medium with which to thank you for your appreciation, because ours is a wordless art and this is going to be a wordless playhouse. What you will see here, in fact what you have seen to-night, is not the work of any one man or woman. It is the result of long and earnest effort on the part of many loyal and earnest Vitagraphers. It is a great pleasure to be able to thank them to-night for having made it possible for us to have this opening. Motion picture work is very difficult. You had a little instance to-night of the extremely hard work it is at times—for the ladies, especially. Just think of the hardship it must have been for Miss Charleson for almost twenty minutes to be unable to say one word. [Laughter.] We have been preparing to open this theater just about seventeen years—it was in 1897 the Vitagraph Company commenced business. I thank you for the Vitagraph family and for my partners—my senior partners; you know I am the junior partner, the baby of the concern; and although the mouth that thanks you is the mouth of Blackton, the voice is the voice of the Vitagraph Company."

* * *

In the making of Pathe's "Broken Paths," a two-reel subject illustrating the hardships of factory workers and the dangers attending their employment especially as regards the fire hazards, and released February 12, the Jersey City authorities gave the picture makers every assistance. The fire department was at their service for two hours, and many policemen were detailed to aid not only in holding back the crowds, but also to make realistic the factory fire scenes. The result is a worth while picture.

* * *

Frank W. Smith, of the Imp Company, has been appointed librarian of the Screen Club. Mr. Baggot has made a wise choice. The position is one for which Mr. Smith is eminently fitted both by training and temperament. The new librarian has intimated that he will welcome the co-operation of all Screeners in the building up of a collection of good books commensurate with the importance of this expanding organization.

* * *

Edwin August, author, director and player in Universal pictures, who arrived in New York on the day of the Screen Club ball, will remain in the city for several months. Mr. August's trip east was inspired by the orders of his physician that he must seek a change of scene—the strain entailed by his work had undermined his health. President Laemmle had suggested that a few months in New York would be beneficial to the actor, and Mr. August gladly accepted the opportunity. He will stage his plays at the Coytesville studio. Mr. August was accompanied to New York by Hal August, one of the members of his company. On Monday Miss Iva Shepard, character woman in Mr. August's company, arrived in town. Miss Shepard on her way to the metropolis stopped over at Columbus, on the invitation of the Ohio exhibitors, and led the grand march of the state ball. Work at the Coytesville studio will begin on February 16.

* * *

Jules Burnstein has resigned from the World Special Films Corporation to take charge of the New York exchange of the Eclectic Film Company. A good man on a good job. Mr. Burnstein has had much experience in exchange management, has a wide acquaintance in the trade, and possesses a host of friends. More power to him!

* * *

Herbert Brenon was very seriously injured last week in the breaking of the glass front of the 8,000-gallon tank in which he was working with Annette Kellermann. Later news is to the effect that Mr. Brenon was so badly hurt that seventy-two stitches were required to close his wounds. It is said that it may be the first of March before he will get out of the hospital.

* * *

The viewing of the silent comedy enacted at the Vitagraph Theater suggests the possibility that some day—it may be far in the future and it may not—one of the largest picture companies may take over a theater, and with its own players, necessarily the best of them, put on a drama. Theatergoers and also non-picturegoers there be who rest under the delusion that even in the larger screen companies there are not contained players who in histrionic ability are the equals of those forming the cast of an average Broadway production. Picturegoers who are also theatergoers know differently. Given care in the selection of subject and staging, the result would be interesting and to some surprising. To be sure, in the working out of such a scheme players for the time would necessarily be debarred from doing much before the camera, but the moral value, the advertising value, would be incalculable, both to the company putting on the performance and to pictures in general. Think it over, ye big fellows. It might be worth while.

* * *

The Gaumont Company reports unusually large bookings for both "Fantomas" and "The Duke's Talisman." In the case of the former picture one New York theater turned what looked like a mighty bad week on a vaudeville program into an unusually good one by a showing of this production.

* * *

"What's to be done about the 'movies' that are demoralizing our children?" the Macon (Mo.) Democrat inquires, and then right in the same issue gives the answer for which an anxious nation trembles in suspense: "The 'movies' must be restricted!" Simplest thing in the world, old top. Go right to it.

* * *

Governor Dunne of Illinois has established a precedent which Governors of other States well might adopt. He has given his consent to the photographing of the State penitentiary and its prisoners on the condition and on the guarantee that pictures should be so taken that the faces of the inmates would not be recognizable. When the matter was first broached to Governor Dunne he declined to permit the making of the film, declaring it would subject the inmates to the humiliation of having their pictures shown in theaters all over the country. The Governor is a real humanitarian. There have been abuses in the photographing of prisoners in the past. Even a convict who has hopes of some day leading a straight life has rights entitled to respect.

* * *

Talking with J. J. Raymond, who is managing the Eclectic subject of "Les Miserables" at the Carnegie Lyceum, he said that the remarkable picture was doing an average business of approximately $4,000 a week. The nine-reel production will be held at the Lyceum for five weeks more, when an attempt will be made to secure for it a suitable Broadway location. Mr. Raymond says the Gordon Company, which controls the subject for New York State and New England, has not yet decided on future bookings other than that it will play nothing but high-class houses in order that no step may be taken tending to mar the market value of the picture. The admission will be maintained at 25 cents up to $1. It is the intention of the company to return "Les Miserables" to a community at stated periods for years to come. Mr. Raymond says that at the Lyceum many persons have seen the picture two or three times.

* * *

Up in Rochester, N. Y., the city board of the Women's Christian Temperance Union has passed a resolution opposing the movement on the part of motion picture theater proprietors to open their houses on Sunday. What's the idea? We know, of course, that the dear women cannot hate the saloons less, but is it possible they hate the motion picture more?

* * *

Reports from the Pacific Coast are to the effect that the rights for several western states to the white slave film which was ordered off the screen by the New York police have been sold for $50,000. The figures sound rather high.

Women and Children.

By F. H. Richardson.

I HAVE been greatly interested in the various estimates made by friend and foe as to the make-up of the average moving picture theater audience.

It seems that for some reason, not as yet thoroughly explained, the average commentator has, after considerable hovering, settled on the question and hatched out 85% as the answer—that is to say, these persons have decided that the average moving picture theater audience is made up of 85 per cent. women and children, and presumably, 15 per cent. men.

It seems to me this is a conclusion which cannot be backed up by facts. The writer has taken some pains to observe typical audiences in moving picture theaters, and in the daytime in downtown sections, at least of Chicago and New York, it has been his observation that the average audience is composed very largely of men, with comparatively few children and a mere sprinkling of women.

This does not, however, hold true with theaters located directly in the shopping district. In such houses the daytime audiences are composed very largely of women, but with very few children, and such children as are present are almost invariably accompanied by their mothers, or some other grown-up specimen of the votes-for-women tribe. In the evening the writer has found that there is no very large difference between the average moving picture theater audience and the average "ten, twent', thirt'" blood-and-thunder melodrama theater. There is, of course, a very liberal sprinkling of children of various ages, particularly in five-cent houses, but as between the men and the women the observation of the writer has been that they are about evenly divided, and if this be true, and I say that it is true, then, accepting the 85% statement of the supposed to be authorities, we would have an equal division of the grown-ups, which would leave 15% of the audience children. And most emphatically this does not justify the continual howl which goes up about the moving picture theater being supported by children.

One trouble with the estimates given us by the various writers not connected with the moving picture industry lies in the fact that, as a general proposition, their activities center in a particular neighborhood or a particular type of moving picture theater. To cite an instance as an illustration: Mrs. Jones becomes interested in moving picture theaters. She visits those in her neighborhood, which are probably located entirely in residential sections, and catering entirely to what might be termed the family trade. Now such a theater does, in the very nature of things, contain a larger percentage of women in the daytime, and a larger percentage of children in the late afternoon and early evening hours than will a house located in the business section. Mrs. Jones sees a few bad films displayed, or films in which some form of crime is exploited, or which have other objectionable features. She immediately becomes excited and rushes into print with the statement that all moving picture theaters are bad, and "ought to be regulated because 85% of their audiences are women and children." But, as a rule, this particular type of critic goes further than that and says the moving picture theater is practically supported by children. Her criticism is not worth the paper upon which it is written, and her entire objection is knocked out by the statement that if the parents in that neighborhood refused to patronize a theater which showed objectionable films, these objectionable features would disappear like magic. And so I could go on and cite instances of false reasoning by critics, to the extent of many pages.

To my mind the moving picture theater ought to be regulated to a certain extent, and producers should be prohibited from going too far in the exploitation of crime and other questionable things. But I make this unqualified assertion, viz: the moving picture theater stands in no more need, nor in fact in half as much need, of rigid censoring than does a metropolitan high class vaudeville house and the average melodrama theater, in which the burglar comes out on the stage, cracks the safe, kills the owner and runs off with the widow. I have sat in high class New York vaudeville houses and seen stunts pulled off which would have brought a blush to the cheek of an Egyptian mummy. I have seen high class, or at least high salaried, actors and actresses give voice to things so broadly suggestive that a six-year-old child could hardly escape the filthy meaning implied, and the audience, including the young girls present, gave evidence of its enthusiastic approval. As long as this is true, and it absolutely is true, and is done not once but many, many times every day in practically every vaudeville theater in the city, I don't think we need to have hysterics about the minor objectionable things in the moving picture film.

It is not usually considered as being exactly proper to make a terrific fuss over a gnat and deliberately swallow a camel.

SIMPLEX INSTALLED IN ASYLUM.

Through the California Film Exchange, Phoenix, Ariz., there have been installed two Simplex machines in the Arizona State Prison, Florence, and the State of Arizona Asylum, Phoenix, Ariz.

Director J. F. MacDonald Reading the Script of "Samson," the Big Universal Production Now Under Way, To His Company. Seated Opposite Mr. MacDonald Are J. Warren Kerrigan and Kathleen Kerrigan.

"ONCE OVER"

By Hugh Hoffman.

THE funniest exhibitors' meeting we ever saw was one where the members were squabbling about unpaid dues. In the midst of it all a delegation from the operators' union walked in and presented a demand for increased wages. And they got it without half as much argument as there was over the dues.

* * *

Any man with the title of "Major" prefixed to his name is worthy of investigation. There is a world of phoney "Colonels" and quite a few "Majors," and they all consider themselves authorities on all questions. A little matter like censorship would be easy for any one of them. (Chicago papers please copy.)

* * *

One of the most unpleasant parts of a military man or ex-military man is that he thinks everything should be done in a military way.

CONTRACT PRODUCTION BY RUBY.

A new plan of feature film production is being introduced by Leon J. Rubinstein, head of the Ruby studio. He is being given the entire staging of complete productions on contract, under an agreement which means that the Ruby studio takes all the responsibility for the success of the picture.

The first of these will be "The Life of Big Tim Sullivan," for the Gotham Film Company, of New York. This is scheduled for four reels and will show the picturesque career of the famous Bowery Senator. All the life of New York's famous East Side is identified with the vicissitudes in the career of Timothy D. Sullivan. The production will be supported by the co-operation of his old friends of the sporting and political world.

Another feature of unusual interest which the Ruby concern has contracted to execute is a six reel portrayal of the perils of the deep sea diver, for the National Conclave of Subterranean Engineers, which President Wilson opened in St. Louis. A tank specially built for photographic purposes has been constructed under the supervision of Irving B. Rubinstein and the Cooper-Hewitt Company is building tubes that will remain lit under water pressure, with a special opaque globe that will not obstruct the light rays. A number of the most famous deep-sea experts in the world will participate in a story written by Mr. Frank B. Coigne, giving ample play for an exposition of all the wonders of the diver's hazardous calling.

LAEMMLE RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF CONSOLIDATED.

The stockholders of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, in their annual meeting held last week at the offices of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, in New York, reaffirmed their confidence in the acumen and integrity of their president, Carl Laemmle, by re-electing him to that dignity for another year. William Oldknow, of Atlanta, was named as vice-president and general manager, and C. V. Beecham was made secretary and treasurer. The directorate chosen for the ensuing year comprises Messrs. Carl Laemmle, William Oldknow, R. H. Cochrane, P. D. Cochrane, Herman Fichtenberg, William J. Maloney and C. V. Beecham.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. William Oldknow, general manager, for the remarkable showing the Consolidated has made during the year.

SEERY BACK IN CHICAGO.

R. C. Seery, who left Chicago several months ago to take up special work in connection with the operation of the Mutual Film Corporation's many offices in the Northwest, now having completed that work satisfactorily, has returned to Chicago to take up new and important duties in connection with the H. & H. Film Service Co.

CANTES VISITS WORLD OFFICE.

Joseph Cantes, a prominent exhibitor of Atlantic City, N. J., visited the offices of the Moving Picture World during his stay in New York City. Mr. Cantes seemed very enthusiastic over present conditions, and in leaving said, "I would rather go without my breakfast every day of the week than miss a single copy of your excellent paper."

CYRIL CHADWICK FOR FILM COMEDIES.

ANOTHER popular comedian of the regular stage has "deserted" for the pictures. This time it's Cyril Chadwick, the portrayer of English comedy types, best known through his long association with Bayes and Norworth and "The Eternal Waltz," in which he starred with Mabel Berra. The Thanhouser Company signed the comedian for a long term recently and Lloyd Lonergan is working on a series of "silly ass" comedies, on the principle that an actor doesn't lose his individuality when he goes into pictures. Instead, it is the Thanhouser contention, that individuality can be improved by studio work because a wise picture producer invariably fits the play to the player and thereby develops him in his particular line. So the Lonergan playlets, especially written to portray Mr. Chadwick in the kind of comedy in which he excels, may result in a funnier Cyril Chadwick than the musical stage ever knew. At all odds, the Chadwick picture efforts will be watched with a good deal of interest everywhere.

Cyril Chadwick.

Nat-U-Rich Pledging Her Undying Love To the Squaw Man In Lasky's Production.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"CHAINS OF BONDAGE" (Essanay).

This production, released by the Essanay Company, Friday, March 6, 1914, embodies in it some dramatic effects that are distinct novelties. The story is essentially dramatic and hits the spectator with a "punch." The photography is without blemish, and, if possible, surpasses in excellence the "crystal-clear" quality for which Essanay has already become famous.

Scene from "Chains of Bondage" (Essanay).

The artists who portray the different characters of the drama have, without doubt, put their whole heart and soul into the story, for their every action rings true to human nature. Especially notable is the work of Richard C. Travers, in the part of Richard Buckley, he having to rely solely on facial expression for the interpretation of his part. Also notable is the work of Irene Warfield, in the part of Geraldine, Buckley's wife, and later as his daughter. Bryant Washburn, as Burton, the "heavy"; William Bailey, as Dr. Oliver, Nita's sweetheart, and Mrs. Clara Smith as Fanchette, Buckley's old nurse, all give a delightful portrayal of the characters which they interpret. The story as a whole, together with the photography and acting, gives a subject that will be universally liked.

NEWS FROM MEXICO.

President Harry E. Aitken, of the Mutual Film Corporation, has received the following wire from Frank M. Thayer who is in charge of Mr. Aitken's camera men:

"All our photographers left Chihuahua and proceeding rapidly toward Torreon with Villa for battle. New reels, best ever taken in Mexican War, will reach you in two days."

In a letter, also just received from Mr. Thayer, is this interesting information:

"Little is known of Villa's wonderful character. The morning after the Ojinaga battle, he sent fifty head of beef cattle to the people he drove across the river. He is absolutely fearless and always travels without a bodyguard—is a crank on liquor and closes the saloons in every town he captures.

"Villa's executive ability is marvelous. In less than eight weeks, he has driven the Federals from the state of Chihuahua, opened three hundred miles of railroad and telegraph lines, and is operating regular train service from Juarez to Chihuahua City, where all the business houses are open and accepting the constitutional currency at the same rate as the currency of the national and state banks. He is a man who is consistent and unless something most unexpected happens, should be in Mexico City within sixty days."

"THE DREAM CHILD" (American).

Justice is justice only when tempered with mercy. When Vivian Reynolds secretly married George Haldane instead of carrying out her father's wish of uniting the heart and fortunes of the Reynolds & Williams, she brought down upon her the wrath of an irate father. The latter, in his stubborn fury, disowned his daughter and fostered an enmity to the world at large.

In dire distress, his penitent daughter returns only to meet with scorn and denial. The vision of her child brought about a change of heart in the old man, and only after much agony and worry was he able to make atonement. Vivian, deserted by her husband, who meets an ignominious death in a western town, comes to a realization of a life of happiness by a marriage with her childhood lover.

Scene from "The Dream Child" (American).

The story teaches a strong moral to child and parent. Winifred Greenwood plays the lead as Vivian Reynolds, and Ed. Coxen as Jack Williams, the lover, while George Field does the heavy to perfection. A strong heart interest throughout the subject marks this two-part drama as way beyond the ordinary productions. It has been set for release Monday, February 23, 1914.

GENE GAUNTIER PLAYERS' NEW STUDIO.

Cardinal John M. Farley, of New York, has sanctioned the lease of the premises 515 to 519 West Fifty-fourth street, owned by the Roman Catholic Church of St. Ambrose, to the Gene Gauntier Feature Players, Inc., for a term of three years, beginning May 1, 1914, at $2,500 per year, for the purpose of making and producting motion picture films.

The matter came up in the Supreme Court before Justice Samuel Seabury for approval, and all the papers in the proceedings were presented for the information of the court. The papers showed that the trustees of St. Ambrose had approved the lease and then the sanction of the cardinal was obtained.

The approval of the cardinal of the rental of church property for the manufacture of films is interesting, as he is the head in New York of the Catholic Church. The text of the sanction shows that he is to retain a right to protest at any objectional film.

The cardinal's consent reads in part as follows: "I hereby consent that the Roman Catholic Church of St. Ambrose lease unto the Gene Gauntier Feature Players, Inc., for the purpose of making and producing motion picture films, in private only, no public exhibition to be held, and provided that any rehearsal which may be had shall be in no way objectionable in the judgment of the secretary of said church, its real property 515, 517 and 519 West Fifty-fourth street." Justice Seabury approved the lease.

"CAPTAIN JENNY, S. A." (Gold Seal).

Otis Turner is the producer of this masterful, three-part, human-interest drama. He has staged and directed the picture according to superior skill, his master ability. "Captain Jenny, S. A." is not a spectacular drama, yet there is all the romance, all the thrill, the big punches that are common to Mr. Turner's plays.

Scene from "Captain Jenny, S. A." (Gold Seal).

And those taking the important roles are Mr. Rawlinson, Miss Buckham and Mary Ruby. Miss Buckham is comparatively new to the Universal fans, as also is Miss Ruby, but like Mr. Rawlinson, they are artists to the finger tips. This play tells of a good-intentioned young man who goes wrong and is saved to himself and the woman he loves by the humanity, kindness and the self-sacrifice of a Salvation Army girl, Captain Jenny.

There are beautiful, refreshing scenes by the sea shore, where this boy, who has sought employment as a life-guard, saves the life of Lucy, the beginning of their love affair, and contrasting these are some sordid settings of a big city, showing all the meanness of life, the degraded human. It is a play that will make every one the better for seeing it—that will leave a lasting impression. It will be released February 24th.

NAME OF LASKY STRONG.

State Rights for "The Squaw Man" Sell Rapidly Before Picture Is Produced.

That the name of Jesse Lasky, long known as the producer of vaudeville's classic entertainments, means something in other branches of the amusement field, is best demonstrated by the remarkable accomplishments of his feature play company, which, without having made one production, has disposed of almost their entire territory.

The purchasers of the various states from Mr. Lasky demonstrates again that his name has proven a magnet for the very best of the recognized state right buyers and distributors.

The William L. Sherry Feature Film Company controls New York State.

American Feature Film Company, of Boston, controls the Lasky productions for the entire New England group of states.

W. W. Hodkinson, of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, has California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Mexico and Nevada, while the Notable Feature Film Company, of Salt Lake City, procured the Lasky productions for Utah, Wyoming, Colorado and Idaho.

The Famous Players Film Service, of Pittsburgh, will distribute the Lasky productions through Western Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia, and the Famous Players Exchange, of Philadelphia, and New York, procured Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Illinois and Wisconsin for the Lasky products will be in the hands of the Celebrated Players Film Company, of Chicago; and Maryland, District of Columbia and Delaware will be distributed by the Hygrade Feature Company, with offices in Philadelphia and Baltimore.

The Famous Players Star Feature Film Service, of Minneapolis, control the rights to Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

The small amount of remaining territory, according to Mr. Goldfish, of the Lasky offices, could long ago have been disposed of had they not decided to select their buyers with the utmost discretion.

Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Iowa, according to Mr. Goldfish, were disposed of and the franchise canceled, thus throwing the territory back on the market, but by this time it is evidently disposed of for there were numerous inquiries.

The first release of the Jesse Lasky Feature Play Company will be "The Squaw Man," with Dustin Farnum, on February 23rd, a private showing of which will take place at the Longacre Theater, West 48th Street, next Tuesday, February 17, at eleven A. M.

Immediately after the release of "The Squaw Man," Mr. Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky organization, will go to Europe where "The Squaw Man," under the title of "The White Man," by which name it played for three years in London, will be exploited.

"THE PRICE OF A RUBY" (Lubin).

This very intense story is told by one of the best casts in the Lubin studio, including Harry Myers and that charming actress Rosemary Theby, who has qualified as a clever leading lady. Heart interest dominates the tale, in fact, it is all hearts, with no villainy or ill nature to mar the beauty of the romance. A hard working and worthy girl is tempted to steal a jewel which places her in a position to secure a rich husband, but she cannot forget her fault and for seven years she endures privations and unhappiness to repair the wrong which all others are willing to forgive and forget. The heroic struggle is, however, compensated and the picture closes with the promise of a happy future. The price of the Ruby was well paid and the excellent photoplay will doubtless be greatfully received by the lovers of pathetic drama. Others in the cast are Jean Armour, Earl Metcalfe and young Raymond Hackett.

Scene from "The Price of a Ruby" (Lubin).

"JOAN OF ARC" (Savoia).

"Joan of Arc," which has been secured by the World Special Films Corporation, will be shown on Broadway in the near future. In the producing of this film, the Savoia Film Company has rejected Shakespeare's and Schiller's conception of the "Maid of Orleans" and have relied on the historical research into her life and character, which has been carried out during the past century—and notably by M. France, M. Hanotaux, and Mr. Andrew Lang.

The film tells the story of which even a child who detests the history lesson will never tire, from the time Joan in her native village first sees the vision of St. Michael, St. Margaret and St. Catherine urging her to save her country up to the final passage of the Maid through the streets of Rouen on her way to the stake.

Two months were actually spent in filming this picture and no fewer than 1,000 men and 300 horses were employed, the men coming into the picture being equipped with the armor and weapons of the period as shown in the old fifteenth century wood-cuts. The Bastille of Saint Loup, erected by the English at the Gates of old Orleans, the Castle of Chinon and Joan's dwelling at Domremy, have been modeled from ruins of buildings of the period which still exist, and the style of dress of the age has also been fully observed. Realism is everywhere. The result is a succession of striking pictures and one sits and looks, forgetting that it is a picture.

"THE PROFESSOR'S AWAKENING" (Beauty Film).

Another "Beauty" subject that far surpasses the rank and file of one-reel subjects. Harry Pollard, who plays the titular role and also acting as producer, is entitled to much credit. Margarita Fischer plays opposite and enacts the role of a fisher maiden with dramatic force.

Scene from "The Professor's Awakening" (Beauty Films).

The story is a light drama with an inclination to chop off rather sad, but happily the final scene saves the situation. The photographic quality is excellent and adds much to the beauty of the film. It has been set for release Wednesday, February 25, 1914.

WALL STREET BANKERS ENTER FILM BUSINESS.

Announcement has been made that W. A. Pratt, of the well-known banking house of Edward B. Smith & Co., of New York, Philadelphia, and London, England, and Mr. Van Horn Ely, president of the National Producers' Company, of Wall Street, New York, are on the directorate of the new World Film Corporation of New York, with branch offices in this city and the principal cities of the United States and Canada. E. Mandelbaum and Philip Gleichman, the founders of the World Special Films Corporation, continue actively with the new firm.

The entering of the Wall Street bankers at this time into the motion picture business is said to be the beginning of a large scheme to develop to a high level the best feature motion picture productions for the theaters.

The officers of the World Film Corporation are: G. L. P. Vernon, president; E. Mandelbaum, first vice-president; Philip Gleichman, second vice-president; Britton Busch, secretary and treasurer. These gentlemen, together with W. A. Pratt and Van Horn Ely constitute the board of directors. One of the biggest men in the motion picture business, whose name is withheld for the present, is to be general manager of the corporation.

THE FIRST WOMAN TO DO A "BRODIE."

Constance Bennett and Rodman Law both jumped from the Williamsburg Bridge as part of a scene for a coming Blache feature production temporarily entitled "The Moonshiners," and which will be ready for release along about the latter part of March or the early part of April. Miss Bennett is the first woman who has taken the chance. The event was given wide publicity in all of the metropolitan journals. A week prior to this event Miss Bennett and Rodman Law both on horseback jumped into Ausable Chasm. This is a leap down an abyss measuring approximately 150 feet. The other members of the Blache cast are Miss Vinnie Burns, Miss Claire Whitney, Mr. James Johnson, Mr. James O'Neil, Mr. Fraunie Fraunholz and Mr. Joseph Levering. This attraction is under the personal direction of Herbert Blache.

ROTARY CLUB MEMBERS IN DRAMA.

Two hundred and fifty members of the Los Angeles Rotary Club, comprising bankers, manufacturers and men representative of every industry in Southern California, and their ladies, were the guests of General Manager Isadore Bernstein and Director Henry MacRae at a tango tea at the Universal Pacific Coast studios on the afternoon of January 31. A part of the entertainment was participation in Director MacRae's newest picture, "The Yaqui's Revenge." All accepted the invitation and posed for the camera in one of the most beautiful ballroom scenes ever designed at that studio.

BOSWORTH DOING MORE JACK LONDON STORIES.

Bosworth, Inc., left Los Angeles on Friday, January 30th, by special train for an extended and expensive trip. They went to Truckee, Cal., where the snow now lies at a depth of seven feet on a level. They carried an equipment complete in every respect for the making of four seven-reel pictures of the Jack London stories—"Smoke Bellew," "Odyssey of the North," "Burning Daylight" and "Son of the Wolf," for which series most of the scenes will be made in Truckee, where more nearly than in any other place the Alaskan surroundings and scenery can be found. The only reason, in fact, that the company goes to Truckee by preference is because the enormous amount of negative they make can be shipped out each evening, and reports received much quicker than would be the case in Alaska.

An agent of the company has been north, scouring the states of Oregon and Washington, and finally Juneau, Alaska, for dogs and sledges. Forty of the best Malemutes and husky dogs have been secured, and six sledges, which, with a vast equipment of furs, parkas, mukluks and Eskimo trappings, will meet the main body of the company at Truckee on its arrival, and the work of producing the pictures will begin at once.

Mr. Bosworth takes with him a company of thirty-five actors and actresses, many of whom have had actual experience in dog-driving and mushing, and all of whom have been selected with careful regard to London's types. Fifteen Japanese men and five women went along to play the Eskimos, making a company of over fifty, who will remain in Truckee, and at Lake Tahoe for the Lake Linderman scenes, probably until the thaw sets in.

The one aim of Bosworth, Inc., in the production of the London stories is to make them as absolutely right as thought, care and money can do, and it is believed that the results of this expedition will justify the care and expense entailed.

Besides Mr. Bosworth, who will direct and will act many of the principal roles, the principal members of the company will be: In the stage and photographic department—J. Charles Haydon and George W. Hill, Miss Stedman, Miss Haines, Miss Wolcott and Miss Scherrer, and among the men, Messrs. Conway, Clifton, Garcia, Linkenhelt, Sackville, Ray, Fleming, McDonald and Colby. Miss Hettie Gray Baker will accompany the party as scenario writer. Several Indians, including Chief Fred Harvey, Harrison, Weis and Waide, will play parts like "Sitka Charley," "Cultus George" and other important Indian characters. It is expected that Mr. London himself will visit the camp and renew his acquaintance with the deep snows and the Alaskan life he knows and loves so well.

STAND ON IRISH SOIL.

As an added attraction to the reissue of "The Colleen Bawn," one of the Kalem Company's famous Irish pictures, an opportunity will be given to patrons of theaters showing the subject literally to stand on Irish soil. When "The Colleen Bawn" was issued about two and one-half years ago it sprung into instant popularity which has never quite subsided and has recently become apparent to the extent that the Kalem Company decided to make another issue. With this determination came the inspiration to supply each exhibitor with a bit of the earth which lies at the base of the Colleen Bawn Rock, which he may place on the floor or pavement in front of his box office in such a way that his patrons, when buying tickets, will stand upon real Irish soil.

As an advertising "stunt" this is about the cleverest that has yet been devised. A representative of the Kalem Company, in London, was commissioned to get the soil and secured several tons of it, which arrived by the White Star steamship Megantic about a week ago. That there should be no question as to the genuineness of the "soil," great care was taken to have it duly authenticated. Affidavits were secured from the priest of the parish, from the mayor of the town and other officials who were on hand to see it bagged and labeled for shipment.

The Kalem Company will portion it out in quantities sufficient to cover a box or tray four feet square to the depth of one inch. This tray is to be placed in front of the box office. Bags of this Irish soil are now being shipped to the various General Film Company's branch exchanges to be delivered to exhibitors when the picture is released, beginning March 16. The idea ought to make a great hit.

"CRICKET ON THE HEARTH" (American).

A two-reel subject possessed of that quiet, forceful acting that makes it stand out as a masterpiece. No expense has been spared in supplying local color. The subtitles are of the old English type and lend a pleasing touch. The memory of Dickens is highly honored by this production. Release February 16th, 1914.

(Continued on Page 975.)

NOTICE TO EXHIBITORS IN MASSACHUSETTS — CONNECTICUT — MAINE VERMONT—NEW HAMPSHIRE and RHODE ISLAND

We control the NEW ENGLAND RIGHTS for All Productions of the

Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company and are prepared to arrange dates now for the first release—

Edwin Milton Royle's Thrilling Drama

"THE SQUAW MAN"

With

DUSTIN FARNUM

And

2nd Release

"Brewster's Millions"

With

Edward Abeles

3rd Release

Edmund Breese

In

"Master Mind"

WHAT JESSE L. LASKY'S NAME MEANS TO A VAUDEVILLE AUDIENCE—IT WILL MEAN TO PATRONS OF PHOTO PLAY HOUSES

THE APEX OF PERFECTION

LASKY PRODUCTIONS WILL SURELY PLAY YOUR CITY—YOU WILL ANTICIPATE YOUR COMPETITOR BY BOOKING NOW

WRITE! WIRE! CALL!

American Feature Film Company

LOUIS B. MAYER, President

162 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.

WILLIAM A. BRADY

secured my first release for an entire week at his handsome

WILMINGTON, DEL., PLAYHOUSE

and on March 16

"THE SQUAW MAN"

the first production of the

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

opens at that house

Now Booking entire Lasky output for 1914 for DELAWARE MARYLAND DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

ADDRESS

STARLAND FILM EXCHANGE

MARK A. LASK, Mgr.

20th Street and Montgomery Ave., Phila., Pa., Care "Danceland"

WE ARE MAKING THE LITHOGRAPHIC POSTERS FOR

"THE SQUAW MAN"

And Other

LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

Productions

In magnificent four-color work, and Mr. Lasky says the Black Proofs were almost artistic enough to use without the blending of colors.

We also make all Lithographic Posters for the

ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION

Note Our New Address:

THE METRO LITHOGRAPH COMPANY

S. W. Corner Ninth Avenue and 26th Street

George J. Cook — Robert Jost

If It Looks Good on the Boards It's A METRO

To the Exhibitors of CALIFORNIA, OREGON, WASHINGTON, ARIZONA, NEVADA, and NEW MEXICO:

DO YOU USE

Hodkinson's Progressive Service?

THE SERVICE WITH A CONSCIENCE. The highest class Picture Program in the World today.

A Program of Real Quality

Different from the rest. Featuring all of the best pictures from THE FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.

BOSWORTH'S Productions of Jack London's stories, and the best productions to be found in the open market of the entire world.

THAT is the REASON WHY we have contracted to buy all of the JESSE L. LASKY PRODUCTIONS for 1914 for our Territory.

If there is an opportunity to secure our Service for your City or District, WRITE OUR NEAREST OFFICE IMMEDIATELY.

PROGRESSIVE MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

W. W. HODKINSON, General Manager

Marsh-Strong Building
Los Angeles, Cal.

Pacific Building
San Francisco, Cal.

Central Building
Seattle, Wash.

Temporary New York Office: 1903 World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street

The Magnetism of Jack London's Name

and

The Merit of Bosworth's Production

Make an irresistible combination. That is the reason why

"THE SEA WOLF"

has broken all records wherever shown, both in the Eastern and Western part of the United States. This high-class picture is creating a new standard in the motion picture world. The Pacific Coast Rights on "THE SEA WOLF" were secured by our Company. The picture was so tremendously successful there that I have made arrangements to book it throughout the United States.

The demand for this picture is so great that this advertisement will not appear again for some time.

Make application for bookings early. Address all communications to

WILLIAM W. HODKINSON

1903 World's Tower Bldg., 110 West 40th St., New York City

JESSE L. LASKY Presents

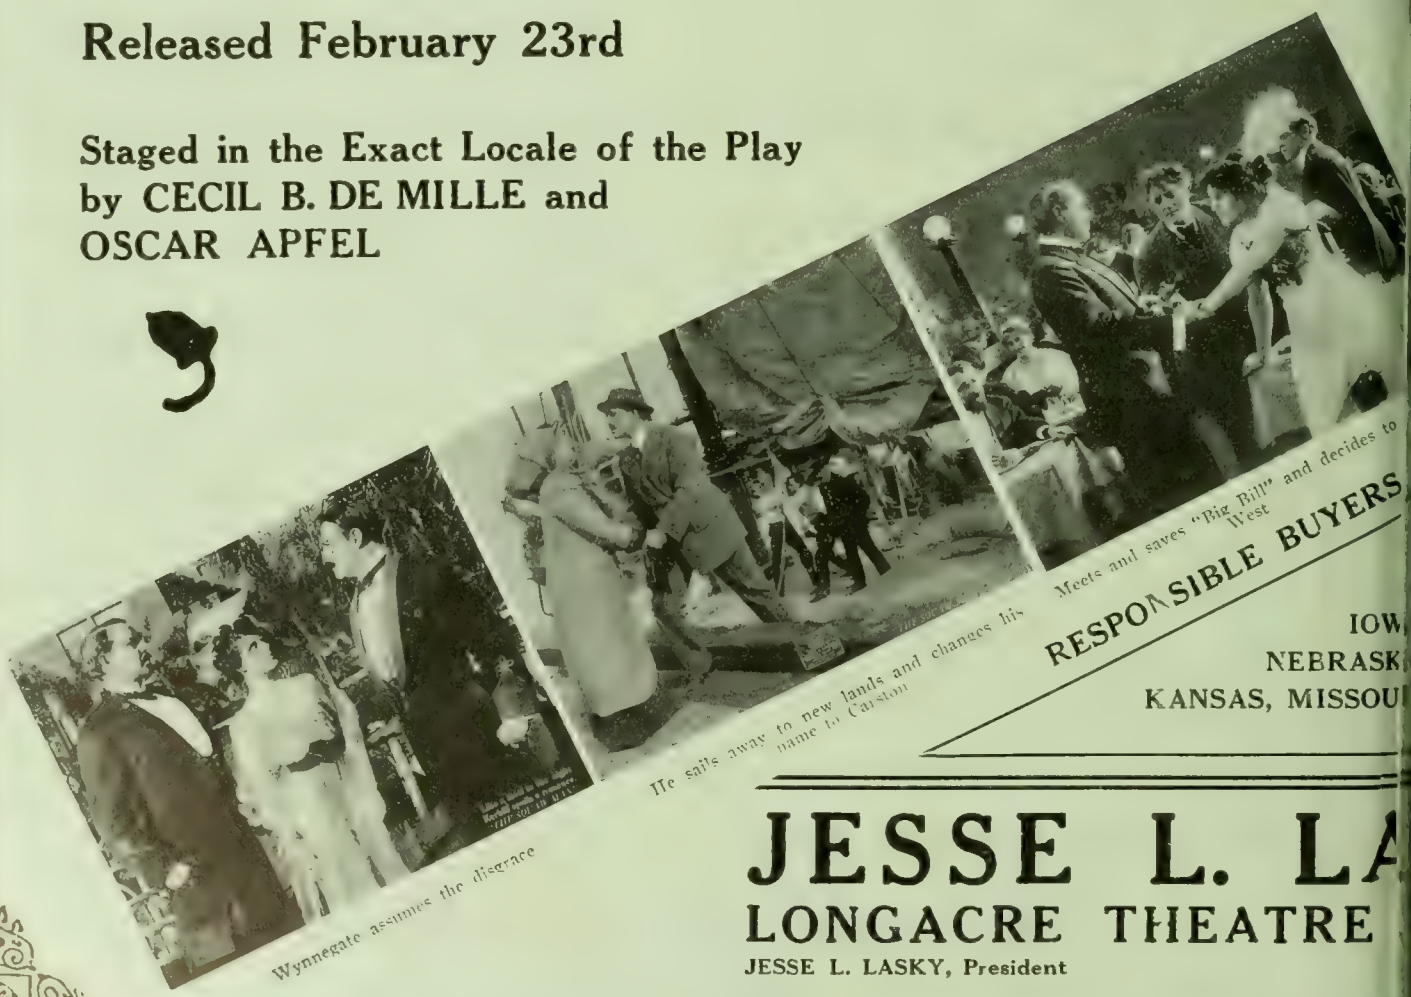
THE SQUAW

EDWIN MILTON ROYLE'S DRAMATIC TRIUMPH WITH

DUSTIN FARNUM

Released February 23rd

Staged in the Exact Locale of the Play by CECIL B. DE MILLE and OSCAR APFEL



Meets and saves "Big Bill" and decides to West
He sails away to new lands and changes his name to Carston
Wynnegate assumes the disgrace

RESPONSIBLE BUYERS

IOWA
NEBRASKA
KANSAS, MISSOURI

JESSE L. LASKY
LONGACRE THEATRE
JESSE L. LASKY, President

The Pulsing Achievement of Dramatic Art. Done into vivid, silent drama by the magic touch of perfect direction and sublime pantomime

MAN

Nat-u-Rich saves the Squaw Man and they marry

Don't say it or I'll forget myself!

Nat-u-Rich is gone. He turns to his first love

OUR BLUE BOOK of DISTRIBUTORS

NEW YORK STATE
WM. L. SHERRY F. F. CO.
301 TIMES BUILDING

ALL NEW ENGLAND STATES
AMERICAN F. F. COMPANY
162 TREMONT ST.—BOSTON.

CALIFORNIA, OREGON, WASHINGTON, ARIZONA, NEW MEXICO, NEVADA
PROGRESSIVE M. P. CO.
642 PACIFIC BUILDING SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

UTAH, WYOMING, MONTANA, COLORADO, IDAHO
NOTABLE F. F. CO.
308 Boston Building, Salt Lake City

W. PENNSYLVANIA, KENTUCKY, OHIO, W. VIRGINIA
Famous Players Film Service
404 Ferry St., Pittsburg, Pa.

MARYLAND, DELAWARE, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
HYGRADE FILM EX.
20th St., Montgomery Av., Phila., Pa.

E. PENNSYLVANIA AND N. JERSEY
Famous Players Exchange
1331 Vine St., Phila. 71 West 23rd St., N. Y.

ILLINOIS, WISCONSIN
CELEBRATED PLAYERS F. CO.
64 West Randolph St., Chicago

Minnesota, North and South Dakota
Famous Players Star F. F. Service
Minneapolis

IF INTERESTED—NOTE

UNSOLD

LOUISIANA, TEXAS, OKLAHOMA, ARKANSAS

MICHIGAN, INDIANA

VIRGINIA, NORTH AND SOUTH CAROLINA, GEORGIA, FLORIDA, ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI, TENNESSEE

SKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

NEW YORK WEST 48th STREET

SAMUEL GOLDFISH, Treasurer and General Manager

CECIL B. DE MILLE, Director General

Quality First

THE WM. L. SHERRY FEATURE FILM CO.
INCORPORATED

WE HAVE MOVED

Executive Offices and Exchange: 126 WEST 46th ST.
Phone, BRYANT 8255 NEW YORK CITY

Controlling the New York City and State Rights of the PREMIER PHOTO-PRODUCTIONS
- OF -
THE FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. and THE JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

FAMOUS PLAYERS EXCHANGE

WM. E. SMITH, PRES. RAYMOND PAWLEY, TREAS.

PHILADELPHIA OFFICE
1331 VINE ST.
TEL. WALNUT 527

NEW YORK OFFICE
71 WEST 23RD ST.
TEL. GRAMERCY 6865

DISTRIBUTING

THE JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY CO.

and

THE FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM COMPANY

PRODUCTIONS

IN NEW JERSEY AND EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

Now Booking—"The Squaw Man"

FAMOUS PLAYERS STAR FEATURE FILM SERVICE

Temple Court Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

NOW BOOKING THE PRODUCTS OF

Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co.

for Minnesota, North and South Dakota

OUR FIRST RELEASE	2nd	3rd
"THE SQUAW MAN"	"Brewster's Millions"	EDMUND BREESE
WITH	WITH	IN
DUSTIN FARNUM	EDWARD ABELES	"The MASTER MIND"

As it has always been our policy

To Handle Only the Very Best Feature Productions

as shown by our distribution of

THE FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM COMPANY and ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION OUTPUT

we are pleased to announce that we have secured control of the

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY'S productions for

OHIO, KENTUCKY, WEST VIRGINIA and WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

and are booking now the FIRST RELEASE

THE SQUAW MAN with DUSTIN FARNUM

EDWARD ABELES in Brewster's Millions and EDMUND BREESE IN Master Mind

address

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE, Inc.

404 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.

Notable Feature Film Company

308 Boston Building
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH

Controlling entire 1914 output of

Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co.

and Famous Players Film Co. Productions

NOW BOOKING

"The SQUAW MAN"

WITH

DUSTIN FARNUM

Celebrated Players Film Service

64a Randalph St., CHICAGO

Now booking, in conjunction with our other well known productions

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co.'s releases in

ILLINOIS AND WISCONSIN

RELEASED, FEBRUARY 23rd

The Squaw Man

with DUSTIN FARNUM

These magnificent features will play your city. BEAT YOUR OPPOSITION TO IT

Celebrated Players, Chicago

Loewinger Brothers

116 East 14th Street

are making the handsome advertising heralds for all

Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co.

productions

Our work so well liked

Mr. Lasky contracted with us for twelve million heralds

OUR EQUIPMENT LARGE ENOUGH TO DO FIFTY MILLION MORE THIS YEAR

Let us hear from you if you want promptness and quality printing.

Office Phone 4685 Bryant
Studio Phone 599 Rutherford

The Garraway Company of Rutherford, New Jersey

Announce the opening of their New York office at 1482 B'way

Photos, Enlargements and Bromides

We have contracted to make reproductions for all

Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co.

productions

Capacity 100,000 per day

J. W. MURRAY, Sales Manager

Manufacturers Advance Notes.

(Continued from page 966.

TWO "DOLLY" PICTURES A MONTH.

Edison announces an important change in the release schedule of the "Dolly of the Dailies" series, which Acton Davies is writing for Mary Fuller. It was originally intended to follow the program of the "Mary" pictures and release one film a month.

The announcement that the new "Dolly" series would be released once a month was a signal for a flood of letters from exhibitors and Mary Fuller enthusiasts, asking that the series be released at least twice a month. Arrangements have already been perfected for the release of the first two films of the new series but Edison decided that, beginning with the third story on March 14th, it would accede to the popular demand and release a "Dolly" picture on the second and forth Saturdays of each month.

The new schedule makes the story of "Dolly" easier to follow and sustains a keener interest in the fortunes of this already popular heroine. Many exhibitors stated as their reason for asking that the schedule be changed, the fact that they were anxious to bring the "Dolly" enthusiasts back to their theaters more often. Their experience with the "Mary" pictures have shown that these films never fail to draw a bigger crowd than they had on other nights. They naturally figured that it was better business to attract these people twice as often.

SAYS WILLIAM A. BRADY.

"The moving picture business is enough to make a theatrical manager rub his eyes in blank amazement. In all my experience in management, the hardest thing to get is a first-night audience, and after that arises the problem of how to keep them coming. My first experience in the picture manufacturing line is now in process of unwinding. Last week I announced that I would embark in this field, naming a few of the plays I intended to present upon the screen, and within four days' time I had enough applicants for state and territorial rights to keep the new concern jumping for months to come. The point about this which dazzles the theatrical man is that he can sell his product before he completes it. The people with whom he deals know whether they want his material or not as soon as he tells them what it is, even though it has not been actually manufactured. In producing plays for the stage there is no way on earth by which you can be sure whether you are going to make money or lose it, with the odds fully five to one that you will lose. But I suppose that if I had not taken chances on all these successful plays I am about to turn into moving pictures, I might not have found such a ready market for them in this new form."

KATHIE FISCHER WITH BEAUTY FILMS.

Some children are born with the dramatic temperament—they act with their toys while babies; as a rule, the talent is inherited. Such a one is little Kathie Fischer, a really remarkable and wholly natural little actress, and a niece of Margarita Fischer. Kathie has always loved her aunt, and has spent more of her short years watching her. She has acted a great deal under the direction of Harry Pollard, and her list of successes is surprisingly large for such a little tot.

In "The Sacrifice," Kathie impersonates a little boy who is taken away from his mother to be educated by wealthy relatives. Kathie was so worked up in the scene that she clung to Margarita Fischer and suddenly burst into real tears. Her naturally sympathetic aunt followed suit, and in a few moments not a single member of the company had dry eyes. When a child can so work upon the feeling of those around her there can be little doubt regarding her future.

The play itself is beautiful, and this one scene lifts it to a high level—the naturalness of it all shows on the screen

LOIS WEBER'S REMARKABLE RECORD.

Lois Weber, of the Rex-Universal films, has written one scenario a week for the last three years. Miss Weber says that she is never at a loss for original ideas. She is of an intensely emotional character, and all the little incidents of her life and those she reads about in the newspapers she views with an eye to their heart interest. When she is building up a scenario she keeps in mind the individual actors in her company, and as she thinks the prospective story over the she thinks of the characters in it as her own people.

A "PIRATE" IN CHICAGO.

Agnes Eagan Cobb, of Union Features, has just returned from a trip which took her as far west as Texas, and reports a number of satisfactory contracts for pictures bearing the Union Feature brand. Mrs. Cobb says that feature film dealers are suffering considerable loss from the operations of a certain company in Chicago which is "pirating" territory in every direction to the great annoyance of legitimate buyers. "In every city I visited," declared Mrs. Cobb, "I found that this pirate was offering not only Union Features, but the pictures of many other companies whose productions that company controls for Chicago."

Mrs. Cobb has supplied the Moving Picture World with the name of the firm charged with pirating territory, but it is withheld at this time for lack of proper authentication. If documentary evidence of the accused company's unfair methods are supplied the full facts will be published and exhibitors warned to beware of its operations.

STARS FOR CRITERION.

The recently organized Criterion Feature Film Manufacturing Company has secured to head its Pacific Coast Stock Company, Wilfred Lucas and Jeannie MacPherson. Mr. Lucas was leading man for the Biograph for three years, and Miss MacPherson was leading woman for Powers for nearly the same length of time.

Scene from "The Trap (Criterion).

The Criterion will release one feature every two weeks, their first release being a three-reel romance of the forest called "The Trap," released February 11th. The second release, scheduled for February 25th, will be called "The Desert's Sting."

STILL ANOTHER DIVIDEND FOR THE UNIVERSAL STOCKHOLDERS.

Melons in the shape of dividends continue to be cut in the general offices of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company in the Mecca Building. In addition to the regular dividend of one-half per cent. per month on preferred stock, and one per cent. per month on the common stock, the Universal has also declared a special dividend of one-half per cent. on the common stock for the past month.

KENNEDY FEATURES MOVE.

Kennedy Features, Inc., has moved its office from the fourteenth to the fourth floor, Suite 401 of the World's Tower Building. The move was necessary to get more space. From the new offices there will be handled both the productions of Kennedy Features, Inc., and of the Criterion Feature Film Manufacturing Company.

MUSIC BY KING'S TRUMPETER.

The General Film Company is in receipt of word from England regarding the great Kalem success "From the Manger to the Cross," and that this Biblical film has made a wonderful hit at the Picture House on Oxford Street. That our English cousins consider "From the Manager to the Cross" worthy of very special attention is evidenced by the fact that the accompanying music is of the highest order, selections from "The Messiah," "Elijah," "Judias Maccabaens," "Olivet to Calvary" and "The Crucifixion" being rendered by such well known artists as the King's Trumpeter, William Short, A. R. A. M., Miss Elizabeth Davis, Mr. Henderson White and Mr. Ward Cowdray.

FEATURING PHOTOGRAPHY.

On all feature films produced by Kennedy Features, Inc., the name of the photographer, William F. Alder, is displayed in the main title, being given equal prominence with that of the dramatizer and producer.

Aubrey M. Kennedy is vice-president and general manager of both Kennedy Features, Inc., and of the Criterion Feature Film Manufacturing Company, and the featuring of the name of the photographer in all the productions of the two companies is his idea. It is Mr. Kennedy's contention that photography in a motion picture is becoming of increasing importance, as the public is being educated to take a more and more critical view of pictures. All the Kennedy and Criterion pictures are taken on the Pacific Coast and they are all "sunlight" pictures.

LESSER TO DISTRIBUTE ALL STAR FILMS.

Sol L. Lesser, president and general manager of the Golgate Feature Service, with offices at San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland and Denver and other coast cities, has completed the organization of the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., a company which he has incorporated under the laws of the state of California. The new concern will, as the name implies, have as a leader the productions of the All Star Feature Corporation, and in addition will offer one other large feature per month.

An adequate advertising department is planned. More than ten thousand dollars is being expended on this particular branch and everything that is known as advertising aid will be at the call of exhibitors. The company is incorporated for $60,000. The states controlled are California, Nevada, Arizona, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, New Mexico, Montana, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming.

REMOVAL NOTICE.

Mr. Wm. L. Sherry announces the removal of the executive offices of the Wm. L. Sherry Feature Film Co., Inc., to the ninth floor of the Leavitt Bldg., 126 West 46th Street, New York City. The exchange and advertising departments, which have been at the 46th Street address since October last, will, in the future, be conducted in connection with the business offices.

The new quarters will include additional space for the handling of advertising material and film, a private projecting room and commodious private offices. The telephone number, Bryant 8255, will remain the same.

Notes of the Trade.

BESSIE EYTON, of the Selig stock company in Los Angeles, recently saw snow for the first time in her life while on a train with Director Colin Campbell's company in Northern California. The answer is that Miss Eyton has always lived in Southern California.

* * *

Woodley's Theater, Los Angeles, Cal., found the second Beauty release, "Fooling Uncle," so attractive and popular that it has arranged with the Pacific Mutual Film Corporation for a full week's run of this subject. All bookings were accordingly set back. Beauty subjects are proving unusually popular throughout the country.

* * *

Bill Johnson, the famous old stage carpenter, whose knowledge of marine craft is remarkable and has served him well, has resigned from the Selig Polyscope Company for more profitable service with a ship-building concern.

* * *

Wray Physioc has been confined to his bed with a severe attack of malaria for the past ten days.

* * *

The Southern California Society, listed high in the Blue Book, is preparing to deck itself with the beautiful creations of a foreign modiste for the St. Valentine Ball, at the Shrine Auditorium, the biggest event of the year next to the floral festival in Los Angeles. Miss Kathlyn Williams, of the Selig stock company, is the universally popular selection of the photoplayers to lead the grand march.

* * *

Frank Cooley, popular in stock, particularly on the coast, has been engaged as assistant to Harry Pollard in the production of "Beauty" subjects.

* * *

Mr. Louis Machat, president of the Standard Feature Film Company, Inc., Boston, Mass., has signed a contract with Midgar Features for their entire output of two pictures per month for the New England States.

* * *

Adrienne Kroell, of the Selig stock company, has exercised thought and ingenuity in securing stunning effects in a series of "dream" gowns that she wears in the new local production called "The Pirates of Peacock Alley."

* * *

Felix Modjeska, a grandson of the great actress, has been engaged to support Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude in the production of motion pictures for Kennedy Features, Inc. Mr. Modjeska will be the leading juvenile of the stock company of sixteen with which Miss Crawley and Mr. Maude are working. In the forthcoming production of Rider Haggard's "Jess," Mr. Modjeska plays the part of Captain John Neil.

Oscar Eagle, who has worked continuously in producing since he came to the Selig studios two years ago, has finally taken the advice of his physician and gone on a trip to tropical waters where he hopes to restore his energies. Mr. and Mrs. Eagle will spend quite a time on the Isthmus of Panama and then go to the Bahamas, returning here the last of this month.

* * *

The Sedeg Feature Film Company, of which Arthur S. Abeles is general manager, is now represented in Buffalo, N. Y., by Joseph A. Davis, an experienced film man, with offices at 32 Chapin Block, 15-17 West Swan St.

* * *

Jule Walters, an old-time melodramatic writer and actor, recently became a member of the Selig stock company, to play leading comedy roles.

* * *

"Joan of Arc," the big five-reel Savoia production which is being marketed through the offices of the World Special Films Corporation, is being booked from three days to a week at a time in houses that ordinarily change their program three and four times a week.

* * *

Walter Clarke Bellows, a stage producer who has a record of over two hundred productions to his credit, is now actively associated with the Selig Polyscope Company in Chicago and has staged "Miss Bountiful" and "Charity's First Burglar"—his own plays, in a style and manner characteristic of his art in playcraft.

* * *

Benjamin H. Cohen, formerly public accountant, has been made auditor of the World Special Films Corporation. Mr. Cohen comes to the organization with the best wishes of a host of his friends.

* * *

Edward J. Le Saint, the Selig producer in California, is working out a two-reel newspaper feature, which includes a number of big and vital scenes made in and around one of the largest and most complete newspaper plants on the Gold Coast. It is said that the realistic atmosphere of this photoplay reproduces the big and vital force that throbs in a newspaper office in most astonishing fashion.

* * *

Murray Beier, well known to the local exhibitor, has been transferred from the management of the Buffalo office of the World Special Films Corporation, to take charge of the New York branch. Mr. Beier has long been associated with the rental end of the business and his return to New York will be a welcome bit of news to his many friends.

* * *

Lyllian Brown Leighton, a member of the Selig stock company at the Edendale studio in California, has written a three-reel feature photoplay entitled, "The Greater Love," which has been accepted for production by W. N. Selig.

* * *

"The Conspiracy; or, A $4,000,000 Dowry," which the World Special Films Corporation will market soon, was done at the Paris-Eclair factory with a cast of some of the best known French artists appearing at the Sarah Bernhardt, Comedie Francaise, the Odeon and the National Theater Francaise.

* * *

The best written article on Safety of Projection Machines we have had the pleasure of reading for some time appears in the current issue of Safety Engineering, and A. J. Lang, export manager of the Nicholas Power Company, is the author of the same.

* * *

The Kinemacolor field studios are being transferred from Los Angeles, Cal., to Lowville, N. Y., where production will be resumed as soon as weather permits—the films all being photographed in the open air and sunshine.

* * *

The next release scheduled by Kennedy's Features, Inc., is a four-reel version of Rider Haggard's romance of love and war in South Africa, "Jess," scheduled for February 18th. Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude head the company which produces the Kennedy Features and which is located at Los Angeles.

* * *

Gaumont's new departure in putting on the market one feature (3 or 4 reels) and two single reels a week is meeting with great success. The bookings for "The Duke's Talisman" have been exceptionally good, keeping the Gaumont New York office very busy.

* * *

Charles Bennett, one of the members of the Vitagraph Company, has come East and is now in New York City.

* * *

"Antony and Cleopatra," George Kleine's big eight-part spectacle, is playing to record business in choice theaters in practically all the largest cities in the United States and Canada. The success of the big Cines masterpiece has been quite unprecedented. The new branch office system inaugurated by Kleine works out splendidly in booking big features as it does away with much of the delay occasioned by theatrical circuit bookings.

* * *

Jacob Ornstein, chief order clerk of the Nicholas Power Company, has returned from a month's vacation at Montgomery, N. Y.

* * *

Joseph Kaufman, well known as an able player of the legitimate stage, has joined the Lubin forces and has been assigned to that company directed Harry Myers. Mr. Kaufman played many notable roles under the Frohman management and commanded much attention when with Frederick Thompson he played the operator in "Via Wireless."

* * *

Ida Tarbell, the celebrated public benefactor and author, who recently wrote a scenario for the Vitagraph Company entitled, "The Man Who Knew Lincoln," was a visitor at the Vitagraph studios recently. Miss Tarbell was filmed at her desk, writing this Lincoln story.

* * *

Albert E. Lowe continues as contract manager of the New York Kinemacolor offices, while Felix F. Feist remains in charge of the Chicago office, with Mortimer R. Wiener as general traveling representative in charge of the road agents.

Mr. J. E. Robin, sales manager of the Precision Machine Company, has returned from the Cincinnati convention where he passed a very busy week. Mr. Robin had charge of the Simplex exhibit, assisted by Mr. Geo. S. Bothwell. Mr. Robin states that the business done in Simplex projectors was a record breaker and says that it speaks much for the popularity of this machine in the State of Ohio. Mr. Bothwell is now traveling through the Middle West as a special representative for this company.

* * *

Templer Saxe, the eminent actor and writer, was a guest of A. J. Lang, export manager of the Nicholas Power Company, recently. Mr. Saxe took a great deal of interest in the various departments of the factory and in the accuracy with which each part of the Six A machine is made.

* * *

The largest Hope-Jones Symphonic Orchestra in the world is being installed in the new Vitagraph Theater (formerly the Criterion), at a cost of $30,000. A short recital will be given at each performance in conjunction with the Broadway Star Feature motion pictures.

* * *

Harry Lauder was recently filmed at the Selig studios in Chicago in a number of famous impersonations. His work on this occasion was synchronized with his own song records on the talking machine.

* * *

Miss Edith Storey, who is now temporarily engaged with the Western Vitagraph company at Santa Monica, Cal., writes that she has seen very little of sunny California. It has done nothing but rain since she arrived there three weeks ago.

STATE RIGHT PURCHASES.

NOTE.—Exhibitors are requested to keep this list on file or copy from it the names of purchasers in their particular territories. These lists will not be republished and we cannot undertake to furnish back information by mail to those who have neglected to keep a record. Contributors to this department are requested to have their copy conform to the style of the column.

THROUGH THE CLOUDS (Apex—4 reels). For Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, by Empress Film Company, 1517 Merchants Bank Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

For Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, by Standard Feature Film Company, 665 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

For Eastern Pennsylvania, by H. Cassell, 608 Forrest Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

For Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana, by Southern Feature Program Association, 1920 Main Street, Dallas, Texas.

For New York State and Northern New Jersey, by High Grade Feature Film Company, 220 West 42nd Street, New York.

For Michigan, by Casino Feature Film Company, 2211 Dime Bank Building, Detroit, Mich.

For California, Nevada and Arizona, by Golgate Feature Service, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal.

For Oregon, by Golgate Feature Service, 329 Oak Street, Portland, Ore.

For Washington, Idaho and Montana, by Golgate Feature Service, 1216 Third Avenue, Seattle, Wash.

For Colorado, New Mexico and Wyoming, by Golgate Feature Service, 205 Nassau Building, Denver, Col.

For Utah, by Golgate Feature Service, Judge Building, Salt Lake City, Utah.

For North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee, by C. H. Dorsey, Grand Theater, Jacksonville, Fla.

For Missouri and Kansas, by Chas. Viehl, 7201 Pennsylvania Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

THE STREETS OF NEW YORK (Pilot—4 reels). For Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina, by Florida Feature Film Company, Mutual Life Building, Jacksonville, Fla.

Picture Theaters Projected.

Baltimore, Md.—Riverside Amusement Company have awarded the contract to Henry Pierson & Sons, 1000 Olive street, for the erection of a one-story moving picture and vaudeville theater, with seating capacity of 600, and to cost $15,000.

Boston, Mass.—Franklin Park Theater Company are planning to build a $150,000 vaudeville theater at Dorchester station.

Beach Haven, N. J.—George I. Lovatt, 420 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., has prepared plans and specifications for a three-story theater and store building to cost $10,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Frank Cuneo has had plans prepared for an addition to his theater and store building, to cost $30,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Erger Brothers are to build a two-story theater and store building, 75 by 125 feet, to cost $60,000. The structure will contain, beside the theater, three stores and a billiard hall.

Chicago, Ill.—Lubliner & Trinz, 29 West Washington street, are planning to build a two-story theater and store building, 96 by 120 feet, to cost $125,000. Theater will have seating capacity for 1,500 persons. There will be two stores on the ground floor.

Corona, L. I., N. Y.—Henry J. Goette estate, Elmhurst, have had plans completed for a one-story moving picture theater, 38 by 99 feet, to cost $5,000.

Detroit, Mich.—William B. Stratton, 1103 Union Trust building, has prepared plans for a modern and commodious theater building to be erected in this city in the near future.

Deposit, N. Y.—P. H. Mather, Coalport, Pa., has had plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 90 feet, with seating capacity of 400, to cost $5,000.

Ellendale, N. Dak.—Lyric Theater Company are to build a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 125 feet, to cost $4,500.

Fostorio, O.—McLaughlin & Hulsken, 11 and 16 Central building, Lima, O., have prepared preliminary sketches for a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000.

New York, N. Y.—Joseph E. Ismay, 42 Broadway, is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, roof garden, dance hall and store building, 94 by 100 feet, to cost $30,000. Theater and roof garden to seat 600 respectively.

New York, N. Y.—Nicholas Conforti, 324 East 116th street, has had plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, with seating capacity for 500 persons.

Osgood, Ind.—Louis Damm has just had plans started for a one and two-story moving picture theater, with seating capacity of 225, to cost $10,000.

Newark, N. J.—H. Baechlin, 665 Broad street, has prepared plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 150 feet, with seating capacity of 800. The owners are the Crawford estate.

Paterson, N. J.—Louis Gittlieb, 65 Carroll street, is to build a $12,000 moving picture theater, with seating capacity of 299.

St. Louis, Mo.—Schulz & Sohmann, Fullerton building, has prepared sketches for a three-story $50,000 theater building.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Varietées Theater Company, T. Barhydt manager, has had plans prepared for a one-story and balcony vaudeville theater, seating capacity for 1,200 persons, to cost $100,000.

Chicago, Ill.—A. L. Levy, 10 South LaSalle street, has prepared plans and specifications for a two-story theater, store and flat building, 100 by 125 feet. The theater will have seating capacity of 600, five stores on the ground floor section and three flats on the upper floor.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Sol Jacobson, 978 Broadway, and M. Slotkin, 518 Richmond avenue, have awarded the contract for interior alterations and additions to the Lafayette Theater, located on Lafayette square.

Los Angeles, Cal.—G. J. Griffith is having preliminary working drawings prepared for a Greek theater, 200 by 400 feet, with two-story rear building, 132 by 80 feet.

St. Paul, Minn.—Toltz Engineering Company, 1410 Pioneer building, has prepared plans for a two-story moving picture theater, 43 by 125 feet, to cost $15,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Arthur Caille has had plans prepared for a two-story theater and store building, 76 by 140 feet, to comprise two stores and five offices.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Varieties Theater Company, T. W. Barhydt, Jr., manager, Eighth and Wabash avenue, are planning to erect a one-story balcony theater, to cost $75,000.

Bellefontaine, Ohio.—Roy Gable, 422 Bushnele building, Springfield, Ohio, has prepared plans for a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 50 by 60 and 30 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000. There will be two stores on the ground floor.

Springfield, Ohio.—Chakers Amusement Company, care Nick Chakers, 17 West Main street, has an option on a site for the purpose of erecting a one and three-story theater building, 75 by 150 feet, to cost $75,000. The project will not mature for some months to come.

Philadelphia, Pa.—George Hogg has been granted a permit for the erection of a one-story brick and terra cotta moving picture theater, 30 by 113 feet and 2 inches, at 412-14 Market street, for May H. Powers, to cost $10,000.

ROLL TICKETS

Absolutely Guaranteed

Perfectly Perforated, Accurately Numbered, Best Cardboard, Prompt Shipment

TERMS—CASH with ORDER. NO C O D SHIPMENTS

100,000–$10.00 200,000–$18.00 300,000–$25.00 400,000–$31.00 500,000–$37.50 1,000,000–$70.00

EVERY KIND OF TICKET FOR EVERY PURPOSE

SPECIALLY PRINTED, ONE FORM, ANY COLOR, SEND FOR SAMPLES

404 So. 10th St. REES TICKET CO Omaha, Neb.

QUALITY AND SERVICE GUARANTEED

Erie LITHOGRAPH CO.
12TH & PARADE STS.
ERIE, PA.

Motion Picture Posters

Executed by our most talented and versatile poster artist organization—artists that excel in portraits, character, comic, mechanical and animal pictures.

Beautiful, Brilliant Colors

PHOTOPLAYS One to twenty-four sheet lithographed posters with heralds, folders, streamers and dates, furnished by us, all complete, in from six to ten days' time, our printing and lithographing departments being specially equipped for this class of work.

F. J. WALKER, Jr., NEW YORK REPRESENTATIVE

Address, 795 East 182d Street

NEW YORK CITY Phone, Tremont 3485

CORRESPONDENCE

NORTHWESTERN NEW YORK.

T. S. POWERS, resident manager of the Gordon Theater, Rochester, N. Y., uses Famous Players features, All Star features, Universal and Mutual regular releases and General Film Co.'s releases. He changes his programmes twice a week, Monday and Thursday. He had Lubin's "The Lion and the Mouse" for a solid week, beginning February 2. He uses subjects of lesser importance three days, but never shows anything that is not good enough for this period. The admission to the Gordon is five cents for women and children from noon to 6 p. m. and ten cents for men for the same period. After that hour the charges are ten cents for the balcony and 15 cents for the orchestra floor. The Gordon seats 1,827 and plays to an average of 5,800 persons a day. The record day was Thanksgiving, when the total attendance was 8,118. The house has been open since February 17, 1913.

"We censure all pictures very carefully," said Mr. Powers. "We have three showings before we publicly exhibit a film, to remove all objectionable scenes that may have a morbid or suggestive tendency or cause class or creed criticism. We use a seven-string orchestra and piano, with a $25,000 Moller pipe organ, and all pictures are rehearsed for musical setting before a public entertainment is given."

Rochester moving picture men are pleased with the result of a recent distribution of cards to be signed by their patrons. Each card was addressed to the manager and common council of that city and urged the amendment of the city ordinance permitting the exhibition of moving pictures on Sunday afternoons and evenings. A. N. Wolff, manager of the Colonial Theater, Rochester, and president of the New York State Moving Picture Exhibitors' League, announces that nearly 30,000 cards favoring Sunday opening have already been signed. More cards will be distributed. The Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of Rochester intends to keep up the campaign. In connection with the plan Mr. Wolff is quoted as follows:

"We are not trying to use Sunday for commercial purposes. We are anxious to give the people what they are demanding and our motive for agitating Sunday opening of our theaters is not primarily one of profit. There are many religious subjects that have been dramatized, although there would not be enough of such subjects to supply all the theaters in the city every Sunday. They might be supplemented with travel pictures and pictures taken from the works of classic authors. We would not exhibit cowboy scenes, Indian fights or anything of that sort. We would also eliminate all advertising posters from the front of our theaters and all vaudeville from our shows.

The Grant Theater Corporation, capitalized at $50,000, has been organized. The company will build a beautiful moving picture theater on Grant street, Buffalo. Among the directors are Stevenson H. Evans, William P. Haines, Louis E. Desbecker and Irving L. Fiske.

Katherine Tanner has filed plans with the bureau of building for a moving picture theater at 1289 Clinton street, Buffalo. The house will cost $12,000.

M. Cantor, of 400-402 Genesee street, Buffalo, says that his plan to build a moving picture theater in this city has been vetoed by Mayor Fuhrmann.

C. J. Roesser is manager of the Jubilee Moving Picture Theater, 1882-1886 Niagara street, Buffalo. According to Mr. Roesser his orchestra is one of the finest in this city.

"We are showing the best pictures obtainable," said Mr. Roesser, "and we have an equipment that is second to none. The Jubilee is doing a splendid business."

John H. Beaver is owner of the Bijou Dream Moving Picture Theater at Main and North Division streets, Buffalo. This is one of the best locations in the city and his attendance is heavy. He also owns the Bijou Dream Theater in Cleveland. At one time he was manager of fourteen moving picture houses of the same name, with his headquarters in Philadelphia. Mr. Beaver entered the moving picture business in Pittsburgh a number of years ago.

Manager Beier, of the Buffalo branch of the World Special Films Corporation, has just visited Rochester, Syracuse and other cities on the main line of the New York Central. Many smaller towns are included in his itinerary, which was quite successful.

Foster Moore, manager of the Buffalo branch of the George Kleine attractions, has appointed Charles M. Johnson manager of the "The Last Days of Pompeii Co. No. 1." Mr. Johnson will cover New York state. He was formerly assistant treasurer of the Teck Theater, Buffalo. Mr. Moore recently booked "Antony and Cleopatra" at the Lyric Theater, Jamestown. He is sending out half sheets in Italian (there being quite a number of Italians in Buffalo), telling about the wonders of this production being shown at the Majestic Theater, Buffalo, each Sunday.

Moving pictures showing Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, famous teachers of society dances, were recently featured by Manager Carr, of Shea's Theater, Buffalo.

James K. Hackett, in "The Prisoner of Zenda," was shown on a recent Sunday at the Teck Theater, Buffalo.

Corporation Counsel Rann has decided that open courts on each side of the Lafayette Theater, Buffalo, must be provided as means of quick exit. This house is being remodeled and will be known as the Olympic.

Manager Foster, of the New Family Theater, is now charging five cents for balcony seats instead of ten cents.

The Majestic Moving Picture Theater, Lockport, was closed on a recent Sunday by order of Mayor Brock. The reason given is that he had received complaints that the pictures being shown were too sensational for a Sunday performance.

Harry Marsey, proprietor of The Happy Hour Moving Picture Theater, Buffalo; Adolph Winter, Emil Rubenstein and others of this city have incorporated the Palace de Dance Co., of Buffalo. The capital stock is $60,000. The concern is to conduct dancing schools and public amusement resorts. Mr. Marsey will enlarge his Happy Hour Theater. He charges ten cents on Sundays and five cents during the week. His plan is being followed by other local managers.

The Cornwall Amusement Co., general dealers in theatrical supplies and moving picture films, has been organized in Buffalo. The directors are: Josephine V. Thiel, Merrit N. Baker and Charles C. Ruppel.

A change in the ownership of the Majestic Theater, Elmira, N. Y., has been effected. This plan follows the recent death of David M. Pratt, part owner and director of the Happy Hour Amusement Co., Elmira, proprietors of the house; J. Sloan Fassett and manager M. D. Gibson have increased their interests in the company, and John M. Connelly has retired from the concern. The Majestic plays high-class vaudeville and moving pictures. Under the efficient management of Mr. Gibson the Majestic has made successful strides and the orchestra has been bettered from time to time.

A. W. Newman will open the new People's Theater on Water street, Binghamton, N. Y., about March 1.

At a recent meeting of the Rotary Club, Buffalo, G. H. Hills showed in moving pictures the manufacture of lumber from the forest to the finished product—doors, shingles, boxes, etc.

At the last meeting of the Board of Education of Toronto, Ont., Dr. Noble, a member, referred to moving pictures in his attack on the plan of teachers giving school children home work. He said in part: "Children should have the evenings to go to moving picture shows, laugh and play and grow. Information is not education. The idea is cruel and wrong. A farmer would not overwork his stock in the way children are treated in this matter of home lessons."

Buffalo postoffice officials have received a notice from Washington that a ban has been placed on the shipment of moving picture films by parcel post. Since the first of the year numerous film concerns have been sending their films by parcel post. The government holds that the film is combustible and therefore cannot be sent through the mails. The ruling goes into effect immediately.

The West Side Business Men and Taxpayers' Association have protested to Mayor Fuhrmann, of Buffalo, against certain "outlaw" moving pictures being shown in this city.

According to a report from Elmira, N. Y., the rate governing the salary paid theater musicians in that city will be raised in keeping with the salaries they are receiving at present. Exclusive of the leaders, Elmira theater musicians for some time have been receiving $18 a week, while the scale adopted a number of years ago calls for but $15. This action regarding the advancement of rates will be taken up by the Musicians' Union of that city.

"Traffic in Souls" is the title of the moving picture which was shown recently at the Stone Opera House, Binghamton, N. Y.

George Kling, a Buffalo taxpayer, has obtained a court order requiring the building bureau of this city to show cause why it should not revoke the permit given for reconstructing the Lafayette Theater, Buffalo. This house will be known as the Olympic, where vaudeville and moving pictures will be featured. Mr. Kling is said to have alleged that the plans under which the theater is being remodeled will not make it conform to the requirements of the ordinances governing the construction of theaters with regard for fire prevention and protection of occupants. Mr. Kling claims that the ground for his action is that the plans for the theater do not provide for eight-foot passageways on either side of the main structure for use as emergency exits.

Councilman Weimar would have the Buffalo ordinances amended so as to restrict the building of more than one or two moving picture theaters within zones of from 500 to 1,000 feet, the matter of the size of the proposed zones to be fixed later. This plan would not affect theaters already built and would refer only to the residential section.

Buffalo moving picture men are strongly opposing a bill recently introduced at Albany by Frank Bret Thorn, of this city. The measure would prohibit moving pictures and vaudeville on Sundays, if admissions are charged.

Ground has been broken for the New Family Theater in East Bank street, Albion, N. Y. The new house will have a floor space of 150 feet long, 21 feet wide in front and 40 feet wide in the rear. The stage will be 25 feet deep and 40 feet wide. Lloyd Harris has taken a long term lease of the opera house and will book only the better class of high class road shows at popular prices. During the nights when no regular performance is playing, the house will be operated as a moving picture theater, giving a continuous performance.

BILLY BISON.

NEW ENGLAND.

J. L. THOMPSON, manager of the Town Hall Theater, Wilton, Maine, reports a very good run of trade these days, and adds that he has installed a Power's 6A Cameragraph machine, and also the full Universal program.

Work is now being rushed ahead as rapidly as possible on the new Plaza Theater, Fall River, Mass., so as to be completely finished by April 1. The Plaza is being constructed along high-class lines, and will be thoroughly modern and fireproof in every way.

Shea's Theater, which recently opened at Fitchburg, Mass., is considered to be one of the prettiest houses in the city. The house has a seating capacity of about 900 people, and is fireproof. General Film Service has been turning the tide in favor of Shea's.

The Eclipse Theater, Fitchburg, Mass., opened recently, and reports that business is good. The house is well located, and should get its full share of the available trade. Two more photoplay theaters are now in course of erection at Fitchburg, which is considered a good photoplay town.

Thomas Rattigan, well known to the trade in this section as one of the best illustrated song singers in Boston, has a theater of his own—the Jule, at Woodland, Maine. The Jule seats well over 300, and Mr. Rattigan is greatly pleased with results thus far. A Power's 6A machine and the regular Universal program was installed.

A. Z. Poli has contracted for the full Warner Feature program, of three tree-part features a week for his Poli and Plaza theaters at Worcester, Mass.

The Geisha Theater, which opened this month at Springfield, Mass., probably marks a new step in theater construction. The Geisha, which is devoted to a policy of moving pictures, is Japanese in style, as its name indicates. It is a replica of a Japanese temple, outside and inside. Japanese lanterns are used as the lighting medium. The Geisha is operated by a syndicate controlled by Albert Steiger, a prominent business man, and thus far has been doing exceptionally well.

The police of Springfield, Mass., are following up the photoplay theaters with unwonted gusto, due to the complaints of some of the ministry. War has been declared against all pictorial sheets, barring all but block letter "lithos." On Sunday not even a card is allowed to be shown, and there is agitation on foot to discontinue the Sunday shows altogether.

Jesse L. Lasky feature photoplays are to be well represented in New England, as the rights for the territory have been secured by the American Film Company, 162 Tremont street, Boston.

The Theatrical Stage Employees' Union, Local 11, Boston, donated $25 to the new St. Elizabeth Hospital building fund this week. Milton O'Brien, a member of the Springfield, Ohio, union, Local 34, was a guest and speaker at the meeting. Five new members were admitted and five applications were received. The union voted $50 to a member who is ill in New York with tuberculosis.

The Connecticut Valley Amusement Company has been incorporated at Springfield, Mass., for $5,000, with Harry W. Stacy, Alonzo P. Fall and J. W. Manning as the promoters.

L. Weiss has decided to remodel his Photoplay Theater at Bridgeport, Conn. Mr. Weiss expects to renovate his theater into a strictly modern photoplay house, and will spend $6,000 in improvements.

A new theater is promised for Bridgeport, Conn., to seat 1,800. The theater will be on a lot measuring 80 by 160 feet, and an office building will be part of the structure. Max Spregel, of New York, will lease the house upon completion.

Harris White, of Hartford, Conn., is about to build a photoplay theater in that city, and plans have been made calling for a one-story theater.

A. J. Carpenter, of Onset, Mass., will build an 800 seat photoplay theater there. The house will cost nearly $20,000, and is to be a one-story affair.

L. Bitondi, of Hartford, Conn., is now about ready to start work on his new moving picture theater, which will seat about 1,000.

F. H. Burt, of the Balsam Amusement Company, operating the Columbia Theater, Bath, Maine, reports that the lease on this theater has been secured by Hiram Abrams, of the Abrams Amusement Company. This corporation now controls all three theaters in Bath—the Columbia, City and Dreamland.

R. W. Drown opened the Olympia Theater, Union Square, Somerville, this week. The opening night was by invitation. The Olympia seats about 2,200 and is one of the finest theaters that has opened recently in Massachusetts. Mr. Drown is general manager of the Olympia Circuit, comprised of the Day Street Olympia, Somerville, the Olympia at Arlington, and the Olympia at Cambridge. The Universal program is used.

The Newport, R. I., Opera House has changed its policy from musical comedy attractions to moving pictures. Business is reported to be decidedly on the increase.

The Theatrical Mechanics' Association has opened new rooms in Greely's Theater, Portland, Maine, which were provided through the courtesy of Manager Greely. The officers were installed last week at a Dutch lunch and new members received. The new officers inaugurated were: President, E. A. Kent; vice-president, H. W. Hutchinson; treasurer, H. W. Black; recording secretary, H. W. Cousins; assistant financial secretary, James W. Greely; chaplain, Paul Hutchinson. Trustees, B. W. Nichols, D. D. Leader and Max Simbocsk.

A. J. Loewer, manager of the Nelson Theater at Springfield, Mass., offering vaudeville and photoplays, is now running a continuous show from 1:30 to 10:30 p. m. Mr. Loewer reports that business is very satisfactory.

W. R. Rothera is now in charge of the Opera House, Lawrence, Mass., and is booming business in no uncertain fashion. Mr. Rothera offers musical comedies, and the pick of the Universal service.

The Ideal Theater, Milford, Mass., has "come back" strong under the management of W. Nelson, who knows how to revive "dead ones." Moving pictures and songs are offered continuously from 2:30 to 5:30, and from 7:15 to 10:15.

Vincenzo Cormanetti, manager of the Tripoli Theater, Milford, Mass., is now installing a stage in his house. The Tripoli has an Italian trade, and appears to be prosperous.

J. W. Greely reports good business at both the Greely and Casco theaters, Portland, Maine. Both of these houses offer General Film service. A feature at the Casco is the Bay State Ladies' orchestra, while the Greely uses vaudeville.

It is rumored that the various Boston theaters booked by the Shuberts, with legitimate attractions in season, will offer moving pictures this summer.

A certain Mr. James Barnes stands as sponsor for a very dangerous bill, now before the present session of legislature in Massachusetts. The bill is as follows, "Senate . . 356:"

> Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to carry on a display of moving pictures or a vaudeville entertainment, so called, except between the hours from one to five in the afternoon and from seven to eleven in the evening.
>
> Section 2. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than five hundred dollars for each offense.

Should such a bill become a law, it would have a very depressing effect on the bank accounts of exhibitors in this state. Considerable freak legislation has been presented at the present Massachusetts session.

The Dream Theater at Winthrop, Mass., has had its license restored, and is again offering the Universal program. The Dream's license was recently suspended, due to the showing of some pictures which did not meet with the approval of the Board of Selectmen.

Moving pictures were used in Boston on Tuesday, February 3, for the first time as an advertising medium for a great educational institution. Back Bay society, one of whose pet charities has always been the uplift of the negro in the South, gathered in force at Jordan Hall, to see the two-part picture, "The Life of John Henry," the typical story of a Hampton Institute colored student. The meeting was one of the most unusual ever held by the Massachusetts Hampton Association, which has worked for years to promote the success of the great Virginia school, founded by General Armstrong of Civil War fame, for the education of the colored population of the South, particularly in manual arts. The moving picture itself was one that would command a goodly rental fee at any first-class photoplay house, as the pictures of plantation life were synchronized with appropriate negro melodies, sung behind the screen by the noted Hampton Quartet. Former Congressman Samuel W. McCall, president of the association, presided, and the chief speaker was Major Robert R. Morton, of Hampton, one of the chief aides of Booker T. Washington.

Harvard College is to be preserved for the delectation of posterity, thanks to moving pictures, which were taken this week of all its historic buildings. A moving picture operator was ordered to photograph the Wadsworth House, especially because it was the headquarters of Washington in Revolutionary times, but he had much trouble in keeping the twentieth century undergraduates out of the picture, and also in persuading the trolley cars to wait until he had finished about 200 feet of film.

"Sapho," a feature photoplay, which was barred from Winthrop, Mass., several weeks ago, was not allowed to be exhibited at the Quincy Music Hall, on the afternoon and evening of February 4. The police authorities and Mayor Miller had ordered the management not to show these reels. The music hall had advertised the coming of the reels the day before, and Chief Frank Burrell, of the police department, learned that "Sapho" had been barred in Winthrop. He notified Mayor Miller, and, after a conference, a ban was put on the picture. Several hundred were disappointed when they reached the music hall and found out the situation.

The International Feature Film Corporation, Limited, of Montreal, has completed arrangements whereby it secures the exclusive distributing privilege in Eastern Canada for the Great Northern Special and Preferred features. The offices of the company are in the New Binks' Building, Montreal, and is in charge of men thoroughly familiar with the film business.

John E. Talcott, 1003 Main street, Hartford, Conn., intends to build a moving picture theater in this city. The theater will be a two-story affair, measuring 110 by 130 feet.

Charles Allen, Jr., issued special invitations for run-off of the features of the Allen Feature Film Corporation, which was held on February 8, at 2 p. m., at the Union Theater, Providence, R. I.

General Manager Lurie reports that work is going along nicely on his new modern theater, Washington street, Boston. April will see the initial opening of the Modern, which it is expected will set up a new high standard in an 800 seat theater. A white marble front and a $25,000 organ are two of the many features which will place the Modern on the map.

Mrs. E. Clements, who became well known through her adept management of the Keith Bijou Dream, Boston, has been succeeded by J. W. Craig, who has been connected with the Keith interests for years. The amount of vaudeville used at the Dream has been greatly increased of late, and rumor has it that this sudden increase is due to the building of the new Modern Theater very close to the Dream. General film service is used by Mr. Keith at this house.

"The Traffic in Souls," the Universal production, continues to do a "S. R. O." business at the Globe Theater, Boston, and the engagement is still an indefinite one.

The Edisonia Theater, Springfield, Mass., is now controlled by the Globe Theater Company, of this city. J. B. Thomas, formerly in charge of the Globe, is now managing the Edisonia. Both houses offer photoplay programs.

A. Z. Poli has two theaters in Springfield, and has decided to rename the older house. The choice of names will be left to the public and the person who sends in the most appropriate name will receive a ten-dollar gold piece.

Manager Thompson, of the Fox Theater, New Britain, Conn., is now offering a straight picture program without vaudeville.

The Broadway Theater opened to the public at New Britain, Conn., on January 31. Thus far business has been good, with a policy of photoplays.

Manager Eugene Wilson, of Poli's Theater, Waterbury, Conn., held "Mardi Gras Week" at this house, an innovation that is going the rounds of all the Poli houses.

William Fox celebrated the third anniversary of his theater in New Haven, Conn., on February 2. Manager Ben Jackson, of Fox's Grand Theater, New Haven, reports, as usual, very satisfactory business, with vaudeville and pictures.

HENRY.

INDIANA.

BEING members of the Citizens' Charity Association, Indianapolis, is not inexpensive as some motion picture exhibitors of Indianapolis thought. The C. C. A., it should be known, is supported entirely by moving picture exhibitors and only moving picture men are members of the association. Under the Indiana law the only amusement for which a fee can be charged on Sunday is baseball. No fee is charged at the moving picture show, but a box for dropping in the contribution is at hand. To meet the law exactly there must be a bonafide contribution to charity as a result of keeping open.

Some exhibitors interpreted the idea as being "contribute if you wish." But they have been taught the error of their ways. The Indianapolis local of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League decided the exhibitors would have to come across or close up, and Supt. of Police, Sam Perrott, agreed with them.

As things stand now every exhibitor is donating regularly. The stand taken by the Indianapolis local was that the men who pay should not be forced to carry the burden of the exhibitors who didn't.

One of the good things accomplished by the Indianapolis local has been the peaceable settlement of every grievance with the operators' union. The work of the arbitration board has met with hearty approval.

One of the Indianapolis bakeries has been giving coupons with every loaf of bread, ten coupons being exchangeable for one ticket good at the neighborhood motion picture show. At first the bakery was redeeming the tickets from exhibitors at 2½ cents. By unanimous action at a meeting of the Indianapolis local of the Exhibitors' League it was agreed that the bakery must pay the full five cents.

The Operators' Union gave a Dutch lunch to the managers of picture houses at the Operators' clubrooms. About thirty managers responded and everybody enjoyed a sociable evening.

From correspondence received by A. C. Zaring, secretary of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, there seems to be a desire to hold the next state meeting at Indianapolis instead of Evansville, as planned. The meeting will be held late in February or early in March, the date not yet having been named.

O. Mittendorf has bought the Wild Opera House, Noblesville, Ind., of the Peoples Amusement Company, Indianapolis.

The Grand Central, Central avenue and Thirtieth street, drew capacity crowds to a film lecture on the Yellowstone National Park. The Northern Pacific Railway Company furnished the films and the lecturer gratis. The usual admission was charged.

Edna Fox, who has a name locally as a tango dancer, has leased the new house now being built at Garfield and East New York streets. She expects to use Mutual service.

The Palms Theater, Indianapolis, playing to overflow business, is the big one in Ed Sourbier's line. Sourbier was once sheriff of Marion county, then he went into the automobile business, and now he is in the film field strong, being one of the directors of the newly incorporated Peerless Film Company. The capital stock is $25,000. Other directors are Elbert H. Brient and Everett L. Deupree. Besides the Palms, Sourbier runs two other houses, and uses the Mutual program in all of them.

The Switou Grand has been opened in New Albany, Ind., on the site of the old Crystal Theater. The Switou Amusement Company is using Mutual service exclusively. The house cost $36,000.

The Martz Theater, Tipton, Ind., has changed its service to the Mutual. They have been using a licensed service.

R. R. Bair bought out Frank Green. Green ran a theater on Fountain Square, Indianapolis, called Green's Theater. Bair has named it the Fountain Square Theater.

Mrs. F. C. Ager, Kokomo, Ind., is now running both the Ideal and Lyric theaters in Kokomo, using the Mutual programme in both houses. Mrs. Ager recently bought the Lyric from William Tarkington.

Burton Garrett has moved his agency for the Apex, Blache and Solax features from the Saks to the Willoughby building, Indianapolis. H. Z. Levine, of the Blache and Solax companies, will be in Indianapolis soon to help Garrett inaugurate a publicity campaign. The Indianapolis branch is now on a paying basis, and after Mr. Levine's visit, is to be put in charge of O. W. Moore. Mr. Garrett will be moved to another field.

The Peerless Film & Supply Company, Indianapolis, has contracted for the entire output of the Ramo Film Mfg. Co., starting with six of their subjects. The four-reel racing film, "In the Stretch," is proving an exceptional drawing card, they say, wherever exhibited. The company also has contracted with the Kennedy Features, Inc., New York, for "Mary Magdalene" and "The Bride of Lammermoor."

J. S. Hebrew, who was transferred from Minneapolis to Indianapolis, to take charge of the Mutual agency, is making a big success of the branch.

The Lyric Theater, Decatur, Ind., couldn't crowd them all in the night they ran "All for the Flag" and gave away a photo of J. Warren Kerrigan as a souvenir.

The Bicknell Theater Company, Bicknell, Ind., has been incorporated with capital stock of $10,000. The directors are Bruce C. Kixmiller, Harry Mitchell and E. C. Smeltzer.

Rev. J. S. Godwin, Hobart, Ind., who caused the arrest of Hobart movie men for showing Sunday and was defeated in the trial of the case, is now declaring the trial was a "put up" job and the trial a mockery.

W. O. Pettiner, Kirklin, Ind., is negotiating for the sale of his motion picture and vaudeville house.

Moving picture films showing the beauties and industries of Indianapolis are to be shown before the Chamber of Commerce, convention division, Indianapolis. The Chamber of Commerce is interested in the possibility of showing the city by film to those seeking to locate industries as well as to conventions.

The Old Walker Theater, Indianapolis, has been formally dedicated to the work of the Volunteers of America. It has been several years since it was darkened for a film show.

Louis Klene, proprietor of the Arc Theater, Lafayette, Ind., is soon to reopen. The house has been closed for remodeling. Soon after the first of February the public will be invited to have a look at what is costing Klene $7,000.

C. N. Stevenson, owner of the Starland, Indianapolis, uses two features weekly now.

The Rex Theater, Bloomington, Ind., is closed temporarily for repairs.

The Garrick, the Tacoma, and the Irving in Indianapolis, and G. J. Rapp's house in Shelbyville, Ind., are using new A. C. to D. C. motor generator sets with success.

The Manual Training High School graduating class in Indianapolis thinks of installing a motion picture machine at the school. The graduating class each half year at the school makes it a practice to give the school something to add to its beauty or efficiency. Decision in the matter awaits the action of the school board, which is considering the installation from a legal standpoint. They insist it must not be contrary to the fire laws, to the building code, or to the good appearance of the assembly hall. The school board inquiry in this connection has brought out the fact that practically every state institution, either charitable or penal, has a motion picture machine and gets some film service at least once a week. The preference is for educational and comedy films.

Supt. J. B. Pearcy, of the Anderson, Ind., schools, is an enthusiast on the moving picture machine as a factor in education. The Anderson high school exhibits films one day each week. The exhibits are largely attended by people outside the school. Educational and comedy films are shown. Supt. Pearcy says a motion picture machine should be part of the equipment of every school.

The Indiana Engineering Society annual convention at Indianapolis just enjoyed the best educational session in the history of the society. These are the words of one of the officers of the society. This year is the first year that a motion picture machine has been used to illustrate lectures. A Bausch & Lomb opaque balopticon also was used.

The motion picture business is looking upward in Alexandria, Ind. C. P. Fuller is to open a new house soon. This will give W. H. Lipps the only opposition he has ever had for the movie business of the town. Recently Lipps had to add 100 seats to take care of the extra patronage. Fuller's house will seat 250.

Peter Kaler, proprietor of the Royal Theater, Newcastle, Ind., has rented quarters in Anderson, Ind., and will open a new house in that city soon. In order to get the location he wanted, Kaler had to buy a stock of groceries and he is now in the midst of a "closing out sale" that is a big success.

J. T. Coons and C. Harding, of Hobart, Ind., were adjudged not guilty of Sunday violation at one of the best attended trials in the history of the county. The trial was before a justice of the peace and his courtroom proving too small the defendants agreed to call off performances at their house for the day and donated it for court purposes. During intermission Mr. Coons had his house pianist play for the crowd. The selection was "Too Much Mustard."

Princeton, Ind., has been filmed. Everybody from the mayor to the bloodhounds registered. The fire department made a run, with all the bells in town ringing. A perfectly good flank roast was dragged through the streets attached to an automobile. The bloodhounds got the scent and followed it with drooling chops—all in focus. E. W. Borman had charge of the picture men. The film was run at the Star Theater.

Notice has been filed with the Secretary of State that the Warner Features, incorporated, New York, that $10,000 of its capital stock of $1,000,000 will be represented in Indiana.

After being closed six weeks the Royal Theater, Portland, Ind., has reopened. A new radium gold fiber screen has been installed. The main office, box office, side walls and electric lights have been re-decorated, and the piano pit done away with. A new electric piano has been installed, ventilating windows and a new exite in the side wall added.

S. D. Kopf, S. M. Haines and C. W. Watson, three Indianapolis business men, have undertaken a novel trip. They are traveling into Panama and South America with an automobile moving picture house. They carry a full equipment for showing pictures, including machine, dynamo, films, operator, screen and in fact everything essential to an exhibit. When electricity to run is not available they use the motor on the automobile. The three say they are having the time of their lives in addition to playing to a good business.

Ed Caldwell, Danville, Ind., the Royal Theater man, is tearing down the old property, which is to be the site of his new motion picture theater. The building being wrecked is the oldest in Danville. At some time in its life it was covered with weather boarding, and a good many inhabitants were greatly surprised when the weather boarding came off to find that it was an old time log house.

Barton & Olsen sold the front of the Illinois Theater, which is being torn down, to be replaced by the Isis, to an Indianapolis druggist, who will use it upon a suburban house.

The Citizens' Charity Association, the Indianapolis exhibitors' charitable organization maintained by a pro rata tax upon all Sunday exhibitors, disbursed $569.71 in charity in January. The sum was distributed through the German Ladies' Aid Society and the Indianapolis Humane Society which applied it to the relief of seventy-four families. Inasmuch as the two distributing agencies are paid by the city and the exhibitors pay no salary for the care of the fund, the money went direct to those to be benefited.

"Scrooge," the three-reel adaptation from Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol," was given special prominence at the Royal Theater, Danville, Ind., for the benefit of the school children, and made such a decided impression that the youngsters wrote E. J. Caldwell, manager, the next day about forty "thank you" letters. The youngsters ranged all the way from five to ten years of age.

The Peerless Film Company seized from the Columbia Theater, Indianapolis, the three-reel Belmont feature, "The Inspector of Police," on which they assert they own state rights by suit in replevin. The suit is being tried and is of much interest to local film exchange men. In the preliminary evidence it was brought out that the film was bought by G. G. Swain, of the Indianapolis Film Exchange, who got it from St. Louis Film Company.

"If it is necessary," said L. J. Bamberger, secretary of the Peerless Company, "we will drag the case through the higher courts in order to find out once and for all whether or not we are to be protected in the matter of a state's right contract."

The Peerless Film & Supply Company, Indianapolis, has been re-incorporated as the Peerless Film Company, with a capital stock of $25,000. The new company takes over the old, of which E. H. Brient has been president and L. J. Bamberger, secretary. The latter named gentlemen will continue with the new Peerless.

The Lyric Theater, Muncie, Ind., has just rented from the Peerless the first independent films they have ever run in the house. They have contracted for six Ramo features, one each week, commencing February 13. Some other houses which have contracted for the entire output of the Peerless are the Star, at South Bend; the Little Theater, at Auburn; the Savoy, at Evansville; the American, at Terre Haute, the Vaudette and Royal, Indianapolis; the Crystal, at Louisville, and the entire circuit of houses operated by the Switou Amusement Company in Indiana and Kentucky.

Burton Garrett, Indianapolis, who had state rights on the Waterloo Film Company's features, "The Battle of Waterloo," is in Huntington, Ind., where he seized and is fighting for possession of the film which was sold into Indiana by an Ohio agent.

The Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, after much demonstrating and dickering, has decided to buy a Motionscope Company machine for use in inviting conventions to visit Indianapolis. Under ordinary methods the division obtained 198 conventions for 1914, but expects with the pictures to interest a greater number.

The Magnet Film Manufacturing Company, Ryansville, Ind., has been incorporated to deal in moving pictures. The capital stock is $10,000 and the directors H. L. Hellman, William T. Morris, L. A. Wollenberger and others.

Waycross, Georgia, is interesting Indiana people in farming and orcharding operations in the South through moving pictures of Waycross farms and orchard operations. The film has been shown at several cities in the state.

The Evansville Courier is running a prize baby contest and proposes to take moving pictures of the prize winners in action after the contest is decided. The pictures will be exhibited in Evansville theaters. Incidentally, the houses are getting some good publicity.

In a lease to a moving picture concern in Ft. Wayne, E. A. K. Hackett, a Presbyterian elder, stipulates that only religious or helpful films shall be shown on Sunday.

Mayor Batchelor, Marion, Ind., has said that no film that is detrimental to the general good will be allowed to show. He is drafting a special ordinance for that purpose, having found the laws on the statute books inadequate.

Fort Wayne Gayety Theater Company, Ft. Wayne, Ind., incorporated, capital stock $4,500, to operate theaters. Directors: E. F. Bommerschein, J. T. Belger, J. F. Bommerschein.

V. U. Young, Gary, Ind., and C. J. Wolf, Wheeling, W. Va., have bought a downtown corner in Gary for $15,000, on which they expect to erect a theater building for vaudeville and motion pictures.

WILLIAM.

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

THE contract has been awarded for the erection of Thomas Graham's new moving picture theater on Bridge Street, near Stocking, in Grand Rapids, Mich. It will be a two-story combination store and theater building, 50 x 75 feet, and will seat 400 persons. Apropos of new photoplay house construction in the state of Michigan this is the seventh theater this particular architect has designed in the last year.

B. W. Umbreit has sold his moving picture house, the Orpheum, at Marion, Ia., to B. C. Hall.

Manager Olson, of the Star Theater, at Beloit, Wis., has remodeled the front of his house and installed new projection apparatus.

R. W. Williams, who sold the Lyric Theater, at Greenfield, Iowa., to B. Balser, of Des Moines, planned to go to Florida. Balser, who is an experienced moving picture man, has assumed charge of his new purchase.

John B. Maurer has sold his half interest in the Atlas Theater, in Appleton, Wis., to Otto Reinholz, of Hortonville. Associated with Reinholz will be Reinhard Hooymen, of Appleton, who recently purchased the other half interest in the house.

L. M. Stanahan has sold his interest in the opera house at Fayette, Ia., to H. W. Gray.

The Polk Sanitary Milk Company, of Indianapolis, is pleased at the success of its advertising campaign with moving pictures, conducted through thirty houses in that vicinity. The film was educational, showing the pasteurizing process and the "handless" methods used before it reaches the consumer. No charge was made to patrons of the houses where the subject was shown.

Maynard Ray Tournier, who built two theaters in Mitchell, S. D., is now manager of the Star Theater, at Clinton, Ia., the owners, Millington & Humphrey having other interests which demand their attention. One of the first acts of the new manager was to install General Film service.

Councilman Healey, of Sioux City, Ia., objected to "railroading" through the city council the ordinance regulating motion picture booths and the width of aisles as well as fixing the qualifications of operators, and the author of the measure, Councilman O'Shonessy, did not press it. It was held over.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

THAT story about moving picture actors using so much vile language that deaf-mutes are shocked has been given a setback by no less an authority than Rev. J. M. Koehler, missionary to the deaf mutes of the Episcopal church. Not only did he discount that widely spread tale before other ministers at a synod meeting in Muskogee, Okla., but he also made a few pertinent remarks concerning censorship and on the value of the photoplay to the army of afflicted for which he is laboring. "I have never noticed anything objectionable about the 'movies,'" he said. "I occasionally catch a 'cuss-word,' but presume the same utterance is often made on the stage. It is certainly not intended just for effect for lip movement. I have been around some of the shows in Muskogee, and to be candid, they all seem to be pretty high-class places, and on a par with other cities where the censorship is very strict. They are a help to my people inasmuch as it must be remembered that we who hear not are limited and every uplift we get must come through the vision."

The "Mae I," on North Pacific street, Plainview, Tex., which was built by Dr. J. W. Grant, at a cost of $12,000, has been opened. J. S. Bonner is manager. The Ruby, also is Plainview, has been completed, at a cost of $10,000.

The Oklahoma Panama Exposition Commission made arrangements with the Southern Film Company to take the pictures which will be shown in the Oklahoma building at the big exposition in San Francisco next year

The San Antonio, Texas, "Express," derides the story sent out of Chicago that "two vaudeville houses decided to discontinue films and substitute vaudeville and the motion picture business was doomed." Admitting that there is a scarcity of real good photoplays, the editor says: "It will take more than the action of two vaudeville managers to bring about 'the doom of motion pictures.' Far from being doomed, it would seem nearer the truth to say that the pictures are still in the formative period and that greater progress may be expected in the future."

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

ST. PAUL, Minn., clergymen are in favor of moving pictures. This has been made evident, not by the mere negative policy of desisting from attacks or disapproval, but by a movement to use them in all, or most, of the churches. This semi-final stage in the evolution of the attitude of the ministers upon films as adjuncts to religion, took the form of a plan to have a central exchange for educational pictures to be used in connection with services. Rev. David Morgan proposed, at a meeting of the Ministerial Union, that the public library of St. Paul be asked to supply educational films to be used by the schools, Sunday schools and churches. The assembled clergyman received the idea enthusiastically and the resolution carried. Dr. W. D. Johnston, the librarian, has given the plan his approval.

Irving Patridge has sold the Ideal Theater, at Milbank, S. D., to James Kane and P. C. Scholberg, of Marvin.

The Family Theater, at Red Wing, Minn., which has been conducted by N. Skoog, is now being operated by P. J. Boltz.

Leffingwell & Hogan have sold a half interest in the Unique Theater at Morton, Minn., to Joseph Akins.

Myron Appleby is reported to be contemplating engaging in the moving picture business at Luverne, Minn.

Rev. C. E. Mead, pastor of the M. E. church at Pine Island, Minn., is pleased with the picture show operated by his church for the last year. The project originated simultaneously with his recognition of the good and bad possibilities in the moving picture, and the leading members of his congregation sympathized with him in his aim to direct this valuable ally churchward. The Opera House was rented, volunteers were secured for the box office and a force of young men were trained for operating the machine. Shows are given each Tuesday and Saturday night. Ten cents admission is charged, and once a month free tickets are given to the Sunday school pupils under sixteen years of age. Frequently the pastor gives lectures on educational and industrial films. It is not the aim of the church to make money, but serve a purpose in the community, which has been accomplished; there is no other picture house there.

Carl Ferdinandson is the new manager of the Idle Hour Theater at St. Cloud, Minn., which was recently sold by John Beltzer.

W. M. Gibbs and C. H. Manderschied are now engaged in the moving picture business at Garretson, S. D.

Warden Thomas Tynan, of the Canon City, Colo. State Penitentiary, was emphatic in his valuation of the motion picture in his plan to reform prisoners—not torture them. "If you want to build a man up mentally and morally," he said in stating his aims, "you have to build him up physically. In the first two years after the installation of our motion picture machine, our report showed 400 less violations of the rules than the best previous records."

C. E. Anderson has sold his interest in the Princess Theater at Wells, Minn., to his partner, S. W. Heath.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE Tivoli Opera House, erected here less than a year ago by "Doc" Leahy and associates and representing an investment of more than a half million dollars, is now being conducted as a high class moving picture house by Turner & Dahnken, Inc. This theater is one of the most costly of any devoted to motion pictures and is one of ten being conducted by this firm. First run are shown here, a solid week being devoted to each production. The prices are 10, 20 and 30 cents. This theater has an eight-piece orchestra in addition to a pipe-organ. Its large size and excellent appointments has resulted in its being made the key theater of the Turner & Dahnken circuit and a great success is being made of motion pictures where opera failed after a trial of eight months.

The Globe Theater, closed some time ago by the Board of Public Works through a misunderstanding of some kind, will be reopened shortly by Turner & Dahnken, Inc. A number of improvements have been made, and the house will be in a first class shape when it is again opened.

The excavating work for the new Turner & Dahnken Theater at Berkeley, across the bay from San Francisco, is about completed, and construction work on his handsome adifice will be under way shortly. This motion picture house will seat two thousand persons and will represent an investment of fully $150,000.

The new Turner & Dahnken Theater at Sacramento, Cal., was opened recently and a fine business is being enjoyed there. The old Pantages Theater was remodeled and changed into a model motion picture house at an expenditure of several thousand dollars.

Turner & Dahnken, Inc., occupy the entire fourth floor of a large building at 942 Market street, San Francisco, this being the headquarters of its large circuit. Here are maintained large offices, a storage place for films, a printing plant where its announcements are prepared, a studio for the manufacture of slides, film developing and printing rooms and stock rooms for advertising matter of all kinds. More space is occupied than is at the command of many large exchanges.

A Kimball pipe organ has been installed in the new Grauman Theater on Market street, which is being operated as an exclusive motion picture house. The theater recently showed Jack London's "Sea Wolf" for the first time, the pictures having been exhibited on San Francisco Bay and vicinity.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition officials have set aside a large amount of space in the Liberal Arts Building for a display of moving picture machines, films, and all pertaining to the industry. Group No. 33 will be devoted entirely to photography in its different branches.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company have arranged for a unique exhibit at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, in which motion pictures will be used to advantage. A large part of the exhibit will be housed in a moving picture auditorium to be erected inside the Palace of Liberal Arts, and here will be shown by means of motion pictures the laying and splicing of submarine cables, the manufacture of cables and the winding of magnets.

The Savoy Theater on McAllister street, near Market, is again being used as a motion picture house and is now showing "Antony and Cleopatra."

The Elite Theater in the North Berkeley district, Berkeley, Cal., has been closed, but is being remodeled and will probably be opened again soon.

A new theater to be known as the Park Theater is to be erected at Modesto, Cal., at a cost of $50,000; it has been leased in advance to W. D. Martin, formerly manager of the recently burned Modesto Theater. It will be a two-story structure and will have a seating capacity of 800.

L. L. Kahn and Louis R. Greenfield have taken over the old Sutter Theater, at 2030 Sutter street, and have opened it as the All Star Theater. High class mechanical equipment has been installed and a specialty will be made of big attractions, it being the plan to change programs twice a week. The theater is a "Class A" structure, with a seating capacity of about 700. The location is in the Fillmore street district, one of the bright spots of the city's night life.

Articles of incorporation of the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., are now being prepared here and will shortly be filed at Sacramento. The concern will have a capital stock of $60,000 and Sol L. Lesser, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., will be president and manager. Films of the All Star Feature Company, now being handled by the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., will be carried.

Joy B. Rothschild has been granted a permit by the Board of Police Commissioners to conduct a moving picture theater at 816 Larkin street.

The Portola Theater has closed its second week on "The Inside of the White Slave Traffic" and has attained a record for attendance that will probably remain unbroken for some time. A continuous performance was given from 9 o'clock in the morning until 11:30 o'clock at night, and the price of admission was 20 cents. The owners of this theater are understood to have purchased the Western rights for this film. Eugene Roth manager of the theater, is in Los Angeles this week on business in connection with the deal and upon his return details will be available.

Rather to the surprise of G. M. Anderson, popularly known as Broncho Billy, his splendid theater here, designed for musical comedy, is being devoted this week to moving pictures. Marie Dressler's show, "The Merry Gambol," was to have opened at The Gaiety on January 26, but a misunderstanding arose, causing a postponement of this attraction and at the last moment it was decided to show moving pictures for a week. Contrary to what might very befittingly have happened Broncho Billy's likeness was not shown in his own theater, but instead, the "Traffic in Souls" was presented. This film was to have been shown at the Savoy Theater and was advertised for that place, but "The Undying Story of Captain Scott" was shown there instead.

The Pacific Mutual Film Corporation, 162 Turk street, is enjoying a steadily increasing volume of business and additions are now being made to the office and storage space. E. B. Stebbins, formerly very well known in the film service field, but for the past two years engaged in other work, is now with this concern and is acting as assistant manager to R. J. Crone, who has charge of the San Francisco and Los Angeles offices, the local branch being under his direct supervision.

George Breck, one of the pioneer distributors of moving picture machines on the Coast, is adding to his store at 70 Turk street and in the future will handle all makes of machines, instead of the Edison exclusively. He is also planning to put in a complete line of moving picture cameras and supplies.

Moving pictures are now being shown regularly at the Savoy Theater on McAllister street and free dancing on the stage is allowed after each performance as an added attraction.

The City Attorney has advised the Board of Public Works that they have no legal right to refuse a permit to the owners of the Globe Theater for making repairs and improvements to the building, providing the proposed alterations are such as do not conflict with the building law. The City Attorney points out that if the building is unsafe to be used as a moving picture house it is the privilege and duty of the Board of Supervisors to condemn it.

One of the most interesting releases to be made in the near future will be the one made by the California Motion Picture Corporation showing scenes along the classic automobile route from San Francisco to Los Angeles. Many of the views harken back to early Spanish days in this state, the old Missions having been given deserving attention. The tour on which the pictures were taken was made by Herbert Payne, president of the producing company.

Moving pictures of Father Ricard were taken recently, showing him in his observatory and are being shown in the Pantages Theater this week. The films were made by the California Motion Picture Corporation, which also secured moving pictures of Pavlowa, the Russian dancer, while she was here with her troupe.

Contracts will be let within a short time for the construction of a theater on the old McDougall lot at Mason and Eddy streets. It is expected that it will be devoted to vaudeville and moving pictures.

Herbert Payne, president of the California Motion Picture Corporation, was married to Miss Vera de Sabla on February 3. The wedding was filmed as a lasting record of the event.

Owing to the fact that the city of Sacramento, Cal., has no building law requiring the placing of exits in playhouses, Chief Anderson, of the fire department, is planning to request managers of theaters to designate in their programs the exact location of exits in their respective houses. Preparations are being made to draw up an adequate building ordinance for the city.

The Kelbrae Motion Picture Company is remodeling the brick building on Callisch street, near Tulare avenue, Fresno, Cal., and will establish its city plant there. When finished the structure will be used as a factory for the developing and printing of motion pictures. A projecting room will also be installed. A site on First street has been selected where the staging and producing plant will be established.

The Theater Fresno, Fresno, Cal., formerly closed except when engaged by regular stock companies, has been remodeled for vaudeville and moving pictures and was recently opened under the management of Fred W. Voight. One performance is given each afternoon and two in the evening, prices ranging from 10 to 30 cents. A new organ and piano has been installed and an electric sign, said to be the largest in the San Joaquin Valley, has been placed over the marquise. According to present plans the theater will be rebuilt during the coming summer.

The Princess Theater has been opened on San Pablo avenue, Oakland, Cal., near San Pablo station.

Arthur M. Lorber, owner of a moving picture business at Antioch, Cal., was married recently at San Francisco to Miss Katherine Warwick, also of Antioch.

W. Evans is erecting a new moving picture theater at Dinuba, Cal., that is to cost about $16,000 when completed. The work would have been well along by this time had it not been for unusually heavy rains, but construction will be rushed from now on.

The Lifograph Moving Picture Company is another producing concern which is invading the San Joaquin Valley field, and will shortly establish a camp at Dinuba, Cal. Pictures will be taken around Smith Mountain and Mills Valley and in the vicinity of Dinuba.

CHURCH.

MISSOURI.

"OUR Mutual Girl" recently made her appearance in Kansas City, Joe Donegan, of the Lyric Theater, having the good fortune to be the first to show the film. The initial run attracted big crowds.

The Kansas City park board is considering the practicability of running free pictures during the summer months as the result of a similar decision by the St. Louis authorities. However, there is not a great chance of the plan maturing, as the park board is among the various branches of the Kansas City administration which have adopted a policy of retrenchment. The patrons of the films will therefore probably have to depend on the existing theaters, as in the past, for their summer amusement.

The Palace Theater, one of the houses operated by the Standard Amusement Company, is one of the few in Kansas City which provides music from a balcony. The mezzanine, however, is due to the value of space rather than other considerations. A big automatic instrument is utilized, and a balcony was installed to accommodate it. The plan is an excellent one for theaters which use a Wurlitzer or Fotoplayer, both of which are popular with exhibitors here.

"The Shadows of Sin," which recently was seized by the Kansas City authorities while being exhibited at the Crystal Theater, was later restored to Julius Singer, its owner, but was debarred from Kansas City by an order of the court. Mr. Singer, who is at the head of the World's Leader Feature Film Company, was discharged at the trial, as was Roy Schnepp, owner of the Crystal.

Joseph L. Stiebel, manager of the Apollo Theater, has left for the East, where he will inspect leading motion picture theaters in Chicago, Cincinnati, New York, Philadelphia and other cities. Mr. Stiebel expects to incorporate the latest improvements in his theater, located at Thirty-third street and Troost avenue, and among those which are flourishing in the residential district.

The Zimbar Theater on Independence avenue has a somewhat different class of patronage from most of the other Kansas City houses. As a result many of the advertisements of the theater are printed in Hebraic.

Many moving picture houses closed their doors on Sunday, February 1, in order to provide no opposition for the go-to-church movement which culminated on that day. Paid advertisements were used by the churches for the purpose of stimulating attendance on the date named. The exhibitors mentioned co-operated by closing during the hours the churches were open, the cordial comment which resulted repaying them to some extent for the monetary loss.

Moving pictures were a feature of the annual convention of the Southwestern Lumbermen's Association recently held in Kansas City. The Long-Bell Lumber Company is the owner of the film, which shows the various processes that are utilized in manufacturing lumber from the tree.

The Apollo Theater recently featured Klein's "The Third Degree" with success. The five-part subject comprised the entire program at the Apollo and indicated that features of the right sort are eagerly sought by the public.

L. M. and Roy Crawford are the new owners of the Empress Theater at Topeka, Kan. Mrs. E. F. Maxwell, whose husband has successfully conducted the Novelty Theater for several years, will have the management of the Empress. The theater is said to have established a new record by changing hands four times inside of a month. J. N. Gilleland sold to the Crawfords after getting the theater in a trade in which his farm was involved.

The Kansas City Parents'-Teachers' associations, composed of parents and teachers of youngsters in the public schools, has appealed to Miss Gene Gauntier and other film manufacturers for more pictures especially adapted to children. Special programs are desired for two performances a week at theaters in residential districts. Exhibitors stated that such pictures were not always available and the association appealed directly to the manufacturers.

MURRAY.

KENTUCKY.

EDWARD CONDIN, of Louisville, recently bought twenty-four reels of pictures from the Owl Feature Film Exchange, for a traveling organization, which he will take out in a few days. It is expected that he will travel throughout the South.

Samuel Creamer & Company, of Louisville, has recently purchased a complete moving picture outfit, and will go on the road, using the moving pictures in conjunction with a vaudeville performance.

Two feature films, "James Patterson," and "Secret Service," were recently sold to Dr. Roseberry, of Louisville, who expects to travel through the South with them. He will show in any convenient location which comes to hand.

H. Stoess, of Crestwood, was recently in Louisville, and bought a complete moving picture outfit.

He is getting ready to open the Stoess Amusement Hall as a moving picture theater, at Crestwood.

R. S. Shrader, manager of the Central Film Exchange, which represents the Universal Program in Kentucky, has secured a lease on the two floors above the Novelty Theater, on Fourth avenue, and will move the exchange at once. The Tyler Building, in which they have been located for some time, is not an up-to-date building, and the quarters were too small for the steadily increasing business. After moving, the exchange will handle a complete line of supplies, machines, opera chairs and everything needed for the equipment of a first-class moving picture theater. The change will directly benefit them in many ways. A shop will be installed for taking care of all machine repairs.

H. A. Hammer, of Warner's Features, was in Louisville recently. The results of his hammering are having good effect in Louisville.

The four-part Imp "Absinthe," in which King Baggot takes the leading part, went big at the Novelty Theater. The house was packed all afternoon and up to closing time. It was estimated that 6000 people paid admission to see the production in the few hours in which it was presented.

The Colonial Amusement Company, of Lexington, has purchased the Pastime moving picture theater of Maysville, and is arranging to increase the seating capacity.

John F. Messmer, formerly of Falmouth, has purchased the Princess Theater Building in Dayton. The building is located on Sixth avenue and is one of the largest and best show houses in the city.

The new Dreamland Theater, of Providence, was recently thrown open to the public. The new playhouse, built by A. Niswonger especially for Hurley Bros., is said to be one of the handsomest buildings of its kind in the state.

With a capital stock of $5,000 the Princess Theater filed articles of incorporation with County Clerk Theodore Lewis, of Lexington, recently. The incorporators are Carrie Bean, Emma L. Davis and Flossie Sheriff. The capital stock is divided into 250 shares. The debt limit is $10,000.

The Park Theater Company, of Henderson, filed a deed of trust with the Central Trust Company, of Owensboro, in which it pledges its property in Henderson, for the purpose of issuing $6,000 in bonds of $1,000 denominations. The lot, which faces on Main street, the theater building, appurtenances and fixtures are conveyed. The lien mentioned in this deed is stated to be inferior to the purchase money lien held by the Henderson National Bank. The deed is signed for the company by T. A. Pedley, J. G. Burch and J. G. Weil. The property is valued at $17,000.

The Masonic Temple, of Elizabethtown, will in all probability be converted into a moving picture house. The lease now held by the Masonic order expires February 1, and will not be renewed. It is said that very small changes will be necessary, as there is now six exits to the main room, which has a seating capacity of three hundred, and the fact that all entertainments will take place on the first floor lessens the danger of fire. The building is owned by M. C. Marion. Committees composed of H. T. Jones and C. J. Toops, representing the Knights Templar Commandery, and Horace Hays and C. Quiggins, representing the Morrison Lodge of Masons, were appointed to look into the matter with regard to conducting the moving picture business.

Prosecutions of moving picture show proprietors in Frankfort, under the city ordinances for operating on Sunday will now cease, as Judge Stout, in the Franklin Circuit Court, recently held that there is no ordinance against the practice, and the defendants must be prosecuted under the State Sunday-closing law, which entitles them to a jury. Police Judge Herndon fined two managers $25 each, but they won their appeal to the circuit court. Councilman L. B. Marshall has been active in the prosecutions, but every trial before a jury in a magistrate's court, which has been a regular Monday proceeding for several weeks, has resulted in acquittal.

The matter of open Sunday at the movies in Winchester will be presented at the next meeting of the city council. The information was obtained from the proprietor of one of the three picture houses that an effort was being made to pass an ordinance allowing the houses to remain open on Sunday.

The moving picture shows have not been overlooked by the State Legislature as a bill introduced by Representative Stone makes it unlawful for any person or persons to operate a picture show or show of any kind on Sunday. The measure also prohibits Sunday baseball, football or basketball. In fact, two bills along the same lines were introduced, one by E. D. Stone, H. B. 34, making it unlawful to operate a picture show on Sunday, and a bill introduced by Representative A. J. Oliver, H. B. 169, also making it unlawful to operate a picture show on Sunday. The House Committee on Kentucky Statutes decided recently, however, to report unfavorably on the bills prohibiting moving picture shows, baseball games, and other Sunday amusements.

The Novelty and Empire Theaters, of Louisville, recently ran the new Victor reel, "Dances of Our Day," in which Beatrice Allen and Carlos Sebastian take the leading parts. The single reel of this famous dance subject made a big hit at both theaters. The two local houses made arrangements with L. J. Dittmar, of the Arcadia Dance Hall, whereby they were able to give a ticket good for admittance at the dance hall with every ten cent ticket issued at the moving picture theaters, both parties benefitting largely.

The Masons of Elizabethtown have moved their picture show from the opera house to the Masonic Hall, as the lease on the old opera house expired, and it is to be torn down, and an implement house erected in its place. The picture show will continue under the same management as formerly, in its new home.

H. D. Tucknor, of the Universal Film Exchange of Louisville, has returned from a short trip to Chicago, Ill. He managed to hit Chicago in the midst of a heavy snowstorm. Things at the Universal are looking up very well for the season, and Mr. Tucknor is kept pretty busy keeping up with the large quantity of commercial reels out around the country.

Judge W. A. Kinney, of the Orpheum Theater, is giving away to children a small souvenir chicken as an added attraction. The chicken is constructed so as to "peep" when squeezed, and is proving a strong factor in attracting the youngsters.

Charles Milliken has been named as manager of the new Lyceum Theater, of Sulphur, and is very busy at present getting the house ready to open up. This opening will occur about the middle of February, and the house at the beginning will stick to commercial reels.

A new picture show house has been opened at Pleasureville by Professor Kirkpatrick, who is at the head of one of the Pleasureville schools.

A. C. Schmid has announced that the new Gayety Theater, of Carrollton, will throw its doors open about February 15.

A new brick building is being erected at Twenty-ninth and Winchester avenues, Ashland. The new building will soon be completed, and it is understood that Clint Moore will open a motion picture house in one section of it.

Ferdinand Schultze, formerly pianist at the Orpheum Theater, in Lexington, has accepted a similar position with the Colonial Theater, of Winchester.

A petition has been filed in the United States Court at Covington by several creditors of the Hippodrome Theater Company, in which the creditors allege that the company allowed George B. Payne to become a preferred creditor, and ask the court to declare the company a bankrupt. L. H. Ramsey is president of the corporation. The petitioners allege that the company is insolvent, and that their claims aggregate more than $1,000. Judge Cochran set February 10 as the date for the hearing.

The Crescent Amusement Company, of Bowling Green, has closed a lease for two pieces of property on which it will erect a new show house. The work of tearing down the old structures, which include a saloon and a vacant building, will be started in a few days, and a handsome new building will be erected, the cost of which will be not less than $15,000. The building will be suitable for either a picture show or opera house, and will be of brick, steel, stone, and concrete. The lower floor and balcony combined will have a seating capacity of fifteen hundred, and the building will have a marble front of very attractive appearance. The house will extend back 205 feet. This will be the third house operated in Bowling Green by the Crescent Amusement Company, of which J. P. Masters is local manager. The general offices of the concern are in Nashville, Tenn., but it is operating houses in several cities.

At present the town of Sebree has nothing to boast of in the way of amusements but one picture show. This house is operated by J. C. McCulloch on Friday and Saturday nights only, and it is drawing very good crowds.

Wm. Hayes & Son, of Madisonville, closed their motion picture house, the Princess, January 31. The house will be closed for two weeks, undergoing overhauling in the nature of practically a rebuilding. The owners will re-open with a first-class modern house in all respects, and will spare no expense in making the house one of the finest in the state, with every modern convenience known to the up-to-date moving picture theater. The film service will be kept up to the same high standard as heretofore.

Lexington is getting to be a strong motion picture town. It is reported that another deal is on for the opening of a new theater in a building at the corner of Main and Mill streets, formerly occupied by the drug store of Barnes & Hall.

The Perry Theater, of Hazard, is arranging an old fiddlers' contest, which is exciting a good deal of attention from the rural residents in that district. The first prize is to be five dollars, the second prize two dollars and a half, and the third prize one dollar. All the old fiddlers of the section have been asked to send in their names to the manager, and it is expected that the contest will be a lively one and draw a good crowd.

The Empress Motion Picture House, of Central City, Ky., has put in a new radium gold fibre screen.

The Board of Councilmen of the City of Pineville has passed an ordinance prohibiting the showing of scenes in which human life is taken, in theaters and other places of amusement in the city. The ordinance provides that "it shall be unlawful for any owner, manager, or operator of any theater, carnival, circus or other place of amusement in the city to exhibit any moving pictures wherein is depicted tragic or murderous feud scenes," and that "any person violating this ordinance shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than fifteen dollars for each offense."

The Lyric Theater, of Newport, was recently burglarized and about $500 taken. This is one of several robberies of the same character which have happened in a radius of a few hundred miles in the past few weeks. It is thought that the same thieves who blew the safe at Keith's Theater in Louisville are responsible for the act.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

OHIO.

THE Kleervue Film Company, Elyria, Ohio, recently closed a deal whereby it purchased five acres of land of the Parmly estate in Lake avenue, that city, and work is soon to commence on the construction of a building to cost $10,000. It is said the company plans that the studio shall be completed by June. R. J. Morris, of Cleveland, heads the company, which is registered as a $75,000 corporation. August Caleb, manager of the Ezella Theater, Cleveland, is treasurer of the concern and it is said all of the stock has been disposed of. The company will employ about fifteen actors in the beginning. College scenes will be enacted at Oberlin, country scenes at Brownhelm, French Creek, Grafton and Wellington; park and cliff scenes at Cascade Park, Elyria; quarry and mining scenes at Amherst; lake scenes at Lorain; other industrial scenes at Lorain, Elyria and Amherst and city scenes in Cleveland. The Kleervue Company has had a small plant in operation, marketing several educational films locally.

Incorporation papers were recently issued to the Columbia Film Manufacturing Company, of Cleveland, with offices in the Columbia building. The capital stock is $10,000. The new company is the outgrowth of the Columbia Film Company, conducted by S. A. Lustig, who will be the president of the manufacturing concern. Jacob Stern is vice-president and C. F. Loew, secretary and treasurer. It is proposed to erect a studio in the near future. A monthly film of current topic events is to be made for exhibition in thirty Cleveland theaters. Private pictures will be made for home exhibition and for preserving life portrayals. There will be a commercial department for the manufacture of advertising films which may be carried by salesmen to show the operation of machinery or other merchandise not practical to retain otherwise. The business may eventually grow into the production of photoplays, but that is not planned for the immediate future.

When Manager Gustave Schroeder, of the Majestic Theater, West 25th street, Cleveland, showed the Mutual "Sapho" at his house recently he presented something new and novel in motion picture projection. Mr. Schroeder is at the head of the Schroeder Artificial Flower Company besides being manager of the Majestic, and he is known as a decorator of skill. He has combined his art with the showing of pictures. Mr. Schroeder has surrounded his screen with a framework studded with illuminated flowers. It is electrically operated and the coloring and even the character of the flower may be changed at will.

H. J. Garfield, feature film manager of Cleveland, recently was in New York. He notes a decided improvement in the quality of feature films and says that the exhibitors' demands have influenced the product. "Only good pictures, as to scenario, acting and biography, are now considered," he says. "The day of the lurid film has gone and the manufacturers are rapidly bettering their output to meet the popular demand."

Two new picture theaters are in the course of construction in Cleveland and both will be opened in April. Joseph Grossman has leased a piece of land in the rear of the O'Brien building, Prospect avenue, and a house to have 750 seats will be erected there. The entrance will be through one of the stores in the O'Brien building. The theater will be known as the Standard. S. E. Morris, of The Home, and L. H. Wilks, of Funland, are building a new house on East 105th street at the corner of Kempton avenue, which will be one of the largest in that part of Cleveland. It will have 750 seats and will be modern in every respect. M. B. Scharfelt, real estate broker, has leased to his brother a building on Prospect avenue, east of the Sincere building, which will be remodeled and converted into a motion picture theater.

Tod A. Kelly, of Youngstown, recently was at Lisbon, Ohio, securing a number of scenes which will run in a film concerning the life and ancestry of the late President McKinley. Mr. Kelly has been working for some time on a historic film which will cover President McKinley's life, and he will call the film, "From Birthplace to Tomb." The scenes for the most part are laid at Niles, Ohio; Canton, Ohio; Liston, and Washington, D. C.

Shreve, Ohio, is to have a motion picture house and it is said Carl Brothers will give the town a completely equipped up-to-date house. Architects have been at work on plans for the building some time.

Ohio citizens who cannot afford the long trip across the continent to visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco may be able to go by the proxy of the moving pictures and actually let their friends meet them there. The Panama-Pacific commission for Ohio met in Columbus recently and the plan of taking pictures on business streets of a number of Ohio cities and also in rural districts, was discussed.

Members of the Cleveland Local No. 1 of the Motion Picture League of America and the Cleveland Motion Pictures Association held a mass meeting recently and discussed plans for uniting. The meeting appointed a committee composed of President S. E. Morris, of the association; President Edward Kohl, of the League; Frank Kenney, Charles McGowan, E. N. Downs and Adolph Mahar to make plans for the reunion and submit them soon.

Paul Mooney, manager of the Olympia, on 55th street, Cleveland, has had great success with his "country store" idea. One evening he gave away chickens, ducks, geese and farm products and it became necessary to have police clear the lobby of the theater and bring order.

Nearly all of Cleveland's West Side theaters assisted the campaign to raise $80,000 for a new Lakewood hospital. Slides were thrown on all screens, calling attention to the need of personal contributions.

E. J. Georgepole, manager of the American Theater at Elyria, is showing Universal features exclusively.

Manager Dangherty, of the Star Theater in Lorain, is having great success with feature films.

Louis H. Becht has taken a long term lease on the Royal Theater, in Woodland avenue, Cleveland showing pictures. Mr. Becht is a pioneer film man and his principal house, the Mall, on Superior avenue, is one of the best known theaters in the country.

The Motion Picture Producing Company has been formed in Cleveland to make commercial and private pictures. Charles Salen is the president of the company and David Cohen, chief operator. Mr. Cohen returned from New York recently with a new camera for the work.

One of the most enjoyable features of the entertainment given by the H. Black Company to its employees at the Central Armory, Cleveland, recently, was the motion picture exhibition. Keystone comedies were shown on a screen by A. P. Anthony.

Fred C. Parcell, who was the first manager of the Loraine Theater, Lorain and West 45th streets, Cleveland, when that house was opened, is again in charge of the place. The Lorain has been in various hands since Mr. Parcell left there, but he returns as proprietor and manager, and after one week found the promise of an increasing business.

Another theater for Prospect avenue, Cleveland, is planned by Henry Scharfield, real estate operator. A permit has been taken out by him for alterations to a building at 421-25 Prospect avenue, necessary to install the theater. The auditorium will be 20 by 100 feet and the work is to cost about $1,200

BUCKEYE

PITTSBURGH.

THE greatest question affecting the exhibitors in this city at present is the new Pennsylvania laws applying to motion picture theaters, which the state administration has insisted shall be strictly enforced. Recently a meeting of about one hundred exhibitors of Pittsburgh and vicinity was held in the Columbia Theater, Fifth avenue, for the purpose of formulating plans to have the new law either repealed or changed in such a way that the provisions will not work a hardship on the men in the business.

The "three aisle law" and the newly established board of censorship are the two measures against which the local exhibitors will fight the hardest. The former law was enacted in 1900, but has never been enforced to date. However, the state authorities have sent out notices that the law must now be obeyed, and the establishment of a branch of the state department in this city with a corps of inspectors, makes it certain that the rule will be rigidly enforced. Motion picture men of Pittsburgh say that the aisle requirement will mean that in some theaters 80 per cent of the floor space would have to be utilized for aisle space, while in some theaters it would amount to only 15 per cent, without adding materially to the safety of the theater.

At the meeting in the Columbia Theater, the exhibitors also denounced the appointment of a board of censorship. It was declared the motion picture men are competent and disposed to care for the physical and moral welfare of their patrons and that state interference is unwarranted. A fund of $700 was subscribed for the purpose of providing money to fight the new laws, and a committee was appointed to go to Harrisburg and interview Governor Tener and learn just what the board of censors plan to do. W. Clarence Beatty, who presided at the meeting, named as members of the committee the following motion picture men: A. S. Davis, H. B. Miller and Walter Kinson, of Pittsburgh; J. White, of Beaver Falls, Senator Joseph H. Thompson, as legal adviser and James Delves, as secretary.

The appointment of J. Lewis Breitinger, former member of the legislature in Philadelphia, and Mrs. E. C. Niver, of Charleroi, as members of the board of motion picture censors, followed the pressure that was brought to bear upon Governor Tener to enforce the censorship law. The appointments were made under the act of June 19, 1911, which could not be carried out until the legislature made an appropriation for expenses. Mr. Breitinger will be paid $1,500, and Mrs. Niver $1,200 yearly. Steps for the inspection of films will be taken immediately in Harrisburg, where all pictures to be shown must be approved by the censors before being displayed.

Articles of incorporation have been filed at Dover, Del., for the Allegheny Theater Company, of Pittsburgh. The concern, which is capitalized for $10,000, will erect a number of motion picture theaters in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

David Shaw and Charles F. Engel, of McKees Rocks, are making arrangements for the purchase of the Heiber building, in Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, for the purpose of converting the structure into a motion picture theater.

The Mahoning Valley Traction Company has started a "safety campaign" by the purchase of a motion picture camera with which to take pictures of accidents and the way they occur. The pictures will be exhibited throughout the territory covered by the traction company, and officials hope thus to reduce the number of accidents that occur through carelessness and haste.

Arrangements have been made between local exhibitors and John Price Jackson, commissioner of labor and industry, for a series of tests to determine the time required to extinguish fires caused by films, to empty theaters and to operate various safety devices. Through the knowledge thus gained it is expected to bring about a better understanding between the state authorities and the motion picture exhibitors.

One of the best known figures connected with the business in Pittsburgh at present is that of William H. McCloskey. McCloskey, who is past 70 years of age, was a drummer boy in a local battalion during the Civil War. For the past year his services have been in requisition by motion picture exhibitors for advertising purposes. Whenever a war drama is exhibited at one of the downtown theaters, McCloskey, in his old blue uniform and with his drum strapped to his shoulders, is to be seen parading the foyer of the theater, sounding his old drum. Through his frequent appearance the old man has become one of the most prominent figures of the downtown theaters, and he is hailed as an acquaintance by about three-fourths of the people who enter the theater for which he is appearing.

R. A. Rowland and James D. Clark are making final plans for the erection of a theater in Penn, near Highland avenue. The proposed theater will represent an outlay of $50,000. It will be located on a plot 60 by 120 feet, and will be built of brick and terra cotta.

Mrs. A. Benedict has opened a motion picture theater in McClure avenue, Woods Run, north side. The theater is two stories in height, with a dancing hall above the auditorium.

W. T. Hammel, who recently opened the Broadwayodeon, a motion picture theater in Broadway, West Park, is planning a large extension to the house which will considerably increase the seating capacity. At present the house seats 250.

A. P. Mewes has opened his theater on Southern avenue. The house which is up-to-date in every way seats 350. He has installed two Power's 6A machines, a mirror screen, and above the theater has opened a poolroom and bowling alley.

D. L. MANLEY.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

MOORE'S Orpheum Theater Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $1,200, divided into 120 shares of the par value of $10 each. The trustees for the first year are Tom Moore, Arthur Robb and James A. K. Moore.

Among the latest additions to the moving picture field in Washington is the Savoy, on Fourteenth street near Columbia road, Northwest, one of the largest in the city, having a seating capacity of 810. It has a frontage of 64 feet on Fourteenth street and a depth of 138 feet. The facade is tastily constructed in a tan shade of tapestry brick, ornamented about the base by limestone introductions, and presenting an ample iron glass marquise projecting over the front sidewalk. The arcade apertures are artistically and practically arranged as entrances and exits. Ornamentation above these presents three figures of eagles cut in stone. Especial attention has been given to the sanitary arrangements of the theater and ample ventilation has been provided for. The new theater is owned by the Savoy Theater Company, Inc.

Suit was instituted some time ago in the District Supreme Court by Jesse R. Sherwood for the cancellation of a lease executed by him to Tom Moore, Frank E. Elder and Moore's American Theater Company. Sherwood's complaint to the court was that the erection of a motion picture theater at First street and Rhode Island avenue, Northwest, cost him $17,000 instead of $13,500. It was alleged that one of the provisions of the lease was that the instrument should not be binding if the owner was unable to have the theater erected for the latter amount.

Film manufacturers are endeavoring to secure the rescinding of the order by the Post Office Department, which bars moving picture films from the mails, pointing out that the order was promulgated without a proper representation of the manufacturers' case. The manufacturers are prepared to show that, encased in metal, which in turn is placed in fiber containers, as are all films offered for transportation, there is no danger in transporting them through the mails and that with practically no additional expense to the Government, the revenues of the Post Office Department can be increased more than $1,000,000 per year if this business is accepted. It is claimed that only under the intense heat of the arc of the projecting machine is there danger of ignition, and that a fire in a film exchange is almost unknown. Attention will also be called to the fact that kodak films, made of the same materials, are regularly handled through the mails without any of the precautions that safeguard the shipment of the larger films. Final action on the case was deferred for several weeks by Joseph Stewart, second assistant postmaster-general, in anticipation that the film companies would ask for a hearing in order to present the facts. No such application was received from them, and under the regulations excluding from the mails all inflammable materials, the decision was finally handed down some few days ago.

A banquet was given on February 4 to the employees of the Garden Theater, their friends and members of their families, by Tom Moore, proprietor of that theater, which proved to be the forerunner of a Welfare Club, the membership of which is made up of the employees of the Garden. Mr. Moore addressed his guests on the necessity of co-operation between employer and employee. The evening was a very pleasant one.

A six-piece orchestra is being utilized at the Empire Theater on H street, Northeast, on Sunday evenings to good advantage. It was particularly effective in connection with "Zuzu the Band Leader."

C. L. LINZ.

ILLINOIS.

J. N. PETRIE recently opened his new Gem Theater at Milford, with a matinee performance, at which souvenirs were given to the ladies.

The Pastime Theater Company, which purchased the interests of George B. Covell and J. G. Campbell in the Majestic Theater at East Moline, announced its intention of adding vaudeville to the moving picture program.

J. Hammersmith, of Hopedale, has opened a moving picture show at San Jose. Hammersmith also has the distinction of operating a photograph gallery in connection with his photoplay house, being in a small town where day patronage is not sufficient to warrant running.

The Robinson Amusement Corporation, of Chicago, has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $2,500, to do a general booking business and to operate theaters. The incorporators are: Charles Rudolph, Albert W. De Latour and E. P. Whelen.

George Green and S. Watts have leased the Broadway Theater at Salem, and will conduct a five-cent picture house most of the time, giving an occasional change in the way of a stock company.

The newly re-organized Springfield Commercial Association at the state capital has a censorship committee which is created for the purpose of passing opinions on amusement affairs. It is not likely that any radical reforms will originate with this body as the old association was wrecked by interfering with the labor union question and there is a distinctive sentiment among the business men against meddling with issues that are likely to prove boomerangs.

The Burlington Way is the name of a new moving picture theater which has been opened at Greenfield. The house gets its title from a new highway through the city which is now being popularized among automobilists.

The Lutiz Amusement Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $40,000, to do a theater and amusement business. The incorporators are: George A. Kyriakopolos, Irving J. Resnick and Julius C. Greenbaum.

With its new front and an expansion of one hundred and fifty seats, in addition to complete new decorations, the Lyric Theater on Seventh street, at Rockford, will lay claim to being one of the best photoplay houses in Northern Illinois.

The Capital Theater, at Springfield, recently added a three-piece orchestra.

The Peoria Film Exchange, of Peoria, which recently was granted a charter by the Secretary of State to deal in motion picture theaters and supplies, will have its office at 505 Fulton street, in that city.

M. A. Maroney, who recently purchased a moving picture theater in Rock Falls, is planning to enlarge his house.

Construction of the new Edwardsville Theater, in the Marks, Weber & Company building, at Edwardsville has begun.

The work of Rev. Clark Thomas, of Elgin, in introducing the moving picture into church work in that city, has from time to time elicited the commendation of his acquaintances on "The Scoop," the official organ of the Chicago Press Club. Pursuing the subject "The Scoop" recently said of the moving picture: "Pressed commercially, this young giant is rousing and breaking the chains of convention that hitherto have held him down. He is finding his power to express the truth in civic morals, in the things of real life * * * His new significance may as well be recognized at once. He is not going to run wild, but no one can stop him now or later. He is a force and can be made to do inestimable good in domains where no other force, no labor, no propaganda, no movement for civic or moral or hygienic uplift has yet been able to accomplish anything worth while."

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

Current Releases

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1914

BIOGRAPH—Her Old Teacher (Drama).....
EDISON—The Adventure of the Extra Baby (Second Story of Octavius, Amateur Detective) (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—A Million in Jewels (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 14, 1914 (News).....
SELIG—The Uphill Climb (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
VITAGRAPH—Sawdust and Salome (Drama).....

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th, 1914.

CELIO—The Artist's Model (George Kleine—Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
EDISON—Sophia's Imaginary Visitors (Comedy-Drama)..1000
ESSANAY—To Alaska via the Great Rivers of the North (Scenic) 1000
LUBIN—Getting Even (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—An Innocent Victim (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—Whiffle's Balcony Buds (Comedy).....
PATHE—Rambles in Bourges, France (Scenic).....
SELIG—Through the Centuries (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Back to Broadway (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) 2000

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18th, 1914.

EDISON—Courting Betty's Beau (Comedy).....1000
ESSANAY—One-to-Three (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—Chasing the Smugglers (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
LUBIN—The Price of a Ruby (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000
PATHE—Won by a Nose (Comedy).....
PATHE—Monuments of Upper Egypt (Architecture).....
SELIG—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Fatty on the Job (Comedy)..... 600
VITAGRAPH—Lumbering in Sweden (Industrial)..... 400

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—A Desperate Hero (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—Skelley and the Turkey (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—Italian Love (Comedy-Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The House of Fear (Special—2 parts—Drama)...2000
MELIES—A Fable and Its Moral (Comedy)..... 300
MELIES—A Hobo Philosopher (Comedy)..... 700
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 15, 1914 (News).....
PATHE—Where the Heart Calls (Special—2 parts—Drama)2000
SELIG—Venus and Adonis (Comedy).....
SELIG—A Mad Marathon (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—The First Endorsement (Drama).....1000

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th, 1914.

EDISON—All for His Sake (Special—2 parts—Drama)....2000
ESSANAY—The Other Girl (Special—2 parts—Drama)...2000
KALEM—Too Many Johnnies (Comedy).....
KALEM—A Bottled Romance (Comedy).....
LUBIN—In the Dredger's Claw (Drama).....1000
SELIG—Memories (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—His Little Page (Comedy).....1000

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Criminology and Reform (Drama).....
EDISON—The Powers of the Air (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—Snakeville's Fire Brigade (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—An Indian's Honor (Drama).....
KALEM—A Long Island Skunk Farm (Industrial).....
LUBIN—A Winning Mistake (Comedy)..... 400
LUBIN—The Female Book Agent (Comedy)..... 600
PATHE—Victims of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama)...2000
VITAGRAPH—Iron and Steel (Special—2 parts—Drama)..2000

Advance Releases

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 23rd, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—(Title Not Reported) .....
EDISON—The Beautiful Leading Lady (Third of Wood B. Wedd's Series) (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Shadow (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 16, 1914 (News) .....
SELIG—The Adventures of Kathlyn, No 5, (A Colonel In Chains) (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
VITAGRAPH—In the Old Attic (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24th, 1914.

CINES—The Money-Sharks (Special—3 parts—Drama).3000
EDISON—The Mystery of the Ladder (Fourth of Mystery of the Chronicles of Cleek) (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Hear No Evil (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—The Lost Child (Comedy) 400
LUBIN—The Rise of Officer Casey (Comedy) 600
PATHE—The Winning Hand (Drama) .....
SELIG—The Cynic (Drama) .....
SELIG—Doc Yak, the Cartoonist (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—Doctor Polly (Special—2 parts—Com.-Drama) 2000

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25th, 1914.

EDISON—Love's Young Dream (Comedy) 500
EDISON—Cheese Mining (Comedy) 500
ESSANAY—Mrs. Manly's Baby (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Tigers of the Hills (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
LUBIN—Sealed Orders (Special—2 parts—Drama).....2000
PATHE—September Morn (Comedy) .....
SELIG—King Baby's Birthday (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Hero (Comedy) 750
VITAGRAPH—Crawfishing (Educational) 250

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Massacre (2 parts—Drama) .....
ESSANAY—The Arm of Vengeance (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—The Two Roses (Special—2 parts—Drama)....2000
MELIES—Winky Willies Arithmetic (Comedy)..... 300
MELIES—Batty Billy and His Pal's Legacy (Comedy).. 700
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 17, 1914 (News) .....
PATHE—The Devil's Assistant (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
SELIG—Tested by Fire (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Old Oak's Secret (Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th, 1914.

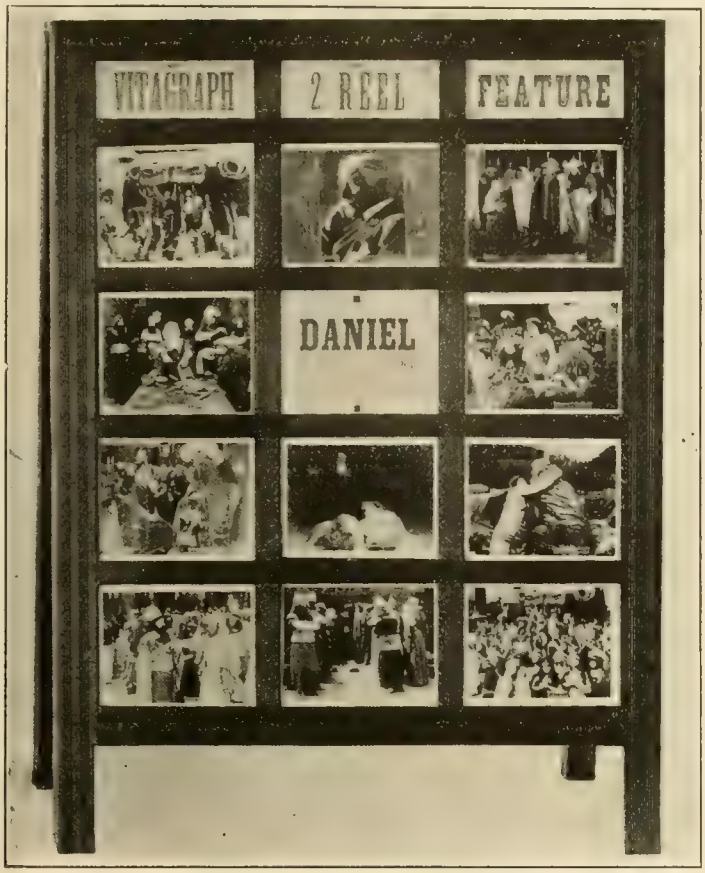
EDISON—The Drama of Heyville (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
ESSANAY—Let No Man Escape (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
KALEM—Reggie, the Squaw Man (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—A Desperate Chance (Drama) 1000
SELIG—The Attic Above (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Change in Baggage Checks (Comedy).1000

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28th, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—(Title Not Reported) .....
EDISON—The Ghost of Mother Love (Second of the Dolly of the Dailies Series) (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Bible (Drama) 1000
KALEM—The Delayed Special (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Coon Town Suffragettes (Comedy) 400
LUBIN—Father's Temper (Comedy) 600
PATHE—(Title Not Reported) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Drudge (Special—2 parts—Drama).2000

EXPRESS RATES GREATLY REDUCED and most practical ever made. Every exhibitor is using them.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO.

It will cost you very little now to get one of our specially low-priced poster frames. The handsomest. Write for illustrations.
1st National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.



LOBBY DISPLAY FRAMES

Mission Oak Frame with easel with fifteen openings and glass front, like cut No. 1

Price $7.50

Folding Oak Frame, folds in three parts; mission or mahogany finish, with easel leg.

Price $7.50

Also a smaller frame like cut No. 2

Price $6.50

BOXED READY FOR SHIPMENT

Photographs of Features

Another detail of the advertising helps we offer exhibitors, and a popular one, too. Striking photographs, 8 x 10 inches in size, of principal scenes from the film, for practically all multiple-reel features. They are great business-getters, because they show actual scenes in the picture.

SET OF ELEVEN, WITH TITLE CARDS, - $2.00

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

(INCORPORATED)

POSTER DEPARTMENT

(Formerly Photoplay Advertising & Specialty Co.)

71 W. 23rd Street and 440 Fourth Avenue, New York; 121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; 7th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass.; 122 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.; 3610 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo. New offices opening.

Calendar of Independent Releases

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 15th, 1914.

CRYSTAL—A Sure Cure (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—The Legend of the Lilacs (Drama) .....
REX—An Old Locket (Drama) .....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1914.

VICTOR—Votes for Men (2 parts—Comedy) .....
IMP—The Box Couch (Comedy) .....
POWERS—Almost a White Hope (Comedy) .....

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th, 1914.

GOLD SEAL—Honor of the Mounted (2 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—Some Doings (Comedy) .....
CRYSTAL—Harold's Burglar (Comedy) .....

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18th, 1914.

NESTOR—A Flash in the Dark (Drama) .....
JOKER—A Narrow Escape (Comedy) .....
JOKER—Lumber Industry of California (Industrial)....
ECLAIR—The Cross in the Cacti (2 parts—Drama)....
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 102 (News) .....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, 1914.

IMP—The Price of Sacrilege (3 parts—Drama) .....
REX—The Boob's Honeymoon (Comedy) .....
FRONTIER—Slim Joins the Army (Comedy) .....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th, 1914.

NESTOR—Scooped by a Hen-Coop (Comedy).....
POWERS—My Mother's Irish Shawls (Drama) .....
VICTOR—Love's Victory (2 parts—Drama) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, 1914.

JOKER—The Tender Hearted Sheriff (Comedy) .....
FRONTIER—The Fatal Card (Drama) .....
101 BISON—Her Father's Guilt (2 parts—Drama).....

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 22nd, 1914.

CRYSTAL—McSweeney's Masterpiece (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—The Electric Girl (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—Colombo (Scenic) .....
REX—Woman's Burden (Drama) .....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 23rd, 1914.

VICTOR—Remember Mary Magdalene (Drama) .....
IMP—The Touch of a Child (2 parts—Drama).....
POWERS—The Rival Dentists (Comedy) .....

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24th, 1914.

GOLD SEAL—Captain Jenny, S. A. (3 parts—Drama)..
CRYSTAL—That Infernal Machine (Comedy) .....
CRYSTAL—Irabella's Romance (Comedy) .....

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25th, 1914.

NESTOR—Breed O' the Mountains (Drama) .....
JOKER—Title Not Decided (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—The Devil Fox of the North (2 parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 103 (News) .....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26th, 1914.

IMP—Rounding Up Bowser (Comedy) .....
REX—For the Family Honor (2 parts—Drama) .....
FRONTIER—Slim Becomes a Cook (Comedy) .....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th, 1914.

NESTOR—One of the Finest (Comedy) .....
POWERS—Regeneration (Comedy) .....
POWERS—Tightwad Buys a Laundry (Comedy) .....
VICTOR—The Stepmother (2 parts—Drama) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28th, 1914.

JOKER—Ma and Pa Play Poker (Comedy) .....
FRONTIER—So Shall Ye Reap (Drama) .....
101 BISON—Legion of the Phantom Tribe (2 parts—Dr.)

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 15th, 1914.

APOLLO—The Black Hand Conspiracy (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—The Orange Bandit (Drama) .....
THANHOUSER—The Skating Master (Comedy) ....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Cricket on the Hearth (2 parts—Dr.)
KEYSTONE—Baffles, Gentlemen Burglar (2 parts—Dr.)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl (Chapter 5) (Drama)....

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—(No Release This Date).....
MAJESTIC—The Clerk (Drama) .....
THANHOUSER—The Leak in the Foreign Office (2 parts—Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Sacrifice (Drama) .....
BRONCHO—Yellow Flame (2 parts—Drama) .....
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 60 (News) .....
RELIANCE—A Working Girl's Romance (Drama) ....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, 1914.

AMERICAN—(No Release This Date) .....
DOMINO—The Play's the Thing (2 parts—Drama)....
KEYSTONE—A Thief Catcher (Comedy) .....
KOMIC—A Birthday Present (Comedy) .....
KOMIC—Getting a Suit Pressed (Comedy) .....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Raiders (2 parts—Drama) .....
PRINCESS—All's Well That Ends Well (Comedy) ....
THANHOUSER—(No Release This Date) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, 1914.

AMERICAN—The "Pote Lariat" of the "Flying A" (Dr.)
KEYSTONE—Love and Gasoline (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—Higher Law (Drama) .....
RELIANCE—An Interrupted Seance (Drama) .....

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 22nd, 1914.

APOLLO—Up in the Air Over Sadie (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—(No Release This Date) .....
THANHOUSER—A Can of Baked Beans (Comedy)....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 23rd, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Dream Child (2 parts—Drama) ....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl (Chapter 6) (Drama)....

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—(No Release This Date) .....
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25th, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Professor's Awakening (Drama) .....
BRONCHO—Repaid (2 parts—Drama) .....
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 61 (News) .....
RELIANCE—The Musician's Wife (Drama) .....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26th, 1914.

AMERICAN—(No Release This Date) .....
DOMINO—Courtship of O San (2 parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....
KOMIC—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th, 1914.

KAY-BEE—North of 53 (2 parts—Drama) .....
PRINCESS—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....
THANHOUSER—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28th, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Carbon Copy (Drama) .....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....
MAJESTIC—(Title Not Yet Announced) .....
RELIANCE—The Green Eyed Devil (2 parts—Drama)..

Exclusive Supply Corporation

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10th, 1914.

GAUMONT—Leonce at the Chateau D'If (Comedy)....
GT. NORTHERN SPEC. FEATURE FILM CO.—A Woman's Heart (3 parts—Drama) .....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12th, 1914.

GAUMONT—Simple Simon Ragtime Mad (3 parts—Dr.)
GAUMONT—Fan Making (Industry) .....

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th, 1914.

ITALA—Convict 113 (3 parts—Drama) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14th, 1914.

GAUMONT—Guilty Secret (2 parts—Drama) .....

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th, 1914.

F. R. A.—Mystery of No. 13 Hill Street (3 parts—Drama)

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th, 1914.

GAUMONT—The Miniature (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18th, 1914.

GT. NO. SPE.—A Woman's Heart (3 parts—Drama)....

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th, 1914.

GAUMONT—The Magic Salesman (Comedy) .....
GAUMONT—Bee Farming (Industry) .....

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 21st, 1914.

GAUMONT—Judgment of the Jungle (3 parts—Drama)

Can You Doubt the Superiority of

Simplex

These testimonials are from exacting critics whose integrity is without question.

Precision Machine Co. January 26, 1914.
New York City.

Gentlemen:—Recent use of projection machines, and in which matter we are at all times most particular and exacting, prompts our writing you in compliment and endorsement of the Simplex projector.

The Simplex qualities of reliability, long life and accurate projection are held in our highest esteem, and we feel that the good which Simplex has done for our industry should not pass without our compliment.

Yours very truly,
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.
(Signed) Harry R. Raver (F),
President.

IT OFFERS PERFECT CONSTRUCTION AND RELIABILITY UNDER EXACTING CONDITIONS

Precision Machine Co. January 27, 1914.
New York City.

Gentlemen:—I am glad to advise you that the new 17" magazine motor drive Simplex machine which you installed in our laboratory is in perfect working order. I feel that I should compliment you on the construction of your machines, as the one which we have been running in our studio for over a year has really given us no trouble at all.

It is gratifying to know that we can project all of our negatives on a Simplex machine without having to worry about ruining same.

I would be pleased to recommend your machine to any person who might ask me my opinion of same.

Yours very truly,
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.
(Signed) Albert A. Kaufman,
Studio Manager.

IT GIVES MACHINE SERVICE UNDER EXACTING CONDITIONS

Precision Machine Co. January 26, 1914.
New York City.

Gentlemen:—I have used Simplex machines for some years and find them a most important adjunct in selling films.

I find that the Simplex will show a clear, steady picture, and will stand up under the hardest grind. We have used the Simplex for many months without the slightest repairs being necessary.

Yours very truly,
AMMEX MOTION PICTURE MFG. CO.
(Signed) H. J. Streyckmans,
Sales Manager.

IT ACCOMPLISHES PERFECT PROJECTION AND DURABILITY UNDER EXACTING CONDITIONS

The most exacting conditions exist in the film studios.

SIMPLEX MEETS THEM ALL. That's why OVER 90% OF THE FILM STUDIOS USE IT.

WHY HESITATE?

Illustrated Catalogue A gives full details. Made and guaranteed by

PRECISION MACHINE CO. 317 East 34th St. NEW YORK

FATHER PERRIN SAYING GOOD-BYE TO HIS FRIENDS BEFORE LEAVING HIS OLD VILLAGE

Ambrosio

PRESENTS

MICHAEL PERRIN, or "A SPY FOR A DAY"

PLAYED BY

ERMETE NOVELLI

ERMETE NOVELLI

WITH THE BURNING OF HIS CHURCH FATHER PERRIN IS LEFT WITHOUT SUPPORT

Italy's Premier Actor

What Joseph Jefferson was to America

What Henry Irving was to England

That and more is ERMETE NOVELLI to Continental Europe.

ERMETE NOVELLI

in his masterful portrayal of

MICHAEL PERRIN

the lovable, guileless, old parish priest, carries his audience spell-bound through the gamut of human emotions.

From tears to laughter, then back to tears one follows this wonderful actor in his unsurpassed impersonation of the old parish priest.

"A SPY FOR A DAY"

does not abound in dare-devil feats, hair-breadth es-capes, murder, nor any of the present day sensational thrills—but

Through the superb acting of

ERMETE NOVELLI

one is carried back one hundred years and seems to actually live the scenes and share the joys and sorrows of that beautiful character

FATHER MICHAEL PERRIN

SYNOPSIS

FATHER MICHAEL PERRIN'S church and parish school having been burned by a party of Royalist soldiers, he is without means of support and goes to Paris to live with his niece.

Applying to his boyhood friend, the Minister of Police, for assistance, he is given a position which seems to him a sinecure, but he is really without his knowledge acting as a spy in the interests of Napoleon.

How his innocent blundering seems at first to lead to the escape of the conspirators, but turns out to be the salvation of the Emperor from his would-be assassins, is most beautifully portrayed by that master of Dramatic Art, ERMETE NOVELLI, in a series of comedy and dramatic situations which cannot fail to interest all beholders, from the child to the grandfather.

All sizes paper 1, 3, 6 and 8 sheets, photos, heralds, slides, READY FOR SHIPMENT FEBRUARY 21st — STATE RIGHT BUYERS WIRE FOR PRICES AND TERRITORY.

FATHER PERRIN MEETS HIS OLD SCHOOL-MATE, THE CHIEF OF POLICE, AND HIS SECRETARY

AMBROSIO AMERICAN COMPANY

15 EAST 26th STREET, NEW YORK

FATHER PERRIN TEACHING THE CHILDREN BEFORE THE ROYALIST INVASION

A MELODRAMA OF THE NORTH WOODS

The First Release of a Company That Will Be Famous

FEATURING

WILFRED LUCAS (Biograph leads 3 years) and JEANIE MacPHERSON (Powers leads 2½ years)

THE

TRAP

Three Parts

TELLING

The story of a man who heard the call of the wild and answered it. Of love, strategy and victory.

Publicity Pushers! Don't forget you have competitors

Wire—CRITERION

FEATURE FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

110 W. 40th STREET, NEW YORK — Studios, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

KENNEDY FEATURES

INCORPORATED

FEATURE

CONSTANCE CRAWLEY and ARTHUR MAUDE

Two Great Artists with a Magnificent Supporting Company

WE OFFER THE BEST OF

Story——Acting——Photography

THE CURRENT RELEASE

4 — REELS — 4

JESS

Shipment Now 4 Reels

RIDER HAGGARD'S

Romance of Love and War

1000 Soldiers Shown in Battle

WILL BE SOLD OUT QUICKLY

That combination "Story—acting—photography" is a sure winner. That is why we are making Sale Records. One feature every two weeks—every feature a business builder.

Territory on our production of

Mary Magdalene

3 REELS

is nearly all sold. Some open. Write or Wire.

Our Next Release

Elsie Venner

3 REELS

Oliver Wendell Holmes' famous story of Heredity.

Our record for quick selling proves, first, quality, and second, that our price leaves you and the exhibitor a profit. We three depend on each other and all of us depend on the public—we particularly try to please that public.

PUBLICITY AIDS, OF COURSE!

KENNEDY FEATURES

INCORPORATED

110 West 40th St. New York City

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

CAMERAMAN.—If you are looking for a man who knows and attends strictly to his business and can furnish best of references, address L. F., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY.—An experienced picture theater manager. Can make investment. Salary or commission. Will go anywhere. Address M. J. THOMAS, 330 N. Market St., Kenton, Ohio.

CAMERAMEN.—Owning own outfit, read my advertisement under FILMS WANTED classification, this page. Answer quick. MITCHELL.

OPERATOR.—EXPERT, DESIRES POSITION. MEMBER I. A. T. S. E. LONG EXPERIENCE LARGE HOUSES. PERFECT PROJECTION. STATE ALL IN FIRST LETTER. C. C. NEWMAN, 331 PLEASANT ST., IONIA, MICH.

EXPERIENCED.—Motion picture operators may be secured any time. K. of L. Local assembly No. 3030, Room 26, 181 Tremont St., Boston, Mass. Telephone Oxford, 1103M.

OPERATOR.—Licensed, nine years, all makes. Experienced Wurlitzer mechanic. Go anywhere. Non-union. V. HOFFMAN, Columbus, Ind.

AT LIBERTY.—Operator, six years on all makes of machines. Results guaranteed. Have my own machine if necessary. Immediate engagement. OPERATOR, 28 Chaysin St., Canandaigua, N. Y.

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAMAN.—Experienced in studio topical photographing. With or without camera. H. OBROOK, JR., 135 Luqueer St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

LADY STENOGRAPHER. — Italian - English, knowledge film business. Desires position, office or road. Salary or commission. B. M. T., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—Operator in each town to demonstrate our indestructible slides; something new. DOUBLE METAL SPOTLIGHT SLIDE CO., 1208 Holmes St., Kansas City, Mo.

CAMERAMEN.—Everywhere, except local, owning outfit, can learn of valuable service now being established for weekly news pictures. CONFIDENTIAL, 929 Tribune Bldg., New York.

WANTED.—A No. 1 pianist to intelligently cue music to pictures; must be a good one. State everything in first letter. GEORGE A. BANTA, Coldwater, Mich.

WANTED.—A real live picture theater manager for a theater in the State of Connecticut. Address R. L. P., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

WILL EXCHANGE.—8 family brick apartment at Yonkers. Equity $4,500, for paying picture theater. P. O. BOX 315, Yonkers, N. Y.

WE ARE OPEN.—To represent a leading film company throughout Great Britain, the Colonies. Also act as agents in England or the World for established machine or accessories manufacturer. BRITISH KINGDOM FILM CO., 50 Rupert St., London, W. Eng.

FOR RENT.—MOVING PICTURE THEATER, LOCATED ASBURY PARK. SEATING CAPACITY 1,200. FULLY EQUIPPED. NEW MACHINE, BOOTH, SEATS, ETC. NO AGENTS. APPLY ESTABLISHED, CARE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, NEW YORK CITY.

COMPLETE MOTION PICTURE Manufacturing plant with professional camera. Capacity 75,000 to 125,000 ft. per week. Twenty minutes from Times Square. Invite inspection. Must be sold within ten days. What do you offer? Address M. P. FACTORY, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANT TO BUY.—A moving picture theater in a western or southwestern town of five or ten thousand. Address T. W. BALL, Fulton, Mo.

HAVE THE CASH.—And will buy a good money making picture show. Can go anywhere. Write fully. C. W. N., Box 63, Cleveland, Ohio.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Seating capacity 300 to 1,200—some suitable or vaudeville—guaranteed O. K., with Chicago Ventilation ordinance. HUME, Room 513, 608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER.—In mining town of 7,500, running seven days a week, admission 10 cents straight; two machines and first class equipment, clearing from $125 to $170 a week; best location. Price, $4,000. No trades. WM. H. MUSSELMAN, Rock Springs, Wyo.

THEATER.—300 seats, family patronage in growing Chicago neighborhood. Clearing $75 week, no competition, good lease, $5,000. Open to rigid investigation. P. S., 428 So. Harvey Ave., Oak Park, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, seating capacity 1,000, new, modern, perfect ventilation, stage forty by fifty feet, five sets scenery, two Power's 6A machines, G. E. Rectifier, swell front, five-cent electricity, ten-cent admission, steam heat, situated in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, good reason for selling. Small cash payment, balance easy terms. Address PRINCESS, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

CAMERA.—Professional instrument of good make wanted. Send full particulars to WM. MOGEY, Interhaven Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WANTED.—Ninety 2nd-hand theater chairs. Full details, width, etc., first letter. BARNARD, Millbrook, N. Y.

MAGIC FILM CLEANING PADS.—All up-to-date operators use them. $1.00 per hundred. THE FILM RENOVATING CO., Hartford, Conn.

GUIL PASTILS.—One dollar. Holders thirty-five and seventy-five. Postpaid. Send us your orders. BOX 771, Norfolk, Va.

PEARL WHITE CONDENSERS.—$1.25 pair. Good cement, $0.20, or 3 for $0.50. Postpaid. BOX 771, Norfolk, Va.

FOR SALE.—Nine State right features and ten Commercial reels. One Power's 5, used 3 months. 1 Bal moving picture trunk. CARMAN, Walden, N. Y.

AN OLIVER TYPEWRITER.—In good condition, $17.50. Price includes steel case. Request particulars. BOX 114, Elwood, Iowa.

FOR SALE.—350 theater seats in good condition. ROBERT CODD, So. Bend, Ind.

FOR SALE.—Edison One-pin moving picture head. All parts new. Best offer takes it. MAURICE SELBY, Utica, Ohio.

BARGAIN MOTIOGRAPH MACHINE.—For Sale. Almost new. Suitable road use. Sacrifice. Address HANDLER, 46 Lexington Ave., Montclair, N. J.

FOR SALE.—Pipe organ, second-hand, Estey, in perfect condition. Can be played either by hand or automatically. Suitable for picture theater. Requires space 4½ ft. deep, 9 ft. wide, 10 ft. high. Large oak and glass case, containing 400 rolls of music for same. Also 500 second-hand opera chairs. GAIETY THEATER, Springfield, Ill.

MODEL B GAS OUTFIT.—Guaranteed to do good work. Write for particulars. CLARK L. LORD, Bemus Point, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Edison Moving Picture machine, electric and calcium outfit, ready to show. Price $100, in good condition. G. A. SELLARS, 123 Bankway St., Lehighton, Pa.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

FOR SALE.—1913 Edison Underwriters' model, used three weeks. Price $130 complete. C. LOSSON, 2251 N. Spaulding Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE.—New and second-hand machines, all kinds. Write for bargain list. 300 reels at $5 each. Wanted, "Passion Play." WICHITA FILM & SUPPLY CO., 117 No. Topeka Ave., Wichita, Kan.

POCKET SOLDERING TORCH.—Mentioned by Richardson. Have a few on hand, cost a dollar apiece. Will send postpaid. Address BUSINESS MANAGER, THE PHOTOPLAY, Roswell, Ga.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

TWO SLIGHTLY USED—Motion picture cameras, in perfect order, as good as new, will sell for $60 each, equipped with lens which retails for $32.50. 200 foot magazines, focussing device, measuring dial. Send $5 deposit; will ship, privilege of examination. Act quick. MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO., INC., 5 West 14th St., N. Y.

FILMS FOR SALE.

PASSION FILM.—4 parts, like new, $7. 3 parts, also Pathe colorer, $5. Lubin, 3 parts, $4. Lectures free. LUBACK, 1109 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

NEGATIVES OF CURRENT EVENTS.—Interesting and extraordinary features for sale. All lengths. CURRENT EVENT FILM CO., 1303½ Waller St., San Francisco, Cal.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED TO BUY FILMS.—Features and single reels. Must be in good condition and cheap. Describe paper accompanying reels. IND. FILM CO., 202 Book Bldg., San Antonio, Tex.

CAMERAMEN.—Send your film of news events to me; write for particulars and references. MITCHELL, 154 Nassau St., New York.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AGENTS WANTED—Flame arc lamp. Our new enclosed, long-burning lamp is ready. Superior to any now on the market. Longer life, more candle power, better distribution, lower price. Attractive proposition to responsible agents in position to properly push the sale of this lamp. Write for exclusive territory. HELIOS, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

CAMERA.—Professional instrument of good make wanted. Send full particulars to WM. D. KELLEY, 105 Liberty St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

SONG VERSE SLIDES.—For rent, reasonable prices; beautifully written and tinted; the newest and best popular songs. Postal for terms. JACKSON SLIDE CO., 3820 Morgan St., St. Louis, Mo.

WANTED PIANIST.—To send for my catalog of motion picture music. E. A. AHERN, Mus. Dir. Isis Theater, Twin Falls, Idaho.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

ELECTRIC PIANOS.—With keyboards, $90 to $125. Orchestrion pianos with pipes, $220. All guaranteed to be in first class condition. 44-note electric players, $70. Must be sold to close out piano business. Send for circular. J. F. HERMAN, 1420 Pa. Ave., Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE.—Wurlitzer Flute Piano, Style B. 38 flute pipes, bass and snare drums and cymbals. All in first-class condition. Cost $1,250. First $500 takes it. J. R. BRANNEN, Evansville, Ind.

The Motion Picture Master Production

Generally pronounced by every critic of the industry, as the greatest acting cast, the most remarkable photography, the most gripping story, the most carefully directed of motion pictures, yet to have been made in America.

An Adaptation of
EUGENE WALTERS'
Great Five Year Theatrical Triumph

"PAID IN FULL"

In Five Parts

With members of the original Broadway cast including
TULLY MARSHALL

Scenario by LOUIS REEVES HARRISON
Produced by AUGUSTUS THOMAS
Special Music Score by MANUEL KLEIN
Music Director N. Y. Hippodrome

ADVERTISING MATERIAL

Lobby displays, photos, post cards, press stories, music, lithos, ½, 1, 3, 6, 8, 12 and 24 sheets assorted.
Our distributors girdle the earth.

March 12th NEXT RELEASE March 12th

AUGUSTUS THOMAS'
"IN MIZZOURA"
In 6 Parts
Featuring BURR McINTOSH

ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION

HARRY RAVER
President

220 W. 42d St., New York

AUGUSTUS THOMAS
Director General

Have you contracted for a Marion Leonard night at your theatre?

The Star Who Made the Moving Picture Famous 'Round the World

Marion Leonard

Under exclusive engagement to appear

Twice-a-Month

in a series of powerful, splendidly mounted and superbly rendered

THREE PART PRODUCTIONS

Written and directed by STANNER E. V. TAYLOR at MISS LEONARD'S own studio

423 Classon Avenue, Brooklyn

What about that Marion Leonard night every other week?

GENERAL SAL

CHARLES V. BARKER, Inc., Suite 601,

Originality

EVERY picture play in which Miss Gardner appears is absolutely original unless otherwise stated in the advertisement. These plays are directed by their author. One of the highest compliments it would be possible to pay was made by a "reviewer" who said of one of these picture plays something to the effect that "of course no modern author would, or could, evolve so very original a story." This was at once a compliment to the story and a confession on the part of the reviewer of his own incompetency. It is still well enough to remember that even an original story is not necessarily an interesting one, and it does not follow because an author directs his picture play that the production is superior. The productions of the Helen Gardner studio are happily unique in that they are both interesting and superior. There is employed in their evolvement a potent combination of talent, culture, taste and dramatic skill peculiarly and tremendously efficient. There is not in the whole field a better qualified producing force. Beginning with the story itself and straight on through to the finished product on the screen, there is not a detail overlooked, and every detail is made to contribute to the object in view—a polished and finished dramatic work. Usually planned upon the higher lines of dramatic thought, conveying in poetic and philosophic form those greater and grander truths of life which compel at once attention and interest, it must be borne in mind that every picture is so finished a work of real art that the dullest cannot be confused, the most stupid must understand. For example, "Pieces of Silver," a four-part picture to be released shortly, deals with one of the most abstract ideas it is possible to translate in pictures, and must arouse the deepest thought among the most intelligent and intellectual: at the same time the story is so clearly set forth, its motion and sequentiality are so perfectly clear, that the most ignorant people must feel an interest in every particular equal to that of the most enlightened. It is only bad art that is hard to understand. The art that is evolved in Miss Gardner's studio is universal, happily and clearly expressed. Every production is refreshing in its originality, its true note and compelling beauty.

HELEN GARDNER

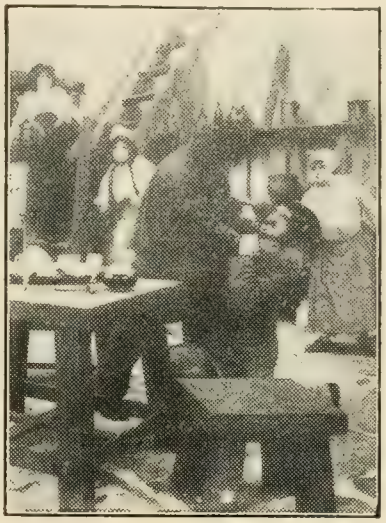
in

"Fleur-de-Lys"

Chapters from the Life of a Dreamer

WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY CHARLES L. GASKILL

Copyrighted, 1914, by Helen Gardner



"Fleur-de-Lys" is full of pathos, heart-interest and beauty. It is modestly spectacular, and the story grips the interest from the start to the finish. The last 700 feet of this picture holds with an interest unprecedented. The story is fresh and original—a departure from the hackneyed and stale. No better picture has ever been made in America or Europe. Photography perfect. Three reels.

ES AGENTS :

World's Tower Bldg., 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt the Big Game Hunter and Naturalist who took the famous Carnegie Alaska Siberian Pictures has just returned from a North Polar expedition with 18,000 feet of film which have been condensed into six reels of wonderful exciting action pictures.

Not a single scene has been posed, yet every act breathes pathos, comedy and drama on nature's own stage. The actors are thousands of denizens of the forest, the sea, the tundra and the divide. Over a hundred scenes hold the spectator spellbound to the very end.

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt's Arctic Hunt

Native and Animal Life in the North

ARCTIC FILM CO.

Suite 1209 - 220 West 42nd Street

NEW YORK CITY

A fortune for the State Right Buyer

SIX REELS

Lithographs 1-3-6-24 Sheets
Lecture, Heralds, Lantern Slides, Lobby Display, Enlarged Photographs.

The FOUR LEAF CLOVER OF THE INDUSTRY

BRONCHO HEADLINERS

Feb. 18th
Yellow Flame
Two Reels

Feb. 25th
Repaid
Two Reels

March 4th
Mario
Two Reels

March 11th
Barrier Royal
Two Reels

KAY-BEE FEATURES

Feb. 20th
The Raiders
Two Reels

Feb. 27th
North of 53°
Two Reels

KEYSTONE COMEDIES

Feb. 16th
Baffles, Gentleman Burglar
Two Reels

Feb. 19th
A Thief Catcher

Feb. 21st
Love and Gasoline

Feb. 23rd
'Twixt Love and Fire

Feb. 26th
Little Billy's City Cousin

DOMINO WINNERS

Feb. 19th
The Play's the Thing
Two Reels

Feb. 26th
Courtship of O San
Two Reels

March 5th
Wearing of the Green
Two Reels

MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

Longacre Building, 42nd Street and Broadway, New York City

William FOX Features

Box Office Attractions

Everybody in the Motion Picture Business Marvels at the Instantaneous Success of the Box Office Attraction Film Rental Co.

IT leaped into immediate popularity because it is the first great exchange to be founded upon the right basis. Its policy not only embraces the selection and booking of features that are certain to draw money-making audiences, but exhibitors are given exclusive neighborhood rights and protected against the hundreds of impositions from which they have suffered.

Maximum Profit at Minimum Expense—That's our slogan. That's the keynote of our plan. Somebody had to bring order out of chaos. But that somebody had to have immense financial resources, extensive experience and know how to cure existing abuses.

All Features Under Exclusive Control—Exhibitors can exploit Box Office Attraction Film Rental Company features a week or more in advance. Impossible for a competitor to jump in ahead of him. He has the field to himself—can be sure that no one will "beat him to it."

Marion Leonard and Helen Gardner Have Signed Up

This is the most important news of the day for exhibitors in New York City and State, Northern New Jersey and all of the New England States. These wonderfully competent and exceptionally popular photo-play stars are favorably known to patrons of motion picture theatres the world over. In future the features in which they appear will be booked in your territory exclusively by the Box Office Attraction Film Rental Company.

If you want to be in a class by yourself—want to monopolize the business in your neighborhood—get in touch with us at once. Write, wire or 'phone.

Important to Exhibitors

Special Exposition Performances for exhibitors at the Academy of Music, Fourteenth Street and Irving Place, at 10.30 A. M., Wednesdays and Fridays of each week. See our great features before you book them.

Branch Offices will be opened in Buffalo and New England for the convenience of exhibitors near these points. Notice later.

Note the Releases of These Big Features

Monday, February 23d

"For the Queen's Honor"—A three reel feature by Ambrosio. Perfect acting. Beautiful scenery. Gorgeous costuming. A romantic drama dealing with intrigue against a king and a queen's love for her royal husband's aid-de-camp.

Wednesday, February 25th

"Shadows of the Moulin Rouge"—A four-reel Solax production with Joseph Levering and an all star cast. Absorbingly interesting exploitation of refined sensationalism.

Friday, February 27th

"The Society Detective"—Highly melodramatic photo-play in three reels from the British Colonial Studios.

Saturday, February 28th

"The Devil Within"—A Ramo feature in three exciting reels—the latest and best production from this famous studio.

Previous Releases

Monday, February 9.—"Wives"—A Ramo production in three parts. Story deals with a domestic problem and is presented in striking New York style.

Wednesday, February 11.—"The Lotus Dancer"—Produced by the True Feature Company, a romantic four-reel subject with scenes in India and England.

Friday, February 13.—"Ben Bolt"—A Solax masterpiece in three parts. A thrilling shipwreck scene and smooth-running story.

Saturday, February 14.—"By Whose Hands?"—A Great Northern Special in three parts. A remarkably well-acted crime mystery, with wonderful photography.

Monday, February 16.—"Princess Helena's Prisoner"—A Great Northern Preferred film of four parts. Miss Betty Nansen in title role. All star cast in a gripping love story.

Wednesday, February 18.—"Fortune Hunters"—A Blache production of unusual merit and daring. Thrilling aeroplane rescue scene—four parts.

Friday, February 20.—"Vengeance Bequeathed"—A story of stage life and false love. The dying request of a beautiful girl and its result. A Luna film in three parts.

Saturday, February 21.—"Fangs of Hate"—A stirring drama of American life. Big scenes and splendid action. A Ramo production in three parts.

Box Office Attraction Film Rental Co.

130 West Forty-Sixth Street, New York City

WILLIAM FOX, President TELEPHONE, 7340 BRYANT

BEAUTY FILMS

MARGARITA FISCHER and HARRY POLLARD

Score Heavily in

"THE SACRIFICE"

A Seaside Drama

RELEASE, WEDNESDAY, FEB. 18th, 1914

"The Professor's Awakening"

A masterpiece of Art. Splendid Dramatization.

RELEASE, WEDNESDAY, FEB. 25th, 1914

"In each theatre in which we have run Beauty Films they have received more complimentary remarks than any other brand."—An Exchange.

Produced By

American Film Mfg. Co.

CHICAGO

Good Pictures Are Essential

The public don't care how or where you get them; they want good pictures. When I say that better pictures can be made on Lumiere than on any other film, I know what I am talking about. Don't get in a rut. Keep up with the times. Try Lumiere Film.

DAVID HORSLEY

American Agent for Lumiere Film

NEW YORK - - 1600 Broadway
CHICAGO - - Schiller Building
LOS ANGELES - - - Opening

Film Quality

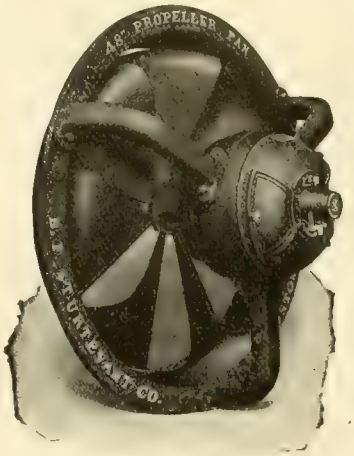
Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Fill Your Theatre with Pure Air—Fulfill all requirements of the City and State Ventilation Laws at Small Cost



STURTEVANT Electric Propeller Fans thoroughly ventilate motion picture theatres by positively removing all dead, vitiated air, permitting fresh pure air to come in and take its place.

These fans fulfill all the requirements of current ventilation laws. They are low in first cost, easy to install and economical in current consumption.

Sturtevant
(REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.)

Electric Propeller Fans

handle immense volumes of air at small expenditure of power.

They are equipped with extra large motors that will give continuous service for long periods without sparking or undue heating. They require but a small amount of attention and are practically trouble proof.

These fans are built and guaranteed by the largest builders of fans and fan systems in the world.

In writing, please send sketch of theatre, showing location of doors and windows. Give length, width and height and ASK FOR BOOKLET MP

B. F. Sturtevant Company
HYDE PARK, BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS and all principal cities of the world

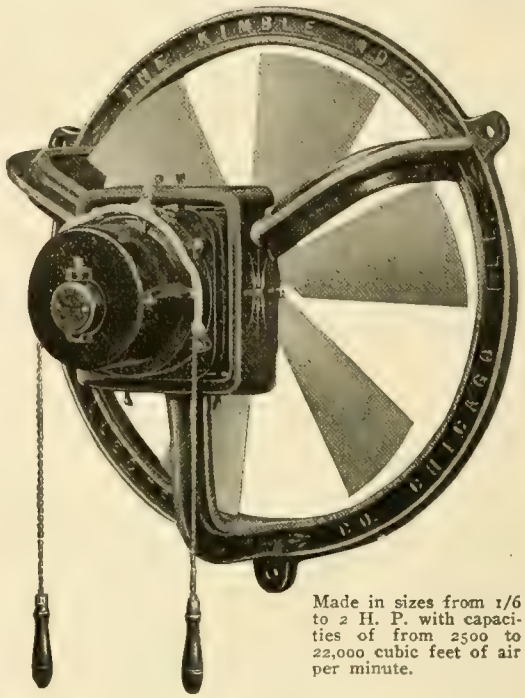
KIMBLE MOTORS

Better Ventilation at Less Cost



Made in sizes from 1/6 to 2 H. P. with capacities of from 2500 to 22,000 cubic feet of air per minute.

KIMBLE
Alternating Current
FANS

You don't have to run your fan always at high speed—not with the Kimble. You can run it at high, low, medium, or speeds between. You can suit the ventilation to the requirements of each house.

And here's the importance. The Kimble reduces current consumption in direct proportion to every reduction in fan speed. Run it at half maximum speed and it uses only half as much current as at maximum. This holds true of no other fan, and it pays handsome dividends.

You don't have to run your fan in one direction all the time—not with the Kimble. Simply pull the chain and it instantly reverses from intake to exhaust, or vice versa. You can use the one fan to draw out the foul air, or force in fresh air.

Give your house a reputation for good ventilation—and do it to the profit of your bank-book. Use Kimble Alternating Current Ventilating Fans. It's noiseless, too.

Write for the Red Catalog. It gives the facts.

Kimble Electric Co.
The Alternating Current Fan Specialists
633 Northwestern Ave., Chicago

KIMBLE MOTORS

It certainly is remarkable how well defined
the lines in a picture are brought out with

Bio Carbons

Without a question of doubt they are

"The Carbons You Want"

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St.
MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St.
SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

RAMO FEATURES

The Most Wonderful and Masterful American Feature Ever Produced

The Governor's Ghost

IN FOUR EXCITING ACTS

This photo feature will make you hold your breath with excitement

IOWA, NEBRASKA, MINNESOTA, COLORADO, THE NORTHWEST AND THE ATLANTA DISTRICT, are the only TERRITORIES OPEN

COMMUNICATE DIRECT WITH
C. LANG COBB, JR.
Manager Sales and Publicity

RAMO FILMS, Inc.
Columbia Theatre Building
47th STREET and SEVENTH AVENUE
NEW YORK

LICENSED FILM STORIES

EDISON.

THE BEAUTIFUL LEADING LADY (Third of Wood B. Wedd's—Feb. 23rd.—When Wood B. Wedd fell into his legacy, one of the first things he did was to look up his old friend Darby Jenks, who, on an earlier occasion, had lent Wood B. a considerable sum of money. Darby, at the time, was managing a dramatic troupe with indifferent success. When he received Wood B.'s letter he danced with joy. For Darby only had four or five dollars left, and his troupe was growing slightly restless. When Wood B. arrived on the scene, the first thing that struck him was the charm of the leading lady.

Shortly after Wood B.'s arrival the leading man made a few unpleasant remarks on the utter impossibility of attempting to support himself on three or four dollars every six or seven months and quit the show abruptly. Wood B., urged on by devotion for his fair divinity of the footlights, and loyalty to his friend, nobly jumped into the breach. Not only would he play the leading man's part, but he would also re-stock the company's depleted treasury.

Unversed in the subtleties of stagecraft, Wood B. grew angry when the indignant father of the play threw him out of the window. Returning in haste, he smote the father. The audience at first contented themselves with proffering choice agricultural products to the dazed actors. Then, evidently desirous of a closer acquaintance, they arose and approached the stage in a body. The modest Wood B. fled. So did the entire troupe. The manager and troupe escaped, but the enraged populace caught Wood B. after a long chase. As the disconsolate Darby sat by the tracks waiting for a freight train, a curious object approached him. It was Wood B., tarred and feathered. His feelings were hurt, and Darby did not improve them by facetiously pretending that Wood B. was a daisy and plucking off the feathers to the old refrain of "She loves me, she loves me not."

THE MYSTERY OF THE LADDER OF LIGHT (Fourth Mystery in the Chronicles of Cleek.—Feb. 24).—When Sir Mawson Leake, the great jeweler, was commissioned to repair the Rance of Jan's diamond necklace, he gave the matter his own personal attention. Knowing the value of the jewels, he carried them to his home in order to make the necessary repairs himself. When Sir Mawson arrived in his splendid mansion, he was met by his son, Henry. Henry had fallen into several bad scrapes of late, mostly with regard to money, and his father's patience was at an end. When the young man humbly begged for more money, the father curtly refused to advance him another cent, and remained obdurate, despite Henry's desperate entreaties.

Sir Mawson left the jewels in his wife's charge and went to prepare the necessary tools for the delicate work of repairing. After he had gone, Lady Leake placed the necklace about her neck and looked at herself in the glass. At this moment she heard someone calling, and carelessly placing the jewels in her dresser, rushed out of the room. Miss Lorne, a guest of the Leake's, had cut her wrist slightly and wanted some lint as a bandage. Lady Leake returned to her room, procured the lint, and bandaged Miss Lorne's wrist. Then, remembering the necklace, she returned to her room. It was gone!

Owing to the importance of the case, Cleek was called in immediately. Jennifer, the butler, had seen Henry Leake leaving the house at the time of the theft carrying a bundle in his arms. So strong was the evidence against his son that the grief-stricken father attempted suicide. But Cleek was not satisfied. His sharp eyes inspected every corner of the house, rejecting the irrelevant and carefully noting all facts which could possibly bear on the case. At last his attention became definitely settled on two objects -a magnificent chandelier in the drawing-room, and the lace sleeve of Lady Leake's dressing gown.

The solution of the mystery was quite simple. When she carried the lint to Miss Lorne, Lady Leake had unknowingly picked up the necklace with her sleeve. It fell off in the hall, and Jennifer, the butler, believing it to be part of the chandelier, hung it where he supposed it should go.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM (Feb. 25).—Mr. Watkins was rather stout. On the principle that like calls to like, it was not entirely unnatural that his lady love, Miss Brown, was also somewhat inclined toward what, in a lady's case, one must always refer to as avoirdupois. Mr. Marker and his beloved, Miss Whitcomb, were trim and slender.

One evening, fate arranged that Mr. Watkins should take Miss Brown to the same theater to which Mr. Marker was taking Miss Whitcomb. They met on the street car on their way to the theater. There was some difficulty about seats. After fate had thus stirred things all up, the little blind god began to get busy. Like grew a bit tired of calling to like. Instead, Mr. Watkins went calling on Miss Whitcomb, and Mr. Marker went calling on Miss Brown. The upshot of the whole affair was that the afore-mentioned little blind god plus fate decided to strike a happy medium instead of two extremes in weight, and in accordance with their decision, Miss Whitcomb married Mr. Watkins, and Miss Brown married Mr. Marker.

Mr. Marker and Mr. Watkins were henpecked. After a time conditions became so bad that the two men decided something would have to be done. They decided to revolt. Each of them left a pathetic letter telling their wives that they intended to end their sorrows in the river. Then they laid two suits of clothes on the river bank and hid themselves. After the stricken wives had reached a sufficiently receptive condition, the husbands revealed themselves and magnanimously forgave them.

CHEESE MINING (Feb. 25).—This cheese mine is situated in Schweiserkase country between Neufchatel and Bris. More cheese is mined here annually than in any other cheese mine in the world. The difficulties encountered in making the picture will be realized from the fact that owing to the peculiar properties of the cheese no ordinary person can approach within three miles of the mine without fatal results.

Charmingly natural pictures of the everyday life of the cheese miners have been made. Despite the desperate hardships of their lives they remain carefree and joyous. It is said that one reason for their happiness is owing to the fact that no animal life is able to exist in the mine.

Particularly interesting is old Gasper, the windlass turner. While Gasper is hoisting a miner up the thousand feet from the perilous depths below, he occasionally grows tired, or becomes interested in something or other, and drops the handle. Old Gasper takes a natural pride in his record, and puts a chalk mark on the door for each new victim. Leaving this gentle old soul, we plunge into the mine proper. Here the miners are equipped with the famous invention of Herr Von Buffengrunts—a clothespin clamped securely upon the nose, which by completely cutting off the breath, guards the olfactory nerves from contact with the deadly fumes.

After preliminary borings have been made, the cheese is blasted from its place by means of small charges of high-proof talcum powder. These large blocks of cheese are removed to the trimming yard, where they are reduced by means of chisel, saw and axe, to the proper market sizes. One of the most interesting features of the entire industry is the punching room, where artistic holes are made in the popular brands of Swiss cheese.

THE DRAMA IN HEYVILLE (Special—2 parts—Feb. 27).—Hod Mullins, the actor-manager of the Demosthenes Dramatic Club of Heyville, comes to New York to find material for his aspiring clubmates to exert their efforts upon. Chance directs him to a theater in which "The Union Spy" is playing. Hod, affected by the dramatic merits of the piece, makes exhaustive notes and, on his return to Heyville, compiles a pirated edition of the play. After enormous difficulties with regard to the selection of a cast, costuming, etc., have been more or less successfully overcome, the play is produced.

In the original, "The Union Spy" is the story of a Southern girl who falls in love with a lieutenant in the Union Secret Service. The girl is also loved by a Confederate officer, who naturally hates the hero. The spy escapes from his enemy by hiding in a hay stack, fights a duel with him in the girl's home and finally wins his sweetheart in the very jaws of death. Hod's version of the play is similar in plot, but curiously different in its general effect. For one thing, Heyville's stage facilities are scarcely adequate. Then, too, the actors have trifling personal eccentricities which are hardly common on the regular stage. They have an alarming habit of missing their cues, and a tendency to confuse the action by appearing and disappearing in unexpected places. For instance, in the dramatic climax of the production, when the hero, after heroically refusing to surrender, waves his sword and summons his men from their ambush, a rather disturbing effect is produced by the entire failure of the hidden troopers to respond.

THE GHOST OF MOTHER EVE (Second of the Dolly of the Dailies.—Feb. 28).—The first thing Dolly did after her arrival in New York was to try to find herself a job. The fifty dollars she had been paid for her story was practically all she had, and Dolly was wise enough to know that such an amount would not carry her very far in the city. At the very time that Dolly went to apply for a position on "The Comet," Mrs. Yorke, a wealthy society woman, was also on the list of applicants. But whereas Dolly merely wanted a position in order that she might feed and clothe herself, Mrs. Yorke desired a sinecure of a post wherein she might indulge her love for notoriety and scandal. As not infrequently happens, the rich and undeserving succeeded, while the poor and deserving failed. Dolly was politely turned away, while the paper agreed to publish a column from Mrs. Yorke's pen under the name of "Mother Eve."

Mrs. Yorke noticed Dolly as she was leaving the newspaper office. Discovering the girl's literary ability, she invited her to lunch, and offered Dolly a position as her private secretary. Dolly, naturally enough, jumped at the offer, and entered upon her duties immediately. The main portion of her duties consisted in writing the "Mother Eve" column. Mrs. Yorke had not the remotest idea how to set about her self-appointed task. All she cared for was the money. For some days Dolly was moderately contented and happy. But one afternoon, while she was collecting news of an approaching ball in the showrooms of a fashionable modiste, she happened to encounter Mrs. Yorke. That estimable lady looked over and past and through Dolly, without the slightest trace of recognition in her face.

When Dolly entered her room that evening to accomplish her nightly literary task, she fell, sprained her wrist, and promptly fainted. When Mrs. Yorke returned from a dance in the wee sma' hours of the next morning, she found a copy boy waiting patiently for the "Mother Eve" material. Dolly, roused from her swoon, was unable to work the typewriter on account of her wrist. So the copy boy wrote it to her dictation, while Mrs. Yorke stood by and fumed. After the boy had left, Mrs. Yorke was highly unpleasant. Dolly, in a few crisp words, told her employer exactly what she thought of her, and informed her that hereafter she could write her own column. Then Dolly went away.

VITAGRAPH.

IN THE OLD ATTIC (Feb. 23).—Because his son refuses to marry the girl he has selected, John Morton, an old aristocrat, disowns him and drives him from the house. John Morton, Jr., marries Ethel, a beautiful young singer, whom he loves dearly.

When the son is gone, his old father has the boy's toys and belongings stored in the attic. Moved almost to tears by the sight of them, he suppresses his feelings and grimly resolves never to forgive his son.

Fifteen years elapse. Society has moved uptown and John Morton in his aristocratic old mansion is in the midst of new neighbors. The streets which used to be patronized by the carriages of the wealthy are now swarming with ragged little children.

It happens that into this section of the city, Mrs. John Morton, Jr., and her little son, Billy, come to live. Her husband is dead. Just before he dies he writes to his father and begs him in memory of the little boy he once loved, to befriend his little boy, Billy.

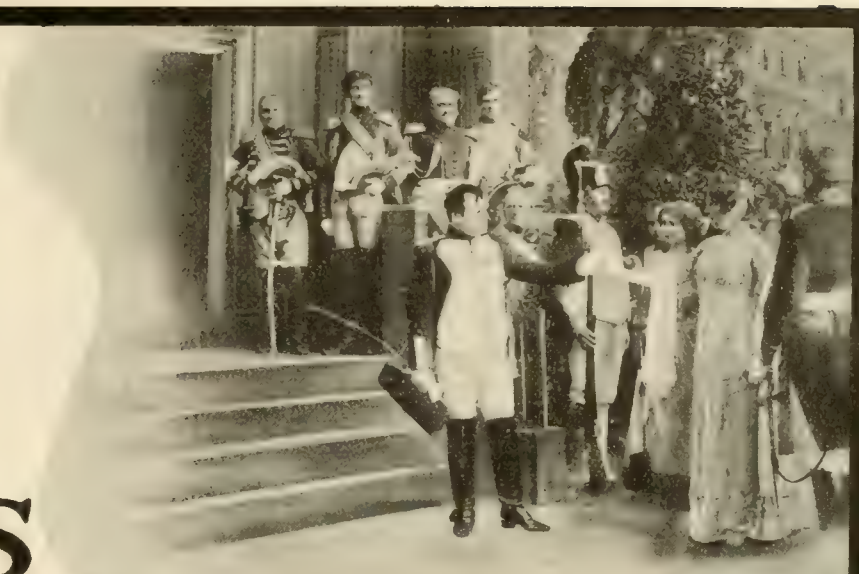
Billy and his mother live in an attic adjoining Morton's mansion. While playing ball on the roof Billy loses his ball down the skylight of the Morton home. He follows it into the attic and is charmed with the array of old toys which he finds. He plans to come back many times.

Robbers enter the Morton home, binding John Morton's hands, take him to the attic and leave him. Billy comes to play with the toys. Morton believes he sees the ghost of his son and is so stricken with remorse he falls in a swoon. The thieves are captured and Morton is released. While in his bed ill, Morton speaks in his delirium of the "angel" in the attic. His doctor, who also is Billy's doctor, learns of the affair in the attic and takes Billy back to Morton. When the old gentleman sees the boy, he is overjoyed and takes his little grandson and his daughter-in-law into his home in memory of his son.

DOCTOR POLLY (Special—2 parts—Feb. 24).—Having developed a bad case of nerves, Lester Ridgeway is sent to Thorn's old homestead in the South and to rest up and get well. It happens that there is a family "ghost" in this mansion, at least so the legend avers. Ridgeway becomes infatuated with a portrait in the Thornleigh library of a dead ancestress, a very beautiful woman. Polly Allen, the great granddaughter of the woman in the portrait, becomes aware of Ridgeway's infatuation, and remembering that there is an old dress in the attic which was worn by the lady in the picture when she posed for the portrait, she dresses herself in the gown, and decides to compare herself with the portrait. Ridgeway sees her and thinks it is the woman of the portrait. Upon his insistance upon the resemblance, old Lindley tells him the story of the woman in the portrait. How she was deserted and killed herself and how it is said she appears every now and then, wandering disconsolately about the premises. Polly overhears the story and decides that Ridgeway needs excitement. She decides to give him all he is looking for.

It is her belief that what Ridgeway needs to get well is to have his mind taken off himself. He must be made to become interested in something besides his own concern. She dresses in her great grandmother's dress, and leads Ridgeway a merry chase through the gardens of the estate and the great library. Thorn receives a letter from Ridgeway, telling him that he is deeply in love with the "ghost" lady, and intends to get her on the following Wednesday night, the anniversary of her death, when it is rumored that she will enact the tragedy of her life. Thorn thinks Ridgeway has gone mad. He persuades a specialist to come with him to Thornleigh and examine the stricken man. They find Ridgeway and a very substantial "ghost" lady in the garden, where all ends satisfactorily. Polly's prescription proves a real "cure-all."

COSMOS FILM COMPANY
COSMOS
145 W. 45TH ST. - NEW YORK



FAMOUS BATTLES OF NAPOLEON

A GRAND HISTORICAL LESSON THAT HAS EVERY DRAMATIC REQUIREMENT WITHOUT AN UNTRUE SCENE PUT IN

STATE RIGHTS ONLY

WITH THIS FINE PICTURE WE BEGIN OUR CAREER AS A FEATURE MECCA FOR DISCRIMINATING BUYERS. COMING—THREE GREAT THREE PART FEATURES; NOT GUILTY—AVE MARIA, THE YELLOW PASSPORT

THE HERO (Feb. 25).—Very pretty, very attractive, very young; her name is Maude and she has a beau. He is very fat. Maude is simply crazy about him. She will not consider the attentions of Syd, her brother Bert's pal. One day Maude sits dreaming in the parlor, a book of daring adventures lying open in her lap. Syd enters and tries to make love to her. He would like to marry her. "No," says Maude, "I shall marry no one but a hero." Percival arrives a few minutes later and invites Maude to dine with him at the Waldorf. Syd and Bert, hiding behind the portieres, overhear the invitation. They make wry faces and look as though Percival would fare very badly if they only dared.

Syd and Bert have ingenious minds. They put all of their ingenuity to work figuring out some way to oust Mr. Percival from Maude's favor. Bert decides to disguise as a brigand and to accost the couple at the restaurant. This will give Syd an opportunity to interfere and to play the hero.

The next night Maude and Percival enter and begin to eat. Syd takes a table nearby. Soon a rough, unshaven, fierce-looking individual enters and goes straight to Maude's table. She is terribly frightened. Percival is stunned with terror. The evil-looking man raises his hand and shows that he holds a bomb. Maude screams. Syd, at the next table, rushes over, grabs the villain's arm, wrests the bomb from him and throws it into the ice pitcher. Bert is arrested, but later explains the farce to the officer, who releases him. Syd becomes a hero and takes Percival's place in Maude's favor.

CRAWFISHING (Feb. 25).—An extremely captivating industry of Sweden. It is a very catchy and absorbing picture.

THE OLD OAK'S SECRET (Feb. 26).—At the outbreak of the Civil War, James Blackthorne, a wealthy Southern planter, is commissioned to join the Confederate forces. Before leaving he makes his will, leaving his estate to his ward, Dick Carroll. There is a clause in the will, giving freedom to the old slave, Moses; this clause the master reads aloud to Moses. After Blackthorne leaves, Moses fearing that if the docucent is discovered he will be set free and separated from the household he loves, hides the will in an old tree, which is the trysting place of Dick and his neighbor-sweetheart, Nancy.

Dick, a private in his guardian's company, is with Blackthorne when he is killed during one of the first battles, and before Blackthorn dies, he tells him of the will and that it is in the library of the mansion. Dick writes this information to Nancy. A Northern cousin of Blackthorne's comes to the plantation, and finding no direct heir, installs himself as owner. When Nancy discovers this, she gains access to the library of the mansion, but sees that the will is not in the place designated by Dick. Sharpe, the Northern cousin, is about to sell the famous oak for a big sum to the owner of a furniture factory. Dick comes home on sick furlough, with a wounded right arm. He meets Nancy at their trysting place, and sees Sharpe and the factory agent walking among the oaks. Sharpe compels old Moses to mark the trees that the agent selects to buy. They come upon the young lovers under the famous old oak. Sharpe orders Moses to mark that oak. Moses refuses, saying that he is a free negro, and does not have to obey. He produces the will from its hiding-place in the tree. He believes it to be his "free paper." It proves to be the precious will, leaving the entire estate to Dick. Sharpe is ordered off the plantation. Dick is happy in the possession of the estate and the young lovers in the joyous contemplation of their marriage.

A CHANGE IN BAGGAGE CHECKS (Feb. 27).—When telegrams come from the theatrical booking agent to Steve Jenks and Stella Triplight, two vaudeville artists, strangers to each other, they are delighted. The messages read: "Steven Jenks, Take first train to Oshkosh Villa. Report at Orpheum Theater. Two performances tomorrow," and "Stella Triplight, Report at Gaiety Theater, Jump-Off Junction, for two performances tomorrow."

In the exictement of trying to get their baggage sent, the baggage agent gives them each other's checks and sends the trunks, each to the other. the artists arrive at their destinations and find that each has the other's trunk, though they do not know whose it is. As it is absolutely necessary that they do their act to get their salary, they decide to wear what clothes they find in the trunks.

Steve using Stella's dresses, does his act and makes a great hit. Stella in Steve's suits also scores a great success. The following week finds them both on the same bill, at the same theater, and when their baggage is brought into the theater they discover their rightful trunks. After explanations and they learn that they were both great hits in each other's costumes, they decide to put all their wardrobe into one trunk and end their respective loneliness. The manager of the theater wires to the booking agent: "Two Singles on bill is one Double. Send me another Single."

THE DRUDGE (Special—2 parts—Feb. 28).—Because she loves him, Anna Louise, a schoolmistress, promises Dick Mason that she will wait for him, when he leaves her to go to the city and make his fortune. He has little success at first in the big city, and writes discouraging letters back home to the girl. She becomes the object of Thurley Briggs' affections, and becoming disheartened at Dick's failure to make a success in finding a good position, consents to marry Briggs when he proposes to her. She only marries him out of pique, however, her heart being still possessed by the boy who went away to "make good." She is only married a short time when she discovers that her husband is a brute and a bully. Life with him becomes almost unbearable.

From a charming, vivacious girl, Anna Louise becomes a dull, listless drudge, her one passion, her little child, whom she loves dearly. It is only when the man she truly loves returns to find her, that she is aroused to find herself a woman after all with a woman's longing for happiness. She listens to his plea, for she loves him and he loves her. The happiness within her grasp dazzles her, she reaches out for it greedily; she plans to fly with him, but the tug of duty is felt in the hand of a little child and her motherly instinct conquers and masters her longing for dreamed-of happiness. She turns back. The hand of God intervenes—on a country road—miles away, when fighting her hardest battle with herself and her love. She little knows how complete her victory has been for the sake of her child.

KALEM.

THE SHADOW (Special—2 parts—Feb. 23).—Driven to desperation by the enmity of Jane, her step-daughter, Sarah, Dean's second wife, turns to Ware, a friend of the family and a former suitor, for advice. Jane learns that her stepmother has gone to call upon Ware. Realizing the unhappiness her conduct has caused, the girl is stricken with remorse. Knowing that her father would misconstrue Sarah's visit to Ware, the girl hastens to the man's home to meet her stepmother. Sarah is taken aback when Jane finds her with Ware, but is filled with happiness when the girl announces her desire for a reconciliation. The two are just about to leave when Dean is seen approaching the house. In terror, the two women hide in the next room. Dean enters. He discovers his wife's handkerchief lying on the table and demands an explanation from Ware. To save her stepmother, Jane enters the room and nobly shoulders the guilt. In horror, Dean forbids her ever returning to his home.

Fearing her husband's anger, Sarah selfishly suffers Jane to bear the consequences of her own thoughtless act. For a time, Jane strives to support herself, but finally faces dire poverty. Sarah, learning of her stepdaughter's predicament, is brought to the realization of her own selfishness.

"Hallberg"
TALK
No. 15

Something About Current Saving

Suppose you install a "HALLBERG" A.C. to D. C. Economizer adjustable from 25 to 70 amperes D. C. at the arc and operate it at 50 amperes—then you will take only 4 K.W. from the line. In other words, at the 10c. rate it would cost only 40c. per hour to produce a 50 ampere D. C. arc on an A. C. supply current, with the "HALLBERG" A.C. to D.C. Economizer. At the 5c rate it would cost you only 20c per hour. Now take a Rotary Converter and produce the same result on the screen, then the power taken from the line with 50 ampere D. C. arc will be over 5 K. W., because you must use a rheostat in series with the arc. This means that it costs you 10c an hour more to operate the Rotary Converter as compared with the "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER. Suppose you operate ten hours per day for 300 days a year, THEN YOU ARE SAVING $1.00 PER DAY, OR $300 PER YEAR WITH THE "HALLBERG" A.C. to D.C. ECONOMIZER OVER THE ROTARY CONVERTER. Think this over, Mr. Exhibitor. WHY SHOULD YOU INVEST IN SOMETHING THAT COSTS YOU ALMOST 25 PER CENT. MORE TO OPERATE IN A YEAR'S TIME. The "HALLBERG" would pay for itself even if they gave you a Rotary Converter for nothing. This is not knocking. These are straight facts obtained by tests under expert authority, and I CAN PROVE IT. If you are in the vicinity, drop into my testing room and I will show you the figures and demonstrate before your eyes. You could afford to give away your Rotary Converter and put in a "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER and make money at the end of the year. How does that strike you? But I will make an allowance in trade for your Mercury Arc Rectifiers or Rotary Converters or other arc controllers. Consult me today.

HALLBERG A. C. & D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS.

I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A. C. Economizers, A. C. to D. C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

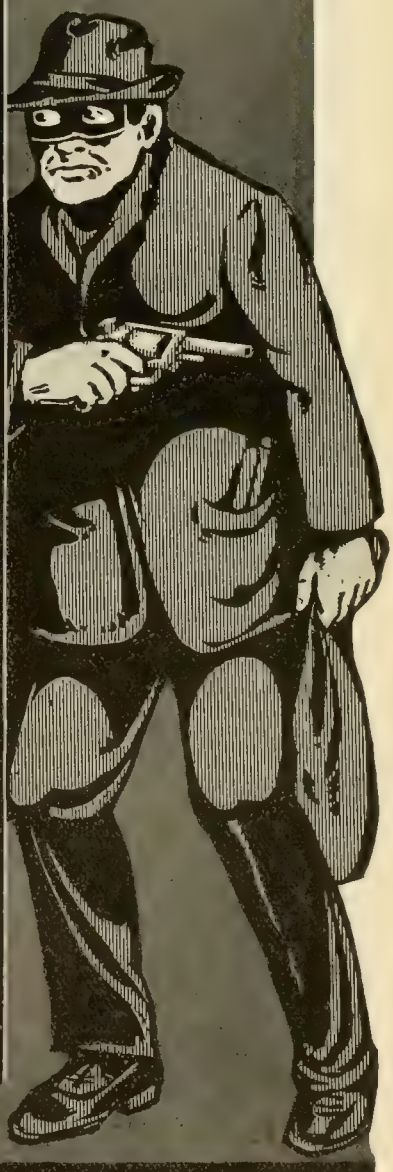
THE GREAT BULLION ROBBERY

IN THREE PARTS

A BRILLIANT DRAMA OF POLICE WORK IN LONDON—SETTING FORTH THE LATEST METHODS OF OPERATING AGAINST THE MOST DESPERATE OF CRIMINALS—A TERRIFIC, FAST-MOVING FEATURE



OUR VAULT FULL OF FEATURE TREASURES

Is one of the most interesting places in New York. It is a big fire and burglar-proof bank vault, 10x20x12 feet in size, built of reinforced concrete on our own premises for the express purpose of safeguarding the biggest stock of features in this or any city. Our office is the largest feature establishment in the world. This may sound like idle talk, but it's true. Come and see for yourself.

IN THE HANDS OF LONDON CROOKS. The Big Barker Success, 5 parts

IN THE PYTHON'S DEN. An original and fascinating Oriental drama, 3 parts

FROM GUTTER TO FOOTLIGHTS Another Barker Masterpiece, 5 parts

THE BLACK THIRTEEN. One of the most popular features we ever had, 3 parts

HARI-KARI. Still the prettiest sensational feature film on the market, 3 parts

APEX FILM CO.

145 W. 45th St., NEW YORK, P. P. Craft, Mgr.

She determines to reveal the whole miserable story. Sarah arranges to have Jane and Jack Ware at her home the following day. Dean discovers his daughter's presence and harshly orders her from the house. Sarah, however, reveals the circumstances. She points out that through the course of events, the enmity which had formerly existed between Jane and herself is now replaced by love. Jane and Ware corroborate the unhappy woman's story. Dean sees a new light. Gladdened at the turn of events he takes his wife and daughter in his arms.

THE TIGERS OF THE HILLS (Special—2 parts—Feb. 25).—Miller conceives a bitter hatred for Howard, his successful rival for the hand of Ruth, daughter of Colonel Cameron, commandant of a Western army post. A party of immigrants, ignorant of Indian customs, destroy some burial scaffolds. The desecration is witnessed by the redmen and a desperate battle ensues. One of the immigrants is sent to the post for help. Miller and Howard are sent to the rescue with a body of troopers.

Howard is seriously wounded. He is carried away by his horse when the animal is struck by a shot. He is later found lying by the roadside by Miller. Miller sees his chance. Leaving his rival unconscious, the man returns to the fort and reports that Howard had deserted under fire. Ruth is heartbroken. Later, Howard is found by Bright Cloud. The Indian maid helps him back to the fort, where he is placed under arrest. Bright Cloud learns that half of the force is to be sent to meet an ammunition train the following day. She reports this to her people. The latter plan an attack against the weakened post.

The attack is made the following day. Learning that the ammunition is running low, Howard escapes from the fort, and dashes away for reinforcements. He meets the troops convoying the ammunition train. Mounting to the seat of one of the wagons, the lieutenant drives ahead of the soldiers. He comes in sight of the fort just as the defenders' ammunition is exhausted. Driving through the ranks of the painted savages, he approaches the walls of the enclosure. At the same instant, a shot strikes the powder in the wagon. A terrific explosion takes place. Howard is knocked unconscious. The Indians are beaten off. Miller, who has been mortally wounded, confesses. When Howard regains his senses he learns from the lips of his sweetheart that he has been exonerated.

REGGIE, THE SQUAW MAN (Feb. 27).—Reggie, a petted and pampered scion of aristocracy, falls in love with Annie Wagontongue, daughter of Chief Pump Handle. While courting the maid, he teaches her father how to smoke cigars. Reggie wins Annie by purchasing her from her father for fifty boxes of perfectos. Reggie electrifies his parents by bringing his bride home. The day after their arrival, Annie spies Mrs. Moneybags' poodle. Yearning for some reservation dog-stew, she seizes the animal and orders the chef to prepare it for her meal. When the cook protests, Annie picks up a table knife and attempts to butcher the dog. Mrs. Moneybags is summoned and saves her pet in the nick of time. Reggie finally succeeds in quelling the riot which follows. When dinner is announced, Annie makes a grand rush for the dining-room. Climbing on the table, she contentedly grabs all the food in sight. The family leave the room to talk the matter over. When they return, the girl is inhaling deeply of a long Indian pipe. They seize Annie and carry her to the bathroom, where they attempt to give her a washing. Highly indignant at so unnecessary a procedure, Annie escapes and hides in her mother-in-law's boudoir. Two plumes in Mrs. Moneybags' best hat attract her attention. Plucking them out, the girl sticks them in her hair. When the family finally come upon her, they find she has started a fire in the middle of the floor and is contentedly toasting her hands. Having reached the limit of endurance, they order Reggie to return to the reservation with his bride. Poor Reggie obeys. We finally see him sitting before a tepee, wearing a monocle, a huge war bonnet, and a blanket, and smoking cigarettes. As for Annie Wagontongue, happy and contented, she prepares the evening meal over the camp fire for her lord and master.

THE DELAYED SPECIAL (Feb. 28).—Wayne, the new dispatcher, meets Ruth, the telegrapher at Willow Springs, while making a trip over the division. A strong friendship arises between the two. Wayne meets little Jack, Ruth's brother, and becomes greatly attached to him. The passenger agent of the line secures the business of transporting a theatrical company from Weed, a theatrical manager, upon the promise of a fast run. Wayne is ordered to see that the Opera Special is given the right of way. That same day a tie-up on Wayne's division results in his being severely reprimanded. Little Jack, in climbing a tree, falls and is seriously injured. Frantic, Ruth wires Wayne, urging him to have the next train stop at Willow Springs to take the boy to a hospital. It chances that the next train is the Opera Special. Wayne pleads with Rand, his chief, for permission to flag the special. Rand turns upon him and harshly forbids delaying the train.

Wayne thinks of the little sufferer who must die unless he receives medical attention. Rushing to his wire, he is about to call up Willow Springs when Rand interferes. A desperate battle ensues. Wayne finally succeeds in having the Special flagged, but the deed costs him his job. Weed is furious when he discovers that his train is slowing down, but when he learns the reason, his anger turns to sympathy and he takes the boy into his own car. The train breaks all records in reaching the city, where word has been sent to have a physician at the station. Rand, fearful of Weed's displeasure, is all apologies when the train pulls in. The theatrical manager, however, announces his approval of Wayne's act. Later it is learned that because of the dispatcher's action, Jack's life has been saved. Weed learns of Wayne's dismissal and vigorously announces his disapproval of Rand's course. Rand, perceiving the good that has resulted, reinstates Wayne. Later, Ruth comes to the city to be by her brother's side and, in her eyes, Wayne finds the promise of a greater reward.

Here It Is!

LEVY & McGUINESS have been elevated to the KNIGHTHOOD OF BROOMSTICKS, and have been awarded the Great Grand Gold Medal of the Cotillion.

The wonderful achievements of the above mentioned characters are chronicled in a film under the quiet but much meaning title

"Traffickers on Soles"

Notwithstanding the dead earnest and serious efforts of our heroes, the film is nothing but one grand Comedy-Travesty in three parts, pronounced by connoisseurs of Burlesque, to be a

Classiker of Fun

A full line of multicolored paper and other display matter.

A few bargain States left on

"The Great Lure of Paris"
IN THREE PARTS

"JUSTICE or LOVE?"
IN THREE PARTS

Feature Photoplay Co.
220 W. 42nd St. Candler Building
Phone Bryant 8486 New York City

BIOGRAPH.

THE MASSACRE (2 parts—Feb. 26).—As the woman he loved lay dying, the former suitor swore to protect the child of the other man, just killed in battle. The baby grown to womanhood, the man's love for the mother was felt again, but a stranger claimed the girl's love. So the man with his trust left for the far Northwestern country and joined in the government wars against the Indians. There again he met the life which he had sworn to protect. How well he succeeded, the returning young husband could most appreciate, after one of the most deadly massacres and Indian battles of the period.

MELIES.

A FABLE AND ITS MORAL (Feb. 19).—A peasant is passionately fond of his pet cat and almost worships the animal. So fond is he that he invokes Providence on the cat's behalf and Tabby is transformed into a beautiful girl. The peasant is wild with delight, and the nuptials soon take place. Alas! a nobleman comes along and covets the beautiful girl. But her feline nature asserts itself and she runs from her new wooer. Eventually a reverse transformation takes place and the peasant's wife is given back her original form of a cat. The underlying moral is, of course, that we should be satisfied with what we have and not seek the impossible.

A HOBO PHILOSOPHER (Feb. 19).—Hubby and wifey have quarreled. A modern Diogenes in the guise of a lowly hobo turns up and in very ingenious manner the tramp manages to bring together once more the quarrelsome pair, in spite of threats of divorce and other forms of separation. Hobo is an interesting character and adopts some original methods in his peace-making efforts.

ESSANAY.

HEAR NO EVIL (Feb. 24).—Mr. John Wiltz is extremely fond of his secretary, Herbert Van Kirkland, which causes jealousy among the other employees. They plot to have their employer hear evil things of the secretary, and Van Kirkland is discharged. The newspapers expose a shady transaction which had been supervised by Wiltz, and the only witness, Van Kirkland, is gone. Wiltz is snubbed by all his former friends. A year later we see him addicted to drink, sick and alone, all on account of listening to "he who speaketh evil." Moral—do not convict until justly tried.

MRS. MANLY'S BABY (Feb. 25).—Mrs. Manly and Mrs. G. Howe Wise are close friends and sisters in the same Suffrage Legion in a small town, but Mrs. Manly makes a legal error by marrying a second husband before she had been duly set free from the first. When the two husbands meet and find the duplicity of the woman in question, they take the matter to the police for settlement. Being accused of bigamy, Mrs. Manly decides that it is best to take flight. Her suffragette sisters take up a collection and she escapes the law and all pursuers. Many years later, her friend, Mrs. G. Howe Wise, is surprised to receive a letter from Mrs. Manly, stating that she is sending her baby to Mrs. Wise to raise, and she not having any children of her own, is at a loss to know exactly how to prepare for the coming event. But she goes shopping and buys everything imaginable for an infant. However, her surprise is great when the "baby" arrives and she finds all her plans have been mislaid, for the new arrival is truly "some baby" and upsets the household arrangements to an amazing degree.

THE ARM OF VENGEANCE (Feb. 26).—The old saying, "return good for evil," is worked out in this charming story. Craig Bowman, a ranch owner, is leisurely walking through the woods, when he meets an Indian, who is half starved. Bowman refuses to help the red man, and when he returns to his home later, he discovers his wife feeding the Indian. Bowman sends the Indian away without allowing him to eat the food his wife had prepared. He then reprimands her. Shortly after, their child, Lois, playing with her doll in the woods, becomes lost. The Indian finds her and takes her home to her distracted parents, thus "returning good for evil."

I Dare You Refuse to Read This Ad!

You won't do it because you know that Rubinews is good news.

You who have been down to visit the great RUBY TWINPLEX STUDIO have doffed your hats to me and wondered at the perfection of its equipment.

NOW I WANT TO ANNOUNCE that some of the biggest features about to appear on the market are going to be made in my studio. You buyers who want to see goods will come right here, sit down and have a cigar in my fireproof projection room, and see the product of half a dozen feature makers; you will save yourself the Marathon chase which all buyers who come to town must experience under present conditions.

FILM MAKERS who are real film makers are invited to make pictures here and participate in the co-operative facilities. Men who have real capital in business need expert support, up-to-the-second facilities, and Rubi-service. When you make your pictures here you get the benefit of Ruby knowledge, Ruby experience, Ruby progressiveness and the Ruby ingenuity that has made Ruby success.

THE FEATURE FILM BUSINESS IS STREWN WITH FAILURES! YOU SHOULD STEER CLEAR OF THEM. RUBY MEANS SUCCESS!

RUBY TWINPLEX STUDIO

Direction, Leon J. Rubinstein 217 EAST 24th ST., NEW YORK CITY

THAT SIX-REELER WE PROMISED YOU IS READY! DON'T WORRY—YOU'LL SEE THE AD!

BRONCHO BILLY'S BIBLE (Feb. 28).—Broncho Billy and his pal, after robbing the stage-coach, divide the loot and part company. Among the valuables in his share, Broncho Billy finds a well-worn Bible, and after skimming over the pages with a grim smile, he puts it in an inside pocket and rides in to town. In the saloon a poker game is flourishing and "Quick Draw" Kelly, a notor'ous cheat and gunman, is cleaning the cowboys of their earnings. Broncho Billy sits in the game, detects Kelly sliding an ace from the top of his boot, calls his cheating at the point of his gun, brands Kelly with disgrace, and kicks him out. Burning with revenge, Kelly tries to kill Broncho with a shot through the open door, but the bullet lodges in the Bible and saves Broncho's life. Picking the bullet from the pages, Broncho replaces the holy book in his pocket, rushes out, mounts and starts after the escaping ruffian. After a thrilling chase both dismount and take to the rocks. Higher and higher Kelly ascends until the distant plains stretch before miles below. Broncho now rolls a heavy boulder off to one side of Kelly, who instantly empties his gun in the direction of the sound, thinking it to be Broncho. Before he can reload, Broncho corners him and a terrific hand-to-hand struggle ensues on the very brink of the yawning chasm. Back and forth they sway until Broncho forces Kelly to his knees, then picks him up bodily and is about to cast him over the precipice, when the Bible falls from his pocket and Broncho sees the words: "Thou Shalt Not Kill" open before him. For a moment he fights with himself, then allows Kelly to escape unmolested. Bible in hand he finds a seat against the rocks and begins the faithful study of God's Word, and the following Sunday finds him in church for the first time in his life.

LET NO MAN ESCAPE (Special—2 parts—Feb. 27).—John Brannon, through a chain of evidence woven against him by Gordon Thorne, the real murderer, thinks he is the murderer. But somehow there is a SOMETHING in his heart that tells him he is not. He realizes, however, that the proof is against him and takes Thorne's advice to clear out. He does so, taking with him his little daughter. Thorne, meanwhile, goes to his home, where, safe in the assurance that Brannon would be accused of the crime, he spends the night. But he reckoned without being sure. The man they thought dead was NOT. With just enough life left to drag himself to the table, he wrote a message, "Thorne did the shooting, Brannon is innocent." This is found next morning by the servant and the detectives are summoned. Gunther, the detective, immediately starts for Thorne's home, but Thorne becomes aware of his presence and makes a getaway. Gunther vows to track him down.

Meanwhile Brannon has gone far from the haunts of man and is living in the solitude of the wilderness. We now see him, four years after the first occurrence. In a vision he sees an angel and the words, "Go thou forth and mingle amongst thy fellowmen. Justify thyself in thy own sight." Feeling in his heart that he is an innocent man, he decides to face the world again, and fifteen years later we see him a successful man in the small town of Maysville, where he is being put in the race for Mayor. Meanwhile Gunther, the detective, happens on the trail of Thorne, who is again operating his confidence game, and starts out after him. He traces him to Maysville. During this time that Gunther is traveling the one thousand miles to Maysville, Thorne, the crook, has succeeded in putting into operation his swindle, "The Alaskan Gold Dredging Co." Albert Wright, the sweetheart of Brannon's daughter, falls a prey, and through him, Brannon, living under the assumed name of Warren, becomes cognizant of Thorne's presence.

He goes to Thorne and demands that the swindle be stopped. They of course recognize each other, and Thorne threatens Brannon that unless he keeps his hands out of the pie, that on election day he will tell the people the kind of a man they are electing for Mayor. Brannon, in spite of this, openly defies Thorne, and puts his faith in the passage from the Bible, "In Thee, O Lord, do I put my trust. My flesh and my heart faileth; but God is the strength of my heart." The day of the election speech comes and Brannon, on the platform, is making his plea for office. Thorne, true to his word, openly denounces him as a murderer and for the moment it looks bad for Brannon. But they reckoned without Gunther. He appears, grapples with Thorne and then in a short speech, tells the crowd of the real facts surrounding the case, showing as proof the letter from the murdered man. They again sway in favor of Brannon As Guinther turns to congratulate Brannon, Thorne makes a dash for liberty, succeeding in getting into a buggy. He is chased in an auto by Gunther and in a sensational scene climbs from the hood into the swiftly moving buggy. He handcuffs Thorne and the supposition is that he is taken to justice. Later we see him with Thorne on a train. While in Brannon's home we see a scene which shows a great faith in God. The words, "If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the Lord—to keep thy commandments—and if thou turn unto the Lord thy God with all thine heart—then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity and have compassion on thee"—which has been Brannon's faith, appear in the scene. Brannon returns thanks to his God for His infinite goodness.

THE FILM

that has created more enthusiastic interest among renters and exhibitors and more comment in the press —than any other recent feature release.

Approximate Length, 4800 feet
(5 Reels)

Are you too late to obtain exclusive rights for your territory? If not, you should communicate immediately WITH

CABLE, KINETO
CODES: LIEBER AND A B C 5TH

TELEPHONE
BRYANT 4978

American Kinetо Corporation

BROADWAY AT 42D STREET NEW YORK

PATHEPLAY.

THE WINNING HAND (Feb. 24).—Tom Brooks, a big-hearted man who was devoted to his wife now dead and whose little son is the idol of his heart, conducts a saloon in a mining camp. He guards his boy from evil as best he can and wishing him to have the advantages he himself never enjoyed, sends him away to school. Several years later Jack, who is now a promising young army officer returning from service in the Philippines, meets Jane Van Buren and her father. He becomes an instant captive to the charms of the young girl. Tom Brooks has moved to the city and continuing in the only business he knows, runs a gambling house for wealthy patrons. Through this business, of which he is at heart ashamed, he acquires riches. He feels, however, that it is best that his son be kept in ignorance of the source of his wealth.

One evening Jack gets a letter from young Van Buren, saying that he is losing heavily in a gambling house and asking him to come and take him away. Jack goes to the address indicated and sends in his name. In the meantime Eddy has lost all his available funds and has borrowed to his limit from "Big Tom" the proprietor. Another loan being refused he forges his father's check and cashes it. In a dramatic scene Jack meets his father in the gambling den and is told that the parent comes there to gamble. He does not suspect that Big Tom and his father are the same persons. Young Van Buren, however, finds out and denies to the gambler's son the right to call upon his sister. At the price of the forged check Big Tom wins Eddy's silence, sees his son again the favored suitor and the repentant Eddy caught in his misdeeds leave home to start anew. To remove stigma from his son's name the gambler leaves for all time his shady business.

SEPTEMBER MORN (Feb. 25).—Dennis is a good seaman, but is totally deficient in skin adornments, so dear to a sailor's heart. He sees with envy the various tattooed designs upon the arms and chests of other members of the crew, and his first day ashore seizes the opportunity to have his own person treated in a like manner. On visiting Ali he is shown a book of designs, all of which he scorns until he sees the picture of the shrinking maiden standing in the chilly water. This meets his entire approval and at his request Ali tattoes the picture upon his chest.

Now Genevieve, Dennis' sweetheart, is the energetic leader of the Purity League and conducts a militant campaign against all representations of the human figure unadorned. Raiding a shop where the "September Morn" is prominently displayed in the window, she meets her Waterloo and is washed out of the door by a powerful stream of water from a hose directed by the indignant proprietor. Smarting from her defeat she returns home just in time to greet Dennis proud of the aid to beauty which he has just acquired. Her horror at seeing the offending picture upon his chest may be imagined. The sorrowful Dennis is sent back to Ali to have the beauty clothed. Dennis does as bidden, but selects the split skirt for the purpose. When Genevieve sees the result she is even more indignant and insists upon accompanying Dennis to the tattoo artist, where she has the split skirt sewed up, the figure fully and respectably clothed and the "Votes for Women" added.

THE DEVIL'S ASSISTANT (Special—2 parts—Feb. 26).—Because of the shiftless habits of her father, Hanna is obliged to seek employment as an artist's model in Harlow's studio, where she meets Marten, a rising genius, who later has the girl pose for him. He soon shows evidence of a very high regard for the girl, which she reciprocates, losing her former affection for her childhood friend, Hans, a faithful, honest and worthy young gardener. Through Harlow's influence the young artist secures a scholarship and goes to Italy for study, on the eve of his departure proclaiming his love to his benefactor's daughter. Hanna, broken-hearted by her lover's treachery, falls into evil habits, finally becoming destitute. She obtains employment in Harlow's household, where she again sees Marten, who returns a celebrated artist. Unable to resist the hopelessness of her position the girl sinks to the lowest depths of misery, where she is found some time later by Marten, in seeking a model for a picture to depict the misery of the hopeless.

The artist hopefully begins his task, which is soon interrupted by the violent death of Hanna's father, at whose bier she vows to lead a better life. In the strength of her new resolve Hanna strives for better things, regains the love of Hans, improves her condition and begins again to experience the joys of a new life, which drives the expression of hopelessness from her face. Upon learning the cause that threatens destruction to his picture, Marten profiting by the knowledge of her weakness, shamefully tries to again make love to the girl. The expression of misery again returns. The picture is finished and pronounced a masterpiece, and the young painter is receiving the plaudits of his fiancee and her father, when Hanna, whose downfall has cost the love of Hans, appears on the scene, reveals Marten's perfidy and destroys the canvas in a tense and most dramatic scene.

"CONVICT 113"

THREE PARTS THREE PARTS

A great drama with splendid acting and scenes of sensationalism. Wonderful fire scenes and deeds of heroism and rescue.

Soon Released. Apply quickly for territory

"A SHATTERED IDOL"

IN THREE PARTS

A story of dual life by an eminent physician who was a thief by night. He meets his death in a sensational scene in which he is unmasked before his wife.

State Rights Now Selling

Itala Film Company of America

HARRY R. RAVER, Director-General

Candler Building New York City

COMING

The WRATH of the GODS

A FIVE PART DOMINO SPECIAL. A BEAUTIFUL STORY EVOLVING AROUND JAPANESE LEGEND

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 12, 1914 (Feb. 9).—Texas City, Texas.—Eight thousand American troops guarding the Mexican border pass in farewell review before their commander, Major-General Carter, just prior to his departure for Honolulu.

Richmond, Va.—Henry C. Stuart is inaugurated Governor of Virginia. A host parades before him and a multitude witness the ceremony.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Which is the faster, auto or Aeroplane? Lincoln Beachy, birdman, and Barney Oldfield, auto speed king, run a race to decide. Oldfield wins.

Kansas City, Mo.—When it comes to raising cats, Missouri shows how. The bluebloods of catland exchange meows at the Sphinx Cat Club show. Here they are with their owners.

New York, N. Y.—A run on a solid old New York bank is started without cause and for three days frightened depositors brave wind and rain to withdraw their money. The bank was entirely sound.

Braunsdorf, Germany.—Thousands of tons of earth and rock, loosened by recent rains, sweep down a mountain side, destroying everything in the pathway and burying a passing train at the mountain's base. Many killed.

Washington, D. C.—Suffragists from many states visit the White House to urge President Wilson to help them in their battle for the ballot.

Norfolk, Va.—The steamer Nantucket sinks the Old Dominion (by United Press) liner Monroe during a heavy fog off the Virginia coast. Nearly fifty persons aboard the Monroe lost their lives.

Stockholm, Sweden.—The funeral of Sophie, dowager Queen of Sweden, who died after an illness lasting twenty-five years, is held with great pomp in a blinding snowstorm.

LUBIN.

THE LOST CHILD (Feb. 24).—James and Kate Fuller have been on their wedding trip, and after a year start home. They fall asleep in the waiting train. In a home in the city a baby arrives, to whom a little brother objects very much. He decides to get rid of him and takes him to the railroad station. The boy sees James and Kate asleep in the train, lays the baby on Kate's lap, and is home and undressed before the baby is missed. He leaves the front door ajar to mislead the nurse. The loss is soon discovered. Papa Potter sees the door open and thinks the baby has been stolen. He calls up the police, who start a search. The train is on its way. Kate awakens, is puzzled and awakens James, showing him the baby. James pushes the baby away, showing his dislike for children. Kate is pained.

Arriving at their destination, James tries to persuade Kate to leave the baby in the station, but she refuses. Soon after they arrive home, friends call. Fearing the friends will think that the baby is theirs, James hides it. All is well until the baby cries and the visitors look for an explanation. James pretends to go and see what the noise is; he quiets the baby with sugar tied in a rag and tells the friends they heard a cat. More friends come in, surprising James and Kate. Fearing the guests will discover the child, James tries to get rid of it by leaving him on the porch of another house. He is seen and recognized by people passing, who return the baby to Kate just as she is about to pass wine to the guests. All is confusion and the guests crowd around Kate and baby, saying, "How much he looks like his daddy." James is annoyed, the guests drink to the health of James, Jr., but James refuses to drink with them.

Next morning James sees headlines in the paper, "Mr. and Mrs. James Fuller Return Home From Honeymoon with James, Jr." James angrily hands Kate the paper. Kate reading, sees other headlines, "Boy Confesses, After Vain Search For Baby." Both are relieved. James telegraphs baby's father and soon receives a reply that he is coming on. The messenger boy has read papers also and boldly laughs at James and Kate. Friends come next evening on Kate's invitation to see the baby christened. James Potter, the baby's father, arrives. Guests are puzzled until James introduces him. After hearing how the guests thought the baby was James' and Kate's, Potter completes the joke [illegible] christened "James, Jr.," with [illegible]

$75.00

buys a first-class, excellently constructed

Motion Picture Camera

with 200-foot magazines and Bausch & Lomb Zeiss Teesar F 3.5 lens. Beautifully finished; produces perfect pictures. Send for catalogue.

Motion Picture Camera Co.
5 West 14th Street NEW YORK

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA
733

Our Supreme Program Includes

ALL HELEN GARDNER RELEASES
ALL FLORENCE TURNER RELEASES
ALL MARION LEONARD RELEASES
ALL KENNEDY'S FEATURES, INC.
ALL CRITERION FEATURES

A Feature Every Day or Any Day

GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO., Inc.
POWER'S BLDG CHICAGO

Phone, Rector 1215 Established 1847
Henry Gerstle's Son
Specialists and Experts in
FIRE & LIABILITY INSURANCE
For the Motion Picture Industry
FORTY-FIVE BROADWAY NEW YORK

THE RISE OF OFFICER CASEY (Feb. 24).—Casey, a sleepy cop, is dogged by Harding, the Sergeant, who is a braggart. A desperate burglar has been operating in their district. The chief threatens to discharge the entire force unless the burglar is caught. Unable to make good Casey decides to commit suicide. So Harding has a chance to capture the Knight of the jimmy, but falters. Casey captures him, but at first doesn't really know how it happened. Harding is placed back in the ranks and Casey is promoted in his place.

SEALED ORDERS (Special—2 parts—Feb. 25).—War between Mexico and the United States threatens. Crafty Herrara, minister of war at Mexico City, has members of his secret service scattered at vantage points throughout the United States and selects Arturo Velarde, who, with his sister, Elena, has been identified with the Mexican secret service, to go to San Francisco, accompanied by his sister under guise of a yachting cruise, and there get such information as he may regarding the movements of the Pacific fleet. Herrara gives Velarde a letter of introduction to Lieut. Donald Spier, of the U. S. S. "Denver," whom he had met and known in earlier days before the possibility of trouble had developed. Arturo and his sister set sail on their steam yacht "Lucero," and in time arrive at San Francisco bay, where most of the Pacific fleet is stationed. They go aboard the "Denver" and present their letter of introduction to Lieut. Spier, upon whom Elena's charms make a most profound impression. The acquaintance between the two is, however, suddenly interrupted by reason of Lieut. Spier receiving an order to proceed at once to Washington. From this point events proceed with startling rapidity. Political intrigue weaves a snare by which the helpless girl is compelled to connive in a plot which nearly costs the life of herself and her lover. During the desperate naval battle which results, Elena learns that when in the heart of a Mexican, love and duty clash, duty must give way. Brought together during the conflict and battle, the seeds of love are sown which later yields its harvest under the balmy skies of sunny Mexico.

THE TWO ROSES (Special—2 parts—Feb. 26).—Ernest Haven, a red blooded passionate natured man, marries Edith, who is his direct opposite. Years pass and they drift. Ernest frets at her lack of ardor. Still on one of their anniversaries he buys her the usual bunch of white roses. In the florist's shop he meets Eleanor Tempest, a vivacious brunette, who is buying red roses. The sight of her actions lead Ernest's thoughts into a dangerous channel. Glances pass between them and put them upon a footing of mutual understanding. That evening he again tries to break down his wife's reserve, but she rebukes him and deeply hurt he draws back into his shell of boredom. Their little boy is the only thing that sheds a ray of light in the home circle.

Later Ernest and Eleanor meet again and their acquaintance ripens into an infatuation. On one occasion he 'phones two orders to the florist, one for white roses for his wife and the other red for Eleanor. The boy mixes the orders and it is then that Edith learns of the existence of the other woman. A quarrel follows and Ernest, in brutal terms, tells why the other woman attracts him. A divorce is granted and Ernest marries Eleanor.

Long after when he has had a baby by his second wife he meets Edith's son and the boy refuses to embrace his father because he is making his mother unhappy. The boy becomes ill and at the suggestion of the doctor Edith sends for Ernest. He goes to the old house and with his first wife they sit up all night until the crisis has passed. Ernest becomes discontented with conditions and he finds himself drifting back to his old home through the agency of his son. Finally Edith tells him

ILLINOIS and WISCONSIN EXHIBITORS GET BUSY!

Book the biggest money getter of the year. "VICTORY OR DEATH" (Itala), four reels. SEE Amazing leap by a girl from an aeroplane into the ocean. "GAMBLER'S REVENGE" (Pasquali,) four reels. We have other big ones.

Write for Complete List

SCHILLER FEATURE FILM CO., 140 North Dearborn Street, CHICAGO

ERKER HOLDS A FULL HOUSE
full of the very best in theatre supplies, motion picture machines, spot lamps, slides, etc.
Get into the game boys—do it now
You take no chances, you're sure of your money's worth. We want to send you our catalogue.
Our slides made to order can't be beat
Erker Bros. Optical Co., 608 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc., had a definite purpose in view when it was incorporated, and that purpose was to release feature films of dependable quality.

We're Living Up to Our Purpose

The true feature has "punch." It expresses originality. It teems with exciting situations. It overawes spectators with its massiveness. It embodies the unusual, the spectacular and the thrilling incidents that lift it above the single reel production and entitle it to the name of "feature"

Warner's Features Have "Punch"

3 SUPERIOR RELEASES EVERY WEEK 3

Handled by Our Own Exchanges—23 of them—One in Each Principal City

INVESTIGATE

WARNER'S FEATURES
INCORPORATED

130 WEST 46th STREET, NEW YORK

Poster Mounting Cloth
Headquarters.
Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.
TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY, 82 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

that has present is unbearable and that they must part again.

Meanwhile Eleanor has formed an intimacy with another man and one night goes to a ball with him when the baby should have had her care. Ernest returns home late and finds the frantic maid alone with the dead child. Eleanor is called by phone and receives a scathing calling from her husband and the breach becomes permanent. This is further increased when he finds his wife in the man's arms later, and has him thrown out of the house. Edith's boy writes his father to please come back to them and make mamma well. Eleanor gets the note first and opens it. The boy's pleading strikes a responsive chord in her womanly nature and she resolves to repair the damage she has done. She goes to the house for forgiveness and there finds Edith and Ernest in each other's arms. Outside she meets her lover and goes with him in his auto. Returning to his home Ernest receives a message informing him that the auto has been wrecked and Eleanor is dead. With the light of a new understanding Edith and Ernest seal a new pact of married happiness with a lover's kiss.

A DESPERATE CHANCE (Feb. 27).—Peter Delany was a drunkard. Peter's wife, Fannie, is in a fair way to die of consumption unless Peter can send her away. The doctor tells him there is no way out of it. He takes their last money and goes to the village to get the prescription filled, and while there falls into his old temptation and uses the money for drink instead of securing the prescription. The bully of the country thereabout, Del Phelan, picks on Peter and when Peter would feebly resent it, knocks him down. Peter vows to get even. Later Phelan, passing through the woods, encounters two drunken toughs and the result of their arguments is a death shot for Phelan. Peter hears the shot and finds Phelan dead and his assailants gone. Mechanically he picks up the gun and without thinking places it in his pocket. Then he remembers the prescription and taking from the dead Phelan enough to buy he nervously slinks away.

The body is found later and the sheriff notified, but Peter has the prescription and arrived home. There he discovers he has the gun and frantically hides it. A deputy sheriff goes to look over the ground. Peter drawn by curiosity also goes to the village and discovers a placard offering $500 reward for information that will lead to the arrest of the murderer. Peter thinks of his wife. Free of him she might be able to do some good in the world. What would his life matter if Fannie had five hundred dollars and could get well. He enters the office and gets the sheriff to sign a paper guaranteeing that his wife would receive the reward if he gave the information the sheriff wanted. When the paper is signed he confesses that he committed the murder; they laugh at him. He pleads with them, reminds them of the argument in the saloon and tells them where to find the gun. A man goes for it. Upon his return the sheriff finds him guilty.

Meanwhile the deputy has followed what clues he could find and discovers nothing until to assuage his thirst he enters another saloon and there overhears the drunken men whispering about their crime and he takes them to the sheriff's office. The sheriff and others are on their way, however, with Peter. The deputy arrives at the office and learning of Peter places his prisoners under guard and dashes off to intercept the hanging. He arrives in time and under the third degree of the sheriff, Peter breaks down and tells the truth. Gone now is his one big chance to save his wife and broken-hearted he gives way to his grief. The men, however, are quick to recognize true heroism and chip in the amount needed, and Peter goes home to Fannie, and the promise of a better future looms up before them.

COON TOWN SUFFRAGETTES (Feb. 28).—Mandy Jackson, a colored washlady, attends a white suffragette meeting and is affected by their leader, who told her that she was foolish to do all the work and let her lazy husband loaf. Mandy forthwith determines to start a suffragette party among her own people. The party is organized and, with Mandy as their leader, they start out with a determination to raid the saloons and to make their idle husbands get to work. They proudly march into the gin mill and clear the place of all idlers, each suffragette gets her husband and marches him out. The coon police are summoned, but they, too, are soon subdued. The coon husbands are then put to work and the militant colored suffragettes proudly claimed their first victory.

FATHER'S TEMPER (Feb. 28).—John Bull has a temper. He's not a large man, but has a temper that would fit a giant. He breaks up housekeeping on the slightest provocation and keeps the family in a state of fear. Bess, his daughter, is engaged to Joe Judd, and Joe writes that he is coming to town to ask her father for her hand. When father is approached on the matter he excels his best previous efforts. That doesn't bother Joe any, and he decides to cure the old man. The next day Joe brings a gang of workmen down to the house while his pa is at the office, and when father arrives so many queer things happen to him that he thinks he is going mad. When Joe again asks for the girl, father, now a beaten man, gives his consent.

END YOUR Terminal Troubles
Works on any machine.
Easily and quickly adjusted.
Has Exclusive Features.
ONLY .25 PER PAIR
Manuf'd by the L. B. ADKINS CO.
COLUMBUS, OHIO

The Strelinger catalogue of
BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
tells why direct current is very much better than alternating current for moving picture shows. Send for it.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

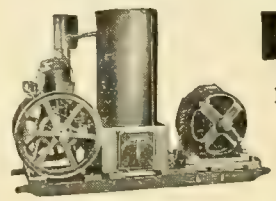
BRASS FRAMES RAILINGS OF QUALITY

You will admit a fine lobby display draws business. Our goods are the best and at prices that are right. Get our new catalogue and quotations before you place an order. We can give you a one-sheet easel-poster frame of brass, complete with glass and compo board back—for $7.00—this No. 12.

THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO.
1232 East 3d Street Cleveland, Ohio

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

THROUGH FIRE TO FORTUNE; or THE SUNKEN VILLAGE (Five parts—Lubin).—Jane Barrett and her son, Tom, are suddenly beggared by the speculations of her husband, known on Wall Street as Plunger Barrett. At an auction sale, the Barrett yacht, real estate and household effects are sold without reserve to satisfy some of the demands of the creditors. The bankrupt plunger goes to his room, plies himself with liquor, falls out of the window and is killed. It now depends upon Tom to bear the burden of his mother's support. In a newspaper he finds an advertisement offering a position, with promises of advancement, for a young man of education. This is signed by John Pearce, an old friend of the family, who, with his daughter, Helen, has often been a guest on the yacht and in their home. Helen has been attracted by Tom's manly bearing and finds herself gradually weaning her affections away from Phil Blair, an almost accepted lover, who is associated with her father in coal mining. The transfer of her affections comes one day when, out riding with Blair, a child falls from a bridge and he has not the courage to attempt to save her life. This is effected by Tom, and, as a reward, the girl insists upon her father giving the position to Tom. Wishing to begin at the bottom, Tom passes through the different stages of mining and handling coal, and is about to be appointed Assistant Superintendent. But his hopes, as well as those of his mother and lady love, are frustrated by the jealous Blair, assisted by George Bowers, ex-partner in the firm wrecked by Barrett. Thereupon Tom's mother, after making protest to the directors without avail, appeals to the men and a meeting of the Miners' Union is called. While this is in progress, Pearce, who is still Tom's ardent champion, receives a decision of the Supreme Court, giving him a clear title to a mine at the village of Mayflower. After the meeting, the miners having decided to walk out, through sympathy for Tom, he is offered the position of superintendent at Mayflower. He accepts it and takes most of his striking friends with him. The once deserted village now takes on new life, and the mine is opened by Tom on the co-operative principle. While



MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT
Used and highly endorsed by the United States Army. Biggest Sensation in the Moving Picture World. Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes:
"Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."
Write today for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.
(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

COMING
The WRATH of the GODS
A FIVE PART DOMINO SPECIAL. A BEAUTIFUL STORY EVOLVING AROUND JAPANESE LEGEND

is what every exhibitor gets when he uses Gaumont Films. Why not get in the running and secure

"ANGEL OF THE HOUSE"

3 Reels.

Release (Shipping) Date, Feb. 7.

A heart-gripping story.

EVERY SORT OF PUBLICITY
BOTH FOR EXCHANGE & EXHIBITOR

Gaumont Co.

110 West 40th Street, N. Y.

GAUMONT

PUBLICITY

Exchange men and Exhibitors are invited to correspond with Gaumont Publicity Department. It is at your service for posters, heralds, slides, cuts, photos, press items and publicity matter.

We are always glad to hear from you and learn of your wants.

Lobby Displays

Nine artists' photos (painted in eight colors by hand) on Lobby Displays 22 x 28 to be mailed free for 50c securely rolled in mailing tube.

A WONDERFUL VALUE AND ATTRACTION

THE RIGHT ROAD

means a successful business—Gaumont Films are the money getters—start "right" now with

"Her Guilty Secret"

3 Reels

A story of human interest.

Release (shipping) date Feb. 14.

EVERY SORT OF PUBLICITY
BOTH FOR EXCHANGE & EXHIBITOR.

Gaumont Co.

110 West 40th Street, N. Y.

GAUMONT

PHOTOS OF ARTISTS

A Handsome Set of 24 Single Photos in Brown, Blue or Green. To Sell for 20c a Set. Ask us for Trade Prices. A Sure Seller. This is the Best Line Ever Offered to Your Patrons

THE GAUMONT POLICY IS NOW TO ISSUE A BIG FEATURE EVERY WEEK. EITHER THREE OR MORE REELS

February 7th—"THE ANGEL OF THE HOUSE"—Three reels. A beautiful domestic drama, featuring little Marie, who "made" "IN THE CLUTCH OF THE PARIS APACHES."

February 14th—"HER GUILTY SECRET"—Three reels. A very strong dramatic story of a mistaken identity.

February 21st—"THE JUDGMENT OF THE JUNGLE"—Three reels. Another of Gaumont's unparalleled animal dramas, exciting from start to finish.

February 28th—"THE BETTER MAN"—Three reels. Full of gripping interest.

COMING

The Greatest of all Detective Dramas -- FANTOMAS, The Crook-Detective

110 West 40th St. GAUMONT CO. New York City

COMING

The WRATH of the GODS

A FIVE PART DOMINO SPECIAL. A BEAUTIFUL STORY EVOLVING AROUND JAPANESE LEGEND

the mining is progressing with fine promise, a flow of oil opened on the levels takes fire, setting the mine ablaze. Then follow the harrowing scenes which it is impossible to avert even after most heroic efforts on the part of the relief train and State Constabulary. After burning for more than three weeks, the fire burns away the supporting pillars of the mine, and the fated village caves into the abyss made by the sinking earth. The villainous Blair succeeds in convincing the excited people that Tom himself has fired the mine to conceal the fact of its utter worthlessness, and they set out to lynch him. For a time the brave mother and a few friends succeed in staying the advance of the mob, but they are the stronger, and are about to destroy him when a pillar of fire arises. This proved to be an oil well of great magnitude, and, amid the promises of the rehabilitated hero, that what they have lost will be more than regained, the defeated Blair is seen slinking away, silhouetted against the dying flames of the sunken village.

THE TOLL OF LABOR; or GERMINAL (Five parts—Pathe).—The mechanic Etienne Lantier is a competent workman out of a job, whose tempestuous disposition is more than atoned for by a good heart. With bundle in hand he looks for work from town to town and in vain until he comes to the coal mines of Montsou. Luckily for him there is a vacancy because of a workman being absent, and the foreman, Maheu, hires him at the suggestion of his daughter, Catherine, who dressed as a man is wont to work like a man in the mine. Lantier creates an impression on her and she takes his part much to the chagrin of her accepted lover, Chaval, an unworthy and violent man. Lantier fails to recognize her as a woman until after sharing her lunch with him in the depths of the mine, her hair falls from under her miner's headgear. From that moment he devotes his whole heart to her. At the end of the day's labor Lantier, who has excited a fierce jealousy in Chaval, is invited by Maheu to become a boarder at his house and he joyfully accepts.

The engineer, Negrel, making his daily descent into the mine finds the shoring timbers holding up the earth in a bad state and ready to fall. He makes a report recommending that the woodwork be immediately and properly repaired so as to avoid accident. The company, however, posts a notice saying that because the woodwork has to be repaired the price received by the miners per car of coal mined will be decreased. This arbitrary and unfair notice causes much discontent and anger among the miners. A mass meeting is called for at the Cabaret Rasseneur; Souvarine, an anarchistic workman, advocates violent measures. Lantier opposes this and suggests concerted action. The anger of the workmen breaks out afresh when they begin to receive their reduced wages and urged on by Lantier, whose influence is growing, they vote to strike.

In the meantime Catherine, though in love with Lantier, dares not go back on her word to Chaval and marries him. Chaval treacherously carries full information of the strike proceedings to Mr. Hennebeau, the chief director of the company, and accepts pay for being a spy. The strike is now on amid general enthusiasm. In the meantime, Negrel, the engineer, who is in love with Hennebeau's daughter, pleads with Hennebeau to answer the miners' requests. Miss Hennebeau also pleads with her father, but in vain.

The stores refuse to extend credit to the striking workmen and famine soon stalks among them. Lantier discovers to his surprise that Chaval is an exception and that he has plenty of food and money. As yet he has not discovered that Chaval is the paid spy of the company. Catherine brings secretly to her starving relative food and money. Chaval follows her, drives her from the house and strikes her. Lantier seeing it interferes in her behalf, and being attacked by Chaval thoroughly thrashes him.

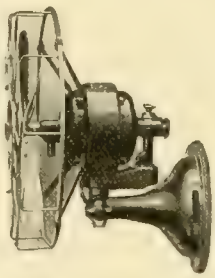
Chaval, taking advantage of the growing misery among the miners, urges some of them back to work. While they are in the mines the other strikers cut the elevator ropes. There is a panic in the mine depths. The imprisoned miners finally escape by ladders, but have to run the gauntlet of the enraged strikers, who still hold out. When Chaval is dragged from the mine Lantier rushes at him, but Catherine steps in between and prevents harm being done to her husband. Blinded by hatred Chaval goes to Hennebau and denounces the miners' leaders, especially Lantier. The police are called upon to arrest him, but warned in time he escapes to the abandoned shaft of Voroux.

The strike becomes violent and the troops are called in to reinforce the police. In the absence of Lantier, Souvarine is called in to head the strikers. Hennebeau's house is attacked and stoned Seeing the soldiers preparing to fire on the mob, the director's daughter rushes from the house to try and avert the coming calamity. She is caught in the storm of bullets and dies together with many of the miners and their wives, among them Catherine's father.

This crushes the strikers' movement and instigated by Chaval they vote to resume work. Lantier, emerged from his refuge, tries in vain to dissuade them, but his influence is gone and bowing to the majority he also goes back to work. Souvarine, alone implacable, determines upon desperate measures. He releases the bolts binding the barriers that hold back water from flooding the mine and the flood breaks loose. He is drowned in the cataclysm that follows. The miners, caught like rats in a trap, run madly hither and thither. Some escape, others, among them Lantier, Catherine and Chaval, are caught. These latter three find themselves imprisoned in an abandoned working pit, where they sit in despair with the water up to their knees. They have little food and when after long hours Catherine attempts to give a little of her lunch to Lantier, Chaval furiously opposes. Chaval finally attempts to deprive his wife by force of her morsel of food. In righteous rage Lantier strikes him and kills him. His dead body, floating on the water, haunts them.

Forgetting their animosities, directors and workmen unite in the work of rescue. Through an abandoned pit they come near to Catherine and Lantier. Their signals being answered by the prisoners they redouble their exertions. By imprudence, however, an explosion takes place, which kills many of the rescuers and sets back the work. Among those killed is Catherine's brother.

When the workers finally pierce the intervening walls they find only Lantier alive, for Catherine lies dead in his arms. When the unconscious man is brought into the daylight and at last opens his eyes it is the bereaved Negrel who, with a heart of sympathy, comforts him in his grief when he sees the body of his dead sweetheart. Broken in spirit he sees injustice rule and the poor pay the piper.



When You Buy Fans

find out the following points:—

How much current do they use?
How much air do they move?
How much noise do they make?
How long will they last?

Westinghouse Electric Fans

are built with all these points in view. If your fans are Westinghouse you are assured that they are the most economical, quietest, and most durable fans you can buy.

Divide the price by the years they last

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

The Old Reliable
BULL DOG CEMENT
AND
ONE DROP OIL
At Your Exchange
ONE DROP OIL CO., 15 S. Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

NO Motion Picture is the acme of perfection, or has the elimination of haze, and the softness so delightful to the eye which makes projection an Art but those that are shown upon a "Mirror Screen."

Our New Prismized, Snow-White Surface has the World beaten. We will give $500.00 to anyone who can produce a surface equal to it.

Write for our new catalogue.

MIRROR SCREEN CO.
F. J. REMBUSCH, Pres. SHELBYVILLE, IND.

As Always
Our Titles Lead All
in both quality and service at reduced price of 7c per foot.
JUST TRY US!
PREMIER TITLE COMPANY
326-330 East 35th Street, Chicago, Ill.

WHY SHOW A
Jumpy—Flickery—BUSINESS KILLING Picture?
WHEN YOU CAN
HAVE YOUR MACHINE FIXED AS GOOD AS NEW. WORK GUARANTEED.
We sell all makes of machines, new and second-hand. Also machine parts, supplies, tickets, carbons, etc.
CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.,
87 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

COMING LIFE'S TEMPTATIONS

A MASSIVE FOUR-PART SENSATIONAL FEATURE

NOW READY

Another Powerful Photo-Drama

A PARADISE LOST

IN FOUR ABSORBING PARTS

Featuring the Distinguished Tragedienne

MISS BETTY NANSEN

Proclaimed as One of the Foremost Exponents of DRAMATIC ART

"PREFERRED FEATURE ATTRACTIONS"

A Production Replete With Gripping Interest and Unfolding a Plot, Carrying a Strong Detective Element. The Poster Display In One, Three and Six Sheets is an Object Lesson in Lithography. Handsome Photos for the Lobby and Illustrated Descriptive Heralds.

WRITE OR WIRE FOR TERRITORY NOW!!

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 110 W. 40th St. NEW YORK

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL.

CRYSTAL.

THAT INFERNAL MACHINE (Feb. 24).—Hodges comes home and finds his wife in an altercation with an Italian. He chases him away. Later, a package comes to the office and Hodges is convinced that it is an infernal machine. He runs out for a policeman. Meanwhile his daughter comes to the office and takes the package home. Hodges' little boy takes the package. When the police arrive they cannot find it. They are all in fear. One officer gets courage enough to go up into Willie's room and after putting the package in water, opens it to find that it contains an alarm clock. Willie gets spanked for his part of the tragedy.

ARABELLA'S ROMANCE (Feb. 24).—Arabella lives with her brother Jabez. They receive a letter informing them that if either marry they lose an inheritance. Geraldine, their niece, visits them. She is paid attentions by Joe. Arabella objects to his attentions and would like him for herself. Geraldine and Joe hatch a scheme. She writes a letter, seemingly from Joe, asking her to meet him.

Arabella finds it. She tries to keep the appointment. Jabez discovers it. He gets a gun and goes hunting for Joe. Meanwhile Joe and Geraldine get married. Arabella discovers this, and is just in time to prevent Jabez from shooting the minister and Joe. When he discovers that she has not married and lost her inheritance, he is happy and resolves to wish Geraldine and Joe good health.

HOW MOSHA CAME BACK (Feb. 29).—Mosha sits in his room mussing over the terrible defeat administered when he attempted to win the $500 offered by the heavyweight championship. He visits his girl, but she refuses to have anything to do with him until he wipes out the defeat. He goes to the club and gets a return match with the champion. The day of the fight arrives. Mosha throws his ninety-eight pounds into the ring amid vociferous applause. The champion enters. When his weight is announced as 240, Mosha's heart sinks.

However, they start fighting and the Jewish champion is getting a terrific beating. He is about to quit when his second administers dope to him by way of a large syringe. Mosha gains courage. He knocks out the champion and also the referee. He is hailed as the heavyweight champion. He is the people's idol. Mosha has the time of his life. When the cigaretta Mosha has been smoking, burns his finger, Mosha wakes up to a realization that it has all been a dream.

POWERS.

REGENERATION (Feb. 27).—The woman has been leading an adventurous life. Her admirer grows tired and casts her off. She departs and sinks down in the street, tired mentally and bodily. The artist is painting the Madonna. His model fails to give him the inspiration needed and he discharges her. Passing down the street he observes the woman with the beautiful tired face, speaks to her and finally persuades her to go with him and be his model and embrace a better life.

The painting is finished. The woman has supplied the inspiration. She tires and longs for the old, merry life. She meets the tempter once more and goes with him to his home. There a vision of the Madonna comes to her. She knows she cannot live as she did before. She leaves the tempter and returns, contrite and chastened to the artist. He receives her with open arms.

TIGHTWAD BUYS A LAUNDRY (Feb. 27).—Gink's collars and cuffs are frayed and the collar buttons have to be pried open with an axe. Gink condemns all laundries and the one which undertakes to ruin his underwear in particular. He looks at the bill. Five dollars odd—simply outrageous! Something must be done. Gink sees a circular in the window of a general store—"Great Sale of Pott's Celebrated Automatic Laundry! You turn the crank, the machine does the rest."

The machine arrives and Gink tells Mrs. Gink and the cook that HE will show 'em how to wash. With Mrs. Gink and cookie following with alarm, Gink tears down the curtains from the windows and the sheets from the beds, and secures an assortment of shirts and things which would delight the heart of any Chinese laundry gentleman. Gink dumps all into the machine. He turns the crank and to the shrieks of two distracted females the one perfectly good assortment of linen comes out in rags and ribbons. Gink groans and suggests there may be something wrong. The person who bought the machine returns with a note, stating that by a most regrettable error the driver had delivered an automatic grass cutter by mistake.

THE RIVAL DENTISTS (Feb. 23).—Dr. Payne, a dentist of the old school, is the only one in the small town. Bob Bright, a young dentist with modern methods, arrives to set up in business. Payne uses every device to discredit the young dentist. However, Jane, Dr. Payne's daughter, falls in love with Bob. Jed, the town swell, is also trying to win her hand. Bob decides to teach Payne a lesson. He hires a tramp to go to the old doctor's office and assume a raging toothache. The tramp is instructed to yell with all his might as the operation goes on. Dr. Payne pulls and the tramp yells, driving away a half dozen other patients awaiting a similar fate. Finally the old doctor gets a raging toothache himself and he can't stop it. Bob is at the house calling on his daughter. Bob offers to stop the pain if the old man will allow him to marry the girl. Payne refuses and the toothache increases. However, Payne finally consents to the proposition and Bob stops the pain.

REX.

FOR THE FAMILY HONOR (2 parts—Feb. 26).—Hazel has become tired of the sordid life she leads and has sought honorable employment as maid in a wealthy home. Now the leader of the gang to which Hazel had belonged is one Dart, alias the Earl of Stair when moving in better society. As fate would have it this fellow had managed to gain the confidence of the wealthy family and win the hand of Betty, the daughter. Betty's brother is Bob, a big good-hearted fellow. Hazel secretly raises her eyes to him and loves him. Bob, on the other hand, is favorably impressed with the new maid, unaware of her former identity. Hazel is not familiar with this latest of Dart's intrigues and she is terrified when she meets her recent companion in crime posing as a nobleman and deceiving a good, but vain girl. Dart tries to win Hazel back as his confederate. Failing, he threatens that he will send Hazel's brother to prison if she discloses his identity.

That is the dilemma in which the heroine of this play finds herself; on the one hand is the probability that she will bring pain and shame to the family, and particularly the man she loves, and on the other is the probability of losing the man she loves and her brother if she informs. Putting the girl on her guard would mean disclosing her own identity. She adopts a clever scheme, knowing that the other girl is entering the room soon, Hazel allows Dart to kiss her. The sister breaks off the engagement and explains the reason to Robert, who heretofore has trusted Hazel implicitly. Dart returns to his old haunts and shortly afterward is killed in a battle with the police. Robert reads in the papers of Dart's double life and she shows the paper to Hazel. She can no longer restrain her emotions; she confesses why she allowed Dart to fondle her. Robert forgives and happiness follows for all.

NESTOR.

BREED O' THE MOUNTAINS (Feb. 25).—Joe Mayfield and Sue Jarvis are the children of two families in the Blue Ridge Mountains, which have been at variance for years. Brady, Dorothy's brother, has had an affair with a simple mountain maid. She, unable to care for the child, lays it with a note, at what she thinks is Brady's door. In reality, she has taken it to Mayfield's cabin. He finds it, but out of love for Sue, and to spare her the reflected disgrace, he cares for it himself, keeping silent as to its parentage The love between himself and Sue ripens. Sue is ready to forget the feud and marry him.

In order to prevent this, Brady, not knowing whence the child came, accuses Mayfield of being its parent. The accused is silent and Sue turns away. Mayfield, in the meantime, is unable to stand the fruits of injustice and the taunts of Brady. He tells Brady the true parentage of the child. Brady is softened. He tells Mayfield he is going to find its mother and "Make it right." He seeks out his sister and explains to her the injustice he has done the man she loves. Sue turns to Mayfield and in the happy moment which follows, feuds and family differences are forgotten.

ONE OF THE FINEST (Feb. 27).—Patrolman Crane is the pride of the force His daughter, Bess, has a lover, one Terry McCabe, who is out of work. Crane disapproves of McCabe and forbids him seeing Bess. It so happens one night that a Mr. Epstein, who lives on Crane's beat, surprises a burglar in his house. The robber escapes after Epstein gets a good look at him. Crane takes up the trail of the burglar. He stumbles upon McCabe, and as he answers Epstein's description, arrests him. But McCabe refuses to be the "goat" and escapes.

Crane returns home and tells Bess what happened. Bess takes his revolver, club and helmet and goes in search of her late sweetheart. She surprises McCabe and takes him to the police station. The following morning Epstein is summoned to identify the burglar. He insists that McCabe is not the man. McCabe swears to the chief that he can capture the true offender. All laugh, but he is given the opportunity. To the astonishment of Crane and the chief, McCabe leads in Boston Billy, a notorious crook for whose capture $500 reward is offered. He is identified as the burglar by Epstein. Terry receives the reward, and is given a place on the police force. With the reward money, and a steady job, Patrolman Crane forgives Terry and consents that he marry Bess.

VICTOR.

REMEMBER MARY MAGDALEN (Feb. 23).—Repentant of the mistake of her innocent girlhood, the worn-out woman returns to the town of her birth; to the only ones to whom she can turn in her extremity—her parents. She finds them in the graveyard. As she walks through the streets the villagers shun her. The news is rapidly passed that the Magdalen has returned. The grey beards are indignant that she should blast the fair name of their town by her presence there. The citizens' committee calls upon the new minister and instructs him to order the woman out of town. The minister carries his message, but the woman tells him it is her house and she shall stay there. The young minister is struck with the woman and the sincerity of her repentance. He remonstrates with the gossips. He returns to the woman and comforts her. In the meantime, the citizens have gathered to trumpet her out of their village. Hearing some approaching, the minister, fearing to arouse further scandal, steps into her house. The woman bravely goes out to meet her assailants, and they begin to jeer at her and stone her, until the minister defends her. The unoffending half-witted fellow is hit with a brick and killed. And there is a suggestion of a future bond of sympathy between the Magdalen and the minister.

THE STEPMOTHER (2 parts—Feb. 27).—At the beginning of the story we find Matt and Hazel in love. Flo realizes this and takes it much to heart as she too loves Matt. However, this does not alter her friendship for Hazel. When the wedding takes place Flo is the bridesmaid, though her heart is almost broken. Their union being blessed with two tots. Matt is a successful broker, and through all the years Flo remains a constant friend.

Hazel becomes ill. The doctor declares her malady fatal. She bravely faces the inevitable, her thoughts being only of the children. She tells Flo and Matt of her fears and requests them to marry so that the children will have a mother. Flo consents to this. Flo and Matt marry. Time elapses. Flo's jealousy is aroused by Matt's devotion to the children. It leads her to believe that Matt is indifferent to her. Life becomes unbearable. Finally one day, the eldest child becomes ill with a contagious disease. Flo decides to leave the house. On her way out she finds the younger child alone in the hall, having been deserted by the nurse and the rest of the servants. This arouses her finer senses. Rushing back, she takes the sick child to her room. The doctor quarantines the patient from the outside world.

The child recovers, due to Flo's devotion. The quarantine is lifted and Matt is admitted. Flo, having done her duty, is about to leave. Matt assures her that he has always loved her and the sacrifice she has just made awakened a new and stronger love. Feeling now that her love is requited, Flo consents to stay. She has been able to prove herself a real wife and mother and now finds her promise to Hazel turned to pleasure as well as duty, for she loves and is loved.

IMP.

THE TOUCH OF A CHILD (2 parts—Feb. 23).—Paul Vivian, a rich American artist, is sojourning in Paris with his sister when the latter is suddenly taken ill. A French doctor is called in on the case. Just at this time Paul is the victorious principal in a fatal duel; he has to leave the country. A thief whom Paul had incurred the enmity of, is a witness of the duel gives the dead man's brother (a noted French doctor) a wrong version of the quarrel and the consequent fatality. The brother swears to kill the man who has killed his brother. Paul's sister in the course of time recovers, and marries the doctor who has brought about her recovery. The doctor is none other than the brother of the man that Paul has killed, but neither the sister, doctor, or Paul are aware of it. Paul goes to South America, where he remains for five years. The doctor and his wife move to New York. Five years elapse. Paul returns to his own home. On the way to his sister's house he saves a little girl from being killed by an automobile. It is his sister's child whom he has saved. In the course of time the child learns to love Paul. Maurice (the doctor) has acquired an immense practice, has everything to make him happy, but notwithstanding, grows more melancholie. At last his grief reaches such a stage that he informs them that it is because of a vow he made, to kill the man who had killed his brother, and had as yet never fulfilled. When Maurice tells them of the circumstance, and shows them the foil, Paul knows it is he whom Maurice means, but that he, Maurice, had been grossly misinformed as to the cause, and the manner of the killing. When he tells him the real truth of the circumstances Maurice will not listen to him, but insists on an immediate meeting on the field of honor. Paul sees that his brother-in-law is bent on killing him, and at last agrees to a duel of a novel nature, and that is the both of them shall sit on the sofa, neither of them speaking, and the first that little Mimi (Maurice's child) shall touch when she enters, that one shall take the revolver and kill himself. They

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO.
Manufacturers of
SEEBURG PHOTOPLAYER
Write for "Art Catalogue."
Republic Bldg. 209 S. State St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

THE CONSPIRACY OR A $4,000,000 DOWRY

IN FOUR PARTS

During the Action of the play the Spectator is carried through a succession of startling and surprising episodes, culminating in a gigantic fire scene in which the arch villainess is consumed in the flames.

THE GIGANTIC RECORD-BREAKING PRODUCTION OF

JOAN OF ARC
THE MAID OF ORLEANS

PLAYING TO CAPACITY AUDIENCES EVERYWHERE. A REAL OPPORTUNITY TO PLEASE YOUR PATRONS

COMING—A BIGGER PRODUCTION THAN THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII

THE TRIUMPH OF AN EMPEROR "IN HOC SIGNO VINCES" "By This Sign You Will Conquer"

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION

110 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

BRANCH OFFICES

NEW YORK	DETROIT	INDIANAPOLIS	CINCINNATI	BUFFALO	NEW ORLEANS
PHILADELPHIA	MINNEAPOLIS	CHICAGO	PITTSBURG	ST. LOUIS	WASHINGTON
CLEVELAND	BOSTON	KANSAS CITY	ATLANTA	DALLAS

hear the little girl coming, both take their places and wait. She enters and, as neither one will speak, thinks they are playing some new game, so running behind the sofa, throws her arms about both their necks. Maurice now sees that fate has intervened and a reconciliation between him and his brother-in-law ends the story happily.

ROUNDING UP BOWSER (Feb. 26).—Bowser, after his other troubles of the two previous comedies goes daffy and is discovered at the commencement of this in a cell. He imagines he is Julius Ceasar. He twists the bars about and escapes from the asylum. Keepers pursue him and post a reward of $50 for his capture. Rubes start in pursuit. Bowser evades them. Ernest and May are lovers. Her father disapproves of him. They arrange for her to elope. The old man pursues in a car. Daffy Bowser comes from the wood and holds up the old man. He changes clothes with him and leaves the furious millionaire on the road dressed as Julius Ceasar. The nut autos away. The rubes see the old man and pursue. The lovers arrive at a Justice of the Peace and the marriage ceremony begins. The nut autos up, sees a cannon and explosives left in a shed by the retired volunteers and fires, being married in and the wall falling in, they are covered by the debris. The nut fastens the cannon to his auto and motors away. Meanwhile the father, dressed as Julius Ceasar, has been chased by the rubes. They capture him, tying him to a plank. They find they have the wrong man. They release him. The nut autos up and fires a shot at the asylum. The walls fall in. The father, still dressed as Julius Caesar, thinks all the others are after him. The nut stumbles, the father falls over him and is captured. The lovers come up and the old man, still dressed as Julius Caesar, forgives. The shock cures Bowser.

FRONTIER.

SLIM BECOMES A COOK (Feb. 26).—The cook of the Flying W. is run out of the country. The boys elect Slim as temporary cook. His first efforts are awful. The boys impress it upon him that a repetition of such a meal will result in a painful death. Slim seriously considers abandoning that part of the country until Bridget, who claims to be some cook, puts in an appearance and is hired. Slim, however, conceals her presence from everybody. As a result Slim's life is spared, and the Flying W. fares well. Slim sees a chance to win Molly, and notifies all the boys that they have the alternative of ceasing their suit or starving.

The boys reject the proposition, but later, half famished, they accept it. Slim is getting in strong, until Augustus, a traveling jewelry drummer, hits the town. Augustus comes to Slim's boarding house, sees Molly, and wins her favor. Bridget meanwhile tells Slim of her love for him, and to prevent her from informing the boys of his duplicity, he agrees to marry her. Augustus proposes to Molly, but she seems to prefer Slim and rejects him. This, however, is unknown to Slim, who schemes to drive Augustus away. He doses his food with red pepper in such a quantity that it brings tears to the drummer's eyes. Molly returns, sees the tears, and her womanly heart is touched. She decides to accept him, and does so just as Slim comes in. Slim upbraids Molly, and Bridget, in the kitchen, hears him, comes in and demands an explanation from her betrothed one. The boys arrive, want to know who Bridget is.

SO SHALL YE REAP (Feb. 28).—Willis resents Arthur's attentions to Edythe, the more so when he discovers Edythe favors the stranger. Jose and Pedro are still bitter enemies. Pedro bests Jose in a fight and only Willis's timely interference saves Jose from being knifed. Later, Willis meets Jose running through the brush and learns that he has shot and killed Pedro. Seeing Arthur's approach gives Willis an idea. The two attack him from ambush, fire a shot from his gun and place him in a dazed condition, by Pedro's body. The sheriff chances by and finds Arthur with Pedro. Arthur is arrested. The evidence against him seems conclusive, and he is sentenced to life imprisonment.

Willis ardently courts Edythe, until she finally consents to marry him. Shortly after Jose is seriously wounded by a fall. His gratitude goes out to Edythe, who finds him laying on the road senseless. The wedding day approaches. Jose, feeling that he is about to die, sends for the padre. The padre persuades him to confess. At the last moment the sheriff arrests Willis, just as the marriage is about to take place, and later Willis, in his prison cell, as he sees Edythe in the arms of Arthur, realizes that "as ye sow, so shall ye reap."

GOLD SEAL.

CAPTAIN JENNY, S. A. (Three parts—Feb. 24).—Jim, a good fellow at heart, is thrown off by his uncle, a banker, and compelled to shift for himself. As nothing else offers, he becomes a member of a life-saving crew at the seaside resort. Here it is we have the first thrilling incident that speaks highly of Mr. Turner's ability as a producer of realism. It is the saving of a girl from drowning. Jim warns a young woman bather against a dangerous undertow. Heedless of his warning, she goes beyond her depth and is carried out into the lashing surf. Jim dashes in and saves her. His deed is the occasion for a pleasant intimacy and they soon learn to love each other. Lucy, the girl, is at the seaside for her health and lives with a widow and her invalid daughter.

Lucy has a sister in the city, Jenny, a captain in the Salvation Army. News despatches arrive daily telling of the massacre of Christians in a Boxer uprising in China. The Salvation Army calls for volunteers to go to the relief of those in danger, and Captain Jenny is offered a command. Jim is notified that his uncle is dying. He leaves his sweetheart, promising to return immediately. Shortly after his departure the invalid girl dies and Lucy returns to the city, where she joins her sister. Having inherited his uncle's fortune, Jim returns. Approaching the house, he asks for Lucy. "The girl was buried four days ago," is the reply.

Believing his life wrecked, Jim again goes in for dissipation. One evening he is in a saloon when Captain Jeny enters, selling "The War Cry." One of the men attempts to be familiar and Jim interferes. Subsequently he becomes interested in her and one evening when fire breaks out in the Salvation Army hall, he fights his way through the flames and saves her life. In the meantime Lucy has written to the life-saving station, asking information of Jim. In answer to her inquiry she learns that Jim has left there and that his whereabouts are unknown. Lucy, however, confides the story of her love to Captain Jenny. Captain Jenny is still firm in her determination to respond to the call of mercy and goes to China. However, when Jim asks her to be his wife, she reconsiders and resigns from the army. Preparation for the wedding is made. On his way to his bride, Jim reads placards before a motion picture theater advertising "Life Savers at Work and at Play." He brings Captain Jenny to the theater.

Captain Jenny sees the motion picture in which Jim rescues Lucy and she recognizes the girl as her sister. Jim tells her of his love affair with the girl whose life he saved. After Jim leaves her, Captain Jenny dresses herself again as a Captain in the Salvation Army. She packs her things and leaves a note for Jim. It reads:

The girl you thought dead is my sister, Lucy.
Crown her with the happiness you offered me,
The light of Heaven points my way to China.
Pray that peace may soon rest in the heart of Captain Jenny.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 101 (Feb. 11).—41 Lives Lost at Sea.—Steamship "Nantucket," which rammed the Steamship "Monroe," sinking her and causing terrible loss of life. Many deeds of heroism were enacted.—Norfolk, Virginia.

Universal City Flooded.—Over two feet of water caused by terrific rain storms create great havoc at the Western home of the Universal Film Mfg. Company, destroying stages, scenery and properties.—California.

London's Lord Mayor and Cripples.—Sir Thomas Bowater and other notables bring cheer to crippled paupers.—London, England.

City Is Lighted by Flames.—Largest sawmill on the Pacific Coast burns at midnight, causing loss of $300,000.—Portland, Oregon.

Fashions.—Evening gowns of soft clinging materials are contrasted with those of stiff taffetas and nets. Made from Ladies' Home Journal Patterns.

Mystic Shriners of the South Celebrate.—Comical antics of Masons on parade cause great amusement in Augusta, Ga. Sub-title—Ty. Cobb, Champion Ball Player, at wheel.

Suffragettes Call Upon President Wilson.—Another unsuccessful attempt is made to obtain recognition from the Nation's Chief Executive.—Washington, D. C.

Forced Into the Military Service.—March of twenty thousand conscripted recruits through the City of Melbourne, Australia.

Inaugural Ceremonies at Richmond.—Governor-elect Henry C. Stuart, of Virginia, takes oath of office amid great pomp and military parade.

Last Tribute Paid to Jewish Actor.—Prominent men act as pall-bearers and 50,000 followers gather to see for the last time their beloved comedian, the late Sigmund Mogulesko.—New York City.

Cartoons by the World Famous Caricaturist.—Hy. Mayer.

ECLAIR.

THE DEVIL FOX OF THE NORTH (2 parts—Feb. 25).—Accompanied by her maid, Madame Callaber leaves her disappointed suitors and goes to Northwestern Canada—to Crawford Camp. Her first experience on arriving at the hotel, which is a combination of saloon, lounging room and restaurant, is amusing and gives a key to what is to follow.

Arsene, a fine-looking trapper of the region, is one of the first to see her; he secrets himself. Unused to the society of woman. And there is Red Charley, a desperate outlaw of the camp, who tries to make the girl sing. She gamely refuses and soon we find her the idol of the camp. This earns her the jealousy of a few gossiping women.

One day an Indian girl tells the song-bird the story of "The Devil Fox of the North." The tradition of the Northern woods has it that he who kills the fox will shortly feel the hand of death. The singer's curiosity is aroused. In meeting Arsene one day, she asks him to secure for her the fox skin. After several vain attempts he succeeds in shooting the coveted animal. Red Charley tries to steal it from him and present it to the girl himself. But the Indian prevents and pays with her life. The singer, though loving Arsene in the depth of her heart, decides to leave. Arsene, in his rough and elemental way, is shaken with grief and begs to go with her. She explains how impossible it is and leaves him, softened strangely by the effects of his hidden, but great love.

Later, acting on impulse, he follows her to the city. She receives him and unable to restrain his primitive and passionate love, he seizes and kisses her roughly. She does not resist, but suddenly a vast difference between their lives and social positions strikes him and he leaves for the woods. A few days later, unable to restrain her overpowering love for her strong man, the singer decides to visit the Northwest—but it is too late. The trapper, sorely grieved at the loss of her, has gone on a long, last journey. A few days later his body is found lying face downward in the cold snow and the people of the camp look upon his death as a vengeance justly visited upon the head of he who had dared to kill the "Devil Fox of the North."

THE HEART OF CARITA (March 1).—In a town of the Southwest, a band of cattle thieves, led by old Juan have carried their depredations to such a stage that the whole country side is aroused. Juan has a beautiful daughter, named Carita. She is not in sympathy with her father's lawless pursuits.

One day she is sent to receive money from one of the band, who is waiting at the crossroads. On the way through town, coming back, she takes a small amount of money and purchases a shawl. Wearing it back to the old outlaw and his followers, she gives him the money. His watchful eye notes the new finery and he flies into a rage, Dragging the girl from her horse he cruelly whips her.

Meanwhile Ray Roberts, the new sheriff, arrives with his mother. Suffering agonies, Carita manages to drag herself along the road. The new sheriff's mother happens to be riding by. She alights, lifts the girl into her carriage and brings her home. The young sheriff is struck by the girl's fresh beauty and is filled with sympathy for her suffering. Under their kind care she soon recovers, and the friendship between her and Roberts ripens into love. Her father receives her with a cruel beating, and she is then made virtually a prisoner. The next day she overhears a plot between old Juan and Antonio, one of his followers, who is madly in love with her, to do away with the sheriff. They send Roberts a letter purporting to come from Carita, asking that he meet her at 12 o'clock that day. The sheriff receives the note and rides over to meet her. Carita manages to steal one of the horses and reach the sheriff's house. His mother tells her where he has gone. The plucky little Mexican girl dashes off. Meanwhile Roberts walks into the trap, but scents something wrong just in time to make a dash for an old stone barricade, behind which he takes refuge. A hot pistol battle takes place. They succeed in wounding him and ride off, leaving him for dead. Shortly after Carita comes upon her lover. She lifts him into the saddle and rides back with him to his mother's house. A doctor is summoned. Carita steals away. Discovering her absence, Roberts sends the doctor after her. Entering the room she runs with a cry of delight into her lover's arms.

KOMIC.

THAT SPRING LOCK (Feb. 12).—Bob Smith is a very much bossed man. His wife runs the house and he does all the work. One day when she is going out to the milliner's, she leaves him at home to do the housework and clean the windows. While out she buys a hat and has it sent home. The boy arrives with the parcel just at the time Bob is seated on the window sill cleaning. Hearing the bell of the apartment ring Smith leaves his task and goes to the door. While he is receiving the box on the landing of the stairs, a sudden wind from the open window blows the door shut and as there is a spring lock on the door, Smith is locked out. He puts the box down and rings the bell of the opposite apartment where the Strongs live and asks Mrs. Strong's permission to climb out the window of her apartment and climb in his own. She consents. Smith gets into his apartment all right, but his curiosity about the hat box when he gets it in his hands detains him on the landing again and again the door blows shut. So he is compelled to go through the same course. While he has the box with him in the Strong apartment Mrs. Strong asks him to show her the bonnet. He does so, and while this is going on Mr. Strong, who bosses his wife, arrives from the barbers and not having his key is about to knock on the door, but hearing voices he looks through the keyhole and sees Smith admiring Mrs. Strong in the new bonnet. In a jealous rage he breaks in the door and after tearing the bonnet to pieces he pursues Smith and is about to murder him when Mrs. Smith arrives. Things are explained. The Strongs retire to their rooms and the Smiths find their door is again locked. So they have to break in the door and are made to forget their anger by seeing the damage they have wrought on that spring lock.

THE PLUMBER AND PERCY (Feb. 12).—Old Moke goes away from the house to the station accompanied by his pretty wife. She leaves him at the grocery store, and continues on. Upon returning to the house she is accosted by a masher named Percy, who follows her to the very door of her room, and finding the door open walks straight in. Mrs. M. is just telling her maid of

ERNEMANN

Model B

It's the only machine for the experienced camera man. Unexcelled for workmanship and mechanism.

Model B

Known all over the civilized world. Film capacity, 400 feet. Fitted with Double Anastigmat F: 3.5, 2 inch focus. Sold at any dealer's.

Send for free Catalog

Price with one lens, $300.00 With three lenses, $374.50

When you buy a Motion Picture Camera ask for an Ernemann Model B, and refuse inferior make

Photo-Kino Works ERNEMANN Photo-Kino Works

114 Fifth Avenue NEW YORK 114 Fifth Avenue

Telephone 7643 Chelsea

"A MARRIAGE OF CONVENIENCE"

In three parts. A wonderful dramatic offering, with a unique story in perfect photography. Featuring Enid Markel, who played the lead in "The Mexican Rebellion." Write or wire for state rights.

"THE MEXICAN REBELLION"

In three parts. Territory sold: Conn., Del., D. C., Ill., Iowa, Kan., Me., Md., Mass., Mich., Mo., Neb., N. H., N. J., N. Y., Okla., Pa., R. I., Va., Vt., W. Va., E. Canada. For open territory address

AMMEX M. P. MFG. CO.

H. J. STREYCKMANS, Sales Mgr.

CANDLER BUILDING NEW YORK CITY

her terrible fright when Percy appears. They rush into the kitchen frightened out of their wits, and Percy hides. The maid remembers a plumber who is working inside and they call to him for protection. He comes up the ladder and agrees to help the two unfortunate women. About this time Old Moke who has missed his train, returns to the house and the plumber mistaking him for the intruder throws him out roughly. Moke then goes to the back of the house and perceiving the ladder decides to climb in the window. He does so and is again forcibly ejected. He then thinks of a plan to get in and has himself locked in a box and carried in by two expressmen. He gets in all right and the plumber is again about to throw him out when his wife sees who it is and an explanation takes place. Percy, who has been in hiding, tries to make a getaway, but is caught by the plumber and Moke and hustled in the box and thrown out the window, winding up his flirtation by a long drop and a sudden stop at the bottom, which we hope will teach him, in the future to be properly introduced.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

AMERICAN.

THE DREAM CHILD (2 parts—Feb. 23).—John Reynolds and Hiram Williams have been partners for years. John Reynolds has a daughter, Vivian. Hiram Williams has a son, Jack. It was the ambition of their lives to see their children married to each other.

When Jack is twenty, his father dies, leaving him under the guardianship of John Reynolds. A few months after the death of his father, Jack bids good-bye to Vivian, a young girl of sixteen, who promises to be his wife on his return, and goes to Europe to study art. When the four years are about up Vivian meets George Haldane, a man about town, with very little character. She falls in love. Jack returns. Vivian tells him of her love for George. Vivian and George are secretly married. Old John Reynolds disowns Vivian. Jack goes back to Europe. When Vivian's child is three months old George deserts her for a former love and goes West. Vivian appeals to her father for help, but is spurned.

Vivian has to take in sewing. The child thrives. John Reynolds has become embittered against the world. He is sitting, one day in his home, when he sees a child in tattered clothes walk up along the path that leads to his home. He seizes the child. The child shows no fear. As the child is going down the walk there is a transfiguration, instead of the child with ragged clothes, John Reynolds sees a child in loose, seamless red garment, with crown of thorns on his head and a cross of wood on the tender shoulders. He realizes he has seen a vision. His heart becomes softened. He sends for his lawyer and institutes a search for his daughter. Not having any success he starts in search of the dream child, who has since visited him. He finds the dream child to be his own grandchild. In the end old John Reynolds gains the love of his little grandchild and Jack and Vivian are at last united.

THE CARBON COPY (Feb. 28).—John Allen, a building contractor possessed of orthodox ideals of the standard of womanhood, finds his theories exploded by the deportment of his sister. His mother also is modernized and a sore disappointment. His confidence in women in general is shaken, and whether in business or social life he seems to be destined to live the life of a hermit.

Grey & Son, wishing to underbid Allen on a contract, send their stenographer, Agnes, to get a position in his office, and steal the bid. Allen, disappointed in women, believes Agnes different, and they fall in love, Agnes deciding to break her word to Grey. Allen seeing her with Grey, jumps at conclusions, and tells her no woman is trustworthy, which forces her to keep her word, and take a carbon copy of the bid. She discovers later that in her hurry she puts the carbon in wrong, making no copy, confesses all to Allen. Her frankness and full confession cause him to experience a change of heart and the story concludes with the two principals in a fond embrace.

BEAUTY FILM.

THE SACRIFICE (Feb. 18).—Harry, an adopted son, who had just announced his engagement to Edith, finds that his brother, Jack, the only son of Harry's foster parents, has forged a check, and to save the mother the knowledge that her only son was a forger, takes the blame. Edith turns away from him and his foster father orders him from the house. Later, Harry has wandered down to the sea and has lost his identity among the Italian fisher folk. Marie, one of the fisher girls, is engaged to Antonio, who has won her father over by gifts of various kinds. Marie talks to Harry, which makes Antonio angry. Antonio tells the father and the father tries to induce Marie to marry Antonio immediately, but she refuses, and throwing down the string of beads which Antonio had given her as a peace offering, she runs down to the beach and tells Harry. Antonio sneaks behind and tries to stab Harry with a knife, but they struggle and Harry overcomes him. Marie suggests as a way out of the difficulty, that Harry marry her. Harry, believing himself an exile forever, assents and they are married.

Seven years later, Harry is a fisherman and Marie is his wife. They have a little son about six years old and are happy. One day, a lawyer comes to Harry with a letter from his father, saying that Jack had died, confessing his guilt, and that Harry is now the sole heir. Harry is at first overjoyed, but thinking of his wife and little boy, says he cannot go. His mother, who has awaited her son's coming on the smack, can wait no longer and she goes up to the cottage. She meets her son and pleads with him to come home to his own. He introduces his wife and little boy that she may see he cannot possibly go. She pleads with him to let her take the little boy back with her and educate him. He agrees to this, but Marie, sobbing, grabs the child to her breast. Later, however, when Marie sees Harry and Edith together, realization comes to her that she is in the way of Harry's future, and so she fixes the boy up for his long journey and after a tearful farewell, Harry takes the boy with him to the steamer's boat at the water's edge, and kissing him good-bye, watches the boat go out. Marie stands in the door of her shack and watches her boy go away, her whole body shaken by sobs. Later, Marie writes a letter to her husband and goes down to the beach, and getting into a boat, pushes out. Harry comes from watching the steamer away out on the horizon, which carries his boy back to his own country, and entering his shack, finds the note fr omMarie, that she realizes she is in the way and is leaving. Harry goes in search of her. Next morning, at dawn, Harry and Harry's father come on to an empty boat, in which are Marie's shawl and a few of her play things. She had made the sacrifice.

THE PROFESSOR'S AWAKENING (Feb. 25).—Professor Blake is engaged in writing a great scientific work that shall startle the world. He becomes so absorbed in his task that he neglects all other matters, to the exasperation of his married sister, with whom he lives. Wearied by her continual reproaches on his bachelor state, and urgent counsels to marry, he leaves the house secretly and moves into a fisherman's hut near the sea, where he can work undisturbed. Here he becomes unconsciously interested in the fisherman's daughter until a catastrophe would have destroyed, except for the girl's bravery, the labor of years.

Disfigured, perhaps for life, the girl's self-sacrifice jars him from his self-centered frame of mind, and unable to concentrate his mind upon his work, he loses all interest in his labors, and aroused by the depth of his feelings for the girl, he begs her to marry him. At first, doubtful of the survival of his love, over her disfigurement, she at first refuses him, but later she is convinced of his love and accepts him.

THANHOUSER.

THE SKATING MASTER (Feb. 15).—The skating master was young, but extremely haughty, for he had won his position by defeating all the other boys of the village in a free-for-all race, and he believed that because he was such a good skater he was superior to all his associates in everything. Unfortunately for him one of the victims of his overbearing disposition was a resourceful small boy who determined to get even. His time came when the skating master became infatuated with the belle of the village and managed to temporarily eclipse the young man who had long loved her.

The youngster decided that the way to punish the skating master was to make him ridiculous, and to carry out his plan he induced the belle's suitor to challenge the skating master to a race on the ice. The suitor did not have much hopes of the outcome, but the small boy promised him, in the most solemn manner, that the skating master would lose. The boy was a good prophet, for on the day of the race, the skating master flopped down on the ice in the most amazing fashion, and was utterly unable to skate at all, while the other man calmly and easily sailed into victory.

The village belle dropped the skating master from that moment. He had made himself ridiculous and that ended his chances with her. The other man was restored to favor and the small boy was thoroughly happy at the outcome. When asked why the skating master was defeated, he said there were two reasons: one was that he is wicked, and the wicked are always punished; the other is that I sneaked into his house and dulled his skates!

A LEAK IN THE FOREIGN OFFICE (Feb. 17).—To all who knew him, Lord Trevor was a carefree English nobleman, fabulously wealthy and the friend of royalty. No one suspected him of being a diplomat, but in reality he was the shrewdest agent the English government ever had and was constantly foiling attempts of diplomats of other countries to injure the fame of England. In all his exploits he was assisted by his ward, Nan Tremain, daughter of Trevor's old army chum, who, when he died, had left the girl as a trust to the man he loved above all others.

A leak in the foreign office was one of the adventures in which the identity of the diplomatic free lance was nearly revealed. A society woman, who found herself terribly involved financially, agreed to become spy for Germany, and plied her arts on a young foreign clerk named Desmond. The woman, a Mrs. Benham, exercised hypnotic power over Desmond, and while he was unconscious, learned from him secrets that in his conscious moments he would never have revealed to a soul. Desmond was one of the few men who knew the real truth about Trevor, and he confessed it to the treacherous woman. Nan saved her guardian, however, and after a thrilling battle, in a lonely wireless station, the secret was again buried, and the identity of the diplomatic free lance still remained as much a mystery as it had been before.

MAJESTIC.

THE ORANGE BANDIT (Feb. 15).—Ezra Denham, a wealthy old rancher, prides himself upon his splendid oranges, which are considered the best in all Southern California. Two young men, motoring through the country, invade the orchard and help themselves to the fruit. Denham, seizing a shot gun, pursues them. One of them escapes, while the other young man, Jack Ainsley, is helped to safety by Mary, Denham's daughter. In a mischievous frame of mind, she terms Ainsley the "orange bandit."

Mary visits friends and there meets the "orange bandit" again. Their acquaintanceship ripens into love, but Denham recognizes in his daughter's suitor the "orange bandit," and refuses his consent. Fearing an elopement, he starts for the home of a maiden sister, who can be relied upon to guard Mary closely. A reckless "joy rider" upsets the old man's plans. Defying the speed laws, a country constable telephones ahead to have the reckless motorist arrested. In the meantime, "the joy rider," fearing arrest, changes licensed numbers with Denham. The latter is arrested and clapped into jail, leaving Mary alone.

Jack opportunely arrives and the two lovers seize the opportunity to get married while Denham is powerless to interfere. The guilty motorist is arrested, but when Mary's father is freed she has become Jack's wife, so that all that is left for him is to say, "Bless you, my children," and he does so with as good grace as possible.

THE CLERK (Feb. 17).—John Gray was the confidential clerk of William Hendricks, a banker, who had amassed considerable wealth by various dubious methods. The clerk did not approve of his employer's business methods, but lacked the courage to seek another position. Into Gray's life came his first romance in the person of the new office stenographer, a pretty young girl. She accorded him a frank liking, and he dared to dream of the time when she would be his wife. His masterful employer, however had noticed the girl's attractions, and flattered her by his attentions, and she became his wife. The clerk, his romance blasted, yet felt that her future would be far more secure as the banker's wife.

As the years passed the business of the firm declined, and to save himself from ruin the banker defrauded his creditors by concealing parts of his assets. The clerk was an accomplice to the act, and knew that if detected it meant prison for them both. But when Mrs. Hendricks died, alone and neglected, while her husband drank with a boon companion, the mouse-like characteristics of the clerk died, and he became a man. To punish the man who had cared too little for the woman he loved, the clerk revealed evidence which sent his employer to prison, and although it meant his own punishment, he did so gladly, for he had ceased to care for life the day that his loved one died.

THE HIGHER LAW (Feb. 21).—Jack Byrnes, a secret service man, spends his vacation in the Virginia mountains. There he meets Bertha Herman, who, with her father, a famous counterfeiter, is in hiding from the New York police. Byrnes falls in love with Bertha and wants to marry her, but she refuses and goes away, giving as her reason that she is not good enough for an honest mountaineer. Byrnes, being roughly dressed, thinks her mistake is natural. Byrnes is brought back to New York by the secret service to look for Herman and fails to find him. He then puts a notice of his death in the papers and Herman falls for the bait and comes back to New York and Byrnes captures him, but he escapes and Bertha marries Byrnes after all.

BRONCHO.

MARIO (2 parts—Mar. 4).—Mario, a pretty peasant girl, is gathering wood one evening when she meets Richard Kane, an American artist, who, attracted by her beauty, persuades her to pose for him. Different from all the men she has known, Mario falls in love with the artist. Her parents suspect something and one day her father follows her, and sees her in the embrace of the artist. His Latin temperament aroused, he forbids Mario the house and she goes to the artist. They are very happy until a telegram in a language foreign to her comes to him. He hastily leaves, promising to return soon.

Some time elapses. Mario has sold all but one of Richard's paintings to keep a home for herself and child. The landlord demands his rent, but the sale of the remaining picture is not sufficient. A fierce struggle takes place between the two, and the building is set on fire by an overturned lamp. Mario with her child, manages to escape. She asks an old peasant to read the address on the telegram for her and he kindly takes her to the address, which is a grand mansion. She arrives just in time to see the bridal party of Richard and Vivian coming down the stairs. All her jealousy is aroused and she plunges her stiletto into his breast. For this she is to be executed, and that is the story she tells to the priest.

IN THIS FORWARD MARCH OF EVENTS, IT IS NATURAL FOR THE PROGRESSIVE EXHIBITOR TO TURN TO

"THE PEERLESS"—THE DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN—"THE PIONEER"

THE SCREEN DE LUXE ——— THE SCREEN OF QUALITY

SEND FOR CATALOGUE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL PICTURE ON RECORD!
— WITH —
THE LOWEST AMPERAGE ON RECORD!

ARRANGE FOR COMPARATIVE DEMONSTRATION

GENUINE 5 YEAR GUARANTEES AGAINST THE WELL KNOWN DEFECTS OF ALL OTHER SCREENS

DAY AND NIGHT SCREEN, INC., 291 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

NEW YORK—PHILADELPHIA—NEW ORLEANS—ATLANTA—BERLIN—PARIS—LONDON

Special Attention given to the
M. P. Trade on Developers
and Aniline Colors
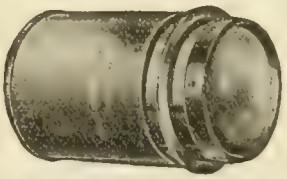
Write for Shade Card and Prices

Berlin Aniline Works
213 Water Street, New York

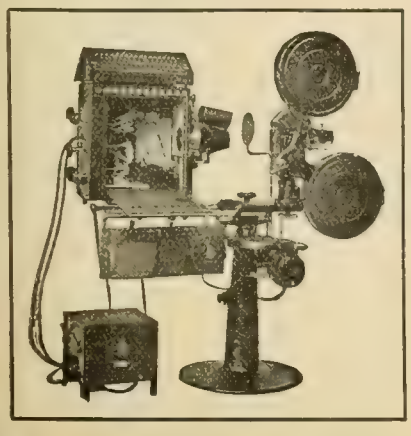


Several Thousand Exhibitors Have Equipped Their Machines with GUNDLACH Projection Lenses Just to Improve Their Pictures

We do not expect you to buy lenses unless you can see with your own eyes that you get a better result. Every lens is sold subject to approval and you can order through your Film Exchange or direct from us. You can get Gundlach Projection Lenses with any machine. The extra charge is a small item.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.



THE APPROVED MOTIOGRAPH

A Machine That Pleases Even The "Hard to Please" Man

WHY?

Because it gives a flickerless and steady picture, and there is never a moment of worry of breakdown which would force you to turn away your audience. This is instantly noticed and appreciated by the Public, who want the best and will go where they get it.

(Buy a MOTIOGRAPH, a Machine of quality, and you will have satisfaction as well as a satisfied audience.)

If you do not know of the MOTIOGRAPH, write for catalogue and get acquainted with the BEST machine made.

Guaranteed and Manufactured by

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Eastern Office: 21 E. 14th St., New York — 564-572 W. Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. — Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco

DOMINO.

THE PLAY'S THE THING (2 parts—Feb. 19).—Clifton Boyle, leading man of a disbanded theatrical company, returns home to find his sister dying. She tells him that she had married Harold Welles, a member of the profession and that he deserted her when her baby died. Boyle swears vengeance as he buries his sister. Later Boyle is the leading man of a company presenting "Count of Monte Cristo," with Harold Welles playing Danglars to his Edmund Dantes. Boyle asks Welles if he knew his sister, but Welles denies being the man. Welles returns to his room and destroys a letter and picture, which is all the evidence he has that would prove he was married to Boyle's sister. He throws the torn letter and picture out of the window. The pieces fall into the hands of Boyle. Being sure of his man now, Boyle kills Welles in the duel scene, but owing to his pretended sorrow over the accident, is exonerated by the Coroner's jury.

KAY-BEE.

THE ARROW MAKER'S DAUGHTER (2 parts—Feb. 13).—Gray Feather, daughter of the Blind Arrow Maker, is in love with White Arrow, son of the Sioux war chief. Gray Feather visits "The Gray Woman of Many Sorrows," the fortune teller of the Sioux, and is warned by a premonition of danger, and tries to persuade her lover not to go on the usual hunt. White Arrow is wounded and Little Elk, believing that White Arrow would die before aid could reach him from his people, determines to apply to a passing wagon train for assistance. The settlers, fearing to gain the enmity of the Sioux, determine to delay the train until White Arrow can be restored to his people. Little Elk, who carried White Arrow to the wagon train, sees an approaching band of Crow hostiles. He tells the settlers to park the wagon train until he can come to their aid with his own people. A fierce fight follows in and around the wagon train, in which the Crows are practically all killed. It is with much gratitude that the settlers bid farewell to their redmen friends while White Arrow and Little Elk return to their own people.

RELIANCE.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (Fifth release—Feb. 16).—The first scene shows Margaret's boudoir with the young lady dressing for the day. In the office of the Cunard Steamship Line the country boy, John Storm, evinces his happiness when he is promoted to a higher position at better pay. He is better dressed and seems to fit in well with his new conditions in life. Margaret and her aunt go driving and as they pass down Fifth Avenue they see Mr. Andrew Carnegie in his gardens. The automobile is stopped and a mutual friend who is driving with the couple introduces Margaret and her aunt to the world's greatest iron master. During this scene, the count is busily engaged in writing a letter of indignation to Margaret's aunt, in which he protests at the apparent rudeness of the country boy on the previous occasion when he was accused of being a smuggler and ends his letter with the request that he be permitted to call and see the ladies.

After leaving Mr. Carnegie, Margaret and her aunt continue to H. Jaeckel & Sons, fur house, where they make an elaborate selection of costly furs. This scene shows the interior of Jaeckel's store at a busy hour. While driving home Margaret sees the country boy approaching and before her aunt is aware of her intent, she stops the car and rushes into his arms, much to the amusement of the public. Shocked by her actions her aunt takes Margaret home and scolds her. The following day, Margaret goes for a saddle ride in Central Park, accompanied by her riding master. An accident to the stirrup of the groom's horse gives Margaret an impulsive idea to run away from him, which she promptly does, and becomes lost in the woods of Central Park. Frightened at his inability to find Margaret, the groom advises the riding academy and Margaret's aunt is so worked up over this that she summons the count and together they visit the riding academy and denounce everybody in general for what they term carelessness on the part of the groom.

Meanwhile Margaret has dismounted and seated upon a stone is crying bitterly over her plight. To her amazement, the country boy appears on the scene. He leads her from the park and takes her home. As the two draw near they are overtaken by the count and Margaret's aunt, who slight the country boy. Margaret is hustled into the house and sent to her room without her supper for her waywardness. Still stubborn, Margaret packs her clothes and determines to run away.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 59 (Feb. 11).—A Millionaire For a Day.—"Butch" McDevitt, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., spends $3,000 in Washington, D. C., in 24 hours.

A Railroad Auto.—Hawaiian railroad uses a Cadillac for track inspection.

A Run On the Bank.—A New York savings institution meets all demands of excited depositors.

A Race Meet in Africa.—An exciting obstacle contest at Megheria, in the south of Algeria.

Music Hath Charms.—Snake tamers of Calcutta, find the flute ample protection.

Ice-Eeling.—Fishermen on the Shrewsbury in New Jersey spear bags full of squirmers.

A Grand Review in Munich.—Army parades on the anniversary of the King's birthday.

The Happy Japs.—Flowery kingdom provides amusement for its kiddies.

Storms Sweep California.—Santa Barbara visited by destructive downpour.

A Theater Fire in Russia.—Great wooden structure destroyed by flames at Krasbnoiarsk.

Winter in Germany.—Skiing a popular sport at Krummhubel.

Go-To-Church Sunday.—Brooklyn, N. Y., successfully institutes a new religious campaign.

Late Arrivals at Sydney Zoo.—Amundsen's dogs and other new inmates on exhibition in Australian city.

A Midnight Blaze.—Great lumber yard destroyed in Portland, Ore.

Suffragette Campaign Waxes Warm.—Dr. Mary Walker and colleagues call on President in Washington.

The Pin-Weight Champion Celebrates.—"Billy" Flynn, premier baby athlete, gives a birthday party in Los Angeles.

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION.

GAUMONT.

OSCAR'S DISAPPOINTMENT (Feb. 5).—Oscar was smitten by the charms of Thelma Eve, and immediately gave chase to her on a bicycle. The young lady was on her way to a croquet match and by a subterfuge Oscar was enabled to obtain admission to the private grounds in which the game was being played. An ubiquitous person, he readily acceded to the request made to him to take part in the game, but it was very clear to the members of the party and to himself, that he could not play croquet, and he returned a crestfallen and very much bruised person. Later Oscar learned that the young lady was the wife of a gentleman with whom she was carrying on an animated conversation. Poor Oscar retired disconsolate, but will probably turn up again before very long pursuing an equally charming young lady.

TINY TIM AND THE LION (Feb. 10).—A lion escaped from a cinema house. The news came to Tim, and as there was a fine rug in an adjoining room made from the skin of a lion, he determined to make the most of a fine opportunity. He placed the skin over his shoulders and frightened the household into hysterics. Then he induced the cook to take his place in the skin. Meanwhile Tim's father had assured his wife and her friends that the lion they saw was not the escaped beast, but quite a different animal. Armed with various articles of furniture the ladies followed the host, who made a diligent search for the boy. They ran the animal to earth in the kitchen, and his father thought the boy deserved a thump with a sweeping brush. But it was the cook who received the blow, and she was not altogether pleased that she was caught "acting the lion" for the amusement of Tiny Tim, who came out of hiding when he saw that the game was up.

SIMPLE SIMON DEALS IN ANTIQUES (Feb. 12).—It is scarcely fair that such a good-natured fellow as Simple Simon should be taken in by a swindler and be subjected to indignities; not only is it unfair, but it is decidedly cruel to submit a man who does not object to anything reasonable to the enforced ordeal of a shower bath until he is washed, not only out of his clothes, but away. That, however, was our hero's undeserved fate.

AN EXCURSION THROUGH OLD PARIS (Second Release—Feb. 12).—This, the second of a series of the old-world quarters and historical monuments of Paris, should give a good insight into both French national history and the beauties of one of the most famous of the capitals of Europe. The film has an artistic as well as an educational value. The church of St. Eustace, one of the most beautiful in the city, was begun in 1532, and among the celebrities buried there are Colbert, Voiture, Benserade and Vaugelas. The Colonnade of the Louvre was built in the reign of Louis XIV, and the gates of St. Denis (1671) and St. Martin (1674) were both erected in honor of that monarch. In consequence of the rustic appearance of its little houses and gardens, Montmartre Hill has always been the rendezvous of artists, to whom St. Vincent Street and the "Jumping Rabbit" Inn are well known. We also see the Pantheon, where magnificent paintings and statues are housed, and the old street, Berthon à Passy, Balzac's house, etc.

LUX.

A COUNTRY GIRL (Feb. 6).—While awaiting the arrival of a mechanic to repair his motor car, which has broken down, Cyril Vernon is hospitably entertained in the cottage of Jack Ponting, an old gentleman, who is possessed of an extremely charming daughter, It is only natural that they should become very good friends. The young people become enamored of each other, and then Cyril's mother arrives upon the scene and reminds him that he is expected to marry his cousin. After a struggle, Cyril gives up his little country sweetheart and returns home. Fortunately the two cousins have a quarrel, which reveals to them how unsuited they are for an alliance. Hence Cyril is released from his engagement and is able to return from the beautiful country lanes and claim his country girl once more.

IN A GRANITE QUARRY (Feb. 6).—An interesting industrial film revealing the mode of obtaining granite block for our buildings. There is possibly no metal with which we are so familiar as this durable building material.

AN ELOPEMENT BY AEROPLANE (Feb. 13).—Hetty is a young lady with an imperious uncle, who will not countenance the suit of Jack, her lover, So strongly does he resent the latter's attention that he locks up his ward in her room and will let no one come near. But Jack conveys a note to Hetty, saying that he proposes to fetch her by aeroplane, and bidding her make preparations. The scenes which follow, showing the approach of the flying machine and the subsequent elopement of the lovers, are very exciting and excellently managed. A final picture shows the outraged uncle dancing in impotent wrath at the trick which has been played upon him.

ANIMAL EXPORT FROM ALGIERS (Feb. 13).—This is an interesting little travel film, giving views of the crowded cattle market, and the shipping of horses and sheep. The quality throughout is very fine, the photography being exceptionally good.

SHORTSIGHTED MISS PRIM (Feb. 20).—Miss Prim is the principal of a school for young ladies, and daily escorts her young charges for a walk. The girls, as all girls do, indulge in flirtations with a party of young fellows, thus taking advantage of Miss Prim's shortsightedness. The boys slyly enter the school one day, and donning the girls' poke bonnets and cloaks, with Miss Prim at their head, set out for a daily walk. They pass a cafe, and while the principal walks on, the boys tarry and have a good time. Miss Prim misses her charges, and eventually finds them at the cafe. Off down the street they go, playing leap-frog with poor Miss Prim in the rear. They reach the school first, hastily discard their bonnets and cloaks and leave, while the irate principal flounders in and makes for the schoolroom, where the girls are demurely sewing. In spite of their assurances that they have not stirred, Miss Prim gives them a severe lecture, while, to make matters worse, the boys look on through the window.

BOATING ON THE SEINE (Feb. 20).—A pretty little scenic film, giving some delightful views of the many sailing vessels to be found during a trip on the Seine. Crafts of all descriptions are to be found, some of them looking exceedingly picturesque. The subject is of very fine quality and is full of interest.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

GORMAN FILM MFG. CO.

THE STAMPEDE OF FATE (Three parts).—Jim Whitney, the son of a wealthy banker, is driven from his home by his parents because he has chosen to follow the pace that kills. Left on his own resources and driven from home, he wanders to the West to forget the past and begin a new life. Vainly he tries to secure employment. His money gives out and he is left alone, penniless, among strangers. He writes to his father for a small loan and pleads forgiveness. His father replies to his letter and accuses him of forging his name to checks. Jim, knowing he is innocent of this grave charge, decides to change his name and forget his parent and home forever. Driven from his lodging for debt, he meets some cowboys, who bring him to their ranch. Arriving there he fortunately meets the ranch owner's daughter, Grace Radcliffe, who takes him to her father and pleads for employment for him. He secures a position on the ranch. A year later, through hard, faithful work, he is made foreman of the ranch. Grace Radcliffe has learned to love him; he returns her love, but tells her he cannot marry her until a false crime he is accused of has been cleared. Grace decides to wait until he can explain. He always refuses to talk of his past and is known only as Smith, the cowboy.

The month of July has been a severe one on the cattle owners. The sun has burnt the grass of the plains and dried the streams. The cattle are dying for want of pasture and water. A sheep-herder on the adjoining ranch drives his sheep onto the Radcliffe pasture without permission. Jim, while out on the plains, discovers the sheep on his pasture, and fearing a stampede orders them driven back. The sheep-herder drives his cattle from the Radcliffe ranch and vows vengeance on Jim. The following day Mr. Radcliffe receives a telegram from J. Whitney, his old friend, whom he has not seen in twenty years, telling him he will visit the Radcliffe ranch on his way East. Jim, not knowing that his father, J. Whitney, knows his em-

Attention! Scenario Writers!

I have a worth while proposition to make all Scenario Writers who are now disposing of their scripts regularly. Write me stating titles of all scenarios you have had produced and by whom; scenarios now sold but unproduced and to whom. This is a bonafide proposition to writers who can produce the goods. Address:

JACK MELCHOIR, care of Moving Picture World, New York, N. Y.

The Famous Players of France

Present to you during the month of February

"THE DIVINE APPEAL"

or

"The Lion Tamer's Revenge"

IN THREE STARTLING ACTS

This is not a circus picture, but a wonderfully thrilling photoplay involving three monstrous lions whose actions stir the very marrow in your bones.

Money-Getting Lithographs
One, Three and Six Sheets

Likewise all kinds of publicizing material to assist you

This is a FEATURE!!!
Wire* for territory you want!

UNION FEATURES, 225 West 42nd St., New York

Are You Wise

to the development of YOUR business? Do you not SEE and FEEL the different changes almost daily? Don't let YOUR BUSINESS get away from you. Give your public an attractive entrance—dress your lobby with artistic hand colored displays as large as 28 inches and then give them a picture of their FAVORITE ACTOR. GET WISE.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 350 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 30 of the most popular Association players, $10.00 per thousand

Photo Post Cards

For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—30 Association Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 350 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.
Special 22 x 28 Hand Colored Pictures of Favorites.

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 350 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights and we will send you a remedy.

The Colosseum in Films

These motion pictures are the first in a gala series of truly educational films entitled

THE GLORIES OF ROME

The pictures were made with special permission of the Italian Government and according to instructions of W. Stephen Bush of The Moving Picture World, who was in Rome at the time. The Vero Educational Society has purchased the negative.

Every point of interest in the immortal edifice is covered in a most entertaining way, bringing back memories of the wonderful days when 80,000 spectators looked down upon the struggles in the arena.

There are four divisions:

I. The Exterior and Entrances, together with views of Rome from different stories of the Colosseum.
II. The Lower Floor and the Arena.
III. The Stories and Lodges.
IV. What was hidden beneath the Arena.

The total length of the pictures is three thousand feet. Title and all printed matter have been prepared by Mr. Bush. The titles are full and exact, and a lecture goes with certain parts of the film. The photography is of a high standard, and portions of the films are suitably tinted. For all further information address

The Vero Educational Society Room 704, World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, City
TELEPHONE BRYANT 578

slayer, Mr. Radcliffe, discovers his father talking to Mr. Radcliffe. Ashamed of being accused of forgery and not wishing to meet his father, he mounts his horse and rides away on the pasture. Deep in thought, he rides on, his horse coming to a sudden stop brings Jim to his senses. He looks up and discovers that the sheep-herder has again entered the Radcliffe pasture and the sheep have wandered among the cattle. Jim is struck dumb in his saddle, horrified as 3,000 wild, frenzied, death-dealing cattle advance toward him. He wheels his horse to ride away and sees his sweetheart, Grace, coming toward the stampede. Jim dashes to her and cries: "My God, the sheep have caused a stampede! Drive for your life!" Grace turns her horse and the race with death starts over the cliffs, rocks and mountains. The frail wagon with Grace is plunging, drawn by two horses which have become unmanageable. On they dash, away from the stampede, with Grace holding on for her life. Jim, who has been left behind, sees the wagon break and the horses pull away from the wagon and dash to ruin in the stampede. Jim spurs his fast failing horse on to Grace. There is no chance for them to escape. He pulls her behind the broken wagon for shelter as 3,000 mad heads of cattle dash onto them, crushing their wagon and burying them beneath the debris.

Jim's father, Mr. Radcliffe and cowboys rush to their aid and tenderly lift them from the mass of broken wheels and wood. Jim's father is overcome at discovering his son and Grace and Jim are gently removed to the house of Mr. Radcliffe, where a reconciliation follows between father and son. Jim reaches for Grace's hand and says, "Now there is nothing to stop us, Grace."

FAMOUS PLAYERS.

HEARTS ADRIFT (Four Parts).—Nina, a little twelve-year-old Spanish girl, is the sole survivor of a shipwreck, which occurs just off one of the South Sea Islands. Clinging desperately to the spar of the ship, Nina, half unconscious, is tossed by the waves upon the beach of this island. The little one survives the ordeal of the shipwreck and the hard life of the uninhabited island, subsisting on a diet of fruit, fish and herbs. The child thrives, makes friends and companions of the birds and beasts of the island, and skilfully contrives crude garments from skins and fibres.

Some years later, a wealthy couple, the Grahams, who are traveling for health and pleasure on their yacht, are also shipwrecked near this island. Their yacht burns, and in the excitement husband and wife are separated, and each fears the other has been lost. Mrs. Graham is put into a boat and her rescue effected, but her husband, like Nina, is washed ashore on the desolate island. Nina discovers his body on the beach, hardly knows what the strange creature is, and seeing him move, timidly runs away. Every night while Graham sleeps, Nina brings him food, which he finds in the morning. One night, puzzled by the strange and regular supply of food, Graham pretends to be asleep and catches Nina. She escapes and flees from him, but later observes that he appears friendly, and finally permits his approach.

One night, in fear of a terrific thunder-storm, Nina runs to Graham's cave for refuge. Graham shields her from the storm. They become friends, companions—and more. Realizing that their lives cannot continue in this manner, Graham tells Nina they must "marry," and he performs an impromptu marriage ceremony, making her repeat the formula of the ritual after him. For a while Graham is a bit remorseful, for his wife's image comes between him and Nina, and he wonders if she is really dead. However, he is eventually forgetful of her, and happy in his love for Nina and their baby. Nina is supremely happy, but one day a boat comes to the lonely island. In it is Graham's wife, still persevering in a heart-breaking search for her husband. There is a happy reunion between the Grahams, while the poor little girl of the island is completely forgotten. But Nina sees the meeting and understands all. Sadly, slowly, she walks away, and when Graham at last turns to look for Nina he sees her poised upon the brow of a cliff, her babe in her arms. Only a moment she stands there, and then leaps to death.

GREAT NORTHERN PREFERRED FEATURES.

A PARADISE LOST (Four parts).—Muriel Yorke has a fond husband, but he is so absorbed in his duties as head of the detective bureau that he has little time to devote to his wife. He is inattentive, not intentionally, but the fact remains that all of Muriel's pretty arts designed to distract him from his work are in vain. Time hangs heavily on her hands: she takes her meals alone, and gradually sinks into a state of melancholy. One evening while in search of recreation, Muriel visits a fashionable cafe unattended, and there meets Eric Le Blanc, a gentleman in manners, but in reality the chief of a band of international conspirators. He introduces himself as the Baron de Corril and Muriel keeps her identity a secret. Their friendship soon ripens into love, but Yorke is so deeply absorbed in his duties that he fails to notice the change that has come over his wife.

In the interim, Le Blanc receives secret information from one of his spies that Inspector Yorke has in his possession a description of every member of the gang and Le Blanc is urged to obtain possession of these at once. This he undertakes to accomplish and breaks into Yorke's house on the same evening. During his search for the incriminating evidence, he comes face to face with Muriel, and for the first time learns her identity. He hides the real purpose of his visit to the house and explains that love had prompted him to follow her from the museum, at which they earlier had held a rendezvous. She aids him to escape, but in the meantime Inspector Yorke has been attracted by strange noises in the house and makes an investigation. He enters his wife's bedroom and finding her apparently asleep, continues his search. He finds finger prints on the door and later identifies them as those of Le Blanc, the conspirator. When Muriel learns that her husband is preparing to raid on the apartment of the conspirator, she hesitates between love and duty and finally decides to warn her lover of his danger. She hastens to his apartments and implores him to escape while there is yet time. She points out that they may both leave the place without being seen, but Le Blanc refuses, and prates that her love has made him a better man, and that he proposes to accept punishment for his crimes and then lead a better life.

In the meantime Yorke has obtained proof of his wife's perfidy, and with two detectives breaks into Le Blanc's apartments. Standing in the center of the drawing-room is the guilty pair awaiting the blow that is about to fall. Inspector Yorke glares scornfully at his wife for a few seconds; then challenges Le Blanc and orders his arrest. As the detectives are taking him from the room Muriel makes a move as if to rescue him, but Yorke grasps her by the wrists, and, after burning her soul with his reproaches, casts her aside as an object unworthy. She is left to her own conscience.

CRITERION FEATURE FILM CO.

THE TRAP (Three parts).—When the story opens the trapper is a boy of twenty. Living at the edge of the forest with his father, he has a strong desire to always be penetrating into the depths of the woods. This arouses the anger of the father, who rebukes his son so severely that he leaves the old man and takes up the life of a hermit in the forest. He supports himself by trapping. In time settlers begin to locate near where he has his lonesome abode, and he is occasionally brought into touch with the settlers.

There is a tract of land near the cabin of the trapper upon which hunting and trapping are forbidden. The trapper has never violated the restriction. Not so, however, with the poacher, one of the settlers, who makes quite a profit by his illicit trapping. Singularly enough not one of the other settlers suspect the poacher, their suspicion resting upon the trapper, who does not mingle with them.

The trapper finds a woman's shawl lying by the roadside. In order to learn to whom it belongs, he takes it to the village store, where he is informed that it is the property of "the girl," one of the settlers, who is now attending a dance in another part of the village.

At the dance hall the trapper is rebuffed, sneered and jeered at on account of his rough appearance. "The girl" finally appears and lays claim to the shawl. Attempting to make her acquaintance, the trapper is attacked by the poacher. He fells him for his interference. At this juncture the trapper is set upon from all sides by the others, but proves to be so good a match for them that he is permitted to leave the place without further molestation. Determining to get rid of the trapper, the poacher and his friends plan to steal one of the latter's marked traps and to place it in a conspicuous position in the private stretch of land.

The trapper has experienced a revulsion in feeling and comes to love "the girl," but being a woodsman of uncouth manner, he is not accustomed to wooing "the girl" in the usual social way, so in order to tell her of his love he takes one of his traps and conceals it on the road which "the girl" takes every day in going to her father with his lunch. Especial care was taken to arrange the device so that it would catch her gently by the ankles. Watching from his place of concealment nearby he sees "the girl" get caught. She faints and he quickly takes her to his cabin, where she is revived. His better nature, which has been lying dormant, relents to the pleadings of the girl and he sets her free.

In leaving the cabin she perceives that the poacher is in the act of stealing one of the trapper's marked traps, and when the latter is called to account for the finding of his trap on the restricted ground, "the girl" clears the situation by telling what she had seen.

The father of "the girl" contends that her story of how she had seen the poacher steal the trap is not the truth, so "the girl," in order to save her good name, marries the trapper. Feeling that he is not entitled to call a woman won under such conditions his wife, the trapper gives her the cabin and everything else and then starts for new hunting grounds, just as night is coming on. Realizing the good qualities of her husband, "the girl" follows his footsteps in the snow until she comes across his camp.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORP.

NEW YORK WEEKLY, NO. 1 (Feb. 3).—Cross country run West Harlem Athletic Club.

Five days' losses in Greater New York reaches three million dollars.

Port Washington, L. I.—$250,000 worth of motor boats burn.

Remains of the $50,000 speed boat "Bullet."

Ruins of Walter's piano factory—loss, one-quarter of a million.

The Valvoline Oil Works burn up.

Fifteen thousand unemployed women in New York City protest to the Mayor.

The people's forum at New Rochelle.

Acting Judge G. Dillon.

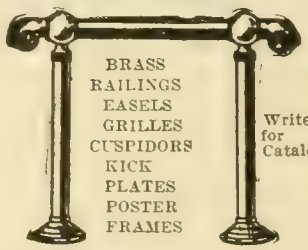
Ex-Judge M. J. Tierney.

Founder of forum, Hon. M. J. Keogh, Supreme Court judge.

Dr. A. Deane, Speaker of the forum.

Governor Fielder's inauguration.

McKENNA



BRASS RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS
KICK PLATES
POSTER FRAMES

Write for Catalog.

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

The Only—
Trade Journal
Moving Picture World

Subscription

Domestic	$3.00
Canada	3.50
Foreign	4.00

We do not want to TELL you about
TRANSPARENT SLIDE INK
We want you to TRY it at our expense. Send for a FREE SAMPLE
CHALMERS-McELROY CO., 5505 South Ashland Avenue, CHICAGO

The
FOTOPLAYER

"The All but Human Orchestra"

is built especially for motion picture houses. Produces beautiful harmony with reed organ, fine playerpiano, together with flute, violin, orchestra bells, drums, tambourines and traps of all kinds. Plays two rolls of music, changed instantly by simple lever. Built to fit the pit. Made by skilled labor with best of materials. Constructed to last and do the work.

The FOTOPLAYER now used by many theatres with great success. Economical to operate. Pays for itself in short time. Pleases the audience and makes the pictures human.

Write Us for Information

AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER COMPANY
Factory and Offices
Berkeley, California

Why Tax Your Mind With Worries?

MIRROROIDE

Is an absolute necessity to your business. Over 7000 MIRROROIDE SCREENS in use. Let us send you our large Free Samples. Test same with the eyes that God gave you. Surely, seeing is believing?

Make us prove our claims. Make us show you that our broadest claims, our broadest statements, are bona fide facts!

Every MIRROROIDE SCREEN sold is backed up with our five-year guarantee

Not to Crack, Peel or Turn Black

Do you realize what this means to you? Do you realize that we have the largest and most extensive plant in the world, backed up by ample capital, experience and facilities?

MIRROROIDE
Is universally known, as is our reputation

Get the best. Prove it by test.

Make us show you why we have sold more MIRROROIDE SCREENS than all others combined.

Won't you let us show you? Surely it costs you nothing.

Get Next, Do It Now!

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc.
NEWBURGH N. Y.

IDEAL! IDEAL! IDEAL!

(COULD ANYTHING BE MORE IDEAL!)

THAN

The All-Stars of Europe

in two SAVOIA productions namely

"FATALITY and MYSTERY"

A perfect photodrama featuring Mlle. Maria Jacobini in 3 acts.

"AN UNKNOWN MONSTER"

A masterpiece in three acts.

Lithographs DeLuxe—one, three and six sheets. Wire in your orders.

FEATURES IDEAL, 227 West 42nd Street NEW YORK

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

ARE you interested in increasing your box office receipts? Are you interested in giving your patrons clear, natural and lifelike pictures, without subjecting them to any glare, or eye strain? If you are, write for particulars about the RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN.

It Will Reduce Your Light Bills Over 50%

IT not only improves your picture wonderfully, but at the same time it allows you to use a lower amperage, thereby cutting your light bills in two and more than paying for itself in a very short time. Write department 17 for complete information.

American Theatre Curtain and Supply Co.
Nulsen Bldg., Olive and 6th Streets, St. Louis, Mo.

G. H. CALLAGHAN
7th floor
Heidelberg Bldg.
New York Office

F. P. BLOOMFIELD
Suite 8-9-10
Hartley Bldg.
Pittsburg Office

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 937
ADRIENNE KROELL 931
"ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN, THE" (Selig) 926
AMONG THE PICTURE THEATERS..... 949
ARCTIC HUNTS 956
AT THE SIGN OF THE FLAMING ARCS.. 961
BELLE RUTLAND 958
"BENEATH THE CZAR" (Solax)..... 952
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES. . . 984
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES . 986
CHICAGO LETTER 959
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed) .. . 946
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent).. 947
CORRESPONDENCE 978
"DEATH OF A GEISHA, THE" (Eclectic)... 933
EDWIN MILTON ROYLE..... 930
FACTS AND COMMENTS..... 923
FEATURE FILM STORIES.....1022
FILMS IN EDUCATION OF ADULTS..... 924
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES..... 935
"GANGSTERS OF NEW YORK, THE" (Reliance) 932
GREAT HISTORICAL SUBJECT, A..... 954
"HEARTS ADRIFT" (Famous Players)..... 927
ILLINOIS 985
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....1016
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....1028
INDIANA 979
IN THE MIDDLE WEST..... 980
IN THE SOUTHWEST..... 980
IN THE NORTHWEST 980
"JOSEPH'S TRIALS IN EGYPT" (Eclectic).. 933
"JUSTICE" (Hepworth) 929
KEMPTON GREENE 958
KENTUCKY 981
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....1002
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....1030
MAINE EXHIBITORS IN CONVENTION..... 957
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES..... 964
"MICHAEL PERRINE" (Ambrosio)..... 953
MISSOURI 981
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.. 957
MORGAN-UNIVERSAL POSTER CONTRACT.. 952
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR..... 934
NEW ENGLAND 978
NORTHWESTERN NEW YORK..... 978
NO MAN BIG ENOUGH TO BE CITY'S CENSOR 932
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN.... 936
OHIO 982
OPENED WITH ECLAT..... 931
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 939
PITTSBURGH 983
PROF. FREDERICK STARR..... 928
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 941
SAN FRANCISCO 981
SAVAGE ALLIES WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS. 955
SENOR FORNAS SAILS FOR HOME..... 953
STATE OF MISSOURI SUES MUTUAL..... 929
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....1002
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....1016
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features).....1022
VISUALIZATION 925
WASHINGTON, D. C..... 983
WOMEN AND CHILDREN..... 962

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.

KIEWERT, CHARLES L. & CO.....1001
REISINGER, HUGO 1031

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. 1032
BELL & HOWELL 1036
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO.....1034
DEARBORN NOVELTY CO. 1037
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS 1012
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO. 1033
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO. 1010
GENERAL ELECTRIC 1035
HALLBERG, J. H. 1004
HOKE, GEORGE M., SUPPLY CO.....1032
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO. 1000
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO. 1027
PREDDY, WILLIAM G. 1036
STERN MANUFACTURING CO. 1033
STRELINGER, CHARLES A. & CO. 1010
STURTEVANT, B. F., CO. 1000
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MANUFACTURING CO. 1014

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.

ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION 993
AMBROSIO AMERICAN CO. 988-89
AMERICAN FEATURE FILM CO. 967
AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION 1008
AMMEX MOTION PICTURE MANUFACTURING CO. 1019
APEX FILM CO. 1005
ARCTIC FILM CO. 996
BARKER, CHARLES V., CO. 994-95
BLINKHORN, ALBERT 913
BOX OFFICE ATTRACTIONS 998
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO. 1037
COSMOS FILM CO. 1006
CRITERION FEATURE FILM CO. 990
ECLECTIC FILM CO. 912
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO. 910-911
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE.. 973
FAMOUS PLAYERS STAR FEATURE FILM SERVICE 973
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. 1006
FEATURES IDEAL 1025
GENERAL FILM CO.....914-915
GENERAL SPECIAL FILM CO.....1010
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.....1015
HODKINSON, WILLIAM W..... 969
ITALA FILM CO.....1009
ITALIAN-AMERICAN CO.....1034
KENNEDY FEATURES 991
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURES.....970-71
MIDGAR FEATURES 1014
NOTABLE FEATURE FILM CO..... 974
101 RANCH 1032
PROGRESSIVE MOTION PICTURE CO..... 969
RAMO FILM CO.....1001
SHERRY, WILLIAM L..... 972
UNION FEATURES 1023
VERO EDUCATIONAL CO.....1023
WARNER'S FEATURES 1011
WORLD SPECIAL FILM CORPORATION.....1017

FILM EXCHANGES.

BRADENBURG, G. W. 1036
CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO..1010
FAMOUS FEATURE FILM CO.....1034
FAMOUS PLAYERS EXCHANGE..... 972
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO..1030
LAKE ERIE FILM EXCHANGE.....1036
LIBERTY FILM RENTAL CO.....1037
MAGNET FILM MANUFACTURING CO.....1036
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM SERVICE.....1035
SCHILLER, F. F., CO.....1010

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO..999-1029
GAUMONT FILM CO.....1013
NEW MAJESTIC FILM CO.....1038
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP..... 997
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION..... 902
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.906-7-8-9
STARLAND FILM EX..... 968

LENS MANUFACTURERS.

GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN CO.....1021

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.

EDISON, THOMAS A..... 919
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO..... 903
KALEM FILM CO... 922
KLEINE, GEORGE 917
LUBIN FILM MANUFACTURING CO..... 920
MELIES FILM CO..... 916
PATHE FRERES 904-5-918
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.....1039
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA..... 921

MISCELLANEOUS.

ADKINS, L. B.....1012
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER 1025
AMUSEMENT SALES CO.....1033
AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO. 1033
BERLINE ANILINE WORKS.....1021
CELEBRATED PLAYERS 974
CHALMERS, McELROY CO.....1024
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 992
EASTMAN KODAK CO..... 999
GARRAWAY COMPANY 974
GENERAL SPECIALTY CO.....1035
GERSTLES, H. 1010
GUNBY BROTHERS 1032
HORSLEY, DAVID 999
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO.....1023
LOEWINGER BROTHERS 974
MELCHOIR, JACK 1023
MESTRUM, HENRY 1034
METRO LITHO CO..... 968
NATIONAL TICKET CO.....1028
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....1033
ONE DROP OIL CO.....1014
PREMIER TITLE CO.....1012
RUBY TWINPLEX STUDIO.....1007
SARGENT, EPES WINTHROP.....1035
STANDARD MOVING PICTURE CO.....1037
SWARTS, H. D.....1035
THADDEUS DAVIDS CO.....1032
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE.....1035
THEATER RECORD LEDGER CO.....1032
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.....1036
TURNER, HALSEY 1012
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO.....1032
WENIZ, ISIDOR, CO.....1032

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.

AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO.....1035
ERNEMAN PHOTO KINETO CO.....1019
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO.....1010
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD 1032

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

DEAGAN, J. C.....1037
HUME, T. D. CO.....1032
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO 1010
SINN, CLARENCE E.....1037
WELTE, N. & SONS.....1027
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 1037

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.

ANDREWS, A. H. CO.....1037
BENNETT SEATING CO.....1037
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO.....1037
STEEL FURNITURE CO.....1037
WISCONSIN SEATING CO.....1037

POSTERS AND FRAMES.

A. B. C. CO.....1026
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO..... 984
GENERAL FILM CO..... 985
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO.....1035
THEATER SPECIALTY CO.....1012

PROJECTION MACHINES.

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.....1021
PHANTOSCOPE CO. 1036
POWERS, NICHOLAS CO.....1040
PRECISION MACHINE CO..... 987

PROJECTION SCREENS.

AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN & SUPPLY CO. 1025
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO.....1021
GENTER, J. H.....1025
MIRROR SCREEN CO.....1014

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.

DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.....1035

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.

NIAGARA SLIDE CO.....1036
ERKER BROS. 1010
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.....1034

A. B. C. ONE, THREE and SIX SHEETS

Now Ready for the following MULTIPLE RELEASES

Kalem's

Monday, Feb. 23rd
THE SHADOW

Wednesday, Feb. 25th
TIGERS OF THE HILLS

Lubin's

Wednesday, Feb. 25th
SEALED ORDERS

Thursday, Feb. 26th
THE TWO ROSES

SPECIAL NOTICE: We have beautiful one sheets showing the head of George Washington, as well as posters for the EDISON release
"How Washington Crossed the Delaware"

A. B. C. COMPANY Cleveland, Ohio

POWERS

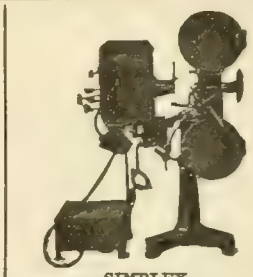
We Are Distributors of These Machines and all Modern Motion Picture Equipment for the Motion Picture Theatre

Leadership Implies Some Sort of Superiority

A man or business that stands conspicuously at the head doesn't get there by chance or accident.

That's Where We Stand To-day in the Selling of Motion Picture Supplies.

The explanation is simple—we have done more than make good, we stand behind every article that you purchase from us.



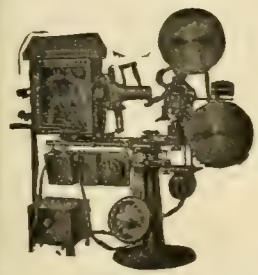
SIMPLEX

Prompt Shipments Our Specialty

WE SEE TO IT ACT ON IT AND SHIP IT

At Once No Delays

Let us convince you we've got what you want



MOTIOGRAPH

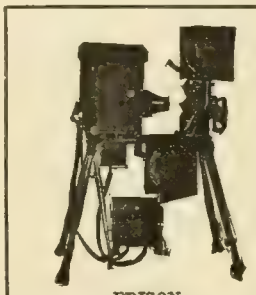
IF IT ISN'T RIGHT—SEND IT BACK
WE'LL MAKE IT RIGHT

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

21 East 14th Street New York City

HAVE YOU SEEN OUR SALESROOMS?



EDISON

MUSIC — THE VERY LATEST — MUSIC

ORGAN ORCHESTRIONS

PLAYS TWO WAYS

AUTOMATICALLY
AND
BY HAND

MEETS EVERY REQUIREMENT

An instrument of this kind will meet the requirements of any first-class picture theatre. You can play popular, classic, sacred or dance pieces, as the instrument is only limited to the kind of music desired.

BUILT FOR ANY GIVEN SPACE.

THEY REPRODUCE THE PLAYING OF THE GREATEST ORGANISTS

ELIMINATE EXPERIMENTS

When you purchase a WELTE instrument you eliminate experiments. Your value is represented in every detail, as is attested by being in the homes of the wealthiest and most representative people in the world.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

M. WELTE & SONS, Inc., 273 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. City

ESTABLISHED 1832

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Feb. 7—True Western Hearts (Drama).....1000
Feb. 9—The Lost Treasure (3 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 14—The Money Lender (Drama).....
Feb. 16—The Cricket on the Hearth (2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 21—The "Pote Lariat" of the Flying "A" (Drama) 1000
Feb. 23—The Dream Child (2 parts—Drama)..2000
Feb. 28—The Carbon Copy (Drama).....1000

AMBROSIO.

Jan. 10—The Silent Hero (2 parts—Drama)...

APOLLO.

Jan. 25—It's a Bear! (Comedy).....
Feb. 1—The Great Pasadena Rose Tournament (Topical) .....
Feb. 8—One Round O'Brien In the Ring Again (Comedy) .....
Feb. 15—Black Hand Conspiracy (Comedy)....
Feb. 22—Up In the Air Over Sadie (Comedy)..

BEAUTY FILMS.

Jan. 28—Bess, the Outcast (Drama).....1000
Feb. 4—Sally's Elopement (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 11—The Wife (Drama).....1000
Feb. 18—The Sacrifice (Drama).....1000
Feb. 25—The Professor's Awakening (Drama).

101 BISON.

Feb. 7—The Vagabond Soldier (3 parts—Dr.)
Feb. 14—Unjustly Accused (2 parts—Drama)...
Feb. 21—Her Father's Guilt (2 parts—Drama).
Feb. 28—Legion of the Phantom Tribe (2 parts—Drama) .....

BRONCHO.

Feb. 4—New England Idyl (Drama).....
Feb. 11—Romance of the Sea (Drama).....
Feb. 18—Yellow Flame (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 25—Repaid (2 parts—Drama).....

CRYSTAL.

Feb. 8—For a Woman (Drama).....
Feb. 10—Getting Reuben Back (Comedy).....
Feb. 10—Baldy Belmont Picks a Peach (Com.).
Feb. 15—A Sure Cure (Comedy).....
Feb. 17—Some Doings (Comedy).....
Feb. 17—Harold's Burglar (Comedy).....
Feb. 22—McSweeney's Masterpiece (Comedy)..
Feb. 24—That Infernal Machine (Comedy)....
Feb. 24—Arabella's Romance (Comedy) .....
Mar. 1—How Mosha Came Back (Comedy)....

DOMINO.

Feb. 5—O Mimi San (Drama).....
Feb. 12—The Mystery Lady (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Play's the Thing (2 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 26—The Courtship of O San (2 parts—Drama) .....

ECLAIR.

Feb. 8—Valentine's Day (Comedy) .....
Feb. 8—The Black Sea (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—The Good in the Worst of Us (2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 15—The Legend of the Lilacs (Drama)....
Feb. 18—The Cross in the Cacti (2 parts—Dr.)
Feb. 22—The Electric Girl (Comedy).....
Feb. 22—Colombo (Scenic) .....
Feb. 25—The Devil Fox of the North (2 parts—Drama) .....
Mar. 1—The Heart of Carita (Drama).....

FRONTIER.

Feb. 12—Slim to the Rescue (Comedy).....
Feb. 14—The Heart of Smiling Joe (Drama)....
Feb. 19—Slim Joins the Army (Comedy).....
Feb. 21—The Fatal Card (Drama).....
Feb. 26—Slim Becomes a Cook (Comedy).....
Feb. 28—So Shall Ye Reap (Drama).....

GAUMONT.

Feb. 10—Tiny Tim and the Lion (Comedy)...
Feb. 10—Scenes in Costa Rica (Travel).....
Feb. 12—Simple Simon Deals in Antiques (Comedy) .....
Feb. 12—Excursions in Old Paris (Travel)....
Feb. 17—Two Miniatures (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Magic Salesman (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—Bee Farming (Industry).....
Feb. 21—Judgment of the Jungle (Drama).....
Feb. 24—The Missing Pearl (Drama).....
Feb. 26—A Tiff—and After.....
Feb. 26—Manana-Land .....
Feb. 28—The Better Man .....

GOLD SEAL.

Jan. 13—A War Time Reformation (2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 20—The Unsigned Agreement (2 parts—Drama).....
Jan. 27—One of the Bravest (2 parts—Drama)
Feb. 3—In the Fall of '64 (2 parts—Drama).
Feb. 10—The Bride of Mystery (3 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 17—Honor of the Mounted (2 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 24—Captain Jenny, S. A. (3 parts—Dr.)..

IMP.

Jan. 26—A Doctor's Deceit (2 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 2—A Hot Finish (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—King the Detective in Formula 879..
Feb. 9—Jane Eyre (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 12—The Elixir of Love (Comedy).....
Feb. 16—The Box Couch (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—The Price of Sacrilege (3 parts—Dr.)
Feb. 23—The Touch of a Child (2 parts—Dr.).
Feb. 26—Rounding Up Bowser (Comedy).....

JOKER.

Feb. 4—Love and Politics (Comedy).....
Feb. 7—The Midnight Alarm (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—Universal Ike's Wooing (Comedy)....
Feb. 14—The Chicken Chasers (Comedy).....
Feb. 18—A Narrow Escape (Comedy).....
Feb. 18—Lumber Industry of California (Indus.)
Feb. 21—The Tender-Hearted Sheriff (Comedy).
Feb. 25—(Title Not Reported).
Feb. 28—Ma and Pa Play Poker (Comedy).....

KAY-BEE.

Jan. 27—For Her Brother's Sake (Drama)....
Jan. 30—Divorce (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 6—Secret Lode (Drama).....
Feb. 10—Colonel's Adopted Daughter (Drama)..
Feb. 13—Arrow Maker's Daughter (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 20—The Raiders (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 26—North of 53 (2 parts—Drama).....2000

KEYSTONE.

Feb. 5—Little Billy's Strategy (Comedy).....
Feb. 7—Kid Auto Races at Venice (Juvenile)..
Feb. 7—Olives and Their Oil.....
Feb. 9—Mabel's Strange Predicament (Comedy)
Feb. 12—A Robust Romeo (Comedy).....
Feb. 16—Raffles, Gentleman Burglar (2 parts—Comedy) .....
Feb. 19—A Thief Catcher (Drama).....
Feb. 21—Love and Gasoline (Comedy).....

KOMIC.

Jan. 29—The Physical Culture Bug (Comedy).
Jan. 29—The Scheme That Failed (Comedy)..
Feb. 5—My Wife's Away (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—The Sleepy Head (Comedy).....
Feb. 12—That Spring Lock (Comedy).....
Feb. 12—The Plumber and Percy (Comedy)..
Feb. 19—A Birthday Present (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—Getting a Suit Pressed (Comedy).....

LUX.

Jan. 30—Bertie Has a Free Ride (Comedy).... 600
Jan. 30—Picturesque Corsica (Scenic)..... 350
Feb. 6—A Country Girl (Drama)..... 625
Feb. 6—In a Granite Quarry (Industry)..... 345
Feb. 13—An Elopement by Aeroplane (Comedy) 475
Feb. 13—Animal Export from Algiers (Travel). 450
Feb. 20—Shortsighted Miss Prim (Comedy).... 520
Feb. 20—Boating on the Seine (Scenic)..... 370

MAJESTIC.

Jan. 31—A Riot in Rubeville (Comedy).....
Feb. 1—The Vengeance of Najerra (Drama)..
Feb. 3—The Portrait of Anita (2 parts—Dr.)..
Feb. 8—A Turn of the Cards (Drama).....
Feb. 10—Just a Song at Twilight (Drama)....
Feb. 14—Fate's Decree (Drama).....
Feb. 15—The Orange Bandit (Comedy-Drama)..
Feb. 17—The Clerk (Drama).....
Feb. 21—Higher Law (Drama).....

NESTOR.

Jan. 30—When Billy Proposed (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—Fires of Conscience (Drama).....
Feb. 6—Twixt Love and Flour (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—The Greater Devotion (Drama).....
Feb. 13—His Royal Pants (Comedy).....
Feb. 18—A Flash in the Dark (Drama).....
Feb. 20—Scooped By a Hen Coop (Comedy)...
Feb. 25—Breed O' the Mountains (Drama)....
Feb. 27—One of the Finest (Comedy).....

POWERS.

Feb. 2—The Germ in the Kiss (Comedy)....
Feb. 6—Into the Lion's Pit (2 parts—Drama)
Feb. 9—An Academy Romance (Comedy).....
Feb. 13—Withered Hands (Drama).....
Feb. 16—Almost a White Hope (Comedy).....
Feb. 20—My Mother's Irish Shawls (Drama)..
Feb. 23—The Rival Dentists (Comedy).....
Feb. 27—Regeneration (Comedy) .....
Feb. 27—Tightwad Buys a Laundry (Comedy)..

PRINCESS.

Jan. 23—The Vacant Chair.....
Jan. 30—The Loser Wins (Comedy-Drama)....
Feb. 6—Where Paths Diverge (Drama).....
Feb. 13—The Tangled Cat (Comedy).....
Feb. 20—All's Well That Ends Well (Comedy).

RELIANCE.

Jan. 31—Too Proud to Beg (Drama).....
Feb. 2—Our Mutual Girl (Third Release—Dr.)
Feb. 4—The Janitor (Drama).....
Feb. 7—For His Master (2 parts—Drama)....
Feb. 9—Our Mutual Girl (Fourth Release—Dr.)
Feb. 11—Pat Flannagan's Family (Comedy)..
Feb. 14—The Idler (Drama) .....
Feb. 16—Our Mutual Girl (Fifth Release—Dr.)
Feb. 18—A Working Girl's Romance (Drama)
Feb. 21—An Interrupted Seance (Drama).....
Feb. 23—Our Mutual Girl (Chapter 6—Drama).
Feb. 25—The Musician's Wife (Drama).....
Feb. 28—The Green-Eyed Devil (2 parts—Dr.).2000

REX.

Feb. 1—The Fourth Proposal (Comedy).....
Feb. 5—A Race With Death (Drama).....
Feb. 8—The Coward Hater (Drama).....
Feb. 12—The Law of His Kind (2 parts—Dr.)..
Feb. 15—An Old Locket (Drama).....
Feb. 19—The Boob's Honeymoon (Comedy)....
Feb. 22—Woman's Burden (Drama).....
Feb. 26—For the Family Honor (2 parts—Dr.)..
Mar. 1—The Weaker Sister (Drama).....

THANHOUSER.

Jan. 23—The Elusive Diamond (Drama).....
Jan. 25—The Elevator Man (3 parts—Drama)...
Jan. 27—The Woman Pays (3 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 1—Why Reginald Reformed (Comedy)....
Feb. 3—Twins and a Stepmother (Com. Dr.)..
Feb. 6—The Success of Selfishness (Drama)....
Feb. 8—Percy's First Holiday (Comedy).....
Feb. 10—The Dancer (2 parts—Drama).....
Feb. 13—(No Release This Date).
Feb. 15—The Skating Master (Com.-Dr.).....
Feb. 17—The Leak in the Foreign Office (2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 20—No Release this Date.
Feb. 22—A Can of Baked Beans (Comedy)....

VICTOR.

Feb. 2—U. S. Government Inspection of Beef (Educational) .....
Feb. 6—Irene the Onion Eater's Daughter (Comedy) .....
Feb. 9—The Man Who Slept (Drama).....
Feb. 13—The Law's Decree (2 parts—Drama)..
Feb. 16—Votes for Men (2 parts—Comedy)...
Feb. 20—Love's Victory (2 parts—Drama)...
Feb. 23—Remember Mary Magdalene (Drama)..
Feb. 27—The Stepmother (2 parts—Drama)....

FEATURES— (A. Blinkhorn).

Jan. 5—The Vicar of Wakefield (Hepworth's —4 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 8—The Younger Sister (Turner Films, Ltd.—Drama) .....
Jan. 12—Jean's Evidence (Turner Films, Ltd. —2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 19—Motherhood or Politics? (Hepworth's —2 parts—Comedy Drama).....

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand - -	$1.25
Ten Thousand - -	$2.50
Twenty Thousand - -	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand -	$5.50
Fifty Thousand - -	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand -	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST

FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

The DREAM CHILD

Love, Devotion, Intrigue

Two Parts
Release
Feb. 23, 1914

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs, Photos, Slides and Heralds

"THE CARBON COPY"

TELLS A STORY THAT IS CONVINCING AND REPLETE WITH DRAMATIC DETAIL

One and Three Sheet Lithographs — Release, Saturday, Feb. 28th, 1914

COMING! COMING! COMING!

"THE CALL OF THE TRAUMEREI"

A Three Part Masterpiece — Release, Monday, March 9th, 1914

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Pathe, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Pathe, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Jan. 30—Out of Sight, Out of Mind (Comedy).
Jan. 31—The Fallen Angel (Drama).....
Feb. 2—If It Were Not For Polly (Drama)..
Feb. 5—The Dilemma (Drama).....
Feb. 7—Beating Their Board Bill (Comedy)..
Feb. 7—The Faddists (Comedy).....
Feb. 9—One Thousand to One Shot (Comedy)..
Feb. 9—Skelley Buys a Hotel (Comedy).....
Feb. 12—As It Might Have Been (Com.-Drama)
Feb. 14—A Nest Unfeathered (Drama).....
Feb. 16—Her Old Teacher (Drama).....
Feb 19—A Desperate Hero (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—Skelley and the Turkey (Comedy)....
Feb. 21—Criminology and Reform (Com.-Drama)

EDISON.

Feb. 7—The Man of Destiny (Drama).....1000
Feb. 9—A Story of Crime (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 10—The Story of the Willow Pattern (Dr.).1000
Feb. 11—Andy Goes on the Stage (Third of the Andy Series) (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 13—Rorke's Drift (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Feb. 14—His Grandchild (Drama).....1000
Feb. 16—The Adventure of the Extra Baby (Second story of Octavius—Amateur Detective—Comedy) 1000
Feb. 17—Sophia's Imaginary Visitors (Comedy-Drama) 1000
Feb. 18—Courting Betty's Beau (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 20—All For His Sake (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 21—The Powers of the Air (Drama).....1000
Feb. 23—The Beautiful Leading Lady (Third of Wood B. Wedd's Series—Comedy)..1000
Feb. 24—The Mystery of the Ladder (Fourth of Mystery of the Chronicles of Cleek—Drama) 1000
Feb. 25—Love's Young Dream (Comedy)..... 500
Feb. 25—Cheese Mining (Comedy)..... 500
Feb. 27—The Drama of Heyville (Special—2 parts—Comedy).....2000
Feb. 28—The Ghost of Mother Eve (Second of the Dolly of the Dallies—Drama)..1000

ESSANAY.

Feb. 10—Speak No Evil (Drama).....1000
Feb. 11—Miss Milly's Valentine (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 12—The Weaker's Strength (Drama).....1000
Feb. 13—Sophie Pick's a Dead One (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
Feb. 14—The Calling of Jim Barton (Drama)...1000
Feb. 17—To Alaska Via the Great Rivers of the North (Scenic) 1000
Feb. 18—One-to-Three (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 19—Italian Love (Comedy-Drama).....1000
Feb. 20—The Other Girl (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 21—Snakeville's Fire Brigade (Comedy)..1000
Feb. 24—Hear No Evil (Drama).....1000
Feb. 25—Mrs. Manly's Baby (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 26—The Arm of Vengeance (Drama).....1000
Feb. 27—Let No Man Escape (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 28—Broncho Billy's Bible (Drama).....1000

KALEM.

Feb. 4—The Hand Print Mystery (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 6—Vaccinating the Village (Comedy)...1000
Feb. 7—The Indian Ambuscade (Drama)....1000
Feb. 9—The County Seat War (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 11—Indian Fate (Special— 2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Feb. 13—Out in the Rain (Comedy).....
Feb. 13—The Gun Behind the Man (Comedy)...
Feb. 14—The Fatal Clues (Comedy-Drama)..... 800
Feb. 14—Flood of the Dal River (Topical).....200
Feb. 16—A Million in Jewels (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 18—Chasing the Smugglers (Special—2 parts (Drama) 2000
Feb. 20—Too Many Johnnies (Comedy).....
Feb. 20—A Bottled Romance (Comedy).....
Feb. 21—An Indian's Honor (Drama).....
Feb. 21—A Long Island Skunk Farm (Ind.)....
Feb. 23—The Shadow (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Feb. 25—The Tigers of the Hills (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 27—Reggie, the Squaw Man (Comedy)....1000
Feb. 28—The Delayed Special (Drama).....1000

GEORGE KLEINE.

Jan. 6—The Smuggler's Son (Cines—2 parts—Special—Drama) .....
Jan. 13—The Heart of a Gypsy (Cines—2 parts—Special—Drama) .....
Jan. 20—Who Was Guilty? (Special—Cines—2 parts—Drama) .....
Jan. 27—Wrecked In Mid-Air (Eclipse—Special—Three parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 3—The Marriage of Figaro (Special—2 parts—Ambrosio—Drama) .....
Feb. 10—After Death (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 17—The Artist's Model (Celio—Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 24—The Money Sharks (Cines—Three Parts—Drama) .....

LUBIN.

Feb. 6—The Vagaries of Fate (Drama).....1000
Feb. 7—Her Side-Show Sweetheart (Comedy).. 400
Feb. 7—Pat's Revenge (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 9—Antidotes for Suicide (Comedy)..... 400
Feb. 9—Taming Terrible Ted (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 10—The Measure of a Man (Drama).....1000
Feb. 12—Fitzhugh's Ride (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 13—The Sleeping Sentinel (Drama).....1000
Feb. 14—The Reward (Drama).....1000
Feb. 17—Getting Even (Comedy)..... 400
Feb. 17—An Innocent Victim (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 18—The Price of a Ruby (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 19—The House of Fear (Special—2 parts—Drama) 1000
Feb. 20—In the Dredger's Claw (Drama).....1000
Feb. 21—A Winning Mistake (Comedy)..... 400
Feb. 21—The Female Book Agent (Comedy)... 600
Feb. 24—The Lost Child (Comedy) 400
Feb. 24—The Rise of Officer Casey (Comedy).. 600
Feb. 25—Sealed Orders (Special—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Feb. 26—The Two Roses (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.).2000
Feb. 27—A Desperate Chance (Drama).....1000
Feb. 28—Coon Town Suffragettes (Comedy).. 400
Feb. 28—Father's Temper (Comedy)..... 600

MELIES.

Jan. 1—Temples of Japan (Architecture)....1000
Jan. 8—The Somnambulist (Drama).....1000
Jan. 15—Wooing the Sales Lady (Comedy)...1000
Jan. 22—Monte Cristo Up-to-Date (Comedy)..
Jan. 29—Batty Bill's Honeymoon (Comedy).. 600
Jan. 29—Winky Willy and the Fisherman (Com.) 570
Feb. 5—Playing With Fire (Comedy-Drama)..
Feb. 5—Winky Willy's Disappearing Stunt (Comedy) .....
Feb. 5—Dippy on the Boston Dip (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Suspense and Suspenders (Comedy)...
Feb. 12—Winky Willy's Birthday Gifts (Com.).
Feb. 19—A Fable and Its Moral (Comedy)..... 300
Feb. 19—A Hobo Philosopher (Comedy)..... 700
Feb. 26—Winky Willie's Arithmetic (Com.).. 300
Feb. 26—Batty Billy and His Pal's Legacy (Comedy) 700

PATHE.

Jan. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 8 (News).....
Jan. 27—A Two Family Affair (Special—2 parts—Comedy) .....
Jan. 27—The Oasis of Gabes—Tunis (Scenic)..
Jan. 28—The Patched Adonis (Comedy).....
Jan. 29—Pathe's Weekly, No. 9 (News).....
Jan. 29—The Power of Print (Drama).....
Jan. 29—Seringapatam—Southern India (Scen.)
Jan. 31—The Lunatic's Child (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 2—Pathe's Weekly, No. 10 (News).....
Feb. 3—Wooing the Cook (Comedy).....
Feb. 4—The Fat Man's Burden (Comedy)....
Feb. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 11 (News).....
Feb. 5—Behind Comedy's Mask (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 7—In the Mesh of Her Hair (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 9—Pathe's Weekly No. 12.....
Feb. 10—Orphans of the Wild (Drama).....
Feb. 11—All on Account of Polly (Comedy).....
Feb. 11—A Typical Buddhist Temple (Typical)
Feb. 11—Scenes Along the Canvery River (India) (Scenic) .....
Feb. 12—Broken Lives (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..
Feb. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 13.....
Feb. 14—Chains of Honor (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 16—Pathe's Weeklyn, No. 14, 1914 (News)
Feb. 17—Whiffles Balcony Buds (Comedy)....
Feb. 17—Rambles in Bourges, France (Scenic)..
Feb. 18—Won By a Nose (Comedy).....
Feb. 18—Monuments of Upper Egypt (Architec.)
Feb. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 15—1914 (News)
Feb. 19—Where the Heart Calls (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 21—Victims of Vanity (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....
Feb. 23—Pathe's Weekly, No. 16—1914 (News)
Feb. 24—The Winning Hand (Drama).....
Feb. 25—September Morn (Comedy).....
Feb. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 17—1914 (News)
Feb. 26—The Devil's Assistant (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....

SELIG.

Feb. 2—A Modern Vendetta (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 3—At the Eleventh Hour (Com.-Dr.)....1000
Feb. 4—The Heart of Maggie Malone (Dr.).1000
Feb. 5—The Little Sister (Drama).....1000
Feb. 6—Tony and Maloney (Comedy).....
Feb. 6—Italian Games and Dances (Typical)..
Feb. 9—The Adventures of Kathlyn—No. 4—The Royal Slave (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 10—Reconciled In Blood (Drama).....1000
Feb. 11—A Strenuous Scoop (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 12—The Mistress of His House (Drama)..1000
Feb. 13—Their Lesson (Drama).....1000
Feb. 16—The Uphill Climb (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 17—Through the Centuries (Drama).....1000
Feb. 18—Thou Shalt Not Kill (Drama).....1000
Feb. 19—Venus and Adonis (Comedy).....
Feb. 19—A Mad Marathon (Comedy).....
Feb. 20—Memories (Drama).....1000
Feb. 23—The Adventures of Kathlyn No. 5—A Colonel in Chains (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 24—The Cynic (Drama).....
Feb. 24—Doc Yak, the Cartoonist (Comedy)..
Feb. 25—King Baby's Birthday (Drama)....1000
Feb. 26—Tested By Fire (Drama).....1000
Feb. 27—The Attic Above (Drama).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Feb. 4—How Burke and Burke Made Good (Comedy) 1000
Feb. 5—Lincoln the Lover (Drama).....1000
Feb. 5—Marrying Sue (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 7—Tainted Money (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 9—The Winner Wins (Drama).....1000
Feb. 10—Master of the Mine (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 11—Sonny Jim in Search of a Mother (Comedy) 1000
Feb. 12—Some Steamer Scooping (Com.-Dr.).... 700
Feb. 12—Niagara Falls (Scenic)..... 300
Feb. 13—Bunny's Birthday (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 14—Children of the Feud (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 16—Sawdust and Salome (Drama).....1000
Feb. 17—Back to Broadway (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) 2000
Feb. 18—Fatty On the Job (Comedy)..... 600
Feb. 18—Lumbering in Sweden (Indus.)..... 400
Feb. 19—The First Endorsement (Drama).....1000
Feb. 20—His Little Page (Comedy).....1000
Feb. 21—Iron and Steel (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Feb. 23—In the Old Attic (Drama).....1000
Feb. 24—Doctor Polly (Special—2 parts—Comedy-Drama) 2000
Feb. 25—The Hero (Comedy) 750
Feb. 25—Crawfishing (Educational) 250
Feb. 26—The Old Oak's Secret ,Drama).....1000
Feb. 27—A Change in Baggage Checks (Com.).1000
Feb. 28—The Drudge (Spec.—2 parts—Drama).2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied 130 West Forty-sixth Street, New York City
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

THIS TRADE MARK IS YOUR GUARANTEE

THIS trade mark on a package of carbons is your guarantee that they are the most satisfactory and efficient projector carbons made. The best picture is dependent on clear, steady, brilliant, white light for perfect reproduction. Of this you may be assured when using "ELECTRA" Pink Label Carbons, and if you are not already using them, samples will gladly be sent on request.

HUGO REISINGER

Sole Importer, United States and Canada

11 BROADWAY NEW YORK

ELECTRA

FILM TITLES MADE TO ORDER 6c PER FOOT

Negatives Developed FREE

GUNBY BROS., Inc.
145 West 45th Street NEW YORK CITY

PRINTS FROM YOUR NEGATIVE 5c Per Foot

COMING

The WRATH of the GODS

A FIVE PART DOMINO SPECIAL. A BEAUTIFUL STORY EVOLVING AROUND JAPANESE LEGEND

SAVINGS $ BY SYSTEM

ORDER TODAY
Theatre Record Ledger

the only bookkeeping system ever published for a moving picture theatre or vaudeville house. The Theatre Record Ledger will not only save you a chance to keep a strict accounting of all your expenses and receipts but will give you a history of your entire year's business all under one heading. PRICE $2.50, POSTAGE 20c extra. Money refunded if you are not satisfied.

THEATRE RECORD COMPANY
252A Hennepin Avenue Minneapolis, Minn

SHOW THIS TO YOUR EXCHANGE SENT FROM MY MINNEAPOLIS OFFICE

PIPE ORGANS FOR THEATRES

Prompt delivery.
Write for illustrated Catalogue or telephone Harrison 1476.

T. D. HUME & CO.
Suite 513-522, 608 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE U. S. WAR DEPARTMENT USES THE
"Junior Professional Film Camera"

Selected after careful tests on shell explosions, at a speed of 1 5000 part of a second.

THE JUNIOR SATISFIED THE TEST without cloaking up or breaking down

It Is The Camera For You

Tripods, Tilts, Developing Outfits, Printers, Perforators, Film Winders, Polishers, Measurers

THE NEW
UNIVERSAL VIEW FINDER FOR M. P. CAMERAS
NOTHING BUT ORIGINAL SUPREME GOODS FOR CATALOGUE
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 SECOND AVE NEW YORK

A Brand New Production Of On The Original MILLER BROS.

EXTRA! 101 RANCH and Wild West Show EXTRA!

The Show That's Made All America Talk

REAL SCENES FROM FRONTIER LIFE

REAL RANCH LIFE IN 3 REELS

Complete 101 Ranch Wild West Circus in 3 Reels

REAL INDIANS
REAL COWBOYS
REAL COWGIRLS

Pickett, DUSKY DEMON OF OKLAHOMA
Only Man in Human History Who Ever FOUGHT BAREHANDED A SPANISH BULL
Reproduced in This Feature Production, and NOWHERE ELSE

Stampede and Round-Up of 50,000 Texas Steers

BRONCHO BUSTING
Daily Happenings of Ranch and Cow Camp

Real Indian Buffalo Hunt
Not the West Seen from a Car Window
But the land of cattle, corrals, cabins, cowtrails, coyotes

More instructive than 1000 Lectures.

THE KING OF ALL WESTERN FEATURES!
State Rights NOT For Sale
Exhibited Through Exclusive Agents Only

Guaranteed Attraction!

Secured through these Traveling Agents
(NOWHERE ELSE.)

H. P. Moseley, Illinois & Missouri
S. H. Flanigan, Nebraska & New Mexico
F. L. Bailey, Okla., Colo., & Ark.
H. C. Williams, Geo. & Florida
Andrew Barr, Alabama, Miss. & La.
Frank Stern, Conn. & Maryland
Josept Lewis, Va. T. W. Bright, Kan.
Fred Criswell, Ind. Chas. Shepherd, N. C.
Al. G. Hatch, Ohio Cleveland LaRue, Tenn.
Calvert & Herman, Ia. Belmont Shields, Texas

For Bookings Address:
101 RANCH M. P. DEPT., Bliss, Oklahoma

Machines and Genuine Parts
Edison--Powers--Simplex
Motiograph--Edengraph

Sold cash or time
Send for new catalogue today.

Bargains in Rebuilt Machines
Photo and Poster Frames,
Curtains and Screens

Write us today what you are interested in.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.
"Everything from screen to booth"
160-A No. FIFTH AVENUE, CHICAGO

ISIDOR WENIZ FILMS CO.
Special Features and Regular Service
MACHINES--FILMS--SUPPLIES
PASSION PLAY For Rent—1,3,6 Sheets 12 Styles of Paper
100 REELS FOR SALE WITH POSTERS
Office: 133 N. Gay St. Baltimore, Md.

VISCO PICTURE MACHINE OIL

If your dealer will not supply you send us $1.50 and we will send you a 128-ounce can of Visco Picture Machine Oil direct. 6-oz. bottles, 25 cents at your dealer's.
THE VISCO MOTOR OIL CO., Cleveland, O.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US!
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
76. N State St. (bet.Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill

BRAND NEW

Davids' Glassine Announcement Slide Ink

Put up in boxes containing six one-ounce bottles of different colors, viz.: Red, Green, Blue, Violet, Black and White. Price per box, $1.00. This ink can be used with an ordinary pen and is manufactured by the oldest ink and adhesive concern in America. Established 1825.

THADDEUS DAVIDS CO.
Main Office and Factory, 95 Van Dam St., New York
Western Branch and Warehouse
18 West Kinzie St.
Chicaog, Ill.

One of New York's Finest Moving Picture Theatres, THE UNIQUE, on 14th Street, uses THE AUTOMATIC.

"Protect Your Employees, Remove the Temptation."

DAY IN AND DAY OUT

THE AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER

is clicking the dollars into the pockets of Owners of Moving Picture Theatres all over the Country.

Modern business demands the best equipment—THE AUTOMATIC is a necessity because it is accurate, registers every sale, and because of its simplicity and rapidity. It will prove a wonderful addition to your Box Office.

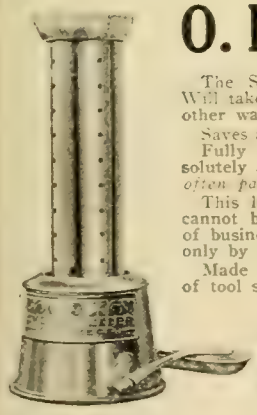
If you are interested in

Moving Picture Theatres
Amusement Parks
Baseball Parks
Dancing and Bathing Pavilions
Railways and Ferries
Soda Fountains

Write for Prices and Terms, Also New Booklet which explains fully

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING & CASH REGISTER CO.

1476 BROADWAY, NEW YORK
THIRD NAT'L BANK BLDG., ST. LOUIS



O. K. Check Seller

The Showman's cash register—sure and speedy. Will take care of patrons 50% quicker than by any other way.

Saves all the trouble and expense of buying tickets.

Fully guaranteed or money refunded. It is absolutely accurate, and every sale is registered. Has often paid for itself in a week's time.

This little machine holds 1000 checks, and they cannot be issued unless registered. Total amount of business is under lock and key and can be seen only by owner.

Made of brass, nickel plated, and wearing parts of tool steel. Send for special circular and prices.

Made only by

AMUSEMENT SALES CO.
Woodward and Warren Aves., DETROIT, MICH.

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

EXHIBITORS NOTICE

We have on hand at the present time the following machines, which are guaranteed to be good bargains, and sold under the conditions that if not satisfactory, money will be refunded upon return of the merchandise at your expense.

ONE MOTIOGRAPH, NO. 1A, slightly shop worn, never used, absolutely new, guaranteed, complete with lenses.....$185.00
ONE NO. 6A, slightly shop worn, never used, complete with loop setter, motor drive, motor attachment and motor for 220 A-C, guaranteed complete, absolutely new.....$250.00
ONE NO. 6A complete, new, less rheostat.....$195.00
ONE EDISON, TYPE B, absolutely perfect, used only six months, inside shutter.....$100.00
ONE NO 5, second hand, complete, guaranteed absolutely perfect, including lenses, but no rheostat.....$ 85.00
ONE POWER'S MACHINE in perfect running order, guaranteed absolutely complete, with lenses.....$65.00
ONE EDISON, EXHIBITION MODEL, second hand, in perfect running order, guaranteed.....$ 60.00
THE STERN PERFECT TICKET CHOPPER, $45.00, F. O. B. your city, the best ticket chopper in the country.
ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND TICKETS, with nickel plated polished ticket holder, for.....$ 7.00

We are importers of condensers, lenses, carbons, and everything pertaining to the moving picture business. Our catalogue will be sent on request.

THE STERN MANUFACTURING CO., 109 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

EYE COMFORT Lighting System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month. This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Height Under Balcony.....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
CHICAGO—229 W. Jackson Blvd. NEW YORK—505 Fifth Ave.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

BARGAIN-MACHINES-BARGAIN

Order one for Emergency. Slightly used machines, in first-class running condition. Powers No. 6, $135.00; Edison Model B, $150.00; Edison Exhibition Models, $50.00, $60.00 and $75.00. All complete with lenses, rheostats. Ticket Choppers, Mirror Screens, Chairs, etc.

Order at once. First come, first served.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO., Inc.
1301 Race St., Philadelphia

FAMOUS FEATURE FILM CO.

243 West Fourth Street
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Invites offers from Manufacturers, or Ohio State Right Men, to handle their Features in this Territory, or for Ohio and Kentucky, on a Percentage Basis.

We have an established, and modern equipped Feature Film Office, and can get the business for you.

S. P. HETTEBERG, Mgr.

You should order from us Because we are Reliable, Responsible, Reasonable, Expert Mechanics and Manufacturing Opticians.

Specialists in the Projection Business.

WE MANUFACTURE | WE REPAIR

Get our estimate on anything you need. We have it or make it. Everything for Projection except Films.

Established since 1865

HENRY MESTRUM Succ. to C. B. KLEINE
385 SIXTH AVENUE, Bet. 23rd and 24th Streets, NEW YORK

SECRET SOCIETY

Prisoner of the Owls

OR

THE VICTIMS OF REVENGE

A sensational and spectacular feature in 4 reels

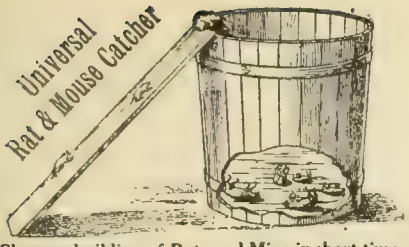
The story is based on the inner workings of a well-known society and its methods. Full of Thrills and Heart Interests, brings out the power of Blood Ties.

A REAL LIVE ONE Ones, two kinds of Threes and Sixes

Italian-American Film Corporation

Fitzgerald Building
1482 B'way, New York

Telephone 7395 Bryant



Cleans a building of Rats and Mice in short time, keeps it cleaned, for it is always ready for use Made of galvanized iron, can't get out of order, lasts for years. Large number can be caught daily. Go to Catcher mornings, remove device inside, which only takes few seconds, take out dead rats and mice, replace device, it is ready for another catch. Small piece cheese is used, doing away with poisons. Catcher is 18 inches high, 10 inches diameter. When rats pass device they die, no marks left on them. Catcher is always clean. One of these Catchs set in a livery stable in Scranton, Pa., caught over 100 rats in a month. One sent prepaid to any place in United States upon receipt of $3. Catcher, 8 in. high, for mice only, prepaid $1. On account of shipping charges being prepaid, remittance is requested with order. H. D. SWARTS,
Inventor and Manufacturer, Scranton, Pa.

AMERICAN CAMERAS
MOTION PICTURE

are acknowledged by the leading expert film producers to be the finest and most accurate Cameras in the world.

We also manufacture a complete line of Studio and Dark Room Equipment.

Distributors for Eastman Raw Film

Send for Catalogues

American Cinematograph Co.
617-631 W. Jackson Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

A G-E Rectifier

will make your pictures more brilliant and at the same time reduce the cost of electric current.

General Electric Company
General Office Schenectady, N. Y.

4488

Sargent's Photoplay Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

EPES WINTHROP SARGENT
Box 70, Madison Square Station, NEW YORK CITY

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St. CHICAGO, ILL.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229

In Answering Advertisers
Kindly Mention
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

INDIRECT LIGHTS
—FOR—
Moving Picture Theatres

Side Wall Brackets
EXIT BRACKETS
EXIT BOXES
POSTER FRAMES
SHADES, Containing Transparent Portraits of Moving Picture Players.
NOVELTIES
BEST PRICES
Send for Circular

GENERAL SPECIALTY CO.
409 Morgan St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
moving picture machines, films and chairs.
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our show rooms.

The Newman Mfg. Co.
717-721 Sycamore St
CINCINNATI, OHIO
Branch Factories and Show Rooms:
101-103 Fourth Avenue
New York City
108 W. Lake Street
Chicago, Ill.
Established 1882

MAGNET FILM MFG. CO.
INC.
ALHAMBRA BLDG., EVANSVILLE, IND.

Feature, Educational, Industrial, Scenic Historical and Scientific FILMS

We make MOTION PICTURES of HOME-COMINGS, CARNIVALS, CONVENTIONS, CELEBRATIONS and ATHLETIC EVENTS

SLIDES

Announcement, Player and Release Slides. The best made at the lowest prices. Ask about our premium with $10.00 cash business. Catalogue of course.

NIAGARA SLIDE CO. Lockport, N. Y.

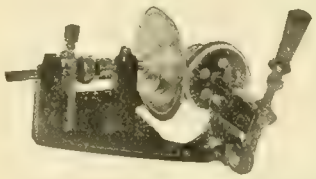
FEATURES FEATURES

Emotional Dramatic Melodramatic 2-3-4-5 reelers

All makes of European exclusives
Write for list and prices

LAKE ERIE FILM BROKERS
No. 229 ERIE STREET TOLEDO, OHIO



Speed Regulator for Motor Driven Machines

Any speed from 5 to 30 min. to Reel. 1500 used. Price $12.50. Quickly attached to any head. Get circular. Has Oilcups, Indicator and Clutch. Very rugged, practical, silent running, and will last a lifetime.

PREDOEV, 669 HAIGHT ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service.
Nearly 8,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

110 Volts, 60 Cycles.....$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles..... 50.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltages and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
317 West Illinois Street :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

670 Film Exchanges, U. S.	$3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S.	1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers	1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries	3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries	3.00

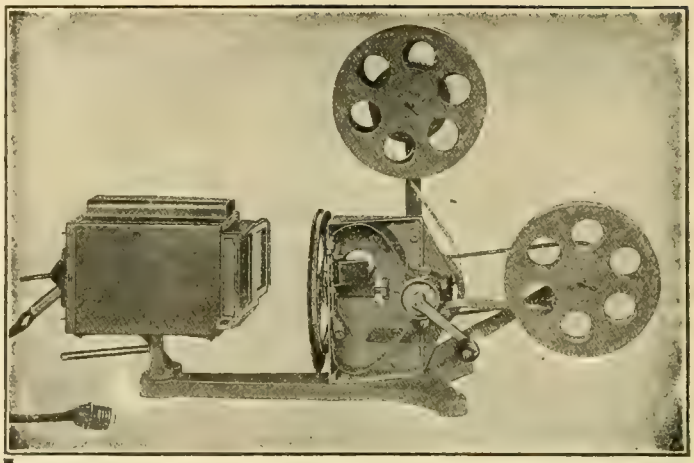
Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

G. W. BRADENBURGH
802 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Phone, Walnut 534. Cable, Bradfilms, Phila

TITLE	LENGTH	MAKE	ADVERTISING		PRICE
Three Drops of Poison	3800	Luna	1-3-4	sheets	200
Cell 13	2250	Gt. Northern	1-3	"	75
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)	4500	Monopol	1-3-4-6-8	"	250
The Bank Note Forgers	3000	Luna	1-3-6	"	300
Secret of the Safe	2750	Cines	1-3-6	"	150
On the Steps of the Throne	3500	Pasquali	1-3-6	"	150
Strength and Cunning	2700	Cines	1-3-6	"	150
Last Days of Pompeii	1350	Ambrosio	1-3-6	"	75
Custer's Last Fight	2150	Bison	1-3-6	"	125
The Yellow Peril	3000	Continental	1-3-6	"	75
The Mysterious Shot	3400	Luna	1-3-6	"	150
The Black Viper	3600	Pyramid	1-3-6	"	100
God of the Sun (Colored)	2100	Pathe	1-3-6	"	125
Life's Bitter Failure	3000	Deu Bois	1-3-4	"	100
Siege of Petersburg	2005	Kalem	1-3-6	"	75
Pauline Cushman, Federal Spy	3000	Selig	1-3-6	"	125
The Czikos	1500	Drankoff	3	"	75
The Fatal Necklace	1600	Itala	3	"	75
The Yellow Man	2250	Ambrosio	1-3-6	"	75
The Black Mask	2950	Dansk	1-3-6	"	90
Wandering Folk	3000	Dansk	1-3-6	"	75
Caprice of Fortune	2000	Eclair	1-3	"	40
Fire at Sea	2000	Gt. Northern	1-3-6	"	50
For the Guilt of his Friend	3000	Deu Bois	4	"	45
Adventure of Lady Glane	2700	Treuman Larsen	1-6	"	60

One Hundred Commercial Films O. K. Condition Without Posters $3.00 per reel.



THE PHANTOSCOPE

is a Motion Picture Projecting Machine

It takes standard motion picture film, film standard the world over.

It takes electric current from the ordinary incandescent lamp socket, either current.

It may be stopped anywhere, and the picture examined at leisure; the film will not be ignited.

It also projects standard magic lantern slides, changing without interruption.

It is light, portable, weighing in its carrying case about twenty pounds.

It projects an eight-foot picture, well lighted, with the usual film and slides.

It works equally well in rural districts without electric current.

It is a machine medaled by the Franklin Institute on the recommendation of some of the most eminent mechanical engineers of this country.

It is a standardized, blue-print machine, composed of interchangeable parts, made in dies, moulds and drill-forms.

Your order may be for one, a dozen, or a hundred, it will be filled promptly, and from stock on hand.

The Phantoscope is remarkably simple, easy of operation, and costs but $75, complete.

The Phantoscope Mfg. Company
WASHINGTON, D. C., U. S. A.

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Played from Piano Keyboard

WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"

J. C. DEAGAN

DEAGAN BUILDING

1776 Berteau Ave.

Chicago, Ill.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. The A. H. Andrews Co. Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office, 1165 Broadway Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So

San Francisco Office, 796 Mission St.

THE "STANDARDIZED" THEATRE CHAIRS

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

ORCHESTRA MUSIC FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts, 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

PRICES RIGHT--WORK GUARANTEED ON ALL

PRINTING and DEVELOPING

Send us your NEGATIVE AND GIVE US A TRIAL. If you know of any event you want photographed, we can furnish an Expert Camera Man.

STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO. 5 SO. WABASH AVE. CHICAGO

Room 1620 Telephone, Randolph 839

Mr. Commercial Photographer, for best work and rates, send to

The Chicago Feature Film Co.

4108-22 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

FILMS FOR SALE

$3.00 per Reel Up

Send for our new revised list. 50 features for sale, low prices. Second-hand machines, all makes.

ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Steel or Iron STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

H. S. Ansley, 31-33 East 32nd Street, New York City. Telephone 1488 Murray Hill.

California Seating Co., 1110 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave., Seattle, Wash.

L-B Mfg. Co., S. E. Cor. 6th & Vine Sts., Phila., Pa.

Steel standards will not break.

The Wisconsin Seating Company, New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.

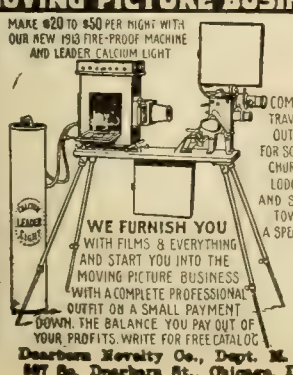
Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissell Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Boston: 69 Pearl St.

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH OUR NEW 1913 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT

DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS

EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED



COMPLETE TRAVELING OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES AND SMALL TOWNS A SPECIALTY

WE FURNISH YOU WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING AND START YOU INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT DOWN. THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF YOUR PROFITS. WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG

Dearborn Novelty Co., Dept. M. P. 167 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Every Day 1,500,000 People

IN Motion Picture Theatres

of the United States listen to the Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestra. Have you one? It pays.

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES

CINCINNATI

WILLIAM GARWOOD!
WILLIAM GARWOOD!
WILLIAM GARWOOD!

—in—

"RUY BLAS!"
"RUY BLAS!"
"RUY BLAS!"

William Garwood is to moving picture audiences what Florence Roberts, of "Sapho" fame, is to stage audiences. They love him in every picture house in the land! Years of screen appearances have endeared him to picture-goers in every metropolis, town, hamlet. He is shown at his best as the valet who deceives a Queen of Spain. See the nearest Continental or Mutual Feature office for a booking. 3 Reels.

Our Regular Release List Is Unusually Strong This Week--Featuring the Famous Majestic Favorites!

"THE ORANGE BANDIT." Comedy. Out Sunday, Feb. 15th. With Dick Cummings, Billie West, Harry Fisher, Jack MacDonald, Eddie Stafford, Charley Grey, Edward Moncrief, Harry Elmstead and Della Martell. "THE CLERK." Love Story. Out Tuesday, Feb. 17th. With William Nigh, Jessalyn Van Trump, Ernest Joy, Della Martell, and Carrie Clark Ward. "THE HIGHER LAW." Melodrama. Out Saturday, Feb. 21st. With Jessalyn Van Trump, William Nigh, Dave Gilfether and Joe Swickard.

"NEW MAJESTIC"

"There are No Favorites Like New Majestic Favorites."

All-Year-Round Studios:
Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.

Business Offices:
New Rochelle, N. Y.

• MAJESTIC •

EVEN THE WEATHER-WISE ARE PUZZLED NOW WITH VARYING STYLES AND CHANGING SEASONS; BUT THE WISE EXHIBITOR KNOWS THE VALUE OF THE SELIG REGULAR SERVICE

"THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN"

NO. 5

"A COLONEL IN CHAINS"

Kathlyn has been led to believe that her father was dead, but found him in chains in Umballah's palace, where she was herself imprisoned. How she escapes and secures his freedom, is a thrilling novelty.

In Two Reels — Released February 23rd

February 24th

"THE CYNIC"

A well-dressed cad, who believes everybody dishonest but himself, lays a wager to that effect and loses to a philanthropist.

On the same reel with

"DOC YAK, THE CARTOONIST"

February 25th — "KING BABY'S BIRTHDAY"

The child is, indeed, the light of the household, the key to perfected happiness. This is a clever picture of child-life.

February 26th — "TESTED BY FIRE"

A good, red-blooded play dealing with the most romantic modernists of the time—the forest rangers of the West.

February 27th — "THE ATTIC ABOVE"

A thrilling bit of detective work, which led to the finding of the black sheep in the bank.

N.B.—Get the SELIG selections of interesting and attractive pictorial printing for lobby illustrations. One-sheets on every release; three and six-sheets on all multiple releases.

Selig

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.
CHICAGO

UPLIFT

IS ALWAYS A PART OF

OUR BUSINESS CREED

IS ESSENTIAL WHERE CONFIDENCE

IS DESIRED

HAS BEEN SUCCESSFULLY ACCOMPLISHED

BY US

THROUGH SINCERITY IN THE DEVELOPMENT

OF THE INDUSTRY

REGARDLESS OF COMMERCIALISM

IN THE MAKING OF

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6A

CATALOG G DESCRIBES THIS

PERFECT MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION MACHINE

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

NINETY GOLD STREET

NEW YORK, N. Y.

Vol. 19. No. 9 February 28. 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "A Barrier Royal" (Broncho).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

"Cardinal Richelieu's Ward" NOW THE MAGNET THAT DRAWS YOU TO "THANHOUSER 'BIG' PRODUCTIONS"

One good film deserves another, and so "Joseph in the Land of Egypt" is followed by "CARDINAL RICHELIEU'S WARD." James Cruze follows himself in a title role, and Flo La Badie is his leading woman. She plays Julie De Mortemar. Morris Foster is the Chevalier De Mauprat. Nolan Gane is Francois. Justus D. Barnes is Huguet. Arthur Bower is Joseph. Lila Chester is Marion De Lorme. It is one of the best casts that has ever appeared in a motion picture. AND YOU NEVER SAW SO DRAMATIC A VERSION OF THIS FAMOUS THEME! The film was the first "Thanhouser 'Big' Production" produced in its entirety in the great new Thanhouser Studio. For some of the immense "sets," we use the entire vast new stage—half a city block long! "Cardinal Richelieu's Ward" is a monument to the producing possibilities of the NEW STUDIO. When you see it you will have realized that we have only just begun to make BIG productions. For you "Cardinal Richelieu's Ward" will not only be a money-maker, it will be a guide and a promise —a guide to our new facilities and a promise of things to come! Better see that nearest Continental or Mutual feature office for the attractive arrangement that give you for exclusive first-run use for a full year in your locality. Absolute protection is yours under this system. No more advertising a feature heavily to learn the fellow down the street is going to get it, too. All in four reels and all BIG in story, cast and settings.

"Thanhouser 'BIG' Productions"

For March--"CARDINAL RICHELIEU'S WARD" with James Cruze and Flo La Badie

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

Sunday, Feb. 22nd—"A CAN OF BAKED BEANS," introducing the Turner Twins, assisted by Dorothy Jordan. As the first moving picture in which the Turner boys have ever appeared, this reel will be in wide demand, as the vaudeville and musical comedy efforts of the "littlest twins" have won them a national following than which no stage kids have a greater.

Tuesday, Feb. 24th—"THE GOLDEN CROSS," TWO REELS, a Maude Fealy feature that we put into the regular service to make you want her in four-reel "Big Productions." This has struck us as a bully way to popularize the latter stuff, and it gets you a feature for which a state-rights office would charge nice money. Miss Fealy's support is Harry Benham, Mignon Anderson and Charles Horan.

Friday, Feb. 27th—"THEIR BEST FRIEND" gives the favorite Marguerite Snow in a one-reel subject and in her first picture since "Joseph in the Land of Egypt." It affords convincing proof that Miss Snow, on her return to the films, is doing better work than ever before in her picture career. Morris Foster makes his Thanhouser bow, and Justus D. Barnes does good work in this reel.

Thanhouser Film Corporation
New Rochelle, N. Y.

Head European Offices:
Thanhouser Films, Ltd.
100 Charing Cross Road,
London, W. C., England.

COMING FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th

"LET NO MAN ESCAPE"

(IN TWO PARTS)

THIS is an exciting and sensational police drama which shows the efficiency of our up-to-date police departments in handling and capturing men who break our laws. There are many scenes which make "Let No Man Escape" a powerful box-office attraction, while the portrayal is superb. If your audiences crave a feature of thrills, book this one.

RICHARD C. TRAVERS, RUTH STONEHOUSE AND WILLIAM BAILEY FEATURED

Released Tuesday, February 24th.

"HEAR NO EVIL."

A superb dramatic offering well photographed. An attraction with a moral.

Released Wednesday, February 25th.

"MRS. MANLY'S BABY."

An excruciatingly funny comedy with many complications that will amuse.

Released Thursday, February 26th.

"THE ARM OF VENGEANCE."

A gripping Western drama with thrills galore. A positive feature.

Released Saturday, February 28th.

"BRONCHO BILLY'S BIBLE."

(Re-issued by public demand)

This is positively one of the best photoplays in the Broncho Billy series. Book today. MR. G. M. ANDERSON featured.

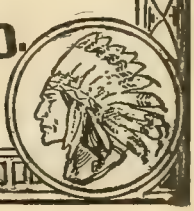
COMING FRIDAY, MARCH 6th

"CHAINS OF BONDAGE."

(IN TWO PARTS)

This is truly a heart interest drama of love showing the sacrifice made by the WOMAN for the MAN she loves. Mrs. Richard Buckley dies. The widower becomes temporarily insane and a shrewd lawyer takes advantage of his condition. Many complications follow. This is positively a feature. RICHARD C. TRAVERS, IRENE WARFIELD AND BRYANT WASHBURN AT YOUR SERVICE.

OUR POSTERS ARE DISTINCTIVE. They will boom your business. Lithographs are in full four colors. You can order these from your exchange or direct from the Essanay Film Manufacturing Co. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of ESSANAY players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the PLAYERS' PHOTO CO., 177 N. STATE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.



Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

All of These "Keystone" Comedy Company

EXTRA!

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

FORD STERLING

Joins the Universal!

ROBERT THORNBY

Joins the Universal!

YOU ASKED US TO GIVE YOU MORE COMEDY! BUT YOU NEVER DREAMED WE'D GIVE YOU SUCH A STARTLING ANSWER AS THIS!

FORD STERLING needs no introduction. He has made millions laugh. He will now make millions of Universal patrons laugh. Getting him into the Universal fold is one of the biggest things we've ever done for you. Use the brains God gave you!

ROBERT THORNBY is one of the comedy directors whom we have wanted for a long time but did not seem able to land. He's a Universalite now and will make the Universal program more valuable than ever. Use the brains God gave you!

If You're Not Using That Universal Program You'd

Stars Now Join the Universal Staff!

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

EXTRA!

FRED BALSHOFER

Joins the Universal!

H. PATHE LEHRMAN

Joins the Universal!

THE BIG "U" GETS EVERYTHING IT GOES AFTER! THAT'S THE BEAUTY OF BEING THE LARGEST FILM CONCERN IN THE UNIVERSE!

FRED BALSHOFER, the original organizer and producer of "101-Bison" films, has resigned from the New York Motion Picture Co., has formed this new comedy company and will release under the Universal brand. Use the brains God gave you!

H. PATHE LEHRMAN is the man who has written and directed most of the Keystone comedy successes. His work is famous. But now he is working with the Universal instead of against it. It's time for you to use the brains God gave you!

Better Get It Now Before It's Too Late!

J. Warren Kerrigan
as "Samson"

SPECIAL
UNIVERSAL FEATURES

Big News!

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company herewith makes the surprising announcement that it is going to release

"Samson"

Six Reels

through the regular Universal exchanges; that it will have to charge the exchanges the highest price ever charged for film; that the exchanges in turn will have to get a record price from theatres; and that the theatres will have to RAISE THEIR PRICE OF ADMISSION in order to make a big profit. In thus releasing the greatest six-reeler of years, so that Universal exhibitors can derive the first benefit, we are literally handing such exhibitors a fortune on a gold platter. All we ask in return is that NO THEATRE EXHIBIT "SAMSON" FOR LESS THAN A TWENTY-FIVE-CENT ADMISSION FEE! We further ask every exhibitor to wire or write to the nearest Universal exchange, THIS VERY MINUTE, and make application for a booking of "SAMSON." Show your appreciation of this revolutionary handling of a 6-reel masterpiece and WATCH FOR FURTHER PARTICULARS!

SPECIAL UNIVERSAL FEATURES

The Next UNIVERSAL SPECIAL FEATURES Thriller!

"Won in the Clouds"

(3000 Feet)

—The greatest thriller Otis Turner ever staged!

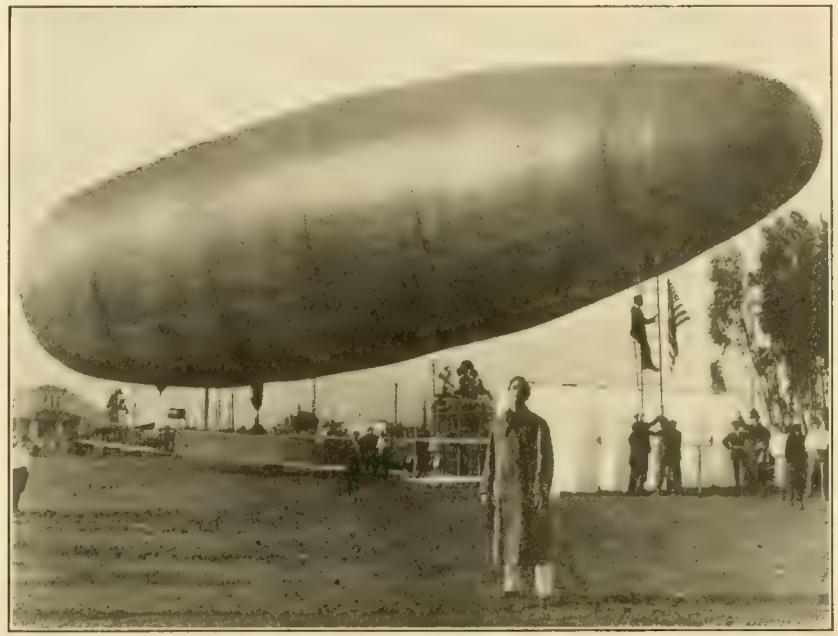
—Six reels of action packed into three!

—A wild animal feature!

—A Knabenshue dirigible airship feature!

—With a love story woven throughout!

—It's a UNIVERSAL SPECIAL!



Roy Knabenshue and His 150-Foot, Twelve Passenger, Dirigible Balloon. Featured in "Won in the Clouds."

—A village destroyed by lyddite bombs!

—Thrilling escape from a trap of flames!

—A fight for a diamond mine!

—A story of the jungle and of lions!

—With a climax that fairly crashes!

—It's a UNIVERSAL SPECIAL!

This feature cost us extra thousands of dollars to produce. It will cost your exchange extra. Therefore it will cost you extra. Ready the middle of March. Book it now and begin to boom it!

Coming !
Coming !
Coming !

Regular Program Features

Coming !
Coming !
Coming !

None but Universal exhibitors can derive the benefit of the fortunes which we have lavished upon the production of these magnificent features. Every week we are releasing SIX superb features on the regular Universal program. For months we have enjoyed the reputation of making THE BEST FEATURES ON EARTH. Don't miss a single one of the features on this advance list :

THE TOUCH OF A CHILD
Two-Reel Imp.....Feb. 23, 1914

CAPTAIN JENNY, S. A.
Three-Reel Gold Seal.....Feb. 24, 1914

THE DEVIL FOX OF THE NORTH
Two-Reel Eclair.....Feb. 25, 1914

FOR THE FAMILY HONOR
Two-Reel Rex.....Feb. 26, 1914

THE STEPMOTHER
Two-Reel Victor.....Feb. 27, 1914

THE LEGEND OF THE PHANTOM TRIBE
Two-Reel Bison.....Feb. 28, 1914

THE MAN BETWEEN
Two-Reel Victor.....March 2, 1914

BY RADIUM'S RAYS
Two-Reel Gold Seal.....March 3, 1914

THE DIAMOND MASTER
Three-Reel Eclair.....March 4, 1914

THE OPAL RING
Two-Reel Imp.....March 5, 1914

SHE WAS ONLY A WORKING GIRL
Two-Reel Nestor.....March 6, 1914

THE YAQUIS' REVENGE
Two-Reel Bison.....March 7, 1914

THE FLAMING DIAGRAM
Two-Reel Imp.....March 9, 1914

THE TWINS' DOUBLE
Three-Reel Gold Seal.....March 10, 1914

INTO THE FOOTHILLS
Two-Reel Eclair.....March 11, 1914

HEART OF THE HILLS
Two-Reel Rex.....March 12, 1914

THE HONEYMOONERS
Two-Reel Victor.....March 13, 1914

SOUTH AFRICAN HUNT
Two-Reel Bison.....March 14, 1914

THE ACID TEST
Two Reel Victor.....March 16, 1914

THE LAMB, THE WOMAN, THE WOLF
Three-Reel Gold Seal.....March 17, 1914

WHEN GOD WILLS
Two-Reel Eclair.....March 18, 1914

THE SILVER LOVING CUP
Two-Reel Imp.....March 19, 1914

THE BLOOD TEST
Two-Reel Imp.....March 23, 1914

DISCORD AND HARMONY
Three-Reel Gold Seal.....March 24, 1914

MY LADY RAFFLES IN THE MYSTERY OF THE LEOPARD
Two-Reel Gold Seal.....March 31, 1914

THE SECRET OF THE WELL
Three-Reel Eclair (Hand Colored) April 1, 1914

ROMANCE OF AN ACTOR
Two-Reel Powers.....April 3, 1914

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

1600 Broadway, New York

CARL LAEMMLE, President

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

One of the greatest triumphs of David Belasco's producing genius.

DANIEL
Pre
By Arrang

DAVID B

The Famous Mo

"A GOOD LI

MR. DAVID BELASCO VISUALIZING A SCENE IN "A GOOD LITTLE DEVIL".

Adapted Fro
By Austi
With DAVID
Original N
Inc'

MARY F

WILLIAM AND ERN

In Five
Release

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

The play that captivated New York—poetry and fantasy, mingled with reality.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

ROHMAN
nts
ement With

ELASCO

ern Fairy Play

TTLE DEVIL"

The French
Strong
ELASCO'S
York Cast ing

CKFORD

NORRIS

T TRUEX

Reels,
March 1st

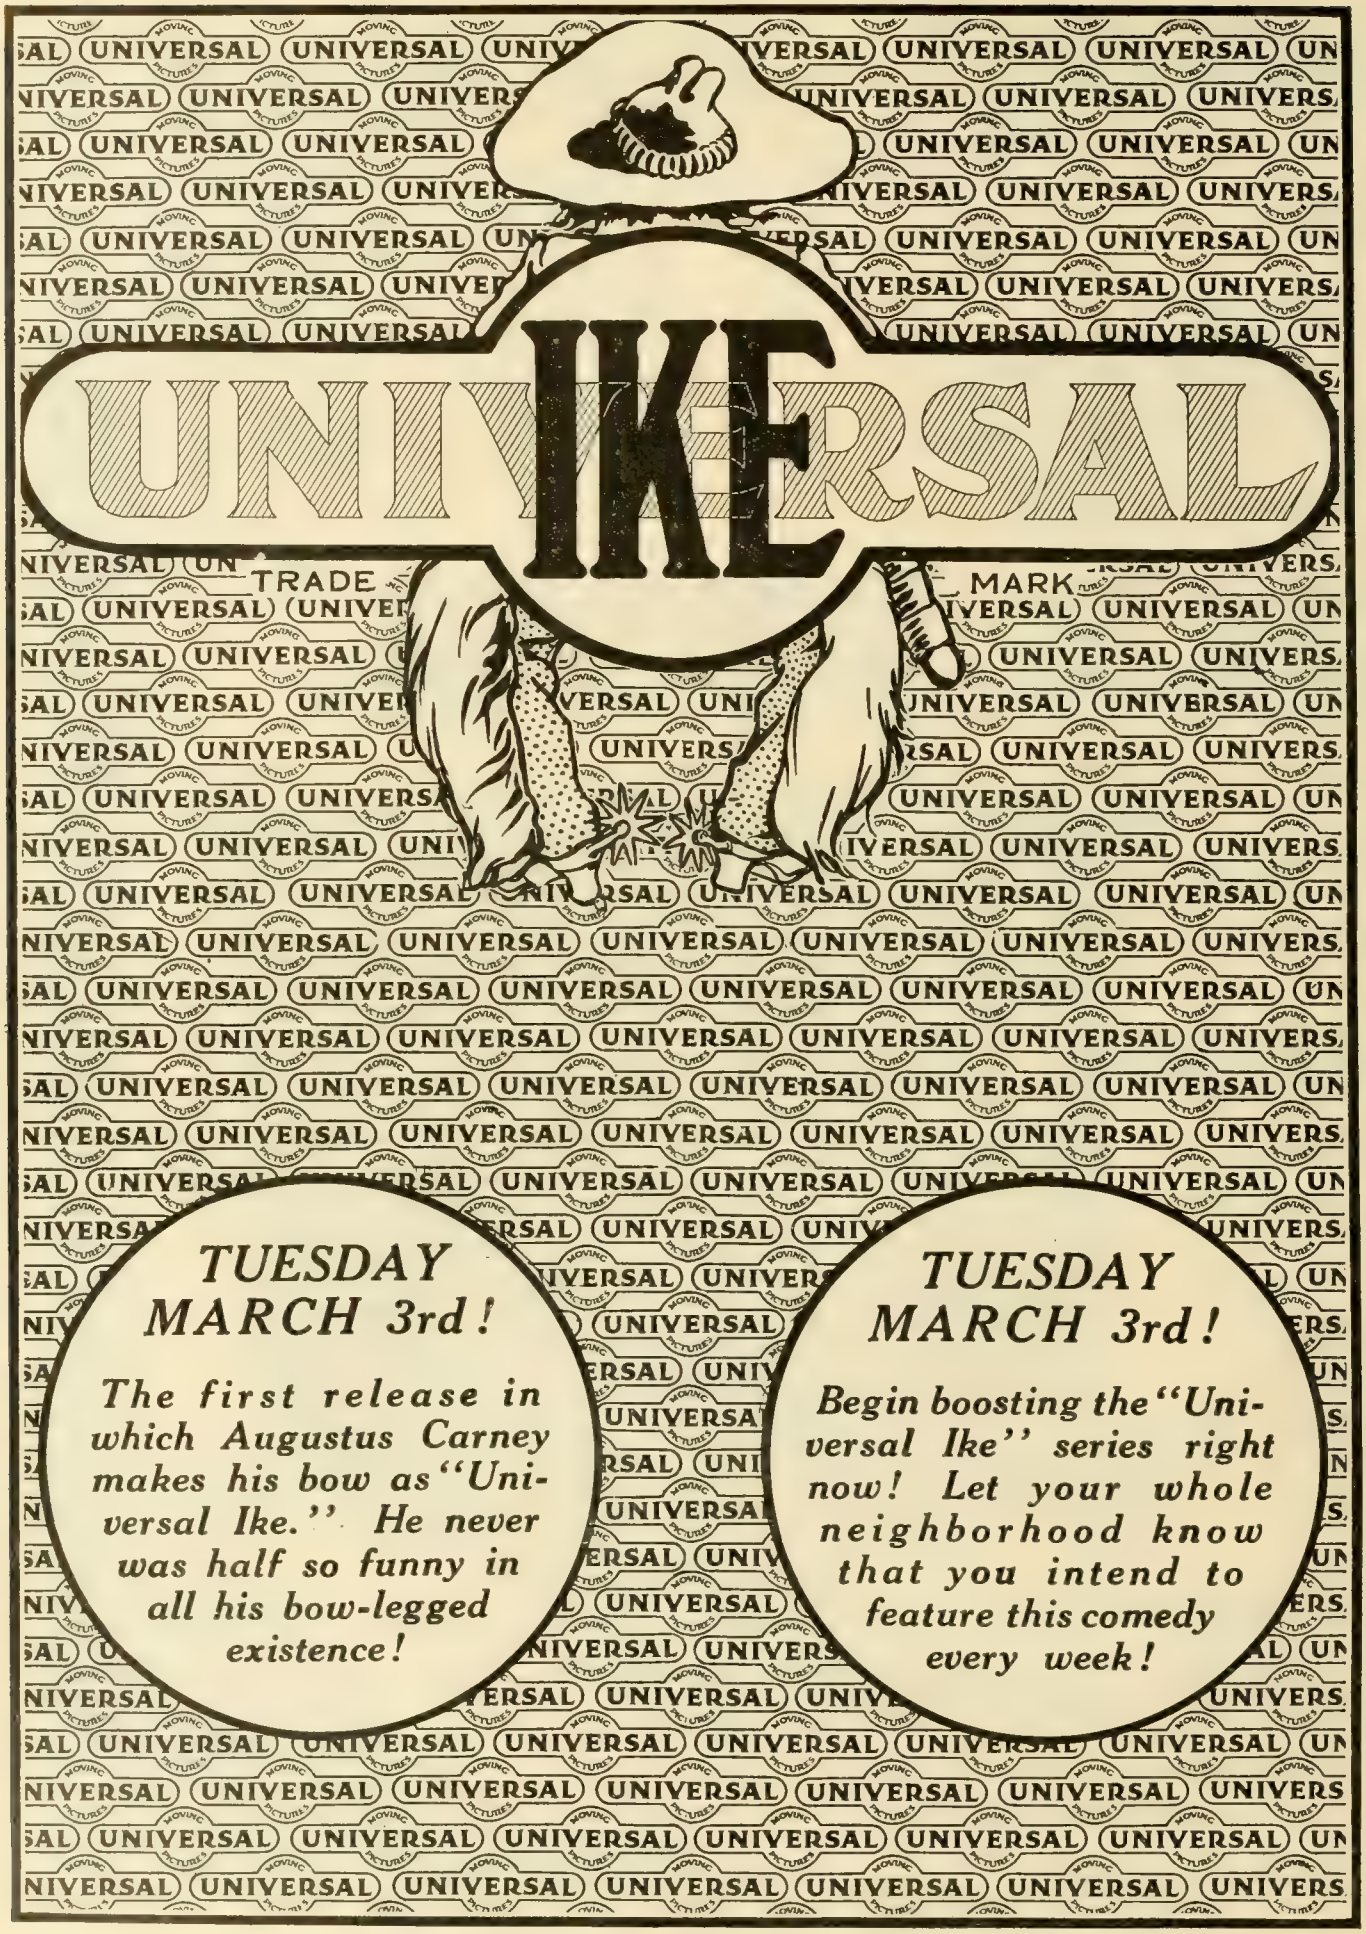
FAIRIES PREFER OLD ATTICS TO PALACES.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FILM COMPANY

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President



UNIVERSAL
IKE TRADE MARK
TUESDAY
MARCH 3rd!
The first release in which Augustus Carney makes his bow as "Universal Ike." He never was half so funny in all his bow-legged existence!
TUESDAY
MARCH 3rd!
Begin boosting the "Universal Ike" series right now! Let your whole neighborhood know that you intend to feature this comedy every week!

Universal Posters

Why? Because they attract — they grip — they pull — and they keep on pulling because they TELL THE TRUTH!

Gorgeously beautiful 1, 3 and 6-sheets for "The Merchant of Venice," now ready. Storm your neighborhood with them! If you can't buy all you need from your exchange, order direct from the Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

CARL LAEMMLE, President

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

ANOTHER MIGHTY "CINES" TRIUMPH

IN EIGHT PARTS

Following a story of love, intrigue and battle — featuring Anthony Novelli and Jeanette Trimble of "Antony and Cleopatra" fame—staged and produced by these master makers of ancient and mediaeval subjects, you will find a

"George Kleine Attraction" of Marvelous Power!

We firmly believe that in these wonderful eight reels the world will see the crystalization of its highest ideal of this "Man of Destiny." Charged with the thrill of spectacular battle scenes, showing the mighty warrior in his most human and pleasing moods in the intimacy of his personal life, we think you will agree no truer or more interesting study of Napoleon the Great has ever been offered the American student of French history.

Ready for the American Market March 10

Get in touch with our booking office nearest you. Our representative will talk terms and dates.

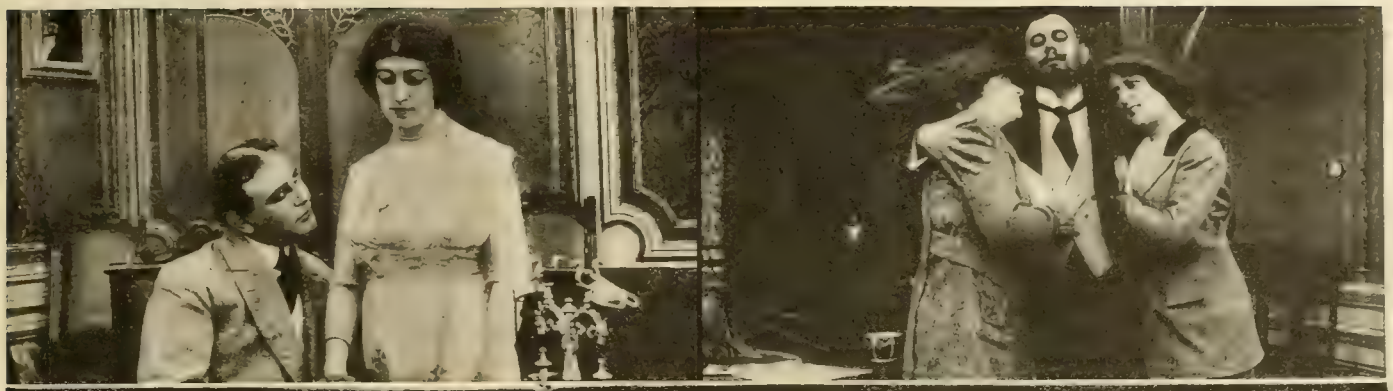
BRANCH OFFICES

Atlanta, Ga.....10 Auburn Ave.
Boston, Mass.....521 Colonial Bldg.
Buffalo, N. Y.....590 Ellicott Sq.
Columbus, O.....21 S. High Street.
Denver, Colo.....405 Railroad Bldg.
Kansas City, Mo.....701 American Bank Bldg.
Toronto, Ont.....76 Adelaide Street.
Memphis, Tenn.....410 McCall Bldg.
Minneapolis, Minn.....210 Temple Ct. Bldg.
Philadelphia, Pa.....251 N. 13th Street.
Pittsburgh, Pa.....509 Lyceum Theater Bldg.
Seattle, Wash.....322 Madison Street.
San Francisco, Cal.....407 Monadnock Bldg.
Dallas, Texas.....238 Saner Bldg.

"George Kleine Attractions"

Chicago Offices - - - - 166 N. State Street
New York Offices - - - - 1476 Broadway

(Copyright, 1914, by George Kleine.)



The Doctor's Weakness for Money Causes His One Great Mistake — How Self-Immolation plus the Caprice of Dame Fortune Disentangled the Skeins of Destiny —A Charming, Highly Entertaining Subject.

KLEINE-CINES

(In Two Parts)

"THE GREATEST GIFT"

(Copyright, 1913, by George Kleine)

For Release Tuesday, March 10th, 1914

Dr. Beverly, an eye specialist, succumbs to sudden temptation and forges the name of his wife's father to a check in order to pay his gambling debts. Stricken with remorse, he flees to a foreign country, leaving behind his wife and two little daughters.

In the new country, after numerous thrilling adventures, Beverly, under an assumed name, makes a wonderful reputation through almost miraculous cures of blindness. He returns to his native land as the most talked-of specialist of his day.

By a series of strange events, he is thrown face to face with his own daughters and learns that his wife has been blind since shortly after his flight many years before. His skillful fingers soon restore her sight, and the happiness of their reunion is doubled by the love of their children.

A dramatic, gripping photoplay, splendidly staged and charmingly portrayed.

RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY

One, three and six sheets with this subject

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State Street

CHICAGO, ILL.

KLEINE

PATHÉ Pictures and the

The greatest ever effected PICTURES and

By an exclusive the world's greatest zation, PATHE pic told in the great the same day they your patrons know

If you want annou us. They're FREE. so boost if you want

INSISTON GET FILMS AT YO

If you can't get we will

PATHÉ FRERES =

HEARST Newspapers

combination
in the Business,
real PUBLICITY.

arrangement with newspaper organiture stories will be HEARST papers are released. Let you run these films.
ncement slides ask
You get the benefit to get the money.

TING THESE
UR EXCHANGE

them write us and help you.

1 Congress St., Jersey City, N. J.

·LONDON·PARIS·NEW YORK·BERLIN·VIENNA·BRUSSELS·ROME·MILAN·HAMBURG·

TRADE MARK

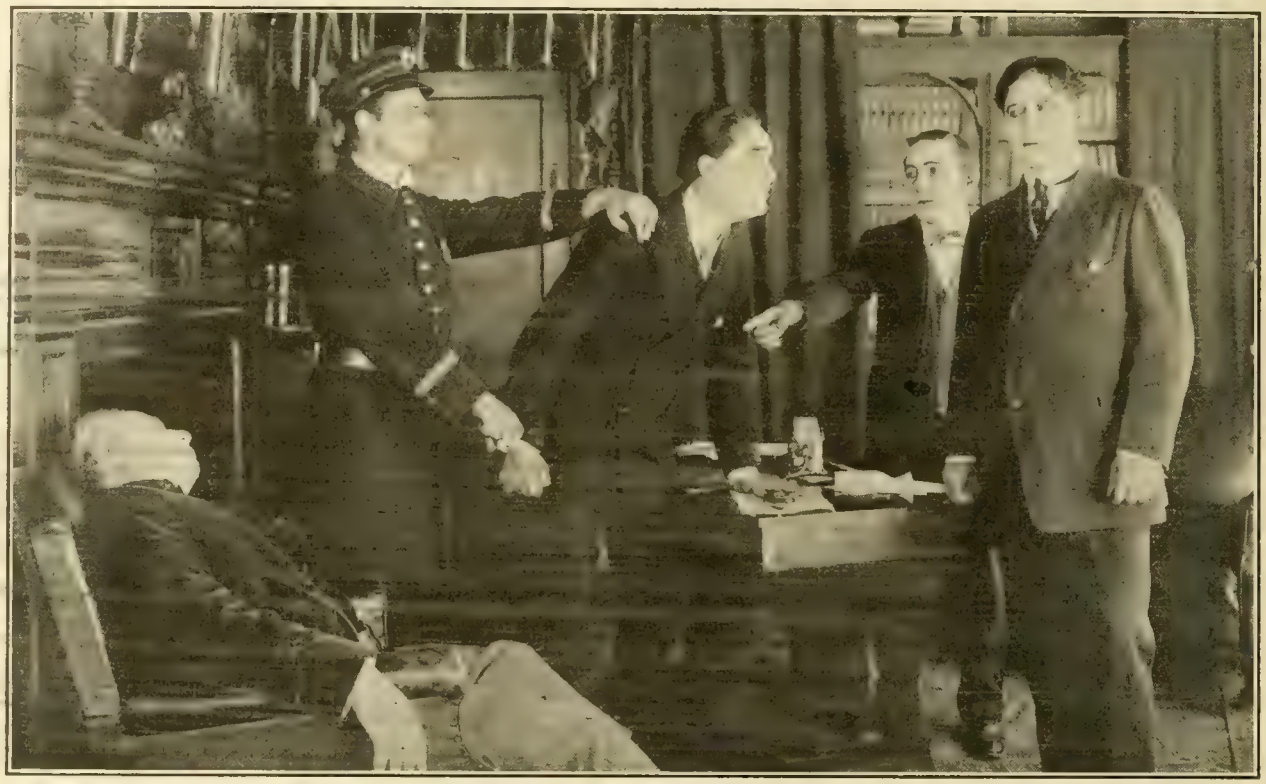
PATHÉ

TRADE MARK

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

·AMSTERDAM·MUNICH·ATHENS·ROSSTOFF·SYDNEY·ALGIERS·SINGAPORE·SHANGHAI·MANILA·CAIRO·HONGKONG·BACOU·

·BUENOS AIRES·MEXICO·RIO JANEIRO·BARCELONA·BELGRADE·BUCAREST·ZURICH·WARSAW·SOFIA·MARSEILLES·BUDAPEST·



Scene from "The Wasted Years."

THE WASTED YEARS

IN TWO PARTS

An interesting drama of a prodigal son who is deservedly disinherited by his father's will, yet who by fraud gains his inheritance; but retribution overtakes him in the end. Featuring Francis Carlyle, M. U. Penn, Jack Standing and Pearl Sindelar.

RELEASED THURSDAY, MARCH 19th

BREAKING EVEN

A TWO PART COMEDY

A most laughable story, in which false pearls replace genuine pearls several times, and each time with new complications and new occasions for laughter. Fine photography and acting add to the enjoyment.

RELEASED SATURDAY, MARCH 21st

Insist upon these films at your exchange. If you can't get them, write us and we will help you

TRADE MARK

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

COVERS THE WHOLE WORLD

PATHÉ FRÈRES 1 CONGRESS ST., JERSEY CITY, N. J.

TRADE MARK

·ST PETERSBURG·STOCKHOLM·DRESDEN·MADRID·ODESSA·MOSKOW·KIEW·

EDISON

Two "DOLLY" Pictures a Month

WE are repeating the announcement because we want you to realize exactly what it means to you. Both of the "Mary" pictures set a new mark for box office receipts and they were released monthly. When we announced Mary Fuller in the "Dolly" series a great many of the exhibitors who had been successful with "Mary" wrote that it would pile the receipts still higher if we released two "Dolly" pictures a month. The verdict was so unanimous that we are changing the schedule. Beginning with the third story, on March 14th, there will be a "Dolly" film released the second and fourth Saturday of each month.

Each one of the thousands of Mary Fuller fans is going to see this series. Why not at your theatre?

COMING SINGLE REELS

*Mr. Sniffkins' Widow
Comedy. Monday, March 2nd.

With the Eyes of Love
Drama. Tuesday, March 3rd.

An Absent-Minded Mother

A Fourfooted Desperado
Comedies. Wednesday, March 4th.

*When the Cartridges Failed
Drama. Saturday, March 7th.

COMING MULTIPLE REELS

Comedy and Tragedy
Drama. Friday, March 6th.

The Price of the Necklace
Drama. Friday, March 13th.

One sheet. One and three sheets. One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.*

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope, Type "D."

LUBIN

RELEASES

A Comedy Every Tuesday and Saturday!
A Single Reel Drama Every Friday!
A Two Reel Feature Every Wednesday and Thursday!

Exhibitors will please note and arrange their bookings to secure all Lubin releases

---

FIVE WONDERFUL REELS OF

"Through Fire to Fortune"

or, "THE SUNKEN VILLAGE"

By CLAY M. GREENE

"A new and Peculiarly American thrill"—"An unusually realistic portrayal of a fire in a Coal Mine"—"The crowning triumph of big scenes"—"Whole houses sink into the Earth."

"REMARKABLE EXAMPLES OF NIGHT PHOTOGRAPHY"

This unusual feature, along with "THE THIRD DEGREE," "THE LION AND THE MOUSE" and "The Battle of Shiloh," are released through the offices of The General Film Co.

COMING FEATURES

"THE DAUGHTERS OF MEN" — Five Reels — By Charles Klein

"THE GAMBLERS" — Five Reels — By Charles Klein

FIVE RELEASES EACH WEEK

"IN THE GAMBLER'S WEB"—Drama, Special in 2 Reels	Wednesday, March 4th
"HIS WIFE"—Drama, Special in 2 Reels : : : :	Thursday, March 5th

"THE LOST CHILD"—Comedy—	Split Reel	TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24th
"THE RISE OF OFFICER CASEY"—Comedy—	Split Reel	TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24th
"SEALED ORDERS"—Drama, Special in Two Reels—		WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25th
"THE TWO ROSES"—Drama, Special in Two Reels—		THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26th
"A DESPERATE CHANCE"—Drama—		FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th
"COON TOWN SUFFRAGETTES"—Comedy—	Split Reel	SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28th
"FATHER'S TEMPER"—Comedy—	Split Reel	SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28th

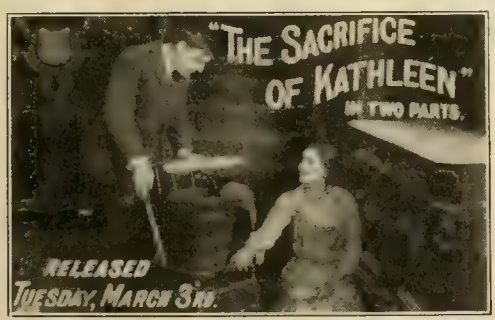
LUBIN'S ATTRACTIVE POSTERS

One and Three Sheets with Single Reels—One, Three and Six Sheets with all Multiple Reels—in Five Colors. Order from your Exchange or A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Lubin Manufacturing Co.
Philadelphia, Pa.

VITAGRAPH

Every Week
Two Vitagraph Special Features
Each in Two Parts
Tuesday and Saturday
Every Week
A Comedy every Wednesday and Friday.



"IN THE OLD ATTIC"

Drama. Monday, February 23rd

The old father lies bound and gagged amid his boy's playthings. The sudden appearance of his son's fatherless child, and the little fellow's timely assistance, makes him repent his harshness to his own son. Charles Kent and S. Rankin Drew are father and son.

"DOCTOR POLLY"

Comedy-Drama. Special Two-Part Feature
Tuesday, February 24th

Ridgeway is recuperating at his friend's mansion. He is told the place is haunted. Polly impersonates the ghost, cures Ridgeway and makes him the happiest man on earth. Lillian Walker and Wallie Van as the Doctor and the Patient.

"THE HERO"
"CRAWFISHING"

Comedy and Educational. Wednesday, February 25th

1. Her fat beau grabs the "bomb" and throws it in the ice-pitcher. He is a hero and she is his heroine. Hughie Mack and Norma Talmadge are the leads. 2. A catchy and exciting Swedish occupation.

"THE OLD OAK'S SECRET"

Southern Drama. Thursday, February 26th

It hides the will that foils the adventurer, gives the estate to the rightful heir and makes two loving souls extremely happy. Margaret Gibson and George Cooper are the two lovers.

"A Change in Baggage Checks"

Comedy. Friday, February 27th

The Comedian and the Comedienne get their clothes mixed. Each makes an unexpected hit in the wardrobe of the other. John Bunny and Flora Finch are the biggest kind of laughs, and put both their costumes in the one trunk.

"THE DRUDGE"

Drama. Special Two-Part Feature
Saturday, February 28th

She slaves for the man she marries and pines for the man she loves. Her love for her child makes her faithful to the first, but a happy fate makes it possible for her to find joy with the second. Dorothy Kelly, S. Rankin Drew, Wm. Humphrey, Bobby Connolly and George Stewart are the cast.

SIX A WEEK

"BUFFALO JIM"
Western Drama.....MONDAY, MARCH 2nd
"THE SACRIFICE OF KATHLEEN"
Drama—Special Two-Part Feature.....TUESDAY, MARCH 3rd
"A PAIR OF FRAUDS"
Comedy.....WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4th
"SILENT TRAILS"
"SCENES IN NORSLAND"
Poetic Drama and Educational.....THURSDAY, MARCH 5th
"THE SPEEDER'S REVENGE"
Comedy.....FRIDAY, MARCH 6th
"THE MISCHIEF MAKER"
Drama—Special Two-Part Feature.....SATURDAY, MARCH 7th

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY RELEASES A SPECIAL FEATURE IN TWO PARTS EVERY TUESDAY AND SATURDAY AND A COMEDY EVERY WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY.

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS—7 x 9 PHOTOS OF VITAGRAPH PLAYERS.

Broadway Star Features, Surpassing All Previous Vitagraph Achievements

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Secret of the Will

IN TWO PARTS

Featuring Miss Anna Nilsson

The despicable method by which an unscrupulous millionaire robs his cousin of a fortune; the pluck of a girl who unmasks his villainy and brings him to justice, make this of intense interest.

Released Monday, March 9th

Superb 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters for this Feature

THE MEDICINE MAN'S VENGEANCE

In Two Parts, Featuring Princess Mona Darkfeather

Fearing the white man's hold upon his tribe, the Moqui Medicine Man engineers an attack against the miners. The desperate struggle that ensues will hold your patrons breathless.

Released Wednesday, March 11th

Striking 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters for this Headliner

HER FALLEN HERO

The plot whereby a couple of stranded actors get a meal, fills this comedy with merriment.

(On the same Reel)

LOOKING FOR A FORTUNE

A country boy's determination to marry an heiress, and what happens as the result, makes this one long laugh.

Released Friday, March 13th

THE RACE FOR A MINE

The hair-raising race between a locomotive and an automobile; the hero's struggle with a Mexican bandit, just two of the thrilling incidents.

Released Saturday, March 14th

Special 1 and 3-Sheet Posters

Coming in time for St. Patrick's Day

"THE COLLEEN BAWN,"—Kalem's superb three-part adaptation of Dion Boucicault's immortal drama of Irish life. Produced in Ireland. Released Monday, March 16th.

KALEM

KALEM COMPANY

235-239 W. 23rd St., NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
E. J. Chalmers .....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie .....Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.
WESTERN OFFICE—169 West Washington Street (Post Building), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 a year

ADVERTISING RATES.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The index for this issue will be found on page 1174.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, February 28, 1914.

CHANGE OF WESTERN OFFICES.

The Chicago offices of the Moving Picture World will be moved about March 4th from 167 West Washington Street to 917-919 Schiller Building.

Facts and Comments

A MOST important decision affecting the copyright in relation to motion pictures has just been handed down by Judge Hand, of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. A question arose as to the right of an author to make separate sales of the rights to dramatize and the rights to film a story. Under the well-known decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of the Kalem Company against Harper Brothers, it was held that the production of a copyrighted book in motion pictures was an infringement of the dramatic rights of the book. Judge Hand now declares that since the adoption of the amendments to the copyright law in 1912 the dramatic rights do not include the filming rights. The Court calls attention to the new method of procedure to be followed since the adoption of the amendment in the registration of moving picture plays. It goes on to say "that it is one thing to secure the copyright upon a drama proper and another to secure it on a moving picture play." An author, in the court's opinion, might copyright his play and "he would still not have copyrighted or published his moving picture rights." Further defining the rights of authors, the judge holds that "he (the author) could get a separate copyright upon his film. Of course, he could sell his statutory or common-law copyright of the play and keep the moving picture copyright, or he could sell each." A resume of the decision will be found in another part of the paper. Owing to the confusion which has heretofore existed on the subject of the respective rights of the author and the dramatizer, producers of motion pictures based upon popular books have been compelled to procure the consent of both the author of the book and of the owner of the dramatic rights in order to avoid all possibility of litigation.

* * *

WITH no desire to gloat, and solely for the purpose of a kind warning to those who may be tempted, we record the fact that the exhibition of the nastiest of the "white-slave" films has been a persistent failure from a financial point of view. The drama as well as the film have fallen flat and have caused their owners and promoters many an uneasy moment. The lesson of this goes much beyond the present issue. It demonstrates that there is after all little profit in ministering to a craze, either on the stage or on the screen. Fits of hysteria will come and go. Some few men may on occasion be able to capitalize the hysteria while it is at its height, but rarely does it add anything to their reputation even when they are successful. Where the craze or hysteria is due to the sprouting of a germ of indecency or obscenity the man who is identified with an effort at capitalizing it loses even if he makes money.

* * *

TO those who are inexperienced in legislative matters and methods, the flood of bills now before the New York state legislature affecting motion pictures and theatrical exhibitions might be cause for alarm. We have a bill creating a "theatrical commission" with practically the power of life and death over all amusements within the state; another bill authorizing Sunday performances under certain conditions, and again another measure proposing to stop motion picture exhibitions on the first day of the week, "commonly called Sunday." Most of these bills will never get beyond a report from the committee to which they have been referred, while others will die in one house without ever reaching the other. The one bill worth watching is the proposed prohibition of Sunday exhibitions of motion pictures.

* * *

IN another part of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD we record the notable news that while we all hoped and wished for the systematic courses of kinematographic instruction, there was one man right here with us who quietly worked on a kinematographic course in zoology and who has now completed such a course from bugs to elephants. Educational kinematography has thus advanced many miles, and it was done so quietly that none of us knew anything about it. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD congratulates Mr. Raymond L. Ditmars on his splendid achievement.

* * *

WE do not quite understand the complaint of a valued correspondent who writes to tell us that "too many Catholic priests appear in motion pictures and that there are not enough ministers." After seeing something like ten thousand feet of pictures every week and consulting our staff who see them all every week we cannot lay our hands on a single case in which the clergy, irrespective of any denomination, has not been treated with all due respect. Priests and ministers, like lawyers, doctors and indeed all classes of people, are necessary to a true portrayal of life.

Persistent Error

By Louis Reeves Harrison

NOW that everybody is writing drama, or writing about it, please take warning. One gentleman who has published several books on the subject says: "It would not be possible for anybody to devise an utterly new story for a play. The dramatic material in life is limited. According to certain critics, the number of dramatic situations is a little more than thirty; according to others, it is a little less than twenty, but all are agreed that the number is extremely small." Last week I quoted from King Naram Sin of Chaldea, who said three thousand years before Christ was born, "We have fallen upon evil times."

Now let me quote from a noted scientist: "Ignorance is comparatively safe. It is error that does the mischief, and the stronger the reasoning faculties working upon meager materials the more misleading and disastrous are the erroneous conclusions thus drawn for mankind. All the shores of the great ocean of time are strewn with these whitened skeletons of misguided thought. Truth furnishes the only real hope. It is truth that should be made attractive, alluring, contagious, to such a degree that it shall penetrate the whole mass of mankind, crowding out and replacing error that now fills the world."

"Action depends upon the nature of world ideas. The principal quality of ideas as affecting action is the relative amount of truth and error they embody. All progress in ideas has consisted in the gradual elimination of error and the substitution of truth, but most of the progress due to ideas is of that superficial kind which produces merely material civilization and does not penetrate the lower strata of society at all."

It is obvious that moving pictures must eventually become a tremendous medium for the dissemination of truth or error—that seems to be their destiny—and that it lies in the power of all contributing to their production to materially further progress by scattering to all parts of the world the noblest results of human thought, those founded on judgment and knowledge, those growing from the rich soil of scientific truth. This is the highest purpose of the New Art, and all critics should have that purpose in mind in reviewing what is shown on the screen.

One of the world's greatest playwrights says: "That fine spirit of choice and delicate instinct of selection is what perfects what the artist realizes for us in life. That subtle tact of omission is really the critical faculty, and no one who does not possess it can create anything worth while in art." The critic's mission may be a thankless one—it usually is—when his flaming sword is turned against the low products of vanity or cupidity, but he will gain confidence and respect in the end if he is a man of high ideals and has the courage to stand by his convictions. The one who panders will just as surely be hoisted by his own petard.

Only the ignorant and the cowardly pander to what is base in human nature. They are drags on civilization, for error believed with sufficient force is terribly retrogressive in its effects. A very common error is that of reasoning by analogy, of inferring from a similarity in two or more things that they will agree in all other particulars, and this method seems to be the favorite one of those who do not write dramas but write about them, whereas scientists use it with extreme caution and assign it limited value. There may be analogical fitness, but there is no intellectual justification, for instance, in the statement that "the number of dramatic situations is little more than thirty."

Certain great dramatists of other days treated old stories in a highly original manner, and this fact has been regarded as so significant that plagiarism almost came to be regarded as a dramatic essential. The same writer admits in the same volume that "it is impossible to measure the contemporary drama by critical standards that have been applied to the art of other ages." The trouble with him is that he has no other materials to work upon than his own limited conception of what has been done. He would tag thirty plots, pigeonhole them, and have us believe there is no hope for the drama, that it and the life it is supposed to reflect are incapable of change, development and growth. And, then, the purpose of art has not dawned upon him.

Bernard Shaw sees in the theater of today "an infinitely powerful instrumentality for popular education and social enlightenment." Strindberg realized the dearth of creative genius, but he believed that the trend of dramatic composition was toward "recognition of the innermost meaning of life as an ordeal through which superior conditions are to be attained." Ibsen's effort was to rouse the world, "to open its eyes to a freer, richer future, to point out the need of ridding itself of false ideals." Hauptmann says, "action on the stage will give way to exhaustive consideration of the motives which prompt men to act." Perhaps Granville Barker's view is the broadest—"We must go on breaking new ground, enlarging the boundary of the drama, fitting it for every sort of expression."

Maurice Maeterlinck, keen student of all the workings of the human mind, strongly opposes the "bloodshed and gaudy theatricalism of modern drama" and declares that "character in action" will be replaced by "action in character." These men have all put their fingers on the pulse of popularity and felt its responsive throb. They have solved the problem of fascinating audiences made up of all kinds of people, in producing an impression that all seen and heard by the people in front is something that really happened. They have succeeded in so fusing art with real life that the two seem one and the same thing.

All this does not mean that either stage or screen presentation is not to show how events are powerfully influenced by chance, circumstance and the pressure of external influence, such as are shown in stories of adventure. I have always advocated variety of performance, and this means the inclusion of what stirs the emotions by exciting incidents, but, in advocating that variety, there is revolt against monotony of melodrama, against a tiresome succession of violent scenes. A very large number of those who go to the picture shows are weary of what merely skims over the surface of sensational events and are more deeply interested in what is beneath that surface, in what is most vital to the struggle portrayed.

The best description of what a motion-picture theater should be is possibly that applied by Shaw to the stage. He says it should be "a factory of thought, a prompter of conscience, an elucidator of social conduct, an armory against despair and dullness, a temple of the Ascent of Man." The shaft of light that is sent from the projecting machine to the screen would then become better than the cheering and healing one of radium, penetrating the depths of all that is mysterious in this life of ours and illuminating not only its truth and error but what is behind it all.

Is the "Nickel Show" on the Wane?

By W. Stephen Bush

TIME was when the nickel seemed to be the keystone of dramatic kinematography. It was less than half a dozen years ago the dominant feature in our professional coat-of-arms. The motion picture and the nickel were so intimately associated as inseparable and conjunctive entities in the public mind that it was hard to think of one without making the other vibrate in the memory. To suggest to some exhibitors, even by a whisper, that they ought to raise the price of admission to ten cents was regarded by them as a counsel of destruction.

Many amusing recollections linger in my mind of the heroic attempts made in those days to divorce the motion picture from the nickel. I recall how, in one small city in the East, the two proprietors of the only shows in town met in friendly converse and deplored the small returns from their investment. It was suggested by the writer that they add another reel to their program, pay a little more for quality and then announce an increase in the price of admission, telling the public the reasons therefor in perfectly candid fashion. The idea seemed to take root. There were deliberations and conferences and at last a solemn covenant was entered into by which both parties bound themselves by every consideration and every earthly advantage to raise the price of admission to a dime beginning the coming Saturday. I confess I was considerably elated over the action of my exhibiting friends and waited around the theaters, which were in close proximity to each other, to watch the ten cent sign go up. Alas for the cold feet of my friends. The ten cent sign had indeed been painted, but it was never displayed and promulgated. Instead, the time-worn legend, "Admission Five Cents," was reigning in both temples of art with unabated supremacy.

There are to this day people who sincerely believe that he who strikes at the nickel strikes at the foundations of the industry. These men, quite well meaning of course, are not satisfied to have the higher-priced motion picture theater succeed. They believe with a steadfastness which is sweetly impervious to reason that the moment the price is raised from five cents to ten the exhibiting branch of the industry is doomed to early extinction and the producers will have to retire to their palaces to live on the returns of the past.

All of us are agreed, I think, that there will always be well-conducted and prosperous motion picture entertainments with no higher admission than five cents and a possible raise in the price on Saturdays and Sundays. There is an emphatic dissent from this view by some men who in their way are quite as dogmatic as the worshipper of the nickel. It is, however, extremely probable that the number of five cent theaters is going to diminish.

There will always be a class of patrons to whom variety constitutes the chief spice and attraction in the motion picture entertainment, but it is not altogether clear why the more expensive offering cannot furnish both substance and variety and thus suit equally the most divergent of tastes.

After all is said and done, the kinematographic art cannot thrive and surely cannot develop in the direction of its higher destiny and its greater artistic and ethical ideals if it is to depend on the nickel alone. Quality cannot be co-existent with cheapness. With all possible regard for the exhibitor who is, or believes himself to be, forced to adhere to the lowest price of admission, it cannot be denied that the future of kinematography rests very largely on the men who strive after better things.

The more money the producer is able to get for his work, the more quality will be put back into his films. I do not believe that there is any man in the industry to-day who will be disposed to deny that the falling off of the demand for single reels is due not alone to the influx of the features but in no small contributory degree to the deterioration in quality from which single reels had begun to suffer long before the multiple reel made its appearance on the horizon. Charles Pathe was quite right when he frankly declared that the single reel had been stricken with the dread disease of monotony. Trace this deterioration in quality back to its source and you will find that the convulsive loyalty to the nickel had much to do with it.

If the features consisting of multiple reels had never done more than force a raise in the price of admission, their coming was not in vain. The feature, however, does not guarantee quality merely because it consists of more than a thousand feet. It is no more immune from monotony and other equally fatal defects than the single reel. Indeed, when the art was in its infancy the unit of thousand feet was perhaps the best, as it forced condensation, and without the art of compressing and condensing, there is no prospect for good dramatic kinematography. Cheapness of the destructive variety is just as possible with the feature as with the single reel and it is just as possible to run a nickel show composed of cheap features as a program of cheap single reels.

The higher price of admission into the kinematographic entertainment is necessary, not alone for the benefit of the exhibitor, but for the maintenance and improvement of quality. There has been very little effort, we are sorry to say, to educate the public to higher standards and to higher prices. The public has educated itself. Close observers of events in the world of motion pictures are agreed that the public have been ready for higher quality and higher prices long before the exhibitors or the producers were ready to make the change. If an ability to anticipate the movements and changes in the public taste form part of a true showman's mental equipment we cannot boast of much clever "showmanship." The public ask for higher quality and they know that higher quality means higher prices.

There is too much timidity in exhibiting circles and too much foolish fear of competition. There are too many exhibitors whose spines give way completely when their receipts on the first night of a new policy or experiment show a decrease, however slight. The thought that the nearest competitor may gain, or seem to gain, a slight advantage, paralyzes every effort at giving the new way a fair trial.

Eventually, of course, the situation will clear itself and quality and better prices of admission will be found floating on the top. The men with foresight, daring and ambition will forge to the front, while the men to whom the nickel is an idol will drop further and further into the rear. The rear is necessary, to be sure, in every well-ordered procession, but it is never the most profitable place nor the place of honor.

If there be any doubters as to the situation and all its present aspects, let them look across the water. The quality of kinematography on the other side is not higher than ours, but it is improving more rapidly and it bids fair to beat us if we cannot readjust our prices. In even the poorest countries of Europe, such as Italy and Spain, it is rare to find a house charging less than ten cents.

The Screen Children's Gallery

By W. Stephen Bush

In opening this gallery of the most famous and interesting children of the Screen, the Moving Picture World wishes to pay a well-deserved tribute to the clever and gifted little boys and girls who have helped with such skill and sincerity to make the motion picture true to life. Talent unconscious of its merit and value is the most charming because the rarest sight in the whole world of amusements. The gifted child seems more natural and less self-conscious before the tiny eye of the camera than before the crowded audience. The screen has developed much juvenile talent in new ways much to the delight of millions of spectators and much to the profit of the art in general.

Matthew Roubert.

MASTER MATTHEW ROUBERT, who has appeared in many productions and whose success in the filmed version of "John Barleycorn" has been commented upon by experts, has just reached the age of seven. The interview with Master Roubert had been most carefully arranged and was looked forward to both by the stern parent and the interviewer as a somewhat elaborate and ceremonious affair. We all built on the theory that Master Roubert would be induced to concentrate on the subject-matter of the interview. He, however, distinctly refused to so concentrate but rather occupied himself with testing the opportunities for climbing afforded by the handsome office furniture. I asked him in what I intended for my most formal and compelling manner whether he liked to act in moving pictures. He professed a willingness to wager on the proposition and did it in two short Saxon words.

His Natural Smile.

Pressed for details of his professional work Master Roubert declared that in "John Barleycorn" he carried a can of beer.

"It wasn't beer," he added quickly, "it was sarsaparilla."

After assuring the interviewer that he drank the sarsaparilla as soon as he had withdrawn from the camera's eye, the young artist broke forth into enthusiastic eulogies of his parent, proclaiming him to be the best father that ever lived.

Before the Camera.

"My papa would give me anything I want, if I asked him for a hundred dollar bill he would give it to me."

The parent plainly embarrassed by this supreme confidence of his offspring and not unreasonably anticipating a practical and immediate test directed the conversation into more conventional channels. Master Roubert is a charming little fellow with a mass of nut-brown hair cut in the style a la Buster. He has bright black eyes and pleasing regular features. I feel he will be in much demand as a portrayer of character parts. Master Roubert did not hesitate to voice his opinion that more pictures should be made "with children in them." He thinks that nothing is too hard for him and he looks forward to new parts waking and sleeping. The pictures that go with this brief biographical sketch show the young man's natural laugh and his ability to be funny in costume. Master Roubert, it is said, will shortly join the Universal forces.

Adelaide Lawrence.

INTERVIEWED Adelaide Lawrence, aged seven, in the Kalem studio. Adelaide was chaperoned but not coached by both her father and mother, indeed, much of the biographical data were gathered from Adelaide while she was seated on her mother's knee. Around the Kalem studio little Adelaide is not a bit less popular than she is with her thousands of screen admirers. The reason is simple. The little girl, though very evidently possessed of good gifts, is quite modest and goes about her business in a most winning oldfashioned manner. As a desirable specimen of the child of the screen little Adelaide ranks high.

Adelaide Lawrence.

The young lady expressed a decided preference for comic parts, a most unusual thing in an artist of tender years. As a rule, girls of that age want to play Juliet or Lucia of Lammermoor or Lady Macbeth. Stranger still Adelaide has acted in many of the famous companies but is now likely to remain a good while with the Kalems, where her father is a successful director. She has made a decided hit in such pictures as "The Highborn Child and the Beggar," "The Influence of a Child," "The Haunted House." Adelaide is quick to perceive all the possibilities of her part at once. Once she gets before the camera she is absorbed by her task and needs no more than a nod from her father.

"I am, of course, recognized by a good many people when I travel around the city," said little Adelaide, "and everybody is so nice to me. Ofter people will stop me and speak to me, calling me by the name under which I happened to appear in some popular picture."

Miss Lawrence in Action.

"Let No Man Escape"

Released Through General Film Company.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

THE two reel subject by Essanay, entitled "Let No Man Escape," has a story that is not infrequent in topic, yet it possesses some features that are quite unusual. In order to bring the spectator from the very outset into an atmosphere of mystery, the first scene is that of a tragedy, and there is nothing to show the motive that caused it nor yet a single incident that has led up to it. We simply must accept things as they are, in the nature of a postulate, and confine ourselves to following the working out of the problem that follows. One must confess that the interest aroused by the development of the plot causes the spectator wholly to lose sight of the abrupt introduction.

Scene from "Let No Man Escape" (Essanay).

The story is didactic, as it aims at convincing the onlooker of the remarkable influence of faith in God on the life of an innocent man, around whom circumstantial evidence has woven a net of guilt, as well as in the fact that it shows the apprehension and punishment of the guilty one. As a rule the drama, or the photodrama, or the story that is written to point a moral fails in its object. In all these one must be shown life as it is, even to the extreme of witnessing the punishment of the innocent and the escape of the guilty. True art "holds the mirror up to nature," heedless of what one's wishes may be.

Scene from "Let No Man Escape" (Essanay).

The cast offers us three important characters—the innocent man, John Brannon; the guilty man, Gordon Thorne, and the essential detective, Gunther. The first two are respectively represented by Richard C. Travers and John H. Cossar, and the last named by Wm. Bailey. All three characterizations are well drawn. Brannon's daughter is shown at the ages of four, seven and seventeen years. Miss Ruth Stonehouse is attractive in the part, at the age last mentioned.

The reels are marked by fine photography and careful settings. There is quite a thrilling chase near the close, where Gunther pursues the fleeing Thorne. The assassin has made a good get-a-way in a buggy, but is soon overhauled by the officer in an automobile. Wm. Bailey as Gunther makes a daring leap from the fast moving machine into the recklessly driven vehicle occupied by the fugitive.

John Brannon's besetting sin is strong drink, and the habit gains on him after the death of his wife. She has left him a dimpled little daughter of four years old whom he worships.

One night, in his own home, he is overcome by his old enemy and when he is awakened by his false friend, Gordon Thorne, in the morning he finds a pistol in his hand, one cartridge in the magazine exploded, and a dead man lying beside him.

Brannon is overwhelmed when accused of murder by Thorne, the real murderer. Half an hour later he takes his child and boards a train for a spot in the wilderness, which he had discovered during a hunting trip. In the meantime, the supposed dead man recovered consciousness and was able to write a note clearing Brannon of the crime and accusing Thorne, before dying. Detective Gunther is called and discovers the note, also the disappearance of Brannon. He immediately proceeds to Thorne's apartments, but Thorne has flown. Then he vows to find him.

Years pass and Brannon, who has changed his name to Warren, is thought so well of by his fellow citizens of a thriving western town that they nominate him for mayor. About this time Thorne, under an assumed name, is operating a swindling scheme in the same locality. He inveigles the fiance of Brannon's daughter into buying worthless stock. Brannon calls at his office to demand restitution and both men recognize each other.

Thorne threatens to expose Brannon to the citizens unless he permits the sale to pass. Brannon refuses. On the eve of election day, during a speech made by Brannon to his constituents, Thorne, true to his threat, denounces Brannon as a murderer. Amid the ensuing confusion Gunther appears and arrests Thorne. He then conducts the real criminal to the platform, so that all can see him, and charges him with the crime. Thorne makes a dash for liberty, but is rearrested and taken back to the place of the murder to suffer the penalty. The release date is February 27th.

British Notes

(Special Correspondence to THE WORLD.)

A CASE of interest and importance to the moving picture industry in all countries occupied the law courts for two days last week when a leading London theater syndicate successfully petitioned to restrain a famous comedian (Mr. Will Evans), from appearing in certain of his sketches upon the screen. It appears that Mr. Evans had contracted to appear exclusively in the sketches "Harnessing a Horse," "Building a Chicken House," and "Whitewashing the Ceiling" at the halls of the syndicate in question, but since had permitted a film manufacturing company to circulate pictures of his performances. Justice Bailbache gave judgment for the plaintiffs and his decision has raised a furious controversy in theatrical circles. General opinion among variety artistes holds that a performer has two distinct rights in making a contract of this character; a right to make a contract for performance in the flesh and also a separate right of reproduction of that performance. In view of this point not being defined when a number of artistes have negotiated for similar contracts it seems more than possible that other cases of this character will be on the tapis at an early date. Will Evans, by the way, has given notice of appeal against the judge's ruling.

* * *

The chairman of the Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association, Mr. E. Reed, resigned his post as manager of the Charles Urban Trading Co. a few days ago.

* * *

That idol of the American literary public, George Bernard Shaw, has been leading in one of the London dailies a discussion upon the appropriation of film titles. He deplores the duplication of good and expensive films and adds that if the popularity of an expensive film leads to the manufacture of a dozen imitations with the same title the game will not be worth the candle.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

"The Squaw Man"

A Six-Reel Lasky Feature Adapted from Edwin Milton Royle's Play of the Same Title.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

ONE of the best visualizations of a stage play ever shown on the screen, "The Squaw Man," was a source of surprise and delight to me, and to the able critic at my side during the private exhibition, from beginning to end. Credit must, however, be given almost entirely to the direction and interpretation, the direction in this case embracing both form and treatment of an almost flawless production. To the lucid arrangement and delicate appreciation of dramatic values, to unwavering logic and consistency, to the pains taken in those tiny details which make action realistic, to the pervading sense of beauty, and to highly intelligent interpretation, quickening interest in the outcome, must be ascribed the charm this feature is bound to exert.

I have not seen Oscar Apfel's name made prominent in connection with this winner, but I recognize his handiwork without difficulty. Cecil DeMille, I am told, put his heart and soul into making "The Squaw Man" an unqualified success, but his unbounded enthusiasm could only act as a support to the unhampered skill and decided native ability of the active director. First honors must go to the gentleman whose discriminating judgment cleared the path of this notable production of a thousand thorny errors. Dustin Farnum's unobtrusive and masterly characterization ranks next in value—he was largely responsible for the "surprise and delight" already mentioned—for he has certainly grasped the essential principles of screen interpretation. His performance is so manly, so apparently devoid of stale artifice, that I could only regret that he was not representing a typical American.

The general theme, that of frenzied self-sacrifice on the part of a blameless man for the sake of a villain who happens to be a member of the same family, "for the family honor," whereby he blasts his own career, has been very popular with lady novelists since Ouida used it, and variations of it have been seen on both stage and screen until it has become almost as familiar as "Mary had a little——" but it is time that it should be shelved, along with a lot of overdone expedients. Nothing in the photodrama is less conducive to progress in the new art than this old billposter theme. But it is all the more creditable to the producers that they have presented with exquisite charm what is no longer considered to be within the bounds of common sense. The truth is that they have depended upon a rattling good story of adventure, running with unbroken unity, sustained by a character of magnetic personality, through perils at sea and on shore.

To begin at the beginning, Jim Wyngate, with whom we are better acquainted as Dustin Farnum, agrees to be the scapegoat for his relative, the Earl of Kerhill, who has embezzled the funds of Wyngate's regiment, and, as soon as Jim is disentangled from a lot of other officers that our affections may be fastened upon him, he leaves England in a trading schooner, and the real fun begins. He has been followed by a detective. Every small boy in the audience and a large portion of the big ones will begin to sit up and take notice when Jim gets busy with that detective. Jim is every inch an athlete, and he does not mince matters as they do in stage struggles. He succeeds in making a fool of the spy at the end of a game fight and soon after performs greater feats, when the ship catches fire. The fire scenes aboard ship are made plausible by using an actual vessel, sailing in the open, and there is a delightful fidelity to legitimate requirements not ordinarily seen in the escape of crew and passengers in the boats.

Jim is picked up by an American vessel, landed in New York, and gradually drifts from the lurid White Way to ranch life in the far west, accompanied by "Big Bill," whom he has saved from the deft "touch" of a tango artiste. They arrive at a railroad station that is a veritable gem of its kind—we look through the combination bar and station, where cowboys assemble at train time, to the track on which actual trains are passing. Some of the high scenes occur in this room, and the view of cars running without gives them an unusual atmosphere of realism. Jim gets into difficulties there with Cash Hawkins, and the latter is shot dead in the station by an Indian girl, a veritable one, and a remarkably fine actress, when he attempts to murder Jim in cold blood.

It is not altogether a pleasing spectacle to see white women impersonating Indian squaws, and they are seldom, if ever, successful at it; on the other hand, Indian girls who can awaken and hold sympathy for their roles are few and far between, but Princess Redwing performs her part with exquisite fidelity and great depth of feeling. The play's highest merit is the opportunity it affords this accomplished actress. The love of this child of the forest for the splendid specimen of manhood injected into her dull career forms the most touching and beautiful part of the story, and it was probably the essence of interest in Royle's stage version. So artless, so appealing to the protective instincts of true manhood, so self-abnegating is that love, that it is bound to make heartstrings throb in the audience.

The Death of Nat-u-Rich; Scene from "The Squaw Man" (Lasky).

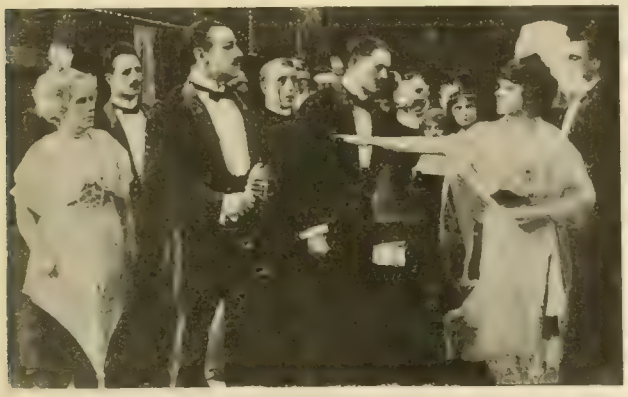
It is quite probable that both Royle and DeMille, when they come to study this characterization from the viewpoint of spectators, will realize that the art of producing moving pictures is to be measured by its own canons alone. Both may perceive that this new method of thought transmission has a grander scope than the boxed-in stage presentation once they are enfolded in the charm of its method of telling a story. Its directness, the lack of intervening utterance, its very silence, all contribute to a fascination long proven to exist, not only for the mixed audience, but for those familiar with superior examples of the older arts. When these gentlemen come to us, as they surely will, with the finest products of their creative talent, unhampered by what they have learned in a totally different medium of expression, with a cause that is compelling, it will be with quickened fondness, for what can give such free release to their forces.



Scene from "The Squaw Man" (Lasky).

Scene from "The Squaw Man" (Lasky).

Note the characterization in action of the Indian maid when the man she loves goes snow blind, when she follows the trail of his horse until she finds it where he was thrown, and thereafter trails his steps to the sulphurus crevice into which he has fallen. Note the impression made by witnessing her patient courage and native resource in the almost insurmountable task of rescue, the comparison suggested of her sturdy and simple devotion to the dependent and resourceless man hunter of civilized society, the lady who affects to steer the boat while man does the rowing, who relies on sex attraction rather than sex qualification. The physical superiority and mental alertness of the woman enjoying fewer advantages could never be so forcibly presented in the related narrative as in the pictured story.

Note the compelling beauty and nobility of actual scenery as compared to stage affectations. The complex impression produced is powerful enough to make one subscribe to the view expressed by a great creative critic, "Art's first appeal is neither to the intellect nor to the emotions, but purely to the artistic temperament that guides civilized man back to nature for relief." The same critic said, "I hold that no work of art can be tried otherwise than by laws deduced from itself; whether or not it be consistent with itself is the question." Note the Indian maid "fighting it out alone in the foothills, only nature looking on," the distance tragically mellowed by a setting sun — how fascinated we become by this visible world of form and color, not only because its delicate beauty is so appropriate to a communion of a human soul with the spirit of the Great Invisible, but because of its imaginative insight and poetic aim!

This one scene might well have been the last, discovering, as it does, the finest sentiment of the story, the tortured appeal of a human heart—"will we ever come to our own?" Sickened with pursuit of the unattainable, how often have each of us secretly communed with something we only vaguely recognize as a power that makes all our boasted ones pitiful. Such occasional glimpses may be less intelligible than those more commonplace, but they belong to life in its artistic entirety, enter a sphere of deep feeling, stir the nobility too often dormant within us, rouse our better selves. The touches of great beauty contain a secret of success known only to screen presentation—they cause us to surrender ourselves more completely to the story that is being told and to love this new art for its own sake.

Ben Wilson.

Director, Author, Leading Man.

BEN WILSON, hero of the Edison "Cleek" series, finds a new outlet for his tireless energy in "When the Cartridges Failed," which he wrote and directed, and in which he played the leading part.

Mr. Wilson has been playing stellar roles for Edison for several years, both in the New York Studio, California, Bermuda and Cuba. A pleasing personality, a thorough technical knowledge and rare histrionic gifts have placed him among the foremost photoplayers. Having studied the methods of various directors and formulated his own ideas on the subject, Mr. Wilson decided that he would like to produce a film of his own. Accordingly he wrote "When the Cartridges Failed" and requested permission to direct the picture himself. When he had outlined his plans, permission was readily obtained and he set to work.

Ben Wilson.

In addition to directing the film, Mr. Wilson also assumed the leading role, a most difficult task that is attempted by but few directors. He has succeeded admirably in his first effort, producing a virile drama with an abundance of action. The entire production might well be that of a veteran director, so carefully is the story knit together, while the trifling details which prove pitfalls to the less experienced producer have been scrupulously guarded against.

INSTALLS PICTURES.

Walker & Kellog's $60,000 theater at Aberdeen, S. D., has been leased by E. B. McCollom, who will exhibit moving pictures each day in the week with the exception of one day when the owners of the house will put on a road show. A Johns-Manville asbestos booth ,a 1913 Motiograph machine, a Mirroroide screen and a Fort Wayne compensarc are among the new installations. General Film Company service will be used. The picture program will be changed three times a week. No Sunday shows will be given. C. C. Baker, manager of the American Moving Picture Co., Britton, S. D., superintended the work of installing the picture apparatus.

"The Unknown Monster"

A Romantic Drama in Three Parts to Be Released by Features Ideal—Has Some "Thrills" and "Punches."

OUR sympathy goes out to those who have to pick names for pictures these days. There are so many subjects and so great a demand for a title that will attract attention—and business. Thus "The Unknown Monster," while complying with the requirements of the publicity man, is not as indicative of what follows as some other but possibly less startling title might be. The picture itself is most satisfactory as a feature; it possesses the requisite thrills and punches demanded by the feature buyer, has been well produced and is well photographed. The acting of the principals is above the average. Though no longer a novelty the photographic trick of "double exposure," by which means one person plays two parts in which similarity of feature is the chief requirement, plays an important part.

According to the story Dr. Altumara, the son of Count Altumara, is in love with Azucena, a ward of the count. The girl does not love her admirer, but she marries him because her guardian demands it and then refuses to live with him, taking her abode apart in the count's country house. There she discovers in an old escritoire a story which tells of the betrayal of the old count by his now deceased wife and the birth of an illegitimate son, subsequently raised by a woodcutter. She corners an old servant of the family and gets the story from him, which story is shown in the picture.

Scene from "The Unknown Monster" (Union Features).

With this information Azucena plans to bring disgrace upon the man whose name she bears. Sending for the illegitimate son, whose name is Fifi, she hires him to do her bidding, telling him the story of his origin. Fifi is a dissolute young man and the associate of the worst characters. But Azucena clothes him in the raiment of a gentleman and takes him with her to an important social function. Fifi cannot restrain his thieving propensities and picks the pockets of some of the guests. Azucena, alarmed at this, manages to get away without her companion and later he drifts into a disreputable dive, where he gets into a fight and kills one of the habitues, after which he makes his escape.

On account of the marked resemblance of Fifi to his brother, Dr. Altumara, the latter is ostracized at his club the next day because of Fifi's actions. To make matters worse, Fifi, with knowledge of his parentage, visits the count and demands money to enable him to escape from the consequences of his crime. The result of the visit is the death of the count a little later in the arms of his legitimate son and the arrest of that son as the cause of his father's death.

Things look dark for Dr. Altumara, but the police find Fifi and bring him to the police station where he is confronted by his brother and the mystery is solved. Here it is that the double exposure comes in and the work is so accurately timed that only the initiated are able to detect the trick. The scene is most effective.

Upon Dr. Altumara gaining his freedom, Azucena, terrified at what she has done, comes to him thoroughly repentant and confesses that she now loves the man whose true worth she at first refused to see, and there is a happy reconciliation.

$20,000 PICTURE HOUSE.

Joseph Hallemann has begun the erection of a $20,000 moving picture theater on Chippewa Street, St. Louis, Mo. The house has been christened the Melvin.

Herbert Brenon Still in Hospital

Universal-Imp Director Dictates a Letter in Which He Explains His Recent Accident.

IN a letter dictated by Herbert Brenon from his bed in the Cottage Hospital, in Hamilton, Bermuda, particulars are given of the serious accident which befell the Imp producer in the bursting, on February 3, of the great tank in which Mr. Brenon and Miss Annette Kellermann were enacting a scene for the Universal feature "Neptune's Daughter." The accompanying snapshot shows the wreck after the break.

"A friend is kind enough to write this letter for me," says Mr. Brenon. "You know I pretty nearly passed in my checks, and am not yet out of danger. My assistant will inclose with this note snapshots of the tank as it was before and after the accident. I had cemented in a glass front 8 by 8 feet, but with eighteen thousand gallons of water violently disturbed by the struggles of Miss Kellermann and myself the glass took the initiative and broke, drawing the two of us through and turning us over and over. The rush of water carried us thirty feet from the tank. Miss Kellermann, I am glad to say, escaped with a minor wound on one foot.

"I was torn in six places by the jagged glass, how badly you may judge perhaps when I tell you that when the surgeons got me on the operating table they proceeded to take sixty-three stitches in me. I cannot eat or drink, and in my dreams sometimes I see an old pal and myself behind two beautiful highballs. (But just now these are only 'such stuff as dreams are made on'; they are luxuries at least a month away.) I am a little weary now. Please remember me to all my friends."

Ruins of the Bermudan Tank in the Wrecking of Which Herbert Brenon Was Badly Hurt.

The abbreviated and ragged signature of "H. Brenon" indicates only too plainly the extreme weakness of the director-player. In the Bermuda Colonist of February 4 there is an account of the accident.

"The scene, which consisted of a struggle under water between Miss Kellermann and Mr. Brenon, was progressing," says the Colonist, "when the spectators were horrified to see one of the glass sides break. The water, then five or six feet in depth, poured out, carrying the performers along in the torrent. It scraped their bodies over the jagged glass. Mr. Brenon's left arm was laid bare to the bone, and his legs and feet were terribly mangled. A medical call was sent out, and as quickly as he could get there Dr. Arton drove to a spot opposite the island, where a motorboat was placed at the disposal of the party and the injured were brought to town."

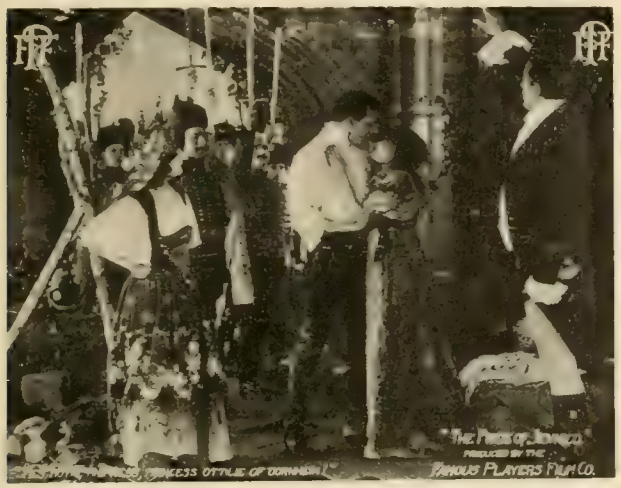
The friends of Mr. Brenon, much as they will regret the serious nature of his injuries, will be glad to get definite information as to his condition. Mr. Brenon, it will be remembered, was in Europe last year for six months, where he produced such Universal pictures as "Ivanhoe," "Absinthe," and many others. In the spectacular subject he was making in Bermuda and in which Miss Kellermann, the famous Australian swimmer, was featured, Mr. Brenon was playing the "heavy."

"The Pride of Jennico"

House Peters, in a Fine Four-Part Famous Players Subject, Gives a Strong Characterization of Basil.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THERE are thrilling situations in this four-part subject of the Famous Players, which was released on February 20. So also are there dramatic situations—situations which derive their strength from the art of the actors as well as from the skill of those who have transferred to the screen the story of the original writers—Abby Sage Richardson and Grace Livingston Furniss. The climax, which comes at the end of the second part, strikes deep and with extreme suddenness. Basil Jennico, played by House Peters, has sworn by the sword of his dying uncle that he will uphold the pride of Jennico and that he will not marry below his rank. He falls in love with one of two young women—Princess Ottilie and Marie, her maid—who have taken shelter in his house in a storm. The princess has run away from her home to escape the attentions of Prince Eugen, whom she abhors. In a spirit of mischief she introduces herself as the maid and Marie as the princess. Basil falls in love with the supposed maid, but the recollection of his oath makes him pause. The real maid artfully gives Basil the information that the princess is in love with him. He sacrifices his love for what he conceives to be his duty, and when the supposed Marie tells him that if he wants to marry the princess she is able to arrange it he gives her the word to go ahead. The ceremony is performed, the bride heavily veiled. When the two are alone the bridegroom slowly removes the lacey stuff from the face of his bride and finds—the maid. Humiliated, chagrined at the deception which he feels has been practiced on him, he spurns the woman. In spite of the fact that the bride is the woman he really loved, he has broken his oath. It is the woman's turn. To make her victory the greater, and sure of his love, she appeals to Basil, but she does not reveal her identity. Her triumph comes in a flash as Basil takes her to his heart.



Scene from "The Pride of Jennico" (Famous Players).

It is the end of the story and many things have happened before Basil learns that his wife is the real princess. The denouement is highly dramatic and brings to a most happy conclusion a play that is interesting and exciting. House Peters is given here the best opportunity he has had to show on the screen his skill as an actor. Whether in the tenderer passages or in the "deeds of derring-do" he measures up to the camera standard which his friends have believed he would set. One of the most stirring as well as the most thrilling of the personal encounters is his struggle at the edge of the cliff with Prince Eugen, strongly played by Hal Clarendon. Taking a leaf out of the book of an agile wrestler he swings his opponent's shoulders on to his own; he lunges forward, and Prince Eugen disappears in the depths below. It is hard to believe that this is a studio setting, and we may be revealing secrets; nevertheless, it is a triumph of staging.

Marie Leonhard, as the Princess Ottilie, is charming. She also, on occasion, displays "ginger," as in the scene when she fights, with a sword, her way out of her father's home. Betty Harte, well known to screen followers through her many appearances in Selig pictures as the gypsy, is strong. So also is Wellington Playter, the giant aid of Basil. Peter Lang, as always, does well what falls to him. It was unfortunate that the princess and the maid should have borne such striking general resemblance—in many instances they were garbed alike; they are of the same height, the hair appears to be the same shade, and the figure is similar. These factors will lead to confusion of identity at times with many observers.

The interiors, some of which are of great depth, are deserving of high praise for the manner in which they reflect wealth and luxury. As to the exteriors, it need only be said that they were made in Cuba, and were selected with a view to variety. There are gardens and primitive highways, plains and cliffs. Mr. Dawley is the producer.

BEATRIZ MICHELENA.

BEATRIZ MICHELENA, the celebrated operatic soprano, who claimed so much space in the theatrical magazines the season just past, because of the furore she created at Chicago in an Oliver Morosco production, will be starred in all of the California Motion Picture Corporation's big feature plays. She has beauty and dramatic versatility that will be decided assets. It was her accomplishments along these lines that were largely responsible for Polly Pry's prophesying that she would become America's first great Carmen.

Miss Michelena's beauty, which is of both face and figure, is of distinctive Latin type. Her eyes are unusually attractive and well adapted to motion pictures. They are capable of either sparkling with cheerfulness or flashing the fire of strongest emotions. It was this beauty and facial expression that first impressed Mr. Payne when he saw the prima donna in a recent Eastern success and determined him to secure her services for his company.

Beatriz Michelena.

The California Motion Picture Corporation is to be congratulated upon securing the services of an artist so distinguished, and it would seem certain that the value of any motion picture in which she took a prominent part would be materially enhanced. The release of these subjects will be awaited with considerable interest.

THOMAS BEDDING WITH ITALA.

Thomas Bedding, one time editor of the Moving Picture World, is now in charge of the offices of the Itala American Company, of which concern Harry R. Raver is the director general. Mr. Bedding will have charge of the sales of Itala subjects. Mr. Bedding declares that he has now found his true mission in life and will henceforth devote his energies to selling pictures in preference to writing about them. H. J. Streyckmans, who immediately preceded T. B. at the Itala office, has joined the reorganized Ammex Company and is located in room 604, World's Tower Building, on West 40th Street.

HARTIGAN IN TOWN.

C. P. Hartigan, of the Kalem Company, is on from the Pacific Coast on a short business visit to the metropolis. Fans will remember him as the Moses of the great Vitagraph production of five years back "The Life of Moses." Mr. Hartigan is quite taken with the luxury and comfort of the Screen Club, which was a pleasing surprise to him.

BOUSHEY GOES TO ESSANAY.

H. A. Boushey, until recently general manager of the General Film Company, has resigned his connection with that concern and will join the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, at Chicago. It is stated by the management of the General Film Company that an effort was made to induce Mr. Boushey to remain with that company, as his work was fully appreciated, but Mr. Boushey believed that his new connection would be more advantageous.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

THE name of Seeburg has long been familiar in connection with first class automatic musical instruments. Recently I received a most artistic catalog from this house announcing that the J. C. Seeburg Piano Co. had just completed and placed on the market something of interest to moving picture theaters and musicians—a combination "orchestra and organ instrumentation" called the "Style M. Photoplayer."

I found the instrument to contain many excellent features. First, a really first class piano of seven and a half octaves, strongly built and with a beautiful resonant tone. Second, a ninety-two pipe organ, containing a practical selection of the most useful voices in organ work. These stops represent violin, flute, and piccolo (2 foot stops), melodia; 8 foot stop (echo—8 foot stop) clarinet, 8 feet and an 8 foot bass. The practical organist will recognize the value of these and the combinations possible therewith. The flute stop especially is worthy of more than passing mention for its beautiful quality of tone.

Played as a solo with piano accompaniment (left hand) the effect was that of an exceptionally fine big toned flute accompanied by a harp. The organ has, of course, a separate manual (or keyboard) which is placed just above the piano keyboard. Either instrument may be played independently of the other. The piano has a mandolin attachment which is very useful, not only for accompaniments for music of certain character, but also for sound effects when the picture calls for such; as for example, mandolin, guitar, banjo, etc. In connection with this part of the subject, I found a very good imitation of the bag-pipe in the clarinet and violin stops of the organ. Also a Chinese fiddle or oboe There is a xylophone attachment which can be thrown on by a stop the same as the organ pipes. I found this could be used with effect in the Chinese music.

This xylophone, by the way, is an independent instrument (though a part of the whole), and can be used as a solo or in combination with any or all of the other instruments or stops.

The "photoplayer" contains also bass drum, snare drum, tympanni, cymbal, triangle and castinets. To these are added tom-tom, crash-cymbal, fire gong, steamboat whistle, locomotive whistle, cow-bell, thunder effect, wind siren, bird call, baby cry, telephone and door-bell, horse trot and automobile horn. These instruments and effects are operated by pressing buttons at right and left of organ manuals and by foot pedals—all within convenient reach of the operator.

The instrument taken as a whole is really a good practical musical instrument. The sound effects noted are merely accessory—good as they can be made, of course—but Mr. Seeburg is to be congratulated particularly on his foundation for the photoplayer; viz: the piano and the organ. In the hands of an ordinarily good pianist the result it seems to me is bound to be satisfactory.

I have regarded Mr. Seeburg's photoplayer solely from the standpoint of a pianist, because I cannot conscientiously commend any instrument whose chief value lies in its possibilities of cutting musicians out of work. For those who think otherwise, however, Mr. Seeburg has provided an attachment which makes the "photoplayer" automatic. Perforated rolls containing ten selections each (note the length of these rolls), are made to be used with this instrument. These rolls can be stopped or started from any place in their length; can be rewound from any part or run forwards or back, making it possible to play any part of the roll at any time. To those who favor automatic players, this is a feature not to be overlooked. To run the photoplayer only as a mechanical instrument does not require a skilled musician; merely intelligence enough to insert the rolls and read the directions thereon is all that is needed to operate it.

But, as I said before, I do not regard Mr. Seeburg's as being merely designed to supplant musicians in picture theaters. I should look upon it more as an adjunct—a help to those now engaged in this line of work. Many exhibitors, especially in the smaller places, would like something more than piano music with their pictures, provided it could be had at a reasonable expense. A pipe-organ by reason of its cost is often out of the question. The business of the house does not warrant putting in an orchestra. So perforce they must content themselves by getting a good piano and as good a pianist as possible and let it go at that. Numbers of combination instruments have been put on the market to meet their need, but the impression exists (whether justly or not I am not prepared to say), that the "combination" is likely to consist of a tin-panny piano and cheap set of organ pipes, neither of which last long enough to pay for putting them in. I want to say that the instrument I looked at in Mr. Seeburg's rooms contained a first-class piano and good set of organ pipes. In a way it can take the place of an orchestra in a picture theater and it ought to be a valuable addition to an orchestra where one is used.

It stands 5 feet 3 inches in height; 3 feet 3 inches in width, and 12 feet 3 inches in length.

Saxe's Lyric, Minneapolis.

We are pleased to show you this week an excellent picture of the Lyric theater orchestra, Minneapolis. This house is one of the popular "Saxe" string and is under the management of P. F. Schwie. Readers of the Moving Picture World know that the Lyric Theater has the reputation of presenting motion pictures in a high class manner with correct accessories—musical and otherwise. The director of the orchestra is Saxe's Lyric, Minneapolis, Concert Orchestra. Director, W. E. Dirks; Organist, Julius K. Johnson; Manager, Posper F. Schwie.

W. E. Dirks, and the organist Julius K. Johnson. You will doubtless remember these two gentlemen as being callaborators in the special music for Selig's big three reel production "The Coming of Columbus." I used to live in Minneapolis; was a charter member of the old M. P. A. in that city, have a good many friends in the twin cities, and through some of them have heard mighty good reports of the Lyric Theater and its popular orchestra.

Wouldn't Rag "The Vampire."

Comes a letter which for obvious reasons shall be anonymous, reading as follows:

> After talking over the following incident with several musical critics I thought it might interest you in your position of music editor. I am a pianist in a moving picture theater, have had several years experience and mostly improvise for pictures but read and memorize readily. Always try to fit the right song, or right idea, in the right place and above all, try to keep the soft pedal on in nearly everything. In the theater where I was employed the manager was death on having drums and lots of noise. We had several conflicts on the subject but I always held to my original idea of keeping the music rather subdued. The climax came the night we had Kalem's "Vampire." I was improvising in what I tried to make a soft and weird manner; the drummer insisted on butting in with his drums (guess he was afraid he would be forgotten if he didn't play), and the manager came down and called me proper for not playing "rag" to it. Can you imagine anything more of a sacrilege than playing rag to "The Vampire?" Also, as a little side issue, I got fired for refusing—I am writing this merely to show you what reception an honest effort in the right direction will sometimes meet.

Comment on this managerial attitude has been made a number of times in the past and I feel that very little can be added to what has already been said except that I believe the obsession for mere noise is not so prevalent as it was a few years ago. Still it exists in spots. I know of more than one theater whose pictures would be enjoyable but for the incessant and silly racket made by an unthinking drummer. I say "unthinking," because many of them become accustomed to the sound of the drums and imagine the music sounds "empty" without them. And possibly many are compelled to do it by managers like the one mentioned by our correspondent. As to playing rag-time stuff to pictures like the "Vampire," comment is unnecessary.

Playing to the Costumes.

It seems as though some musicians cannot rid themselves of the habit of playing to the costumes and overlooking the essentials of the picture. This is observed more often in Mexican, Spanish and Indian pictures—possibly because tunes of this description (or "these descriptions"), are familiar. And again the sound effect man is the villain. Quite recently I saw a Mexican picture in which a pathetic scene was accompanied by castinets. In the name of wonder, Why? Castinets are appropriate enough in dances and lighter music of a Spanish character, but wholly out of place in sad or sentimental scenes. Simply because a character is wearing a Mexican dress is no reason why we should hear a clicking of castinets or the sound of a tambourine. These instruments are suggestive of gaiety—not grief. Whenever a picture is shown of a priest at the death bed of any one garbed in Mexican or Spanish dress, it seems to be the signal for the man with the castinets to get in his deadly work. He may be so accustomed to it that he does not notice the incongruity, but it jars on the nerves of any one with a sense for the fitness of things. The Spanish music may be all right for such scenes if chosen (and played), with judgment—as for example, our old friend "La Paloma," (which, by the way, was being played for the scene I have in mind), if kept subdued and on the plaintive order; but the castinets were all wrong. It detracted from the picture. Keep them for the lighter parts of the picture.

Mexican Music.

From Columbus, Ohio:

> Am enclosing musical program for two pictures as played by us last week. Let me know what you think of them, also what in your opinion should be played for the Mexican War pictures. Should it be all Mexican music?

The musical program's referred to were not received. You must have changed your mind or forgotten to enclose them. As to the music most appropriate to the pictures mentioned, I should imagine it would depend altogether on the story and situations of each individual picture. Mexican music might accompany the greatest part of one picture and very little of another. The battle scenes are usually worked along similar lines in all war pictures. Heavy, stormy music, hurries and patriotic songs of the country represented during the more strenuous action. The patriotic songs, however, are liable to be introduced anywhere; that is a matter for your own judgment to decide. Other national songs or dances when they can be introduced naturally—not forced. One of Mexico's national airs is "Mexicanos, al Grito de Guerra" (by J. Nuno), in the usual 4/4 tempo. Spanish waltzes and "Habanaro's" can be used as they are peculiar to Mexico, also. But don't think you must play them every time a sombrero appears, and don't let your drummer rattle castinets in death scenes or pathetic scenes. Some people imagine that every measure of Spanish or Mexican music must be accompanied by tambourine or castinets or both. Pay some attention to the character of the scene itself. I saw a beautiful scene spoiled sometime ago in just this way. A Mexican woman lay dying, a priest bending over her and two or three mourners kneeling near. The pianist played "La Paloma," of course, slowly and softly. The number is a love song but it would have got by at that if the drummer had kept his castinets still. Castinets are expressive of gayety, not grief.

"The Triumph of an Emperor"

A Stirring Drama of Ancient Roman Times Released by the World Film Corporation.

"IN HOC SIGNO VINCES" ("By this sign you will conquer"). An Historical Drama of Draga, offered by the World Film Corporation. This beautiful picture offering is in five reels and is a wonderful production of the film art in all respects. Those who are familiar with Roman history will certainly enjoy it. The actors in the cast could scarcely be improved upon. D. Lombardi as Maximian, Arturo Garzes as Constantine, F. Bonino as Masentius, the three emperors, gave masterly renditions. A. Durelli as Licinius, M. Mariani as Saint Maternus, A. Costamagna as Fausta (wife of Constantine and daughter of Maximian), M. Jacobini as sister of Constantine, E. Garrone as Elvius Brutus, J. Bay as Saine Helene (mother of Constantine), and M. Tarabini as Saint Viktor, supported by perfectly drilled courtiers, soldiers, slaves, populace, etc., were nothing short of marvelous. The directors deserve the highest encomium for their careful work in every minute detail.

Scene from "The Triumphs of an Emperor" (Savoia).

The scenes are laid at Milan, at Rome, and in Gaul, three hundred years after the birth of Christ. The costuming is gorgeous and historically correct. The number of people used in this production is hard to estimate, but must run into hundreds; several scenes of bacchanal orgies are shown, which, if indulged in at the present time, would make the cabaret look like a Sunday school picnic. These scenes mar somewhat the picture, but they represent the mode of life at that early period. There are other scenes where Constance, the young neophite, is forced to view, by her persecutor, the gladiatorial games, at the heticomb of martyrs. The dragging of the dead over the sand with hooks is not a pleasant sight, even in a picture.

In the latter part, war is declared between Constantine and Masentius, and the spectacle of Constantine's army crossing the Alps into Italy is entrancing, and the battle scenes gripping, in the extreme. The scene in the camp the night before the battle, where Constantine has a vision of the cross in the heavens, is beautiful; also where Christ appears to him in his tent and tells him to emblazon the cross on their shields and banners and victory will be theirs. The strife between the pagan and the Christian imbues this picture with an educational value, which should be recognized by the average spectator. Constantine, victorious in war, signs a decree giving full liberty to Christianity. In the triumph of faith and justice, love is also victorious. The scenic effects in this picture are perfect, especially the forum and arena settings. The lighting could not be improved upon. Everything pertaining is in continuity. It will make a great hit.

$15,000 PICTURE THEATER FOR IOWA FALLS, IA.

W. A. Middleton and D. D. Gephart, of Iowa Falls, Ia., will build a $15,000 moving picture and vaudeville theater on Washington Avenue. The house will be modern and up-to-date in every respect.

"The Double Shadow"

Two-Part Edison Special. Released Through General Film Company.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

I SAW this interesting picture at the same time that another of almost equal interest was shown, the latter called "A Real Helpmate," and observed in them a certain similarity of treatment. They were both well handled and well acted, but so talented a director should select plays in which there is more opportunity for character development, so as to bring the people of the screen story into closer relation with the audience, and he should keenly scrutinize plausibility of conduct and action. It is true that the great mass at the picture show does not analyze a screen presentation as does its most intellectual portion, but that is no reason why the credulity of that limited number should be taxed by easygoing "dramatic license."

Scene from "The Double Shadow" (Edison).

There is a pretty motive in both of these plays, one demonstrating the loyalty and generosity of intelligent women, whether as sweethearts or as wives, and the intensely American sentiment on this subject gives both dramas a charm that will be appreciated, but plawrights cannot be excused on that account for trifling with the actual laws of life. If designs for a new studio were submitted to the manager of the kinetograph department of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., he would examine every one of them in detail before reaching a decision, and he would not only be quick as a flash to detect a duplication, but he would make a searching inquiring concerning it. Then it was not shown that "A Real Helpmate" was prepared by previous co-operation to take up the work her disabled husband could not complete.

Scene from "The Double Shadow" (Edison).

Detective work in "The Double Shadow" might just as well have been of as high an order as that of Nick Carter, whose ingenuity has been the delight of nearly every small boy in the land. The crooked partner, who is secreting the funds of his concern in a cellar and the true books in the safe of a neighboring hotel, apparently does not dare look behind him, so close upon his heels is the cashier who hopes to have a share in the spoil. The shadowing of Augustus Williams, society man and honest partner who is neglecting his business, is of a more intelligent kind. The crooked partner was admirably interpreted by versatile Bechtel—the man of a thousand faces—but he was apparently not permitted to even glance back of him, where he naturally would look, and the cellar door is all too carefully left unfastened, so that aroused suspicion may have an easy time of it. It is not necessary for the drama to be an exact representation of human experience—purest romance may enforce an immortal truth—but plausibility of minor details is of very high importance.

We may easily pardon an author for offering a condition of deep interest or one of splendid purpose through purest fiction, but where the story is carried along by human beings their conduct must be that of human beings, the kind most of us know about. No director need be afraid of improbable plays—the art is to make them probable—present the condition and work it out along rational lines to a logical conclusion, giving consideration to the fact that most men have to work out their own destinies or, at least, struggle hard in the attempt. The average audience is not apt to be in sympathy with a hero who has his problems solved for him by a girl able to draw $20,000 from her personal bank account.

"The Double Shadow" presents a condition that actually exists in many firms and it contains undoubted dramatic values, but there are serious faults of treatment at the high points. The careless partner resolves to prove himself a man by meeting his difficulties just as other men are doing every day. Brought face to face with an army of creditors, does he exhibit sand by offering them notes and tact in settling matters this way until he can more thoroughly investigate the condition of his firm? No. A dear little sweetheart, who has no idea of the value of money—she sends him twenty thousand in cash by a messenger boy—secretly helps him in much the same spirit that would prompt her to send him a valentine, and strews roses where most men find thorns. The hero is given no chance to prove himself worthy of such a wife by carrying his own burdens. Better far overwhelm the hero with difficulties and let him fight his way out—that is what the audience likes best. Come down among the real men of the audience with a hero who is after their own hearts.

The spirit of the women is all right. American women of the superior class have always been great helpmates, meeting poverty with courage, cheering and heartening their husbands in trial, sacrificing themselves and their happiness for their loved ones, in a way that has made us reverence the whole sex. That spirit has been the making of this nation, and it is to be kept alive. It is being shown today in another form—women are now enabled to earn and provide—and what they do for others with money earned by labor has real significance. It would be in entire accord with the Edison progressive policy to present such women in screen stories engaged in their splendid struggles.

"VITAGRAPH BILL" LOSES SON.

William A. Reed, known familiarly as "Vitagraph Bill,' and one of the first moving picture operators in the business, came to New York, February 5, especially to be present at the opening of the Vitagraph Theater on February 7. He was very happy meeting old friends when a telegram from his home in Atlantic City called him back suddenly the day before the opening, stating that one of his children was dangerously ill. He writes that his son Andrew L. Reed, aged six, died February 9. Those who know "Bill" as a most lovable man will sympathize deeply with him in his misfortune. Mr. Reed is operating at the Star Theater in Atlantic City.

NEW PICTURE HOUSE ON AMSTERDAM AVE.

William T. Geoch has filed plans for a one story moving picture theat r at 206-8 Amsterdam Avenue, New York City. The cost of the project is estimated at $10,000. The place is owned by Bessie T. Houghton, of South Orange, N. J., and the Kodak Theater Co. is the lessee. The dimensions of the structure are 34 by 65 feet.

$50,000 SEATTLE PICTURE HOUSE.

Work on a $50,000 moving picture theater at 1412 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, Wash., is being rushed. A fifteen year lease has been obtained on the property. The old California mission architecture will be followed closely in building.

Recent Legal Rulings

Two Interesting Points Raised in Recent Judicial Decisions Relating to Photoplay Writing.

By Epes Winthrop Sargent.

TWO recent court decisions are of interest to writers and users of photoplay manuscripts. One of these decisions seems to give the photoplay manuscript a distinctly new legal status. The other decision is one of the most remarkable legal abortions in the history of cinematographic litigation.

In the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, Judge Hand has decided that the new copyright law has changed the status of the moving picture play. In the case of Harper Brothers against the Kalem Company for invasion of their dramatic rights in the production of Ben Hur, it was decided that there had been such an invasion of the dramatic rights by presenting a film production of General Wallace's story.

The new ruling now establishes that the rights to dramatize a story and the right to arrange the same for motion picture performance are two distinct properties, which may be sold to two different persons or concerns, if desired, the term "dramatic rights" no longer covering the film presentation since the amendments to the Copyright Law now provides for the registration of stage plays and photoplays under different classifications, arguing that it is the purpose of the law to recognize the motion picture play as distinct from the stage version.

The decision, which appears to be based on sound law, will not have a very wide bearing, since most release forms assign "all other rights" to the purchaser of short stories, but it seems to release to the authors photoplay rights to a number of recent novels, the dramatic rights to which have been disposed of.

In Los Angeles, Judge Warren Williams has decided that since a motion picture play cannot be copyrighted it is of no value and that the theft of a manuscript is not a crime.

This decision was given in connection with the arraignment of Hamilton Del Ruth, formerly with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, who was recently arrested on the charge of having taken unpurchased manuscripts from the Universal photoplay department, obliterating the name of the author and endeavoring to sell them to his own profit to other companies. "I have been given to understand," said Judge Warren, according to telegraphic reports, "that scenarios cannot be copyrighted. After looking into the question of scenarios I have decided that they are of no value, and therefore dismiss this case."

This is a most amazing confession of judicial ignorance. It is perfectly true that the manuscript of a scenario cannot be copyrighted, but the same holds good of the manuscript of any short story or novel. Matter may be copyrighted only when it is dedicated to the public through publication, and a photoplay so published may be copyrighted precisely as a novel may be. Meanwhile the Copyright Law definitely and explicitly states that all rights of an author to his unpublished work lie in common law. It is difficult to see how the California jurist can go behind the very lucid provision of Section Two of the Act of March 4, 1909, which is still in force and which reads:

> Sec. 2. That nothing in this Act shall be construed to annul or limit the right of the author or proprietor of an unpublished work, at common law or in equity, to prevent the copying, publication, or use of such unpublished work without his consent, and to obtain damages therefore.

An unpublished scenario is one not yet made into film, the filming of the subject and the subsequent release of this film for exhibition being the legal publication of such a work.

The Copyright Act of August 24, 1912; issued by the Copyright Office as "Information Circular No. 47," amending the Act of March 4, 1909, makes these provisions for photoplays:

Section 5 of the original act is amended to provide these new classifications:

(L) Motion picture photoplays.

(M) Motion pictures other than photoplays.

"Explanatory Circular No. 7" states the manner in which copyright should be applied for. Photoplays not reproduced in copies for sale may be copyrighted by the deposit of the title of the play, a description of the work and a photograph taken from each scene of every act. Where copies are offered for sale, two complete prints must be deposited.

It is clearly to be seen that a photoplay is copyrightable, and therefore the photoplay has an established status. The script, being an unpublished photoplay, therefore has the same rights as the script of a story or novel and the author may claim damages for the use of his work in accordance with section two. Since he may claim damages, it follows that his property must possess value and that the theft of an unpublished photoplay is the theft of something of value.

It is difficult to perceive how this California decision was arrived at and it may safely be said that in the higher courts the decision will lie with the author.

"A Paradise Lost"

Great Northern Features Betty Nansen in the Role of a Dissatisfied Wife—A Warning to Thoughtless Husbands.

BETTY NANSEN, the tragic queen of the Great Northern Film Company's corps of motion picture artists, seems never so much at home as when playing those heavy emotional parts so well fitted to her temperament. In the subject of this review, a four-part feature entitled "A Paradise Lost," she impersonates the wife of a chief of detectives who is so deeply engrossed in the suppression of crime and the apprehension of criminals that he has almost no time to devote to his charming better half. After several unsuccessful attempts on the part of the wife to attract her husband's interest she determines to seek divertisement and falls in with a plausibile young man who introduces himself as the Baron de Corril. Several clandestine meetings occur, but the woman does not reveal her identity to the Baron.

Scene from "A Paradise Lost" (Gt. Northern).

At the time the chief of detectives, Muriel Yorke, is busy running down a gang of international malefactors, headed by Le Blanc, a noted criminal. The gang learn that the chief has secured information that will enable him to identify and arrest them and it falls to Le Blanc to secure and destroy the evidence. To accomplish this he enters the home of the chief of detectives at night and gets into the chamber of the woman to whom he has been making love as the Baron de Corril. He manages to control himself in this rather astonishing discovery and convinces the woman that he has followed her, thus concealing the real purpose of his call.

Naturally the woman is deeply affected by this show of devotion and as greatly alarmed for the safety of her paramour, but she masters the situation and hastens his timely escape, for her husband is about, disturbed by unusual noises, and is making an investigation. Le Blanc gets away safely and the wife returns to her couch. Next day the husband makes a careful examination of the premises and discovers the finger-prints on the door of his wife's boudoir. Upon investigation he learns that the finger-prints are those of Le Blanc, the criminal he is tracing. Confronting his wife with this discovery the chief's suspicions are aroused by her actions, but he does not think it possible that she is in league with the gang of criminals.

Disturbed for the safety of her lover, the woman determines to warn him of his danger and hurries to his apartments. But while she is urging him to escape the chief of detectives enters with two of his officers and arrests Le Blanc. The woman clings to him in despair, but she is cast aside by her irate husband who leaves her to her disgrace.

The story is conventional and the conclusion is the most natural, but it affords Miss Nansen a splendid opportunity for the display of her emotional talents.

"The Governor's Ghost"

Skillful Direction Brightens a New Four-Part Ramo Picture.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

WHAT the combination of artistic producer and good camera man can do with a fair script is apparent all through the new Ramo picture, "The Governor's Ghost." Perhaps the script is more than fair. Certainly the story interests in part and as a whole as well; there is nothing in it that is not touched with real human significance and it presents many telling situations. There has been no picture that has dealt at all with the white slave traffic with cleaner hands or that more vigorously put the horror of it before us. In it, there is no pandering to the morbid, and it was plainly written by an author who hated evil. This makes it one of the most desirable of offerings just at present. The plot is loosely constructed and has two stories with a long gap of years between and not connected by relentless logic. Yet more than making up for a smack of improbability in several of its incidents is the lively and natural way in which every one of its situations has been put before us. Will S. Davis, who directed it, shows not only an eye for the picturesque, but a sure instinct for what is human and natural in pose and action. This, when we consider that the photography is life-like, gives it not only grace, but an atmosphere of actuality, so that, if we may say it, the picture creates its own probability.

Scene from "The Governor's Ghost" (Ramo).

It opens with a pleasing love story, told naturally and acted to convince. We find effectively contrasted lovers—Hugh Jeffrey, a forthright, juvenile hero, and Jack Hopkins, a finicky minister's son. As the girl, Marie Boyd, is both graceful and sweet. Stewart Holmes plays her father, a rising political light, and Edith Hallor plays her mother, called "Helen" in the story. This character is made by Miss Hallor's heart-wringing, emotional acting, the center of the picture's interest. Of the lovers, the girl prefers Hugh. Her parents fear him and doubt is left in the spectator's mind as to his sincerity; but he proves true. An elopement has been planned. The girl leaves her home to go to the man's bungalow and on her way falls over a cliff. The mother, who has been putting her baby daughter (with a birthmark), to bed, finds Hugh's note and follows to prevent the elopement. The minister's son sees her and brings her husband. He finds her alone with Hugh and suspects her. All this, but especially the husband's suspicions, has been perfectly pictured and the resulting situation and its development strongly affects the emotions. A terrible storm breaks and is a pictorial masterpiece. Into this the mother is driven from her home by the husband who feels himself outraged and who relents when it is too late. Some neighbors find the girl and bring her home to die with Hugh at her bedside, brought by the father who realizes his mistake. The mother is taken in by some questionable people and begins a course that slowly leads her downward to haunts of ill fame.

The fourth reel is nothing less than powerful. Many years have passed. The father has become governor and the baby, Mary, has grown up. The mother has become "Helen Smith," a member of a gang of white slavers one of whose agents decoys Mary and brings her to the "house." Her mother doesn't recognize her and is helping to make her "one of them." The Governor puts a detective, played by Will H. Davis, on the job of finding her and now comes a most brisk series of scenes occupying but a few hours and leading to a climax when the police break into the house. A realistic, thrilling fight ensues. This part includes much that is finely dramatic, as when the mother sees the birthmark and then turns, pistol in hand, to save her daughter. But the picture's biggest scene is the trial. The governor is present and recognizes his wife whom he has wronged, yet fears the disgrace of acknowledging her. She also flinches from the shame of having the girl know what she is. Edith Hallor's acting makes the situation almost heart-breaking and will win new honors for her as an emotional actress. Her work will stand out the more because every player in the picture does most commendable work. It makes an unusually desirable offering on account of its good direction, acting, photography and story.

ARTHUR S. KANE.

"OUTSIDE of those whose names appear continually in advertisements, the most widely known film man in the United States."

This remark was made the other day about Arthur S. Kane, during the past year an assistant to the president of the General Film Company. He recently has retired from that concern, with which he was first engaged three and one-half years ago, at its beginning.

Arthur S. Kane.

As manager of the Seattle office, with supervision at various times of Portland, Spokane and Butte branches, manager of St. Louis and of the Twenty-third Street branch, New York, and as the first special representative of the company and in charge of Chicago and territory, Mr. Kane increased his already large acquaintance among exhibitors, exchange men and manufacturers. He is said to be the best posted man on film exchange employees the country over. The varying conditions in the different sections are said also to be an open book to him. Shortly before leaving the General Film Company, branch managers visiting the head office presented him with a diamond signet ring.

Mr. Kane's equipment and training for the film business, which he entered in 1907, as personal representative of O. T. Crawford, of St. Louis, in the latter's motion picture manufacturing film exchange and picture theater enterprises, might be considered ideal. With just enough experience as a picture showman to give him the viewpoint of the exhibitor, he had spent five years as a manager of large theaters playing combinations, vaudeville and stock. This had been preceded by the excellent schooling a newspaper man gets, during which he was sporting editor and city editor of various dailies.

AMERICAN M. P. MACHINE CO., RECEIVERSHIP.

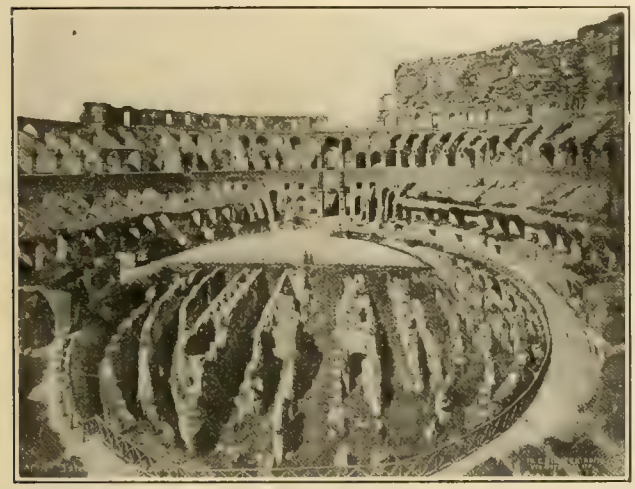
In answer to our many subscribers who have written in regard to the affairs of the above company, the manufacturers of the "Standard" machine: As the receiver did not have authority to conduct the business generally, he has only been able to supply the demand on such parts as were on hand, consequently a large number of orders for particular parts have accumulated which he has been unable to supply. In a letter under date of February thirteen, we are advised that definite steps will be taken within the next ten days and it is fully expected that the company will resume business within two or three weeks. All correspondence addressed to the company at their former location will be taken care of at the earliest possible moment.

Moving Picture Educator

THE COLOSSEUM, A SCHOLARLY PICTURE.

PICTURES of the Colosseum are exceedingly familiar. The history of the Colosseum is well known. The detailed parts, the interesting secrets, the unwritten, or more especially the unwritable evidences of its departed glory, have never been fully revealed. Thanks to the powers of kinematography and to the ability of Mr. W. Stephen Bush who superintended the taking of the photographs, we have now a series of pictures issued by the Vero Educational Society the quality of which has never before been attempted.

Immediately the pictures are thrown upon the screen, one realizes that they are the work of a scholar intended for scholars. There are no sweeping views, no generalizations with elaborate platitudes to make up for brevity and a "comic" thrown in to fill the reel. Four reels in length give the first evidences that a work of no mean order is assured. Every part of the vast structure is explored and depicted, indeed, it would not be possible for a visitor to the Colosseum to go into such detail, or to secure such knowledge, as that which is now obtainable by simply looking at these pictures.



General View of the Colosseum Interior.

The sub-titles also are very exact and helpful, as are also the parts into which the whole work is divided. Following the first general description of the Colosseum as "the greatest structure ever erected by human hands," with its eighty entrances, and with its seating capacity for eighty thousand people; the building is viewed in its altitude of one hundred and sixty feet. The architecture of the four stories is described in detail.

The columns of each story being of the four following kinds: Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, Byzantine, again details of these columns, and of others that have been broken and preserved are shown. The various entrances are also shown with there appropriate decorations and inscriptions. These entrances are not usually known in these days as being of a "class distinction." The common people were assigned to the gallery; in front of them came the lower nobility, with the patricians or highest nobility in more honorable places. The Imperial Lodge, and the Lodge reserved for the Vestal Virgins being the most prominent and distinguished places in the amphitheater. Another series of pictures shows how the Colosseum has been saved at various times by different Popes.

These repairs, or partial restorations are very interesting, great pains having been taken by the photographers to secure pictures both of the repairs made, as also of the tablets recording the same, giving the nature of the work done, the time, and by whom. Perhaps the newest pictures are those showing the extraordinary and elaborate subterranean cages where the great numbers of animals were kept confined for the forthcoming spectacles. The caves and passageways of the gladiators and Christian martyrs and the "passages to death" through which the slain were carried out are all illustrated in full detail.

From this brief description it will be seen that a most painstaking study has been made of this "World's wonder." This is not a picture to amuse even the curious, it is one full of interest and learning. Taken under scholarly supervision, its every part speaks knowledge; the student will be glad of its teachings and revelations, because of the realities it gives to these things which were previously left to the imagination of the reader of the descriptive page.

Views of Rome as seen from different parts of the Colosseum are shown, as are also views of the Colosseum from different parts of Rome. The makers of this film, in producing a series of pictures depicting "The Glories of Ancient Rome," are rendering valuable aid to educational kinematography. Old though pictures of the Colosseum may be, there have never before been seen such detailed and instructive ones as these now before us. It is safe to say that not a single valuable part of the great structure has been omitted, making it a picture of valuable and deep research, for which we are indebted to the makers. If other pictures of this Rome series equal this of the Colosseum, it will be wise to suggest to the Vero Educational Society that the world contains other places of equal interest and importance which awaits their penetrating powers; these are pictures not only for to-day but for the "generations yet to follow."

MOTION PICTURES IN THE WORLD'S WORK.

From Washington, Pennsylvania, comes the information that a series of University Extension Lectures are being given in the local high school. The important feature, of course, is the use of the moving picture to illustrate the lectures given by Dr. Frederick Poole. The subjects used are Chinese manners and customs showing also their methods of education. The Panama Canal Zone with its wide range of information is included. The local reports say that to see the pictures and to hear the descriptions is a rare privilege.

* * *

St. Paul, Minnesota:—In line with the idea of making moving pictures truly educational as well as entertaining, films are being shown in the local picture houses illustrating the process of food-making for which Battle Creek, Michigan, is famous. How trained chemists, and food experts, familiar by long experience, bring their knowledge to bear upon the best possible productions, give the people not only interesting pictures, but also teach the value of a better acquaintance with all the conditions pertaining to the health producing qualities of the pure food questions.

* * *

Moving pictures to "boost" better roads in Ohio is the purpose of the state commissioner of highways. For this purpose films are being prepared showing sections of bad roads, with every stage of improvement, also with materials and methods used. It is hoped thereby to interest farmers and others in a campaign of moving picture education. Films will be furnished to all picture houses undertaking to use them, the result shows many advantages in every way.

* * *

In Hastings, Nebraska, the Rev. J. E. Holly has invested $2,000 in an up-to-date moving picture outfit. The reverend gentleman is announced as an experienced traveller, hence, without doubt, his broad mindedness; he will therefore use many scenics with double profit. A series of sermons and lectures announced, give proof that those favored to hear and see will be benefited.

* * *

Moving pictures and automobiles are now in partnership. The Pierce-Arrow Motor Co. are using films to demonstrate the powers and capabilities of their machines. Especially in the handling of motor trucks are the pictures most helpful. A passenger car can be demonstrated on any street, but not so with a motor truck.

Agents have felt at a loss which the moving picture now removes. This, of course, is not surprising to those who know the picture's powers; they will do almost anything.

W. H. J.

OBSERVATIONS
BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

ALTHOUGH the daily newspapers have not volunteered much comment upon it, the Vitagraph Theater, which was opened at Broadway and Forty-fourth Street, on February 7, is the chief topic of discussion in all theatrical rendezvous of the city. The success of the undertaking is an amazing surprise Not one in fifty persons, other than those in touch with the moving picture business and having a knowledge of the plans and preliminaries attending the opening of the theater, would permit themselves to believe that the Criterion Theater could be transformed into a successful moving picture theater. Predictions of failure were broadcast. People who have suffered by the invasion of motion pictures into the regular theatrical field smiled cynically and figured for their friends the amount of loss the promoters would sustain during the first week. None in the theatrical business are more jealous of the success that has attended the motion picture business than the house and stage people employed in the regular theater. A few nights before the Vitagraph Theater opened the project was discussed in a place in the White Way district frequented by these people and not one in the party could see any possibility of success. One of them was quite emphatic and said: "Here is where the moving picture people overreach themselves. Their heads have been turned by the success attending the pictures and they imagine they can get the higher class of people to patronize the pictures at high prices as the middle and lower classes patronize the small houses. But, mark my words, when people want to spend a dollar for entertainment they will not pay it to see pictures. This undertaking is just what I have expected for a long time. I knew that too much confidence in the game would bring it about and it will be a white elephant. It will decide whether or not the people of the upper spheres are really interested in motion pictures beyond the educational point. I do not think there are sufficient numbers to uphold such a project. If there are not, then the old line theaters will find prosperity returning to them."

* * *

Imagine the surprise given the cynics when, on the eve of the opening, the Vitagraph Company announced that the free list was absolutely suspended. "Ho! Ho!!" laughed the doubters. "What! Not going to paper the house on the opening night! Why, that is the night to pack the place and get the people to sit up and take notice." Old time managers declared the announcement one of the most daring strokes ever made in the amusement world. Even some who conceded that the theater would meet with success thought the announcement would interfere with the opening being an auspicious one. They could not realize that enough paid admissions could be secured to fill the house. One veteran manager said: "There is a surprising amount of nerve behind that undertaking. If I was the manager I could not induce myself to tell the people to pay or stay away. I look upon the project as an experiment and I would not think of trying an experiment with no paper in the house on the opening night. I can't see where the people are coming from. The class of people the promoters expect to make the house a success will not scramble over each other to get to the box office until they learn what is doing. It will be the greatest advancing stride that has ever been made in the history of the moving picture business, but the people behind it cannot expect the first nighters to go there as they do on similar occasions at the regular houses."

* * *

And all these soothsayers were wrong. Every one of them. They thought they knew the pulse of the amusement public so well that they could not be mistaken. On the opening night several hundred people were disappointed in failing to gain admission to the theater. The house was completely sold out and many were turned away, among them some people directly and indirectly connected with the Vitagraph Company. The soothsayers the following day said: "Well, we went wrong on the first night because we did not reckon upon the host of friends the promoters had. The company was one of the pioneers in the moving picture business and naturally has won the good will of a large number of people, and they decided to give the company a good send-off on the opening of its new venture." This seemed very plausible, but subsequent developments have shown that the explanation was not entirely correct. The theater has been sold out for every matinee and night since that time. This statement is not based upon advertising claims of the company, but upon facts. At the Lincoln Day matinee more than two hundred people were turned away. At the evening performance the sale of tickets was stopped long before the flashes were made upon the screen. What is the answer? The theater got the people on the first jump and is holding them.

* * *

Some of the people who argued that the Vitagraph Theater was a hazardous undertaking from a financial point of view pointed out that in the same building, and right next door, is a vaudeville and picture theater where the best orchestra seats may be had for a quarter of a dollar. "How can you expect them to go next door and pay a dollar to see only pictures?" they asked. "And, besides this, the neighborhood has numerous good picture houses the people can go to for a quarter." All of which is true and the promoters were well acquainted with the conditions, but they had in view "something different." They figured that price is no object to the people they wanted to reach if they can get what they want and value for their money. The project has brought out one of the most valuable lessons ever offered to the motion picture exhibitors. It dispels the old cry made by so many exhibitors that "It is useless for me to give the people better than I am giving them, because they won't pay the money for it." Of course, the lesson does not apply to all exhibitors. Location must be taken into consideration. Where the population is composed of poor people they cannot be expected to support a house at prices charged where the population is on a more prosperous scale. For instance, houses like the Vitagraph Theater could find few locations even in Greater New York. That theater is located conveniently to many of the leading hotels and high class residences and apartment houses. It is within a few minutes ride of hundreds of them. It is also in the heart of the amusement quarter that has been liberally patronized by the well-to-do people. The proximity of the many large hotels is a valuable asset. The regular patrons, as a rule, will not patronize the lower priced picture houses.

* * *

So when we learn of the success of the Vitagraph Theater and weigh all the circumstances intelligently we also find that the attainment of that success is not at the expense of the many other picture houses in the locality and there can be no feeling of resentment on the part of their managers. The new theater has opened a new field. It is not in competition.

* * *

A well known dramatic critic standing in the lobby of the Vitagraph Theater one night last week said: "This undertaking is certainly the last word in the moving picture business. I see in it one of the severest blows the picture business has given the regular dramatic theaters, and I see the time when the critics' pages will be devoted to a review of photoplays and the comments on the regular plays will be reduced practically to a minimum. It behooves our profession to join the procession and get in touch with the technique of the photoplay. Encouraged by the reception accorded by the public to this theater other film producers are now reaching out for Broadway houses and I see the time approaching when our line of business will be revolutionized. It will also revolutionize the newspaper business so far as it applies to amusements. As this theater progresses and similar houses are opened the public will look for frequent press notices on the photoplays. If the daily newspapers do not take the matter up it would not surprise me to see the weekly publications now devoted to the motion picture business issue semi-weekly, and perhaps daily editions, to post the people on changes of programs and criticisms. My reference to the conversion of other Broadway houses into photoplay houses must not be taken as a prediction that all will be successful and that the regular theaters are to be swept out of existence. While my profession has not reached out to the picture houses I have kept sufficiently in touch with the business to know that in no other line is the spirit of imitation more active. By that I mean the success attained by certain producers and exhibitors has attracted to the field many people who may be termed irresponsible, or at least thoughtless and reckless. If people of this character open some of the new idea houses there will be a crash similar to that which has attended the regular theatrical business on account of decline in the character and merits of productions. A standard must be maintained, and to do this in connection with the advanced photoplay house will be far more difficult than to keep up the standard in the low price houses. There is a different class of patrons to be satisfied, and in dealing with them the chances for slipping back are far greater than those for advancement."

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

The Sherry Booklet.

ALTHOUGH the advertising of the exchanges and film handlers does not properly belong to this department, still it is advertising for exhibitors in the widest sense and the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company, which handles the Famous Players and the Lasky Features in New York state, send in their new bulletin and ask for suggestions.

This is edited by our old friend (long lost to us), Carey Wilson, who used to run a theater in Rutherford, N. J., where he wore funny hats. The sheet does very well for a commencement, but the first issue is better than the second. It tells something of the subjects and something of the firm's plans, which is more valuable than a cut of a star player that eats space in the second issue. One of the interesting points is that more than one copy of a subject is available. There is no real reason why the life of a special release should be no longer than the life of the first print. With experiment a form will probably evolve itself, but we think that Mr. Wilson's ability to make friends by letter could be put to use here in a chatty comment on the coming releases.

We'll Write To Ben.

Here is the sort of letter we like to get. The stuff sent shows Mr. Morris to be a hustler, but he likes "Traffic in Souls." The letter is from Ben L. Morris, of the Spragg Amusement Company, Bellaire, Ohio. He says:

> Am inclosing you part of a page from the local daily, The Leader, one of three papers we use, in which we get a little publicity. Wonder how many of the publicity getters about the country passed up this Pathe Telephone picture. It not only brought us business, but was of big advertising value.
>
> We do not have Sunday shows here, but the past five Sundays our theater has been open for services similar to the one mentioned, for which we give the house free. It gets us a standing with that class of people, and every one of them takes every opportunity to boost pictures. We showed the Edison picture "Jerusalem and the Holy Land" at one of these revival meetings.
>
> The furnace explosion was not notoriety of our seeking, but we used it the next day to illustrate that the house was absolutely fire-proof, and with the gas still burning in the furnace the picture was continued.
>
> Your letter to Bill is good—but Epes—that "Traffic in Souls" is a real picture—a picture from a picture man's point of view—not a bunch of sensationalism to get the money, and we have run "From the Manager to the Cross" and did fine. "Quo Vadis?" and starved to death; "Cleopatra" and packed 'em. "Zenda" "Gettysburg" and about any big standard picture you can name, and are not ashamed to put "Traffic in Souls" in a class with them. Some of the other "White Slave" pictures may be all you say.
>
> Would like to receive copies of some of these house organs the boys are putting out. We have nothing of that kind about here.

Yes, But Still—

Now, mind you, we never said that "Traffic in Souls" was immoral. We did not say it was sensational. Walter MacNamara, who wrote the script, is too clever, by far, to be raw. We have no quarrel with the picture as a series of pictures. It is not that. But the showing of the picture will do two things. It will disappoint those who do come and shock those who do not, for the ones who come will expect sensationalism and the ones who do not come will stay away, also because they expect sensational stuff.

It is too early yet for the house to feel the full effect, but even with an Archdeacon holding services on Sunday, we think that the theater will realize after a time that it has had a black eye. It is the idea and not the fact that hurts. We know a picture released by a licensed concern not in any way as a white slave picture, that will do the business more real harm than some of the White Slave stuff, but the White Slave advertising must be sensational, and this is what hurts. There is a time and place for the discussion of sex problems and that time and place is not in the motion picture theater at the hours of regular performance. We think that we can see a little further into the future than Mr. Morris can and we believe that in the course of time he will come to think as we do.

Good Work.

The paper Mr. Morris sends is the lower half of one page of one of the local issues. In the second column are two items. One of these speaks of the coming of an Edison double to the house and the other refers to a small explosion. The only damage done was to an overcoat, the pocket of which caught on the arm of a seat and was torn. The house has been proved panic-proof, and the advertising is good. Had the item been hushed up, as we have seen items killed, the fact that it was kept out would have hurt the house. This item helps it. In the fifth column is this paragraph:

> One of the most instructive and helpful lectures ever given to the men of Bellaire was that in the Olympic Theater yesterday afternoon by Archdeacon J. H. Dodshon, who conducted a mission in the Trinity Episcopal Church during the past week.
>
> The archdeacon chose for his subject "The Greatest Social Evil" and clearly brought out the terrible consequences attending man's greatest and most damaging sin. There was a large crowd in attendance and the lecture was pronounced an exceptionally fine one.
>
> Previous to the lecture for men an organ recital was given by the archdeacon (assisted by a number of solos by R. Herbert Ferren, a prominent vocalist of this city.) The recital was intensely interesting and beautiful.

The third column tells of the telephone film and relates that the telephone exchange girls were the guests of the management. The last column carries the advertisement of the house. Five items in four columns of a seven-column page is going some.

Dressed Up.

It's a little late, but this photograph shows how the Alamo Theater, New Orleans, was dressed up for the Jew's Christmas. Even after the holidays, the subject will stand the same sort of advertising and others may gain a few hints from the scheme here shown. The word "Christmas" in a title is apt to limit the usefulness of a subject, but we see no reason why Christmas greens in July would not be as effective; perhaps even more so.

Another Rex.

C. A. Robinson, of Robinson and Burch, of the Rex Theater, Valley City, N. D., sends in a chatty letter and his first program. This is the letter:

> We are enclosing you herewith a copy of our first weekly program, and wish you would give us some pointers, in your section of THE WORLD. We have always watched you giving it to the other fellows and have tried to profit by it. Have felt much like the sneak in the dark coping all the ideas the other fellow has thought out, but it has been the clear dope all through.
>
> We have a small house here, only seating 276, including the box seats, but we are catering to the best, and getting them, and find it pays. Have two machines in the booth to do away with the long waits or rather any wait, one a new Simplex and the other a Motiograph, and as near as we can find out are the only house in the State running two machines, besides having one of the best booths in the State, according to Fire Marshal Runge. We also have the distinction of being the only house in the State having a pipe organ, which we installed last fall. Beside the organ, we run a five-piece orchestra, regularly and on our famous players and other big features put in ten pieces. Of course we are fortunate in being in a musical center and get the musicians at a reasonable figure, but we have to turn out the stuff, this being one of the few towns in the State that the big artist, such as Schumann-Heink, Melba, Nordica, etc., stop when en-tour. But our patrons appreciate our efforts, and we have no knockers in the town (that we know of).
>
> We have made it our aim to give our patrons the best obtainable, and although we have been the only house in the town since six weeks after we got here, have built up our show instead of feeling they had to come here or get no amusement, the consequence in that we sure have one big bunch of friends, even to the president of the Normal. And when I tell you we have seven different women's clubs in this town, and not one of them are talking about city censorship or making it hot for us, you can partly judge for yourself.
>
> Thanking you for your time, and trusting you will give us some much-needed pointers on our first attempt, also let us thank you for the help you have given us in the year and a half we have been in the business, we remain,

Here is a 276 house with a five-piece orchestra and only lately a manager questioned the value of a four-piece orchestra in a 350 house. The program is a small four pager, four by nine inches, a little too long for 5 by 7 would be better still. Folding the other way would be better and a 5 by 7 would be better still.

The program proper is on the second and third pages and is the least striking thing about the issue. It would be better to run over to the fourth page, giving a page a day to each two day program. Then use a larger type, with which to fight the advertisements, and box in the program with three-point rule. They make merely a memorandum of the films. This might be slightly amplified. They could use the back page to better advantage by printing some straight from the shoulder arguments for the house instead of brief items. The best line is one reading:

Remember it is your individual patronage we cater to.

That is a good policy for any house.

It is not good policy, however, to let the foreign advertising overshadow the house work, particularly when a change of type and some border work will make the balance in favor of the house.

What's a Ghost Club.

The Susquehanna Theater, Philadelphia, is advising its patrons to "join the Ghost Club," and promises later information. We're willing to listen. There is a European film by that title, but we do not think this is meant as that club is a black-hand organization. Mr. Solomon has followed our advice and now prints the address of his house. He also runs an item on the neighborhood theater that may help others. If you knew those Philadelphia street cars you would appreciate the item better:

> The neighborhood theater is as great a convenience as other community enterprises. In these days of strenuous endeavor it is absolutely necessary to have diversions from the cares of business and the household. To dress up and make a trip down town in crowded or cold (Philadelphia Brand) street cars is not a pleasant task, but to step over to the Susquehanna after the evening work is done is no trouble. Truly, the neighborhood theater is a blessing. We don't want to brag but we have "some" theater and we show the best pictures the market affords. Even though located in your neighborhood the fame of the Susquehanna pictures and projection will soon be known all over the city.

Taking another hint, Mr. Solomon now uses actual news items to qualify as a newspaper and so evade the local law against circulars.

Just Because.

Ben Levine, of the Colonade Theater, Brooklyn, has a 300 house with a 1,700 and 22,000 and three 600 opposition. His is the only one of the smaller houses with a program and so he gets business.

The beauty of pictures is that you can give as good a show in a 300 house as the 1,500 house can if you give enough money for it. Mr. Levine has a daily two reeler and plays up these features nicely in a four-page program. About the only objection is that it is a trifle crowded in the program part. The actual program takes about half of each page, the rest being given to underlines. We think if the program was dropped the whole page length, the underlines being carried over to the back page, the effect would be much better, because then there could be better spacing of the lines.

Swagger.

The newest envelope of the M. P. Sales Agency, London, of which B. Nichols is the guiding head, shows a number of circulars giving color printings of the poster subjects. We shall be glad when conditions here force manufacturers to give the same attention to the exhibitor that firms like Mr. Nichols show on the other side. Just think of four sheets in colors for three dollars a dozen!

Help Wanted.

R. W. Hanke, of the Studio Theater, Bridgeport, Conn., wants some sample programs to help him in deciding upon the form of his own proposed issue. Will the brothers please oblige?

A Watch Night.

Last year a number of exhibitors reported success with watch nights. Up to now only J. J. Reider, of the Temple Theater, Jackson, Mich., reports. Surely there were more than Mr. Reider.

And, by the way, Mr. Reider writes that he reads this department and that "some things we like quite good and others not so good." We are just as glad to receive criticism as to give it and if Mr. Reider has time to drop us a bill of particulars, we will be glad to receive it.

Good Will.

The Olympian Theater News, Seattle, prints a convincing argument on good will that might be taken over into other programs:

> No enterprise that depends upon public patronage can be counted a success unless it has the hearty good will of the public. This is especially true of amusement places. The most valuable asset that a theater can have is the feeling of "good will" or "good cheer," or satisfaction that exists in the minds of patrons. To have patrons say "That's a good place to go; I'll go there again," is an end that all legitimate amusement places should seek, and it is what the Olympian is seeking. In spite of the greatest care some things will occur that some folks do not like—some improvements can be made—and many things happen or exist that patrons notice but that the management does not. If patrons will call attention to these mattery every effort will be made to find a remedy. The Olympian is run for its patrons and they are earnestly invited to have a part in its affairs.

And on the first page is another paragraph that has a punch. This runs:

> JUST A REMINDER that the prices at some downtown photoplay theaters are not fixed. You may pay 5 cents once and 10 the next time you go; or 10 cents once and 20 the next time. "Features" (real or alleged) is the excuse for raising. After seeing the show do you always feel that the increase in price was justified?
>
> That the recently enacted "blockading" ordinance may keep you out of the downtown theater after you get there.
>
> That in order to "keep the crowd moving" films in some of the downtown theaters (and some of the good ones) are run too fast. You can prove this by timing. The normal speed is about sixteen minutes and greater speed makes the action unnatural.

Of course, this will not interest you if you are one of those "downtown" fellows, but if you run your film too fast you should be shown up no matter where you keep house.

Dizzy, But Still—

This is the paper arrangement of the Unique, in New York, on the Pasquali Pompeii. It is not advanced as our ideal of what a front should look like. Quite to the contrary, we think that it is a bad display, the use of a banner dropping so low that it makes a tall man dodge to get in is an ear mark of most of the Fourteenth Street theaters. Taken up an additional eighteen inches, it would be much better. Two white dots just below the banner are the helmets of too Roman centurions, for Fourteenth Street is a hustling thoroughfare and the "live ad" is used at most of the houses.

The cut is run to give an idea of the variety of the Pompeii paper and to show what can be done with it. If you will notice you will see that a majority of those who have stopped are looking at the frame of photographs. There is a splendid assortment of these and they hold the attention where paper merely catches the eye. The repetition of the title in Italian is one of the marks of the change of the town. Not so many years ago the title would have had to be in German, but now the Italians have crept up from downtown and titles in Italian, Hungarian and Yiddish are common at the Unique and competing houses.

Just in passing, this subject, which is many removes from the blood and thunder stuff that used to be considered necessary, did so well in the two days it was there that it is to be played back for a longer date—a most cheering fact.

Going Strong.

The Play Bill, the house organ of the Faribault Theater, in the Minnesota town of the same name, is coming strong as the last three issues show. They use the editorial column to hammer home the fact that they are giving the best show it is possible to give. All through the paper they talk about themselves as well as of the players and the plays, mixing the items so that you must read all. It is clean cut and forceful, yet it is simply put. Don't imagine that because you cannot do "fine writing," you must clip all the stuff for your program. You believe in yourself, don't you? Well, then simply put yourself on record on paper just as you would write a letter. What makes your show good? Good films, good projection, an attractive house and attentive service. Tell of those things, and tell of them simply and they will sound sincere.

With Bows On.

We don't know where the Grand and Park Theaters are—at least this particular Grand and this especial Park, for the envelope was lost before we saw their Christmas greeting, but we note that they are giving away a bit of film which is tied to the second page by a piece of ribbon through the sprocket holes, the bow knot serving to ornament the front page. This is a new working of an idea used before. It adds something to the cost, but it also adds to the effect, so that evens up on a Christmas greeting. We think that a better Christmas verse might have been selected than:

> Once again, once again Christmas wreaths are twining
> Once again, once again the mistletoe is shining.

It is set in Old English and so we think that few took the trouble to figure it out, but it is a little weak when there are so many Christmas sentiments with a punch. The cover encloses a program for the week for the two houses and some underlines.

The layout is good, the titles being in ten point caps and the companies in lower case of the same font, the title falling to the left and the company to the right. The body type is in an attractive ten point light face. Each day is dated and two days are listed on a page, the matter being written to fit, rather than cut to fit. It is not easy to write exactly to length with a varying number of titles, but it can be done and it is done here with good effect.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Essanay Western Reading.

GEORGE G. CANTWELL, the new editor of the Western section of the Essanay Company, at Niles, Cal., is now reading with a view to acceptance, stories that will suit the Western company. He has issued for the guidance of writers a sample script wherein the action is almost too brief for general use, and a handy instruction sheet. Among the hints are these:

It is not necessary to pay a fee to any outside agency to have your manuscripts considered by this company. Send direct to this office.

The Synopsis, being the principal part for the editor's consideration, should be effectively told in as few words as possible (300 for a single reel), but containing the plot of the story and mentioning briefly any original scenes or business. Leave detail to the scene plot.

A story, no matter how interesting as a narrative, will not be effective in the pictures unless it contains a real plot that carries the story. A merely amusing circumstance will not necessarily make a comedy story.

It is unfortunate that a large share of the Western stories offered depends upon crime for their theme. This has not only been vastly overdone in pictures, but is very unpopular with the National Board of Censorship and the public as well.

Mr. Cantwell adds that he will accept synopses since it is seldom that a proper plotted action is offered. As with others, his main desire is to get new and original ideas. It is well to bear in mind that not all of the Niles pictures feature Broncho Billy.

The Inquest Club.

At the last meeting of the Inquest Club, Pop Hoadley and Monte Katterjohn were the star witnesses. Mr. Katterjohn is the only reformed correspondence school professor in captivity and was regarded with greater interest on that account, though as the new head of the Universal script room he was a marked man.

The discussion was general rather than a specific inquest on the films, though some lessons were drawn from the pictures seen at the Savoy. A split Lubin emphasized the fact that a slapstick comedy is better without much plot, Antidotes for Suicide having proven more interesting than the Coroner's own Taming Terrible Ted. It was also agreed that a double reel would have been more convincing if a score of men in front of a burning building had seen that there was a flame or if they had gone away before the fire broke out, as could have very well been arranged. Edison's "A Story of Crime" proved that now and then a comedy told almost entirely in leader illustrated by the action can get over.

Mr. Hoadley was forceful in his plea for more intelligent leaders, decrying the tendency to run "literary" leaders at the expense of film where a greater brevity would have been equally explicit, and a young woman juror, who shall be nameless, stuck several pints in E. M. Wickes, of the Writer's Magazine, to Mr. Wickes' seeming content.

The next Inquest will be held February 23rd, the regular night, in spite of the fact that this is a holdover celebration of Washington's Birthday.

What Sid Olcott Wants.

Sidney Olcott wants really big three-reel ideas, those containing a practical application to outdoor life being particularly desirable. Mr. Olcott is working in Jacksonville and scripts should be sent to him there at 737 Talleyrand Avenue.

Northern Stuff.

The Gene Gauntier players want good stories of the north big enough in idea to last three reels without padding. Scripts may be sent to Miss Gauntier in care of Warner's Features, but not addressed to Warner's Features direct.

Just Look At This.

Here is an undated letter just sent in by a correspondent who knew better than to fall for the bait. Listen:

We have your favor of recent date. In the last few months we have received such a flood of photoplay manuscripts, the majority of which do not meet our requirements, that we have decided to inaugurate a system whereby we will have a supply of photoplays without involving so much unnecessary labor—reading of worthless manuscripts, etc.—upon the Scenario Editor's Department. In order to do this we have established a Register of Contributing Photoplaywrights for this company. Hereafter only such photoplay writers as have been duly registered with us will secure readings of their manuscripts by our Scenario Editor's Department. Only those who have demonstrated that they are capable will be registered. All whose names are upon our Register will be notified of our changing needs from time to time.

If you wish to have your name registered as a Contributing Photoplaywright and receive the above privileges, send us one dollar as the registration fee and the first photoplay submitted by you will be read by myself. We will then decide whether you appear to have the necessary ability to be a Contributing Photoplaywright to this company. If we decide not, we will return the one dollar remitted us and your manuscript. If we decide in your favor, you may then at any time submit photoplays and be sure of a careful examination of same by us without charge; the manuscript accompanying the fee will, if not suited to our needs and purchased by us, be returned to you with a statement of the reasons and the faults, if any, in plot and technique.

We will pay for accepted photoplay manuscripts from $10 to $100 cash, according to the merit of the manuscripts purchased, except those bought in our monthly prize contest.

To those whom we enter on our Register we will send a full explanation of our monthly prize contests. We give each month three especially large prizes to the three photoplay writers submitting the three best photoplays purchased by us during that month. Also, as stated before, our active register writers will be kept informed of our needs. Merely send one dollar and your best photoplay manuscript for our examination.

This is sent out by the Motograph Company, of Washington, which is making pictures for "for the home, school, club, church or society." It is signed by Daniel M. Clark, as editor.

This may be a well-meant attempt to curb the flood of absolutely useless scripts that every company receives, but it is not in accordance with accepted usage, and no matter how honest this company may be —and we know nothing abainst their business probity—the scheme is open to general criticism. We do not believe that the company will do such a volume of business as to make the chance of a sale worth the dollar demanded.

Writing.

Writing is merely the transcription of the spoken word and both have their origin in thought. Put your thoughts down on paper and do not try to think like Henry James or Bill Shakspeare if your brain is not built that way. Don't put on airs or you'll sound forced and unnatural. Which of these two items would attract you most:

We want you to come and see us and we want to make you comfortable when you come. Every man and woman on our staff works to that end and will do everything possible to make your visit so enjoyable that you will want to come every night.

We solicit your esteemed patronage and will concentrate our energies to make your honored presense the cause of fresh endeavors to make our palatial home of the photoplay a drea mof fair women and brave men.

Personally, we prefer the first. It means something. The other does not. We think that the Faribault editor must write with a leadpencil and his whole heart.

Mrs. Brandon Says "Thanks."

Mrs. Brandon, of the Eclair Company, asks that we give her appreciative thanks to the many authors who favored her with Christmas greetings. We think that the other editors feel the same way about it and we know that we are grateful for the many cards received.

The Reward.

The man who writes merely that he may get checks in a hurry seldom gets them, in a hurry or any other way. He doesn't even get them in the neck. Your heart must be in your work if you would succeed and if the check limits your horizon—your horizon is too narrow to permit the proper scope.

Proportion.

You do not employ a sledge hammer to break the shell of your breakfast egg, nor do you spread your butter with a sword. You spank the egg with a spoon and the shell is broken. Why then burn down a residence or a country court house to get rid of "the papers" that might as conveniently be stolen by some hireling of the hated villain? It makes it more interesting, surely, but it also cuts your chance of a sale to o.

A Three Reel Script.

THROUGH the courtesy of Mr. Herbert Hoagland, of Pathe Freres, and Mrs. Breuil, the author, we are able to commence the serial publication of the Pathe three-reel story released February 7th. As "In the Meshes of Her Hair," but originally styled Tap-Tap-Tap.

It should be noted that Mrs. Breuil depends as much on her effects as upon her plot for success and the inexperienced writer is cautioned against using effects. Mrs. Breuil, knowing what can and cannot be done, is able to confine her effects to practicable stuff. This the newcomer is not able to do, but a study o fthe script will prove interesting and helpful if the style and substance are not too closely adhered to in your own script.

Any theater using licensed reels can obtain this film and probably will if you and your friends ask for it.

TAP—TAP—TAP!
By Mrs. Breuil.
CAST.

Hilda—A fisherman's daughter.
Daddy—Her father.
Floyd Forbes—A man of the world.
Mrs. Forbes—His mother.
Adam—Who loves Hilda.
Adam's mother.
Evelyn Crane—Who is "willing."
Guests of the house-boat.
Keeper of the Morgue.
Deck-hands, searchlight attendant, passengers, etc.

SYNOPSIS.

Hilda is a fisherman's daughter—who being ambitious to learn—studies alone—Daddy, her lame old father, inseparable from his cane—is tolerant of her ambition. Forbes' mother has a party on a house-boat, The Wanda.

[illegible] out the hut where Hilda and her father live—Adam, a young fisherman from down the river comes wooing Hilda—Forbes joins the party on the Wanda. Becomes acquainted with Hilda—then fascinated with her wonderful long black hair, which hangs in two long braids way below her knees. He helps her with her lessons—her father thinks this quite natural. Hilda and Forbes go rowing,—he lets loose her hair—she jumps out to swim to shore—her hair floating about her on the water—Forbes fascinated—Hilda refuses Adam—Forbes' mother interferes and persuades him to leave Hilda. Hilda, heartbroken, writes to Forbes and puts herself at the mercy of the river in an open boat—is struck by a beam from the pier. Forbes gets her letter—conscience stricken. Adam finds Hilda—takes her home to his mother. Father misses Hilda. Sees note and believing she has gone to the city to Forbes he follows. Forbes hears the tap,—tap,—taping of her father's cane and thinks it is his imagination.—Dreads to face the old man—flees from himself—Is driven back to the river—takes the same boat on which Daddy is returning. On the boat whenever he hears the tap—tap—tap he runs from the sound believing it to be following him—but only in his imagination. At last he hears it approaching again and when he sees Daddy thinks it is a vision of his imagination and almost insane with dread, leaps from the boat and falling into some seaweed believes it is the long black hair of the girl he believes he drove to death. As he struggles in the water, he, believing himself to be drowning, sees visions of himself with his legs entangled in the long black hair of the floating dead body—then his hands are caught and finally it seems to be strangling him as he tries to swim in the river-grass. Meanwhile Hilda has determined she was wrong and that Daddy needs her, she slips away from Adam's mother who is caring for her and rows out to go back home. The searchlight from the vessel shows her Forbes as he is drowning. She rows out to him and rescues him—wherein comes out the happy ending, with a vision of the bride double exposure on the water with a wreath of orange-blossoms and a tulle bridal veil, etc.

TAP—TAP—TAP!
By Mrs. Breuil.
NOTES.

Note 1.—Such boats are found on Staten Island—and on the Jersey flats, plenty of shad fisher's settlements between Fort Lee and Nyack on the West Shore opposite Yonkers.

Note 2.—Hilda must have very, very, very long black hair reaching almost to her feet, or else legs could not be tangled in it.

Note 3.—"You're able to strangle my soul, in the mesh of your ebony hair."

Note 4.—Small ramshackle dilapidated pier, for small boats.

Note 5.—Hilda must of course be able to swim—but Forbes' scene might all be faked in shallow water, resting flat on his stomach on a box, but care must be taken that he is not too high in the water.

Note 6.—The interior of the hulk should show that it is interior of a ship—whether windows or portholes show depends upon what exterior hulk is obtained. Furnishings should be in keeping—the lamp, an old ship's lamp—a fullrigged ship model for ornament, etc. Otherwise, like cheap poor country—pine furniture, red tablecloth on table, everything plain, but clean. Old fashioned stove with pipe.

Note 7.—Seaweed often drifts into big rivers near the mouth, but it should be the long stringy kind and there must be much of it.

Note 8.—Up and down river must not be confused in boats.

TAP—TAP—TAP!
By Mrs. Breuil.

Scene 1.—A hulk on the river shore—high and dry—made into a living cabin. Daddy is sitting on a bench by the door; he is very lame and leans on a stout wooden cane. Hilda, with a lesson book under her arm, comes running in, she is being driven, playing horse—her two braids used as reins by the children—a pretty laughing group. Hilda shows children she is tired, gently disengages her braids playfully chases off the children and sinks down beside her Daddy. Talks to him a moment then opens book and begins to read—while unbraiding her discordered locks. Business shows father speaks of book—cannot understand desire to learn. Girl sees something of interest on the river—points it out to her Daddy—both look up interested. Cut to what she sees.

Scene 2.—A fine house-boat dropping anchor just off shore.
People on deck. Back to Scene 1.

Scene 3.—Hulk as before.
Interest and curiosity of Daddy and Hilda.

Scene 4.—Study—flat table-desk littered with papers, etc., a dictionary on an iron stand close beside desk.
Floyd Forbes discovered writing busily. Servant enters with letter. He reads—Screen portion of letter

YOU REALLY MUST JOIN US ON THE WANDA—YOU'LL FIND PLENTY OF LOCAL COLOR HERE AMONG FISHER-FOLK, FOR YOUR NEXT BOOK SO YOU CAN WORK AND PLAY AT THE SAME TIME.
P.S.—EVELYN CRANE IS HERE WITH US, SHE IS WEALTHY, BEAUTIFUL,— — — —WHY DON'T YOU YOUR LOVING MOTHER,
ESTHER FORBES.

He reads—thinks—decides to go—rings bell, servant enters—tells him to pack grip, etc.

Scene 5.—Hulk.
Hilda stands in doorway—interested in gay party from the house-boat who enter going to the row-boat slip and noticing her beautiful hair evidently, comment on it.

Scene 6.—THE SAME EVENING.
Dock of steamboat—landing. Getting dark.
Flash of Forbes getting off steamer, sailor from the houseboat greets him—takes grip, they exit; note several other row-boats are also seen.

(Continued next week)

Inquiries.

NOTE—No inquiries can be replied to by mail. Look for your answer here. No question can be replied to that necessitates the handling of the manuscript. Always give your name and address. It will not be published. A list of addresses, to which photoplays should be sent, will be supplied on receipt of a STAMPED AND SELF ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. The request should be made to the paper direct and not to this department, nor to the Answers Man.

RUBEENA—Thanks for your good-bye letter. The answers are now in order again.

I. E. P.—An excess of exteriors does not necessarily cause the rejection of a script at this time of year. Most companies are below the frost line. It is probable that you have not yet had sufficient practice. Every script rejected is one step nearer the one accepted. Keep on, but remember that it is not so much the "technique" as the "idea" that sells. The technique merely betters your chance of acceptance.

E. M. D.—Thomas Chatterton was the priest in "True Irish Hearts."

K. L. B.—Charles Ray played John Hastings in "The Witch of Salem." Thomas Chatterton was the Roland Van Dyke in "The Primitive Call." We pass up the question of Miss Darkfeather's nationality. Each time she changes companies a new press agent gives out a new statement. Kalem has her a full blood Indian, while she is also said to be a half breed, a Spaniard, a Mexican. Her director says she is of Spanish descent.

C. A.—"Selected release" in the Mutual list means that one release is not definitely assigned any company, but the most available subject is scheduled. This provides for occasional over production and gives elasticity to the schedule.

WESTERNER—One two cent stamp is sufficient to ensure the return of the script. Vita is pronounced to rhyme with "lighter" in Vitagraph.

MRS. S. H.—Twenty-two identities are too many for one time.

H. G. P.—We cannot identify players in feature films offhand. Will try and get the name later.

F. W. M.—Vitagraph is not in the market at present. Your synopsis is what sells your script. Make it as attractive as possible. Do not try to state all the facts in sequence, but tell interestingly and briefly what the story is about.

H. C.—The school you mention is the one responsible one we know of, but we question the value of any school course.

M. C. N.—The "best" company is that which pays you the best price, and your "best" may be another's worst. Universal is "on the level," surely. They have recently spent several hundred dollars procuring the arrest of the man whose theft of scripts in their care seems to have been responsible for the report. Both Mr. Dayton in the West and M. Katterjohn in the East will deal fairly by you. Study the release lists for markets. The most complete list of all titles is the Answers Man's card catalogue. We know of no published list. Your paper is of good quality and weight; excellent, in fact.

A. T.—Pen written scripts are no longer considered.

JOHNNIE X.—Miss Ridgley is not with any film company at present. Your other questions are irrelevant.

R. J. H.—We cannot tell why Biograph refused your script. Send the Essanay rejection elsewhere. Edison does not make many western stories. Baby Garrity was the child in "Through the Storm." Miss Rosemary Theby was Louise Gray in "A Question of Right."

R. W. R.—Send a stamped and addressed envelope to the Answers Man. Make it a number 10. Restate your request at the same time.

J. F.—Do not submit a preliminary synopsis. Send the entire script the first trip. Editors will not interview playwrights if they can help it. The best way to break into the acting game is to start your own company. It's the only way for an amateur to get in.

C. B. K.—Advertise in this paper for a location.

W. B. L.—Most companies will do water stuff if the script is worth while. No definite time limit on Kalem. It is all right to ask that a slip be checked. The value of the checking depends on the knowledge of the person doing the checking. An occasional comedy leader is permissible.

H. W. C.—You ask too many questions.

W. E. R.—We cannot recommend a person to do the work you wish performed. Sorry.

W. A. S.—The script was sent to the proper address and will be handled in due time.

E. J. R.—We do not know the player's present whereabouts. R. M. stands for Reliance-Mutual.

J. D. A.—The Apollo is working in Los Angeles. Same address as Majestic.

W. F. M.—We know of no one giving instruction in camera work. Apply to the various studios.

J. B.—Miss Velma Whitman has the lead in "Out of the Depths."

T. J. S.—A two-part story is two thousand feet long. Companies vary in their scripts. Some want two single reels and others one continuous script for two or more parts. Better divide in two parts and let it go at that. If the idea is all there the division of the script will not affect the sale.

H. W. F.—In "The Double Chase," Madge, the adopted daughter, was Miss Frankie Mann. Miss Vivian Pates was Ruth. The longer the script sticks, within reason, the more hopeful the prognostication. The palpably bad script is shot right straight back.

NOTE—Several questions have been held over for search. A few correspondents are requested to note that it is not necessary to tip the Answers Man five cents, or any other sum.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.
By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Important Notice.

IT is impossible to reply to letters through the department in less than two weeks and sometimes three. In order to give prompt service those sending 4 cents in stamps to cover cost will receive a carbon copy of the department reply by mail.

The first seventy-five questions are now ready and printed in pamphlet form. They may be obtained by sending 25 cents to the editor, preferably in coin or stamps.

Best answers will be published and the name of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Explicit permission to use the name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used.

Question No. 21.

Why is it that carbon brushes are mostly used? Suppose a salesman tried to sell you copper brushes for your motor or generator, making the claim that they were best, most economical, etc., what would you answer? In other words, would he make the sale or not, and why? Explain the electrical reason for shifting brushes ahead of the neutral point under load and tell what the "neutral point" is. Why is the failure of brushes to make good contact with the commutator a very serious matter, aside from tendency to spark? What is meant by "chattering" of the brushes, its causes, effect and remedy?

Roll of Honor on Question No. 15.

A great many of those who answered Question No. 15 assumed it to be somewhat more simple than it really was. Fort Worth, however, struck the idea when he said: "This question is very simple to some and quite hard to others." There were several very good answers, but I think Ernest D. Wills, Brookings, South Dakota, has again covered himself with glory by sending in what is, everything considered, the best reply. The Roll of Honor is as follows: Fort Worth, Texas; W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey; Robert L. St. James, Great Barrington, Massachusetts; Ocean City, New Jersey; New Orleans, Louisiana; Thomas Edmonston, St. Louis, Missouri; L. C. La Grow, Albany, New York; W. L. Johnston, Toronto, Canada; Denver, Colorado (2); Chicago, Illinois; L. B. Minges, Lestershire, New York; Henry Joelsten, Brooklyn, New York; Seattle, Washington; Henry L. Dobson, Toronto, Canada; Tacoma, Washington, and Boston, Mass.

Reply to Question No. 15.

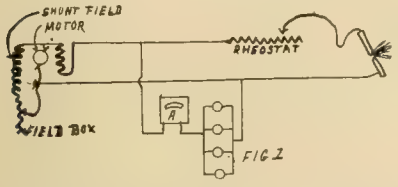
By Ernest D. Wills, Brookings, S. Dakota.

The Question:

Suppose you were running a motor generator set and something went wrong with your voltmeter, so that it would not register. How would you temporarily determine the approximate voltage of the generator?

The Answer:

If you have no other instruments except the voltmeter and that goes bad, one way to find the near voltage is by connecting lamps whose rated voltage is known, across the terminals of the machine, or the line at some convenient point. You can then judge what the voltage is by the brightness of the filament. The filament will glow dull red at third voltage and bright red at half voltage. At full voltage it is, of course, at candle power; but this method is crude, since the eye cannot catch the exact light value. If the voltage be 220 and your incandescent lamps 110 then you can connect the two series. The better method, however, is, if you have an ammeter, to connect it as per diagram, using four or more lamps of the same voltage as the generator. The more lamps you use the higher will be the reading of the scale.



Suppose the lamps to be 110 volts. As they are connected in Figure 1 their combined resistance would be 220 x ¼ = 55 ohms; the resistence of a 110 volt incandescent 16 c.p. filament being 220 ohms; thus from Ohm's law we have amperes equal voltage divided by resistance, wherefore voltage equals resistance multiplied by amperes, or, in other words, the voltage across the lines is equal to the resistance of the lamp combination, 55 ohms in this case, multiplied by the ammeter reading. Now suppose the ammeter reads 2 amperes with the connection as shown in Figure 1, then the voltage would be 2 x 55 = 110 volts. Figure 2 shows the method where the voltage is 220.

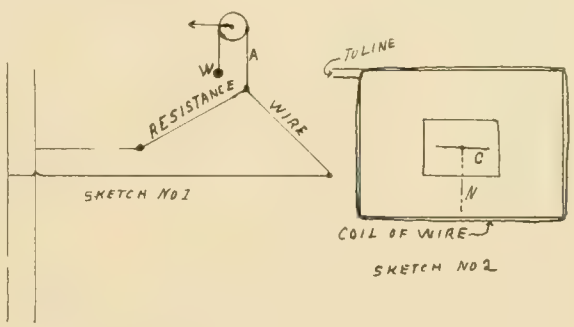
The figuring is the same, except in this case it would be 220 x 2 ÷ 4 = 110 ohms. So with the ammeter reading 2 amperes we would have 110 x 2 = 220 volts. Don't attempt to connect your ammeter across the lines without the lamps or you will ruin the instrument. The following table shows comparison between ammeter readings and line voltage when connected as per diagrams:

Ammeter reading	Voltage when connected as per Fig. 1	Voltage when connected as per Fig. 2
.2	11	22
.4	22	44
.6	33	66
.8	44	88
1.0	55	110
1.2	66	132
1.4	77	154
1.6	88	176
1.8	99	198
2.0	110	220
2.2	121.	242

There are other methods, such as the counter e.f. method and the use of dry cells, but the above I have found accurate within two or three per cent. at the worst, the variations being due to changes in lamp resistance and other things.

The foregoing could not be applied successfully, I think, except with a very low reading ammeter; the regular station could not be raised on a two-volt reading. Brother W. S. James, Camden, N. J., gave one or two methods which are interesting. His reply to Question 15 was, in part, as follows:

It is a well-known fact that flow of current in a wire will create a magnetic field; also the smaller the wire the less flow a given voltage will produce. Let us then consider a very fine wire placed in multiple with the line, and a compass placed under it. The needle of the compass will be deflected from its natural position, the amount of the deflection depending upon the strength of the current. If the wire runs north and south it is the best position, since then it will be possible to get a greater movement of the needle. You will say this is getting at the amperes, but as the resistance only allows a certain amperage at a certain voltage and the deflection is proportionate to current flow, then as the voltage rises or falls it will force more or less current through, thus causing a greater or less deflection of the needle, and we may thus, by the needle movement, detect any voltage fluctuation, though this contrivance will not give an actual reading unless it be calibrated as hereinafter set forth.



Another way is to connect a long piece of resistance wire, as per sketch No. 1. The current flow will produce heat and expand the wire, whereupon weight W will move the pointer. This is the Curdew style voltmeter. Still another way is to watch an ordinary incandescent lamp connected across the mains of the generator. The brighter the lamp the higher the voltage. I do not think this is of much value, as the eye cannot gauge the light values with accuracy. It is possible to roughly calibrate the movements of the compass needle and the temporary voltmeter by proceeding as follows: Connect enough low voltage lamps in series to equal the normal generator voltage and then connect several series in multiple. Place enough lamps in series so that they will all light up to c.p., and multiply the voltage of each lamp by the number of lamps in the series. This will give the voltage the generator is producing. Have no other load when making the test. For example: Using a 52-volt generator, we will need 14 two-volt lamps. Now, with our field rheostat all in and the lamps in the circuit, we will adjust the field rheostat until all the lamps burn to c.p., as nearly as we can judge, and mark the position of the needle of our home-made indicator. Now cut out one of the lamps and adjust rheostat until all the lamps again burn to c.p. This gives another two-volt reading, and we mark the position of the needle. After we do this for all the lamps, cutting out one each time, the needle will be calibrated approximately for every two-volt variation.

But, after all, I think that I would make a temporary voltmeter as follows: Wind a coil of wire on a wooden frame, as in sketch 2, using enough to give about 19,100 ohms resistance. I take this as a standard as I measured the resistance of a 50 volt meter, Westinghouse type, and found it had 19,122 ohms resistance. The bridge I used was correct within two ohms. The reason for using high resistance is that the greater the resistance the less the deflection for a given voltage, and the needle might, if the resistance be too low, be deflected at right angles with the generator at half the intended voltage, and then the balance could not be read. If too much resistance is used, the deflection of the needle is so small that you may have to make the division read every four volts. In the wooden frame I would insert an ordinary needle (n) and put cardboard circle (c) on the needle. This is to put the scale on. On top of the needle set the compass needle or a home-made magnetic needle. One can be made by holding a piece of steel against a magnet of any sort. Calibrate this home-made affair with the lamps. This will give very good satisfaction if placed where there are no air currents.

Another Puzzle.

C. C. Beach, proprietor and manager of the Opera House at Westminster, Md., writes:

I am on the job constantly from the first turn of the crank until I bid my patrons good-night. Have been greatly worried, at times, about my light, and projection in general, and had always supposed the light or lens to be not properly adjusted, although I have carefully followed the directions set forth in our most valued department wherever practical. But, with few exceptions, my pictures have been more or less blurred, hazy and unsteady and for the latter trouble I placed the blame on the machine, a Power's Six. Last night, however, I ran an Ambrosio, "Chopin's Nocturne," of not very recent release, and, the three reels, from start to finish, were by far the clearest and steadiest ever shown in my theater, although the general conditions with regard to light, lens, and machine were the same. If I were a camera man, printer, or other craftsman who had to do with film production, and I could not do work such as was shown in this picture, I certainly would gladly pay those who had the knowledge to teach me, for photoplays now, from the raw material to the last picture of a reel as it leaves the projector, in all its branches, represent true art and skill, and surely it is up to exhibitors, operators, camera men, and others to be ever on the watch, doing what we may for the good of the cause, or else get out of the game. May I ask will an objective lens deteriorate from constant use—say about two years? Also the same question with regard to inductors or transformers.

You will find that many of the producers turn out films which are sharp, clear-cut and practically steady on the screen. Possibly this particular Ambrosio production was printed on a little heavier stock than ordinary, which would tend to steady it. If that film ran steady and no others do, then I think your tension springs are not quite tight enough, or your intermittent sprocket teeth are worn. No, a projection lens ought not to deteriorate through use, although it is possible, since optical glass contains a certain amount of metal, and I have, in rare cases, seen a lens which became foggy after a time, due to the oxidization of the metal in the glass, or at least I suppose that was what it was due to. But this, if present in sufficient amount to be injurious, would be visible to the eye. Be sure that your lens system is in perfect line. See page 227 of the Handbook. Keep your objective and condenser perfectly clean and watch the focus of your lens carefully. I thoroughly agree with you that many a crime is committed by the camera man, the developer and the printer; that is to say, a crime against the business. But, viewed in this light, there are a few criminals among operators and managers also, just a "few," say maybe 96½ out of every 100. A well-built economizer ought to last for years. Possibly the insulation of the coils might become weakened after a long time, but the rest of the device is practically indestructible.

Carbons.

Fort Worth, Texas, sends in an excellent answer to question No. 15 and the following interesting dope on carbons.

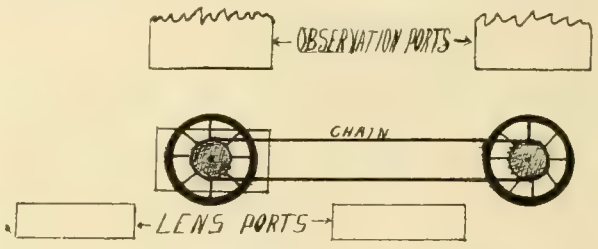
Here is something very peculiar. I was putting two well-known brands of carbons through a chemical process recently, in order to get a green cast in place of the predominating ultra-violet or yellow rays. One of the brands was made of petroleum coke, and was what I would call a forced carbon. This carbon takes the chemical and burns nicely, but the other brand is made of lamp black and pitch and is a moulded carbon, and often splits or cracks lengthwise, and, besides, the core is made of practically the same material (lamp black). The light from this carbon is not so good. The forced carbon was more uniform in quality, and cross sections and the core were made of different material from the shell. The forced carbon gives a better light than the moulded carbon. I wonder if carbon manufacturers will ever wake up and try to improve them!

I am glad, Fort Worth, you have brought this matter up. You will remember that, not very long ago, I expended considerable space in setting forth my views on the carbon proposition, and, boiling down what I said, it amounted to an assertion that there was room for decided improvement in projection carbons. I did not know, and I still don't think, there is any such thing as "moulded" carbon. As I understand it, they are all forced through a die under very high pressure, but, be this as it may, I am firmly convinced that the quality of light, as applied to projection purposes, can be very greatly improved by carbon manufacturers, and I am also convinced that if the present carbon manufacturers don't wake up and get busy somebody is going to beat them to it. It is purely a matter of experiment. I have had this matter up with at least one of the leading carbon manufacturers, and the importer promised to take it up with his factory. Whether he has done so I cannot say; at least up to date there has been no result reported to this department.

A Good Stunt.

W. S. James, Camden, New Jersey, writes:

With regard to Brother Russell's article, January 10th issue, the upper sketch appears to me to be incorrect. Considering the line E to be zero point of the wave, and corresponding to line O at the bottom of the sketch. If this is the case the projection of the two peaks of the wave should meet at line E, as they are the opposite sides of the current and start from the same point. If this is correct the upper sketch shows one-half cycle of a two phase circuit and the bottom one shows one complete cycle of a single phase circuit. I do not want you to think I am a chronic fault finder, but if I am correct, then Mr. Russell is not, and such things as this ought to be corrected. The sketch in question gives the impression that the fluctuations are shorter than they should be.



I don't know whether you redrew the sketch or not. If the reactance fills in the hollow of the reversal as much as the sketch shows, then the peaks should be shorter. Don't think from this that I am trying to argue that there will be any synchronizing effect, as there will not. There is no alternation; just a fluctuation of the action. And now one more: I do not think Joseph L. James ever used two machines on a motor generator set. If he did he would not have advocated putting the voltmeter and ammeter where he did. If they were in this position they would show a different reading from each machine, on account of the angle. They should be set higher up and tilted slightly. As regards the position of the field rheostat it should be set under the port of the left hand machine and the wheel taken off and under it a sprocket be placed from which to run a chain to the wheel and sprocket, as per sketch. I hope I don't annoy you with these criticisms, since from now on I purpose to be one of the department fans, and if I get too boisterous just choke me off.

With regard to the sketch I will say that Mr. Russell is an authority on such matters and he has the entire engineering staff of the General Electric Company available for information if he needs it. The sketch was made by Mr. Russell. I have published your criticism because I think that possibly friend Russell can make matters a little more clear, and discussions of this kind are of distinct value. I shall not comment, but leave the matter to Mr. Russell, who doubtless will take care of it, and land on you good and plenty. By the way, Joseph L. James, who answered one of the questions, was, through an error, credited to Camden, N. J.; it should have been New York City. The resemblance of names caused some one of the proof readers to correct what he supposed was a mistake. Your suggestion as to the placing of the field rheostat is excellent, in fact I think it could hardly be improved upon, though it would not make any difference whether the field rheostat be placed under the port of machine No. 1 and the auxiliary wheel under port of machine No. 2, or vice versa. As to the position of the voltmeter and ammeter, I don't think your criticism is justified; the angle would make very little difference because the needle sets very close to the dial and, in any event, the operator would soon learn to make accurate allowance for the angle.

Well, Well, Well.

Mr. Hirsch, Dreamland Theater, Minneapolis, Minn., expends one whole postal card with the following:

I have a short circuit in my condenser and don't no how to remedy it. I have trouble with the sprocket holes tearing out on me, and a friend of mine told me to get some extra ones. Now, Where can I get them? I am running my machine myself, as I think I can save by doing so.

Friend Hirsch's difficulty is serious indeed. I would suggest, however, that a short circuit in the condenser is not the worst catastrophe he might encounter. He might have short circuit of the brain, and that would be perfectly turruble. As to the sprocket holes which tore out on him, possibly his tailor did not work them properly, anyway he can cut new ones with his pocket knife, though probably the buttons might not fit them well. I think possibly neighbor Hirsch used a postal card because he thought he could "save by so doing." Also, he evidently discovered that lead pencils are cheaper than pen and ink. If it were not for the stamp being cancelled I would return the aforesaid card so he could use it again, and thus save some more.

Finding the E. F.

W. S. James, Camden, N. J., says:

> You are wrong in your method of finding the e.f. of a lens. I am taking Professor of Optics Edser's word of this. The accompanying sketch explains. (L) is the source of light; (V) lens to be measured; (M) mirror; (S) an opaque screen with a small opening; (O) with a thin wire stretched across it. When the > reflected image of hole (O) is the same size as the hole it is then the e.f. of the lens is equal to the distance from S to V. The solid line represents the incident and the dotted line the reflected ray. The mirror and lens must be so arranged that they will slide back and forth so that the distance between M and S may be varied.

Brother James, you are full of prunes, and I don't know but what Professor Edser has been eating a few, too. In the first place, I will stick a pin in your balloon by saying that we don't get the e.f. of a single lens, but of a combination, and your scheme does not give any information as to where point "V" is located in the combination. Moreover, you take a condenser combination 4½ inches in diameter, with say a 3½ e.f., how in thunder are you going to reflect the ray as shown? You surely don't mean that the reflected ray would go back through the lens? Well, it could not pass the lens, that is a cinch. Your dope, friend James, is usually good, but I think you stubbed your toe this time.

He Doesn't Agree.

Robert T. St. James, Great Barrington, Mass., submits the following:

> I note that operators have been experimenting with the auxiliary shutter arrangement to work in conjunction with the regular machine shutter, with the end in view of reducing the flicker caused by alternate light and darkness on the screen. To spare them further brain storms and to protect those others who might become inoculated with this particular "bug," I present the following: The theory, as I understand it, is, if the dark period on the screen could be eliminated, by diverting a part of the light of the arc or by using a separate source of light and projecting the same to the screen during the period of darkness, it would tend to reduce the contrast of light and darkness and thus eliminate the flicker. This idea, while it sounds good, on closer inspection presents some interesting phases. Examine an ordinary film and you will note the proportion of shadow in comparison with the lighter part. With a few exceptions, such as inserts, letters, etc., the shadows predominate, and the light value on the screen is but a small percentage as compared with the total light projected through an empty aperture. Now suppose we can project light to the screen during the period it is cut off by the machine shutter, what would be the result? In the first place, the intensity of the film is constantly changing, and in order to match this constantly changing intensity it would be necessary to have the auxiliary light selective enough to accomplish that purpose, which is so obviously impracticable that argument is unnecessary. We don't want to lighten our shadows, since in them lies the beauty of our picture, the deepest gradually blending to delicate values of light and shadow as against the high lights, and it is these elements which make up the beauty of the whole. But if we introduce a source of light alternating with the film exposure, we will certainly injure this effect, as well as come into direct collision with that peculiar phenomenon—"persistence of vision." In other words, you have reduced the value of the contrast. If we take two light values, or an extreme of light and darkness, and present them rapidly to the vision in alternate order, the result will be a light of the average intensity of the two extremes. Therefore, this theory is exploded, since the introduction of the other period of light would produce a picture whose intensity would be that of the mixed shadow and extra light combined, the total result tending to detract from the general results.

I have published this, not because I am quite sure that I altogether agree with Brother St. James, but because his view is interesting and well put. Possibly he is, too, to a considerable extent correct, therefore, it would be well for those interested to give this article their careful consideration.

Aha! Discovered!

Columbus, Ohio, writes as follows:

> Referring to "A Poser," page 1149, December 6th issue, we find that while the two lenses are both marked 5 inches, they proved upon measurement to be 5 inches and 5¼, respective. Minnesota is wrong. Under no circumstances should aperture plates be filed to even up picture size.

You have solved the problem, Columbus, but the trouble is your solution does not solve. By this I mean that in your question you said "When the lens from the machine throwing the big picture was placed on the other machine, instead of increasing the size of the smaller picture it decreased it." Nothing doing, my dear sir, nothing doing. You evidently made a miscabobble in your measurements. If it was a matter of mis-matched lenses then when you change the lenses you also change the results, which you stated did not occur at all. So, Columbus, you are standing on your own foot.

From the Rio Grande.

Eagle Pass, Texas, says:

> Am running a Power's Six and a Motiograph. Have a G. E. mercury arc rectifier and an ammeter as a part of our equipment. We use licensed forty-five to ninety day service, and I think our picture is at least very good. Regarding "The Same Old Blunder," January 10th issue, what you say is correct; you cannot make a sharp picture with a fuzzy film, but may often help matters by altering the focus for different scenes, because most heavy stock will lie perfectly flat over the aperture, whereas lighter stock often buckles slightly. In the same issue an article, entitled "Brand New Scheme," Winnipeg, Canada, is of interest. The brother, however, in my opinion, is, as you say, wrong, as some condensers have a surplus of glass, which would render the callipering of the thickness of slight value. This extra glass does not change the optical effect, but it would render a measurement made that way of no value. Mr. Martin's experiments in the November issues are very interesting, but I agree with you rather than the diagram set forth in November 25th issue, titled "Performances of Projection Arc." I will try later to give you some ideas on mercury arc rectifiers, and the care of motors and generators. I have the latest Handbook and it is fine—well worth $5.00, instead of the $2.50 charged for it. Inclosed find 25 cents for the questions.

We shall be glad to have the mercury arc rectifier dope at your convenience. Am pleased to know you think so well of the Handbook. We now have two correspondents in your city—yourself and another. Evidently the little city by the Rio Grande is waking up. Your remarks about thick and thin film stock is correct; I have had that same experience myself.

Feeding the Carbons.

H. A. Carver, Moundsville, W. Va., writes:

> I have been through the east and part of the west. I make these trips about once a year and, being an operator, make it my special business to watch the projection of pictures. I wish now to take up a matter which is terribly neglected by the average operator, viz.: The feeding of carbons. Here is my method and my light is steady and bright at all times. I clean the lamp with a clean, dry rag, and put on a little graphite once a month; this keeps the lamp working smoothly. I go over my wires and all connections once a month; if they are dirty and show poor contact I cut them back and sandpaper them thoroughly. I also remove the connections to my rheostat coils once every two weeks and clean them thoroughly and do the same to the switch blades and fuse clamps. As to my lamp leads, I usually change them once a week and find they need it; also that the terminals need cleaning thoroughly. Once a week I remove the lamp house, take the carbon clamps off, clean them out thoroughly with a file, and sandpaper to insure perfect contact, replacing all parts as tightly as possible. The next most important thing is to set the carbons so as to maintain a perfect crater all the time, and this can only be accomplished by careful study of cause and effect. It cannot be accomplished in one day or in one week, but when you finally get your lamp set so that it quarters O. K., always use that set. The feeding of carbons, particularly on a.c., is exceedingly important; the points should never be allowed to touch after the arc is struck. The first thing I teach a helper is to learn the sound of the arc, and never to jam the carbons together. By studying the sound of the arc you can learn to distinguish the exact distance apart at which best results are had. Of course, all this involves work, but I am getting paid for that.

The brother is right in saying that the care of the lamp, the feeding of the carbons is of the utmost importance. If it was not I would not have given up almost eight pages of the Handbook to that subject. I think my method of cleaning the lamp is perhaps a little better than that of neighbor Carver. It does not do much good to wipe off the lamp with a dry cloth, and a little thin oil on the cloth will cause the graphite to adhere to the metal. I have not space just now to enter into extended comment on this matter, but it is a subject which deserves much discussion. I shall be glad to hear from successful operators as to their methods of handling the arc.

Getting After Them.

Edward Daniels, Boston, Mass., sends in a clipping from the Boston American, which is interesting. It seems that Walter L. Branaghan, who had theatrical offices at 224 Tremont Street last year, is on trial in the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court, charged with larceny. It is alleged that he took $137 from three girls and a man who had ambitions to go on the stage. Branghan was supposed to make actors and actorines of them. This is interesting, as I said, in view of the fact that Brother Daniels informs us that he, Branaghan, ran an operators' school in Providence (Rhode Island, presumably) until he was driven out. It is to be hoped that the barnacles who fasten themselves upon the theatrical industry will all, in course of time, receive their just deserts.

A Really Splendid Article.

The Thaddeus Davids Company, New York and Chicago, have delivered to this department for examination and test a box of their "Glassine" announcement slide ink. It comes in six colors, viz.: Red, blue, green, violet, black, and white. I have tried this ink out on raw glass and it certainly works perfectly; it does not spread a particle. The colors are good and I can heartily recommend the product to operators and managers. All that is necessary is to clean the glass by breathing on it and wiping it off with a perfectly clean cloth. You can then draw anything you wish, using an ordinary pen, just exactly the same as you would write on paper. There is enough in a box of this ink to last any ordinary theater for at least a year, and it is a pleasure to recommend an article such as this, which has really unquestionable merit. See Advertisement.

That Paper Stunt.

[illegible] Dobson, Toronto, Canada, says:

> [illegible] January 10th issue, Mr. Foltz wants to know why a piece of certain kind of paper placed in the aperture of the machine won't ignite through the heat of the light ray. Brother Johnston and I tried that out, and to our way of thinking the secret must lie in the process of manufacture, some special medication or something of that sort being used. Ordinary newspaper burns all right. I doubt if Mr. Foltz knew any more than this himself. My operating room is 14 feet long, and a window opens in front to the open air. Have another, three feet square, situated in the flat roof over the machine. Use a Chapman & Walker, Toronto, motor generator set, taking 550 volts, 3 phase current. The motor is direct connected with the generator, which has 35 amperes capacity at 50 volts; I don't use any resistance and get a good light. Power's Six-A motor-driven machine and a plaster screen. Have no voltmeter and ammeter, though most of the other houses of this city have them.

I think probably you are right about the paper stunt, neighbor Dobson. Yes, you ought to have an ammeter and a voltmeter, by all means. Send on those pictures when you get them ready.

Hum—Can You?

1 Charles W. Rogers, Goldsboro (?), N. C., writes as follows :

> Received the Handbook some time ago and I will say I could not afford to be without it. Have made a little discovery which, although I may not be the first to find it out, I trust it will be of service to some of the boys. Looking through the tinted glass in the lamp house door of my Power's Six-A, I can see a perfect image of the carbon crater on the face of the condenser. This enables me to line up my carbons perfectly. There are two houses in Greensboro (?) and projection is good. But there is one thing lacking in North Carolina, and that is an operators' union.

I don't know whether your crater stunt is right or wrong. I do not remember ever having noticed anything of that kind, though possibly it will work out. Anyway, operators can try it and see. If you are correct, the thing is of value.

Correct—Go Up Ahead.

L. C. LaGrow, Albany, N. Y., propounds the following:

> Why the auxiliary resistance in Brother Johnston's sketch answering question No. 9? Does that sketch not more correctly indicate an independent generator, either belt driven, direct connected or engine driven, than the true motor generator type?

Well, Brother LaGrow, although I did not intend to confine question No. 9 strictly to the true motor generator type, from the way the question is worded I guess I will have to remove my chapeau and make to you a low bow, since the term "motor generator" has come to mean a certain type of machine used in moving picture work, in which the generator supplies the arc without any resistance in series, and, as I remember it, there is no field rheostat in connection with a dynamo of any make of this kind of machine. The fault, however, I think, is more my own than Brother Johnston's.

Developer.

Several letters on slide making have been received in response to a recent inquiry by Birmingham, Ala. Brother Wesley Anderson, Newport, Ky., gives a few general directions and then says:

> A developer giving good intensity and clear high lights should be used and stains will be avoided. I can recommend the following: Pure water 20 ounces, hydrochinon 60 grains, sulphite of soda (dry) 120 grains, bromide of potassium 6 grains, citric acid 6 grains, carbonate of soda (dry) 1 ounce. Use at 65 degrees F.

Many thanks, Brother Anderson. In last week's issue there was a very complete illustrated letter on slide making. Friend Anderson also recommends Birmingham, Ala., to obtain the two following manuals which he has found to contain valuable information, viz.: "Photo-miniature No. 9," "lantern slides," and "photo-miniature No. 83," "coloring lantern slides." Each one costs 25 cents and they are worth it, too. They may be had of Tennant & Ward, 103 Park Avenue, New York City.

From Chicago.

A member of Chicago Local No. 2 writes:

> Why does the Nicholas Power Company use two friction shoes on its automatic shutter governor? I put a piece of match wood in one side and filed some of the face off the other shoe and my shutter worked much better. Please visit some more theaters and let us hear how those eastern men can improve.

I don't think I can recommend your governor stunt, brother. I presume you mean that you have taken out one of the metal shoes and substituted soft wood therefor. Now, I don't know whether you are trying to kid me or not, but the Nicholas Power Company has had considerably more experience with governor shoes than you can possibly have had, so I guess we will still have to adhere to their plan of using two metal shoes. I expect to visit theaters occasionally. I pretty nearly started a riot the last time, but riots sometimes do good. However, from what I saw the last time I was in Chicago, New York is not the only city, by one good long jump, where improvement is needed. Bing, just like that!

A Useful Work on Slide Making.

Messrs. Tennant & Ward, New York City, have sent this department for examination a copy of "The Photo-Miniature," a pamphlet of about fifty pages, dealing in most excellent fashion with lantern slide coloring. I can heartily recommend this work to those interested in coloring lantern slides. Its price is only 25 cents, and it is certainly worth the money.

From Phoenix, Arizona.

C. W. M'Clure, Phoenix, Arizona, writes:

> In January 10th issue, page 169, Mitchel, of South Dakota, complained of parts of reels being out of focus. This may be caused by the camera being out of focus on one scene and not on another. If the camera lens was racked too far ahead, or back, then the M. P. lens will give the best result in the same relative position. Then, too, I have had film come to me, one scene of which was wrong side to, caused by careless assembling. By this I mean the emulsion side of one scene was reversed with relation to the rest of the film. Assemblers make mistakes the same as you and I. I am fifty years old and have been making a series of mistakes all my life. This would make a difference in focus of the thickness of the film, but can be remedied by refocusing the lens. It makes no difference how many cameras are used on different scenes, provided they are all equally good lenses and are all in focus. On page 171, January 10th issue, Birmingham, Ala., wants to know about slide making. I cannot give him information as to coloring, but can tell him how to get best results in making plain slides. A 3¼ x 4¼ camera is large enough; the make of camera does not matter, except a Graphlex is better since you can then get a clearer negative of moving objects, providing you are using proper lenses, and the lens is the whole thing. A Tessar 1C is the best obtainable; costs about $34; it would be money well spent. Make the negative as thin as possible, but not sufficiently so to lose part of the highlights. Print by flame of a common kerosene lamp. Just flash the plate to the light and develop by ruby light until you can just distinguish the image coming through the back. My slides are used in Phoenix and show up fine. Printing with a camera might be better, but contact work is good.

I do not see how a factory assembler could get a film together wrong side to, though it might possibly happen, but certainly this mistake would not occur very often. Many thanks for the slide information.

Various Things.

Craig Brothers, of the Bells Amusement Company, Bells, Texas, after recommending "Sho Kard" ink and No. 1 Spencerian pen for outlining pictures and lettering on glass, says:

> We suggest that, in the beginning especially, only outline pictures, such as cartoons, be used. We believe such slides are very appropriate, particularly for small, rural theaters, each slide, of course, to have proper wording. Where is the wear mostly likely to be found in a Power's Five machine when there is practically no noise when the carriage is down, but the noise increases proportionately as it is raised, and is very pronounced when clear up? We have a power plant consisting of 9 h.p. Fairbanks-Morse regular style engine, and a 3 k.w. 60-volt generator. Your questions will, believe, be the means of inducing and enabling more theaters to put in power plants of their own, and this, we are sure, in many cases, will be a good thing.

Many thanks for your suggestion concerning slides. We agree with you that it would be a good move on the part of theater managers to install their own light plant, except, possibly, in cases where the current consumption is very small. As to the Power's Five, you will probably find the trouble in the toggle gears on the left hand side. By "toggle gears" I mean those gears which enable the carriage to be framed up and down; possibly, also, the connecting bar holding them together is worn.

From La Crosse.

Joseph Kampschorer, La Crosse, Wis., orders a list of the questions and says:

> Projection is very good in a few of our local houses running a short matinee and a three-and-a-half-hour evening show. I am studying hard and have the advantage of consulting with the electrical engineer of one of our three plants; the library is near our theater, so I have all kinds of ways of getting better knowledge, though I feel that what I now possess could be put in an ink well.

That kind of talk marks the progressive man, and the one who, if he is not already one, will develop into a successful, high-class operator.

Some Address.

J. D. West, Madison, Mo., sent a letter to the department recently. This is the way he addressed it:

> Moving Picture World, Post Office Box 226, Madison Square Station, No. 17 Madison Avenue, New York City. The Projection Department, Conducted by F. H. Richardson.

The letter reached its destination safely, though he overlooked: "U. S. A., Western Hemisphere, The Earth."

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

By F. H. Richardson

420 Pages Illustrated

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

THE WINNER WINS (Vitagraph), Feb. 9.—A melodrama with an autodrome and a big road race as backgrounds. The race is real and a true dare-devil speed man is its hero. It is commercial work and there is nothing in it better than the views of the racing cars that it gives. The photography is only fair; it adds nothing to the offering in itself.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 12—Feb. 9.—A royal funeral of the late Queen of Sweden and other items of great interest are included.

A STORY OF CRIME (Edison), Feb. 9.—A burlesque that stirred laughter all the way through. Mary Ann (Alice Washburn) is cook for a newlywed family who are playful. Mary has no humor. The maid next door (Alice Owen) also is lacking in humor, so the story gets started and grows and grows into murder. It is an author's picture—Mark Swan wrote it. C. Jay Williams has produced it in a lively, humorous way and it has been given some clever subtitles. The photography is clear.

TAMING TERRIBLE TED (Lubin), Feb. 9.—Jerry Havener puts spirit into "Terrible," who has the whole town shaking in its boots. Mae Hotely puts more spirit into the deserted wife who goes after him for the reward and finds her husband. There is action and the offering seemed to please. It is along well remembered lines and is written by Epes W. Sargent. Arthur Hotaling produced it.

ANTIDOTES FOR SUICIDE (Lubin), Feb. 9.—This situation (written and produced by Arthur Hotaling), though less often used than the one in the farce sharing the same reel, is more trite because less human. Jerry Hevener's contortions on the floor made some laughter and Mae Hotely, as his wife, made a little by the vigorous push in the face she gives him.

ONE THOUSAND TO ONE SHOT (Biograph), Feb. 9.—A farce about the fool with a roll. In this picture the roll was made up in a country store and Charles Murray is sent to town to gamble it on the race track. He walks home. There was a little laughter.

SKELLEY BUYS A HOTEL (Biograph), Feb. 9.—On the same reel with the foregoing, this vaudeville farce is made very laughable in parts, especially by the work of Charles Murray. The house seemed to enjoy it much. It has speedy action and fun.

RECONCILED IN BLOOD (Selig), Feb. 10.—This picture production plot is developed in the moonshiner district and concerns a feud existing between two families. At first it seemed to be the old story was to be worked over, but it develops into very interesting complications and brings tears to the eyes of the emotional spectator. There is a surprise introduced that is too good to reveal, but which shows the rough tenderness of a primative moonshiner's heart. Many beautiful mountain scenes are well taken and lighted. The characters are all rough and ready and well acted. One scene is rather inconsistent but not harmfully so. A good offering.

ORPHANS OF THE WILD (Pathe), Feb. 10.—A production depicting life in the pioneer days of migrating to the western land of promise utilizing the old prairie schooner. It embraces the usual Indian attack, the killing of the parents and all the members of the caravan except two children, they are separated and meet years afterward. A well trained horse saves the little girl and figures through the picture to the finale. The photography, lighting and perspectives on the desert are all excellent. It should please the average audience.

THE STORY OF THE WILLOW PATTERN (Edison), Feb. 10.—This offering is a happy conceit, taken from the Willow Pattern ware so well known and cherished, especially in England, for its rareness and beauty by connoisseurs. It is one of the daintiest and most pleasing pictures possible. The director deserves great credit for this masterpiece. Robert Brower as the mandarin did the part in his usual dignified manner. Bessie Learn, his daughter, was artistic in every sense of the word, and the others in their support deserve full commendation. This picture should be placed by all exhibitors on their programs. Expressions of pleasure were expressed throughout the house.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN (Lubin), Feb. 10.—For a single-reel picture Paul Powell certainly had an inspiration, for this one contains more to the square inch than one out of a hundred, in the way of action and punches. It also contains some educational scenes, or at least demonstrates to the audience the method of using the force of water to make excavations, through huge hose and by high pressure. There is a consistent plot embracing some exciting episodes that makes the spectator sit up and take notice. Joseph DeGrasse, as a vagrant; Henry King, as the superintendent of the work; L. C. Shumway, shift boss, played their various parts excellently, but the honors are due to Marion Emmous, who was cast for Tommy, the superintendent's son, whose work was great.

SPEAK NO EVIL (Essanay), Feb. 10.—This picture play depicts how much harm can be caused through grossip and vituperation when indulged in by neighbors, or through deceptive personal observation, when a wife will not listen to an explanation through jealousy. Richard Tracy played a clubman in his usual graceful style. Irene Warfield, as the jealous wife, gave an excellent rendition of the part in all respects. The plot was carried out by all participants gracefully, and contains interesting scenes, though lacking somewhat in several details. The photography is up to the standard. It is strongly melodramatic in tone and will please those who prefer that style of picture.

ANDY GOES ON THE STAGE (Edison), Feb. 11.—Andy Clark appears "on the stage" as little Lord Fauntleroy and finds that he has to go up to the gallery to punish Yale Boss who, if he had known who was under the curls, would have considered first before he threw that egg. It made laughter; but was not quite so spontaneously funny as the former installment of the Andy series. Mark Swan is author and Charles France produced it.

MISS MILLY'S VALENTINE (Essanay), Feb. 11.—The situation of this picture is trite; but its unexpected ending helps it out. It makes a fair offering and there was some laughter over it.

SONNY JIM IN SEARCH OF A MOTHER (Vitagraph), Feb. 11.—A new series with "a fine kid" (we quote remarks overheard) as its center of interest. The story aims at pleasing, human sentiment most successfully. The love story between Sonny's father (Tefft Johnson) and the girl (Clara Kimball Young) is acted in a bright and convincing way. It makes an excellent offering.

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF POLLY (Pathe), Feb. 11.—A short farce with one good joke that is not expected and is very laughable. The rest of the picture has a touch of broad humor given to it by the players. The photography is rather thick.

A TYPICAL BUDDHIST TEMPLE (Pathe), Feb. 11.—Scenes of great beauty showing a Chinese temple. It is not perfectly photographed, but is clear enough.

SCENES ALONG THE CANVERY RIVER, INDIA (Pathe), Feb. 11.—Not perfectly photographed, these views of a torrent and its banks are interesting.

A STRENUOUS SCOOP (Selig), Feb. 11.—Comedy comes from the gumption of the cub reporter who will interview the noted opera singer whether or no. "Dago Frank," the "wanted" man, thought he had a good get-away in the singer's dress and was greatly annoyed at having the reporter following him about, even up a tree. It is quite laughable and the house seemed to enjoy it a good deal.

NIAGARA FALLS (Vitagraph), Feb. 12.—Some excellent views of the famous falls, rapids and the gorge below. A good scenic half reel.

SOME STEAMER SCOOPING (Vitagraph), Feb. 12.—Maurice Costello and Clara Kimball Young appear here in a very slight offering, on same reel with above. Nicely pictured, but not at all strong.

THE WEAKER'S STRENGTH (Essanay), Feb. 12.—This tells a story within a story. The girl who eloped with a young man tells her experiences to a stranger, believing she has killed her former lover. The development is not very smooth, and while well enacted, the story is not of an elevating type. It turns out that the lover was only wounded and a happy ending is suggested. The photography is quite dark in places.

AS IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN (Biograph), Feb. 12.—A dream story in which a village girl, beloved by the town barber, is badly stage struck. Her metropolitan experiences, as pictured in the dream, are entertaining. She sees herself a star in opera, but has a sad awakening. She presumably decides to accept the barber, though the picture does not show this.

SUSPENSE AND SUSPENDERS (Melies), Feb. 12.—A fairly amusing little skit, in which a moving picture actor leaves his suspenders in milady's room, leading to grave suspicions on Algie's part.

WINKY WILLIE'S BIRTHDAY GIFTS (Melies), Feb. 12.—This, on same reel with above, shows the little youngster playing tricks with the kit of tools given him by his aunt. The situations are very funny. The best of this series yet shown.

THE MISTRESS OF HIS HOUSE (Selig), Feb. 12.—Every woman will appreciate this little domestic story, written by W. E. Wing. It shows how the brother marries and brings home his young wife to live with the housekeeping sister. The women clash over the management of the home until the wife is injured. Rather a slight plot, but true to human nature and entertaining accordingly.

A SOLDIER OF THE C. S. A. (Selig), Feb. 13.—The story will not make strong appeal to the critical, but it may go with the crowd. The theme is of an old and broken-down veteran who, when he is unable to pay for his lodging, has his violin taken from him by his landlady. Later, starving, he enters a house where there has been a little reunion of men who followed the same flag he did. He steals the emblem, in which he wraps a loaf of bread. Detected and caught, he is taken back to the house and feasted, after explanations are made.

BUNNY'S BIRTHDAY (Vitagraph), Feb. 13.—Good comedy. John Bunny and Flora Finch have the roles of husband and wife and entertain their friends with insufficient silver to make a showing. Through a combination of circumstances, William Shea as a burglar gets mixed up in the story. He robs the house where Bunny had reason to believe he would get a loan of tableware. It is in returning the silver that had so strangely come into his possession that Bunny gets into the hands of the police. There is an excellent cast and the story is well put on.

THE SLEEPING SENTINEL (Lubin), Feb. 13.—Instead of titles in this picture there are used the lines of a poem by F. H. De Janvier. The "poetry" does not add to the effectiveness of the subject. It is far from a classic. Then, again, too large a proportion of the film is devoted to reading matter. Some of the scenes are good. An older and a taller man might have made a better Lincoln.

OUT IN THE RAIN (Kalem), Feb. 13.—Carlyle Blackwell, as a clubman, dines not wisely but too well, and as a result when he thinks he is entering his home discovers after a while he is in the house of a friend. Although one viewing the picture will be led to believe a tragedy is impending when the man of the house returns and finds the intruder, the unexpected happens and the mistaken man is gently led out; his wife, however, informed by telephone, puts the chain on the door and the unfortunate man is locked out in the rain. There is good comedy in the various situations.

THE GUN BEHIND THE MAN (Kalem), Feb. 13.—On the same reel is this comedy bit in which John Brennan has the role of a tramp. He makes fun as he gets tangled up with a rural artillery outfit on target practice bent. Considerable damage results in the neighborhood when the recruits try to hit a target.

THE CALLING OF JIM BARTON (Essanay), Feb. 14.—This picture afforded G. M. Anderson (Broncho Billy) an opportunity to appear in a somewhat new role, that of an outlaw. In his younger days he was a bad "boy" and ran away. A runaway usually rides on the toboggan. Such was the fate of Broncho Billy. He comes to a bad end, but to save a brother's honor he sacrifices himself. Carl Stockdale, Evelyn Selbie, Emery Johnson, True Bordman, and Lee Willard, ably supported Mr. Anderson. The environments were well selected. Photography first class. It will please.

THE REWARD (Lubin), Feb. 14.—This is a Western melodrama, full of sensational scenes, embracing cowboys, train crews, train robbers, etc. The leading parts were well handled by Edgar Jones, Louise Huff and Henry Loomes. The scenes at an isolated railroad station were well handled. Louise Huff as the telegraph operator had a good conception of the part and rendered it finely. The reward offered is for a criminal, who attempts to assist the girl from being robbed of a payroll. The action is swift and holds the audience's interest. It will be popular.

A NEST UNFEATHERED (Biograph), Feb. 14.—The plot worked out in this offering is rather original in conception. The leading characters are convincing in the portrayal of their roles, especially Harry Carey, as the farm foreman, and Miss McDowell as the daughter, Kate Bruce as the mother and the person who played the boy hated by the foreman; all did fine work. The photography was up to the Biograph standard and the locations well chosen. It is a picture that will please and hold attention, although it is considerably depressing in places.

THE FATAL CLUES (Kalem), Feb. 14.—The basis of the plot of this offering hinges on a murder committed in a hotel. The working out of the discovery of the murder is rather interesting, but not convincing. There is some of the business in the development that loses the "grip" on the audience; in other words, it doesn't get over. The acting was much better than the directing and the scenario. The lighting and camera work is fine. It will pass muster.

HIS GRANDCHILD (Edison), Feb. 14.—This is worked out on the lines of several old stories and plays, but rather cleverly put together. In the finale it smacks of "East Lynne." An obdurate father, afterward a grandfather, is made to see the error of his ways, and receives a glorious call down which he deserves. It is all considerably conventional, but interesting, and will be convincing to the average audience. It was finely produced and acted in all respects.

SAWDUST AND SALOME (Vitagraph), Feb. 16.—A love story of well defined type that will please. Its heroine (Norma Talmadge) is a clean-hearted circus performer who, as bride of the son of social climbers (Leo Delaney, too old for this part), is not acceptable to her "in-laws." It is shown that the girl, whom the man's parents wanted him to marry, dances a Salome whirl at a ball. The man finds his young wife, who has been snubbed, about to run away to the clean sawdust and, looking back at Salome, decides to go with her. Of its situations, half are fresh and half are old. It is well made, clear and will be counted a good entertainment.

HER OLD TEACHER (Biograph), Feb. 16.—A pleasing picture of kindliness and human sentiment. Its pretty, pathetic little story has nothing harsh; and, like an old song, will please though we have had other stories like it. The best of it is its acting and the best of this is its simplicity. Most of its characters are good and all are acceptable. A sweet, old teacher shows a kindly heart and, later when sorrows come, one of her pupils sees that her old age is protected.

THE ADVENTURE OF THE EXTRA BABY (Edison), Feb. 16.—We found little entertainment in this offering. There was no laughter at all in the audience. Octavius begins to pall a bit and the child is not really funny.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 14—Feb. 16.—Photography is most of the items and is not up to the scratch. There's a sensational fire series this Monday.

Licensed Specials

THE COUNTY SEAT WAR (Kalem), Feb. 9.—Using an impossible situation, this two-part offering has a touch of liveliness as though the producer at least believed in it. Perhaps, in rough outline, it actually has happened in Western communities; but hardly where they were as settled and law-abiding as this, or at least so it will seem to the average spectator. The story will entertain fairly. While clear enough to carry through, it has obscure passages, especially the opening scenes, and the photography is in about half the scenes a bit thick. Some unsuccessful candidates for a county office, among them the heroine's father, attempt to capture the county seat for their town by stealing the records. The authorities merely turn out the militia and arrest them. It gives the successful candidate's son—the hero—a chance to plead for the heroine's father. As a special offering, only fair.

THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN (The Royal Slave), Feb. 9.—This continues to be a remarkable picture with its Indian backgrounds and wild beasts. The story is still most romantic, but is not very speedy in these two reels. We find the pretty heroine sold as a slave to the villainous Umballa. The series seems to be attracting some attention; but as the story is incomplete, little comment is possible.

MASTER OF THE MINE (Vitagraph), Feb. 10.—A two-reel melodramatic picture that is certainly a "gripper" and clean in moral tone. It concerns two families whose selfish fathers, one who has a beautiful daughter, for the sake of money, and the other to place his son in the better class of society, induce their children to marry. It is a marriage of convenience; a loveless and an unhappy one. They are sensible enough to come to an understanding, however, and conceal it from their friends. The husband proves to be a gentleman in all respects, courteous to his wife at all times. The son's father is stricken with death at the wedding feast and the son becomes master of the mine. A strike occurs and the mine is dynamited. At the risk of his life the young owner saves some miners, and in turn the wife saves him from death. This brings love to their hearts and happiness. This is an extraordinary picture in novel effects and well worth seeing. The acting was superb. The mob scenes finely handled.

AFTER DEATH (Cines), Feb. 10 (Two reels).—This is rather a vague title and besides being full of inconsistencies it is gruesome and leaves a bad taste in the mouth when it is finished. The theme hinges on the everlasting triangle, two men and a wife, one a physician, the other the husband, Lord Villiers. The former is in love with the latter's beautiful wife and under pretense of helping him overcome some difficulty concerning a scandal attempts to make away with him in a hideous manner by administering a hypodermic injection of poison. However, it all ends happily, but does not redeem itself satisfactorily. The exterior and interior scenes are beautiful. The lighting was only medium. It is well acted, and will please some people.

INDIAN FATE (Kalem), Feb. 11.—A two-part melodrama with a striking situation at its close. The story itself is not very interesting, nor has it been done in a very human way, and besides the tone of the story is not wholly pleasant.

BROKEN LIVES (Pathe), Feb. 12.—This two-reel number, with Pearl Sindelar and Irving Cummings in the leading roles, presents a graphic picture of the daily tragedy resulting from improper safety appliances in crowded buildings. The selfishness of the woman owner is well shown. The fire scene is stirring and well handled. The superintendent's entrance in the court scene is dramatic, but could have been more in keeping with judicial procedure without loss of suspense. A humanitarian subject handled in a powerful way.

FITZHUGH'S RIDE (Lubin), Feb. 12.—A war drama with considerable originality about it. The rival intercepts the girl's letters to her lover on the field, creating an estrangement. The night encampment made a good scene. The fighting scenes were not powerful in comparison with other offerings of this type, but hold the attention. The wedding scene makes chief claim upon the interest, and Fitzhugh's Lochinvarian feat in carrying away the bride was very well staged. The surrender in the church was also well done. The cast in this production is an elaborate one.

RORKE'S DRIFT (Edison), Feb. 13.—Richard Ridgely produces this two-reel story of the Zulu war in which Richard Tucker has the lead. The production was made in the South, as is evident from the backgrounds. Many men are engaged in the battle scenes, to the photographing of which much film is devoted. The picture will appeal to those with a fondness for the spectacular.

SOPHIE PICKS A DEAD ONE (Essanay), Feb. 13.—Here are two reels of fun. They constitute one of the best of rustic farces. The mirth provokers are Harry Todd as Mustang Pete, Carl Stockdale as Doctor Beaky Byers, Margaret Joslin as Sophie Clutts, belle of Snakeville, and Victor Potel as the cook. The comedy holds up all the way. The laughs come along with regularity and are unforced. The picture is a hit.

CHILDREN OF THE FEUD (Vitagraph), Feb. 14.—The feud plots seem to appeal to pictureplay authors, as they crop up regularly, and are so similar it is almost impossible to produce an original one. But this one is somewhat different. At least it is gripping and contains several quite emotional scenes. The scenic effects were well selected and highly photographed. The cast contains such capable people as Ned Finley, Robert Huggins, Harry Northrup, Edith Story, Jack Harvey, Frank Le Strange, Mrs. Ormsby and Logan Paul. Honors must be given to Edith Story and Mrs. Ormsby, whose makeup as the old grandmother was par excellent. This is a picture that will be remembered. The reconciliation of the families is touching.

THE UPHILL CLIMB (Selig), Feb. 16.—Very good picture. The best of it is a well pictured struggle between John Barleycorn and Frank (Wheeler Oakman), who has fallen in love with a fine girl (Bessie Eyton). He doesn't know that she is his wife already. The second best thing in the picture is the convincing yet pleasing way that this unusual situation has been led up to. Roy Clark gives a good character sketch of a drunken cook. It is all vigorous, and there is something new and fresh in both characters and story that makes it a desirable release for all kinds of people. B. M. Bower is the author and it was produced by Colin Campbell. The photography is only fair.

A MILLION IN JEWELS (Kalem), Feb. 16.—A melodrama of which the first part is set in India and on shipboard. It is romantic with a touch of the unusual and will please, and the second part, set in America, is much more trite. This part deals with the attempt, frustrated at the last minute, of the heroine's uncle to steal her million dollars worth of gems. Helen Holmes plays the heroine, an Indian princess, with the requisite charm. William Brunton plays the hero, an American traveler. G. A. Williams plays the villainous uncle of the girl. It has been carefully set and costumed; but the photography is not always in focus, although for the most part it is. In some scenes the light on the backgrounds was poorly allowed for. The audience applauded through the second part which has action, though of mechanical kind, and it will make, as a whole, a very acceptable offering.

WHERE THE HEART LEADS (Electric), Feb. 19.—This is a two-reel production, directed by Fred Wright in his ablest manner, and which does [illegible] credit; it is a tale of love and [illegible] which ends happily, though the audience is held in suspense as to the ultimate termination. The plot is somewhat conventional—marrying out of one's set. It has many pathetic touches which rivet the close attention of the observer. The lead is played unctuously by M. O. Penn, and Lillian Wiggins did some fine work as the daughter of a rich family and afterward the wife of a poor man. Splendid work was done by all in the cast. The many scenes were judiciously selected and beautifully lighted. The finale is touching and tender. It is a meritorious offering to the public and exhibitor.

VICTIMS OF VANITY (Electric), Feb. 21.—This two-reel offering tends to show to what foolish extremes some women will go to satisfy their vanity. It involves the husband who has been trusted with a valuable necklace, in all sorts of trouble and difficulties. The picture is free of suggestion, and will hold the interest of any audience. Francis Carlyle played the lead in a graceful manner and Helen Lynn, as the foolish, vain wife, gave a fine interpretation of the part. The other characters were well rendered. The plot is a little vague in places and leaves a little too much to the spectators' imagination. However, the clear and beautiful scenes and splendid acting will entertain pleasingly.

Independent

THE TANGLED CAT (Princess), Feb. 13.—This is really a neat little comedy and caused great laughter among the reviewers. The actors seemed to catch the spirit of the situations and succeeded in bringing out all the points artistically. There is a funny situation that is too good to reveal, but it is worth seeing. It is finely directed, and the scenes well photographed. It is a picture anyone will enjoy. Muriel Ostriche, Boyd Marshall, Pan Bourke, Eddie Ford and a strong cast of supporters foist this fine little offering upon the public. Do it again Mr. Director.

THE SKATING MASTER (Thanhouser), Feb. 15.—This is a rather chilly subject to look at on a cold day, as most of the scenes take place on an ice rink. There is a race scene that is somewhat tame. A young boy figures through it, who furnishes the small amount of comedy that permeates through the plot. Some fancy skating lends to the offering, which helps it to get past. The acting and photography also help to redeem it.

BLACK HAND CONSPIRACY (Apollo), Feb. 15.—This is one of Fred Mace's comedies on the burlesque order. Mr. Mace plays the lead in his usual inimitable way. The direction was painstaking and the camera work was up to the standard. The comedy is forced somewhat and overdone in places.

THE ORANGE BANDIT (Majestic), Feb. 15.—This picture the producer claims is a comedy-drama, and it may be so. There is little to laugh at, though it is pleasing. The actors would succeed much better if they did not try so hard to get a laugh. There is no plot to speak of; only a series of incidents that lead up to an elopement. An irate father threatens to have his son-in-law arrested for stealing an orange or two to eat with his lunch. The scenes are laid in the orange groves in California and are, of course, elegant. It will entertain. Billie West and Harry Fisher cause all the trouble for father, and do it artistically.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL NO. 5 (Reliance), Feb. 16.—This release is handled in Jack Noble's usual neat manner and shows Norma Phillips meeting Andrew Carnegie, in front of his residence on Fifth Avenue, being introduced and shaking hands with him. Many other interesting scenes are embraced in this issue, No. 5. The local environments will interest not only New York City audiences, but smaller city and country town audiences as well. The photography is bright and does credit to the camera man. The Mutual Girl pictures are becoming very popular, and deservedly so.

THE CLERK (Majestic), Feb. 17.—The theme of this picture is rather old, the boss and his clerk both being in love with the stenographer. It is well worked out, however, and is an interesting picture production. The speculator is concerned in some peculations, known to the clerk, who keeps his secret. The boss marries the stenographer and shortly neglects her. The story from here is the most interesting part of the picture. Good acting was done by all in the cast. The photography was fine. In fact, there are only a few flaws to be found in the feature and they are trivial details. Ernest Joy, Wm. Nigh, Jessylin Van Trump, Carrie Ward and Della Martell were principals in the cast. It will please gracefully.

A WORKING GIRL'S ROMANCE (Reliance), Feb. 18.—This photoplay introduces Consuelo Bailey and several others of the leading Reliance stock in an interesting and splendidly produced offering. Edward Morrissey directed the production. The factory scenes are especially good and reflect credit on the producer. Miss Bailey gives a pleasing conception of the working girl and the entire cast did excellent work. The photography is above the ordinary. It will please any audience.

LOVE AND GASOLINE (Keystone), Feb. 21.—This picture contains some really good situations for which Mack Sennet is responsible, and not only entertains but is laughable. The direction has been ably done and it is well acted.

AN INTERRUPTED SEANCE (Reliance), Feb. 21.—This is a rather interesting offering somewhat conventional, but still it is interesting and rather laughable. The parts were all well rendered. The actors were full of snap and ginger, reflecting credit on the director. The camera man did his full duty with the photography and lighting. Tod Browning, Jimmy Young and Max Davidson mixed things up. It will cause hilarity.

THE HIGHER LAW (Majestic), Feb. 21.—A detective story pure and simple, sensational, not to the extreme as some are, but extreme enough. The authors are John Burky and Russell Smith. It contains thrills, of love and the other kind, as all detective plays or stories should. It is well done in all respects. A novel little scene comes at the climax when the detective's sweetheart handcuffs herself to him—he can't lose her. It is well worth seeing. William Nigh, D. Gilfether, Jessalyn Van Trump and Joe Swickard were the principals in the excellent cast.

UP IN THE AIR OVER SADIE (Apollo), Feb. 22.—This is another of Fred Mace's broad, slapdash comedies, with absurd situations and strenuous stunts. It gets laughs.

A CAN OF BAKED BEANS (Thanhouser), Feb. 22.—This picture play serves the purpose of introducing the Turner twins to the public under their management. They are dressed up in cowboy, pioneer or some other suits of some kind, and with a larger boy go out to hunt Indians; all three having near guns. They camp and proceed to prepare for a "snack," placing a can of beans on a fire, which explodes, startling three tramps and the rest of the neighborhood, thereby creating great comedy. This picture might be a good one if it was different. The twins are clever, but put them in something fit for children to see that is more wholesome.

McSWEENEY'S MASTERPIECE (Crystal), Feb. 22.—A farce-comedy featuring Pearl White and Henry Gsell. The piece is deficient in spontaneous humor.

WOMAN'S BURDEN (Rex), Feb. 22.—A strongly pathetic number, in which Lois Weber plays the part of Peggy, an abandoned girl, who is forced to work for the support of her child and her sister. The story is delicately told and is carried through a period of many years with increasing interest. The pathos in this is genuine and convincing. A desirable number.

THE ELECTRIC GIRL (Eclair), Feb. 22.—Low comedy of the domestic type, dealing with the Gin Fizz family's experiences with hired girls. Fairly amusing.

COLOMBO (Eclair), Feb. 22.—On same reel with above. This shows the picturesque city on the island of Ceylon, with its interesting environs.

'TWIXT LOVE AND FIRE (Keystone), Feb. 23.—One of Mack Sennet's burlesque comedies with a fire scene that is good as far as it goes, and it was still going when the picture was finished. It was quite laughable in spots, however, and well produced. The acting was done in the Sennet style. It will please the public.

REMEMBER MARY MAGDALEN (Victor), Feb. 23.—Pauline Bush appears in this as a fast woman who returns to her old home town. She gives a sincere rendition of the part. The minister and half-witted boy were good and some of the minor characterizations pleasing. The story itself makes no great appeal to the emotions and finishes rather abruptly.

THAT INFERNAL MACHINE (Crystal), Feb. 23.—A light plot in which an alarm clock is mistaken for a bomb. The comedy is simple and not very new.

ARABELLA'S ROMANCE (Crystal), Feb. 23.—In which the young couple, desiring to elope, play fast and loose with the uncle and aunt. A fairly amusing half reel, shown with above.

MA AND PA PLAY POKER (Joker), Feb. 25.—The humor in this is of the eccentric sort and is quite entertaining in its way. The deck of cards with which the parents were playing becomes animated with life. Four queens, four kings and four jacks disport themselves about the house during the old man's dream. A pleasing touch of phantasy in this.

SLIM BECOMES A COOK (Frontier), Feb. 26.—In this number Slim is impressed by the cowboys into a position as cook. His adventures in the kitchen include throwing pies, flour, etc., and putting red pepper into the potato cakes. At the last he is given a bath in a tub of water. The photography is good and the humor fair.

TIGHTWAD BUYS A LAUNDRY (Powers), Feb. 27.—Tightwad has a washing machine sent to the house and they put all the family clothes in it and take out rags. There has been a mistake; the man had delivered a sausage machine instead and the Tightwads hadn't been told of it in time. This is the bare outline, but, with the usual frills that go into a picture, makes a laugh producer and an amusing offering.

ONE OF THE FINEST (Nestor), Feb. 27.—There is not much story in this, but it is full of action and will no doubt amuse some observers. The ever-reliable Russell Basset appears as a police officer and Beatrice Van is his daughter. A burglar named Boston Billy creates the principal excitement.

THE CARBON COPY (American), Feb. 28.—This picture play has for its theme the plotting of two firms of contractors to obtain a large contract. The stenographer of one firm is discharged and a stenographer of the other firm volunteers to apply for the position and if successful get information on the figures. Love cuts a figure and plays havoc with the plans. It is an interesting production, taken all in all. The acting by all the cast is meritorious. It is worthy of a place on any program.

SO SHALL YE REAP (Frontier), Feb. 28.—A Western drama in which the villain, who has been jilted by the girl, employs an outlaw to fasten a crime on his rival. The hero is sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, but later the outlaw confesses. This is well photographed and the story is a little stronger than the average Western release.

Independent Specials.

BAFFLES, THE GENTLEMAN BURGLAR (Keystone), Feb. 16.—In which Ford Sterling appears as chief of police. The gentleman burglar robs police officers at will and the whole plot hinges on the efforts to capture him. This makes a very good burlesque of a presentable sort. It is entirely nonsensical and contains many laughable situations. A good offering of its kind.

THE LEAK IN THE FOREIGN OFFICE (Thanhouser), Feb. 17.—This picture was written by Clarence Herbert New and is a fine production. The leading parts are portrayed by James Cruze and Margarite Snow, which guarantees a fine production. It is in two parts and every second is interesting. Hypnotism is one of the methods used to learn government secrets—hence the leak. It works out in a consistent manner, although some faults are to be found in the two reels; it is a worthy production and worth seeing.

THE TOUCH OF A CHILD (Imp), Feb. 23.—This two-reel offering consumes considerable time getting the plot threads together, but proves well worth while after this is accomplished. King Baggott appears as the defender of his sister's honor. The duel with swords on the snow-covered ground was unusual and memorable. He kills his opponent and later the Frenchman's brother marries his sister, after vowing vengeance. The manner in which the child averted the second tragedy was very clever. A good release.

THE DREAM CHILD (American) Feb. 23.—A rather conventional photoplay that reminds one in many respects, in the beginning, of past productions, but develops later into quite an original picture offering. It is in two reels and as it progresses it grows stronger and holds the audience in interest. It is beautifully staged. A father's remorse gives an opportunity for vision scenes, which are most deftly handled in a consistent way. The parts were all well played, especially the child in the second part—"The Dream Child." The director deserves credit for his good work, and the photography is first class. It is interesting and pleasing.

CAPTAIN JENNY, S. A. (Gold Seal), Feb. 24.—A three-reel number, written by Phillip Walsh and produced by Otis Turner. The first reel develops the hero's first love affair in a rather uncertain way, but the mystery is preserved to strengthen the remainder of the story, which proves very interesting. After a separation from the first, he meets the second sister, a Salvation Army girl, who gives up his love when she discovers the truth. The scenes at the Beach and the Salvation Army meetings are very pleasing. The photography is good, and some unique effects are achieved. A pleasing number.

REPAID (Broncho), Feb. 25.—A two-reel number written by William H. Clifford, beginning with a typical Western setting. Nell, the ranch girl, loves Pedro, a vaquero, to whom her father is opposed. The conference with the Indians was nicely pictured. Pedro leaves the ranch, but later, during the warfare between the Indians and railroad builders, he renders good service for his former friends. This story is well constructed and interesting, from a scenic standpoint as well. The rescue over the cliff with a lasso was exciting, and the whole comes to a strong climax. A good Western number.

THE DEVIL FOX OF THE NORTH (Eclair), Feb. 25.—A very spirited and interesting tale of the Northwest, with Barbara Tennant and O. A. C. Lund in the leading roles. She appears as a prima donna visiting in the Canadian woods, he is Arsene, a native of the wilds. The love story grows out of her desire to own the fur of the notorious Devil Fox, held in superstitious regard by the woods people. She risks her reputation to go to his cabin when he has killed the fox. Some good storm scenes and fresh situations in this.

THE COURTSHIP OF O SAN (Domino), Feb. 26.—A Japanese story of love and passion that makes a commendable offering on account of the care with which it was produced and the skill of the players. There is enough real Japanese atmosphere in the sets to keep up the illusion and this is heightened by the typical Japanese ceremonies, tea drinking, formal calling, at weddings and the like, with all of which the average spectator has become familiar from tropical pictures of Japan. The tragic story convinces us of both its love in the early stages and its sorrow when the young nobleman who has married O San, a girl beneath him, deserts her for a girl of his own station. His father commands and he fears disinheritance. At the wedding, O San, who has slipped in with the entertainers, stabs him. There is a good deal of grace and beauty in the picture. Richard V. Spenser is the author.

FOR THE FAMILY HONOR (Rex), Feb. 26.—A two-reel number with Robert Leonard in the leading role. It contrasts very nicely the lives of society people and crooks. Mabel Buckham as the maid did some very sincere and convincing work. The story is well constructed, nicely photographed and holds the attention throughout.

THE STEPMOTHER (Victor), Feb. 27.—One of the strongest two-reel stories of domestic life we have seen in a long time. Florence Lawrence appears as the girl who marries a man, second choice, after her friend's death. Matt Moore appears as the husband. The development of the first reel is excellent and brings out a truly pathetic situation at the close. The latter part of the story is equally interesting and demonstrates how the young stepmother wins the love she craved. A strong offering.

THE LEGEND OF THE PHANTOM TRIBE (Bison), Feb. 29.—This two-reel offering is a pleasing variation of the usual Indian story. It abounds in good scenic effects and is based partly upon actual superstitions existing among the redskins and partly upon the scenario writer's own fantastic conceptions. By means of double exposure a whole tribe of Indians, slain in battle, is resurrected. Through witchcraft one of the braves is turned into a bear; this is accomplished in a skillful manner. The production as a whole is novel rather than strong and has about it some of the charm of a child's fairy story.

BY RADIUM RAYS (Gold Seal), March 3.—This features the use of radium in curing insanity. The scenes in the first reel are very disconnected and obscure in meaning and throughout the picture the photography is at fault. In spite of these defects some of the scenes are interesting, but as a whole the production is not strong.

SHE WAS ONLY A WORKING GIRL (Nestor), March 6.—A two-reel burlesque with the inimitable Eddie Lyons in the hero's part, assisted by Lee Moran, Victoria Ford and others. The experiences of the country girl and her heroic protector were certainly exciting and tremendously funny in places. The flight over the roof tops, the dynamite episode, the chase in the motor boats and the twenty-mile race in two minutes were all highly diverting. Good burlesque.

INTO THE FOOTHILLS (Eclair), March 11.—This two-reel offering is chiefly notable for the close glimpses it affords of the giant cactus country in Arizona. The story itself has plenty of action, but the movement comes in a series of detached episodes. While each of these incidents is entertaining in itself, it is well along in the second reel before the various threads are brought together; there is no suspense whatever until toward the last. The sage brush and cactus country is nicely pictured.

A BARRIER ROYAL (Broncho), March 11.—A costume romance of old royal days in France with a princess for its heroine. She runs away to escape the odious Prince D'Conti, "the vilest man in Italy," whom the king has ordered her to marry. She has a few happy weeks with peasants, but at the end, in despair, drowns herself. There are artistic and pleasing reliefs in this story as its two reels unfold. A fine mansion serves as the castle and a vinyard makes an excellent background for the days in which the princess is disguised as a peasant. There is nothing especially noteworthy in the quality of construction of the story. It has the popular elements and has been produced with pleasing carefulness.

WHEN GOD WILLS (Eclair), March 18.—A two-reel number with Barbara Tennant and O. A. C. Lund in the leads. The story is very broad in tone, but not out of keeping with the vigorous Northwest in which it is located. Lindsey J. Hall did some strong work in the dance hall scene where Pete tries to buy the young wife's love with his gold. The close is tragic. Poor photography is a drawback to this number.

A BOUQUET FOR TOM INCE.

Director Thomas H. Ince, of the Kay-Bee brand of Mutual Movies is justly proud of the unsolicited compliment paid him by Capt. Frederick I. Macy, U. S. A., the exchange officer at Fort Stevens, Oregon.

Mr. Ince has won fame as a director in motion pictures in the staging of great spectacles, particularly those of a military nature, especially "The Battle of Gettysburg."

Following is an excerpt from a letter from Capt. Macy to William R. Binford, branch manager for the Mutual at Portland, Oregon:

"Our men are surprisingly critical and appreciative. Though they live peculiarly masculine lives, yet none are more insistent upon real merit in pictures, or more impatient with the coarse or mediocre. As a rule 'soldier plays' only excite disgust among the men, as they are so unmilitary in every way that the only amusement the men find is in criticism.

"But I saw your 'Narcotic Spectre' Saturday. It was the only correct military film I ever saw. It was perfect in every detail of uniform, guard duty and atmosphere. The orders and letters might have come from our own headquarters in correctness. It had the spirit of trained, disciplined men, who had been actually drilled and as for the Colonel's 'stryker,' if he has never been a soldier himself, I still want to shake hands with him. He had it perfectly. Devotion to his officer, respect, a close mouth, though his thoughts were well shown and a degree of personal familiarity that never overstepped a certain bound as only the trained soldier knows it. I congratulate you."

FILM PIRATES IN NEW ORLEANS AND PHILA.

The World Special Films Corporation is the latest victim of the pirates, duped copies of "Protea" having been discovered in New Orleans and Philadelphia. Being fully protected by copyright, the World Special Films Corporation will prosecute these infringers to the fullest extent of the law and will seize the duped copies which they are exploiting wherever found. Anyone running these pirated versions, do so at their own risk.

ANTISEPTIC POLITICIANS ARE USUALLY ZEALOTS.

Editor, Moving Picture World,

Dear Sir: News of the Washington State Branch No. 35 M. P. E. L. of America has been scarce for some time but we are now at work in good earnest to revive and recreate interest in the league and the good work that can only be done by organizing.

The city officials of Seattle for some reason have been particularly active in oppression and prosecution of exhibitors of moving pictures. One city official in particular has gone beyond his authority or duty in making the life of the managers very uneasy and his reason in answer to a direct question was "You fellows are making too much money."

The immediate thought which would arise in one's mind would be that he wanted some of the money but this man is not a grafter, rather is he a man of strong mind with a stubborn grouch against the picture show that nothing can move or change.

He is the superintendent of a big department, appointed by the mayor and subject to removal only through the civil service commission. His oppressive actions are done under the guise of a public safety measure and no one seems of sufficient courage to test his moves. The picture men must unite or go out of business. Yours truly,

W. L. Shanks, Secretary Washington Branch No. 35, Seattle.

TERWILLIGER DOESN'T WANT MISPLACED CREDIT.

George Terwilliger, photoplay writer and director of the Lubin Company, is in receipt of many letters congratulating him on his successful production of "The Lion and the Mouse." George is embarrassed as no credit is due to him for this picture. The scenario was evolved and production made by Barry O'Neil from the play script furnished by Mr. Charles Klein. Mr. Terwilliger, however, did produce "The Daughters of Men" and "The Gamblers" by the same author.

"Mexico"

Well-Acted Story of the Revolution in Four Parts by the Al Dia Feature Film Company.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

A TOUCH of real Mexico will be found in the four-part feature of the Al Dia Company. This will set it off as different from many American made pictures dealing with incidents of a somewhat similar nature. Then the story is better than usual. It is a romantic, military melodrama with its main incident sincerely set forth and quite believable. It is helped greatly by many small episodes, bits of business and the like that not only ring true but are filled with suggestions of things different from what we have been used to. It has an atmosphere that has not been on the screen very often. In getting glimpses of Mexican nooks and corners, in seeing what looks like a true revolutionary camp, etc.; the spectator feels that he is getting instruction. The producer of the picture seems to have had a first-hand knowledge of things that went into the making of his story. The acting is natural and effective in portraying the story's emotions to us.

As it opens we find a young Mexican, Lopez, living in Scene from "Mexico" (Al Dia).

Juarez. He has joined the revolutionary party. The Federals advance toward the town and Lopez receives an order from Villa to join the forces. This he does leaving his wife, Rosa, and baby in the care of her father, a doctor. The Federals arrive and with them is Lieutenant Toro, a brutal officer. He breaks into Lopez's home searching for conscripts and takes a fancy to the wife; but the arrival of his superior officer keeps him from doing her any injury. In a convincing series of scenes a revolutionary spy is now caught on the outskirts of the town. This spy is to be Toro's agent and is set free after giving a promise to help in capturing Lopez's wife. An attack is made on the cabin; it is set on fire and Rosa is carried away; but Toro, in fear of a court martial, sets her free and she takes refuge with her father.

Toro's next move is to decoy Lopez to the town and destroy him. The spy is sent back to the revolutionary camp and tells Lopez that Rosa is unfaithful. Lopez leaves camp without permission, has a brisk encounter with a Federal sentry whom he throws over a cliff, and finds Rosa still true to him. There is very commendable art in this meeting of wife with husband, and the acting conveys the changing emotion of it to us with justice and sense of proportion. It is followed by the attack of Toro's men on the house. Lopez is surprised, but makes his escape through the window and as those waiting outside give chase he fires killing the spy; but is himself captured. The court martial scene that follows also evidences the pleasing human qualities of the story that are found all through. Lopez, though defended by a Federal officer as his counsel, is found guilty of being a spy and condemned to death; but is helped by his father-in-law to escape.

The fourth reel is a battle reel and deals mostly with an attack of a band of Federals under Toro and their repulse by the revolutionary forces. The story drags a bit, since only its ends are left to account for; but the action is brisk. The two little armies are well handled and make a good show as they deploy over the hills or collect for a last stand together. Then the fine gallantly ridden horses of the revolutionary cavalry are worth seeing. The offering on the whole will, we think, make a favorable impression on the public. It has been cheaply staged, but even its worst scene set is enough to set the story out and the story is good. One other good point in the story is its directness. The main characters are few and readily distinguished and all is carried through without complications so that one even half-asleep could understand it.

"Life's Temptations"

Four Reel Midgar Feature.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS four-reel affair is the first release of a new brand of films which will be marketed in this country by the Midgar Company. It is said that Henry A. Mueller, a well-known film broker of Hamburg, Germany, is one of the financial movers of the new enterprise. The feature has a good, consistent and logical plot, which is developed with a fair degree of skill, and there is throughout much excellent photography. The settings, too, are mostly well chosen. The work, however, is not free from defects; there is an occasional disturbing lack of detail, and the acting was not always up to the best standard, though some of the parts were rendered in a fairly convincing manner. The shipwreck is not quite realistic, though it is sufficiently clear to carry the thread of the story. The titles are well made, and much credit is due the man who made them, for at times the thread of the story ran into many strands and the title-builder had to bring us back to the unity of action.

The story, briefly outlined, tells of the faithless employee of an English earl. This faithless employee, after causing the earl's death, runs away with a large sum of money belonging to his employer. He suffers shipwreck, and, believing that he cannot escape death, confides the money into the keeping of a traveling companion, who, stronger than himself, seems more likely to survive the disaster. The companion accepts the money, but instead of delivering it into the hands of the sole surviving daughter of the earl, converts it to his own use and buys the estate of the earl with the proceeds of the theft. He then offers his heart to the daughter of the earl, who accepts him. Their marriage is happy enough but for the compunctious visitings of conscience which come to the husband of the earl's daughter. He is afraid that his one-time traveling companion might still be among the living, and some day return and expose his stupendous fraud. His worst fears come true; through a trick of fate, the real identity of the worthless husband is revealed to the daughter of the earl. The husband is full of remorse and decides to go away. On his way from the estate, on which there are valuable coal mines, he discovers that an awful accident has happened, and that his little son Henry is buried in the debris of the ruined shafts. At the risk of his life he descends into the depths of the earth and rescues the boy, who was on the verge of death. This so works upon the maternal feelings of the wife that she relents and forgives her husband's trickery. There is the conventional happy ending, which the majority of motion picture patrons seem to prefer.

Scene from "Life's Temptations" (Midgar).

There are more releases of the same brand now in the hands of the Midgar Company said to be better than the first feature.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE.

A Flying Interview With George Kleine.

GEORGE KLEINE, looking hale and in condition to do the work of his life, was welcomed home by a host of friends last week after an absence of nearly six months in Europe, most of the time being spent in sunny Italy, where he is building a studio in a ten-acre tract, in the beautiful environs of Turin, for the production of feature subjects, in which American photodramatic talent will appear to exceptional advantage. But that and other things will be the subject of a special article that will appear in the next issue.

In a flying interview, kindly granted amid the pressing calls of many business matters that claimed his time and attention, Mr. Kleine favored me by responding to several queries made concerning cinematographic conditions as they are, at present, in Europe. He was emphatic in stating that the competition between European manufacturers, just as in America, is very keen, in the effort towards the betterment of moving pictures.

Naturally, he touched on film censorship at the very outset. In Berlin, children under sixteen are not permitted to see a program that has been censored for adults, specially selected programs for minors being in force. He referred to a Cines subject "A Woman's Hate," which he had viewed and which possessed high art and very suitable for adult audiences, yet it had failed to pass the Italian censors, simply because the villain in the story chanced to be an Italian army officer!

"This was one of the best acted films I have ever seen, and there was nothing objectionable from the adult standpoint," said Mr. Kleine. "This subject made a big hit in Paris, at the Hippodrome, where it drew crowded audiences for a week."

In passing, Mr. Kleine drew attention to the fact that European manufacturers are paying greater heed than ever to the settings of the pictures, and that they are making considerable outlays to contribute to the greater realism of the mise en scene. He cited, as an example, that manufacturers in Europe are now using hand carved wood and carved wood ornaments instead of cheap stucco as formerly.

"The trade, Continental and of the United Kingdom, is on the fence as to whether the public want long features or not," said Mr. Kleine, pursuing a new line of thought. "In my analysis," said Mr. Kleine, "they will want long features, six and eight reels, if the subject and treatment are worthy of the length. This doubt is not as real as it may appear, for the public is undoubtedly weary of mere footage without merit. There is nothing more tiresome than film subjects of 6,000 or 8,000 feet without merit.

"My faith and my view is verified by my policy, in which I have at the present moment either completed, or have within two months of completion, not less than six long features, running from 6,000 to 10,000 feet. These have not yet been announced and some of them have been made exclusively for me with world rights and others with rights for the United States and Canada.

"I have read announcements by single factories that they are about to issue at short intervals of time, one to four weeks, six reel features. This includes both American and European factories. It is impossible for a single factory to turn out 12 such features—from five to eight reels—in one year and make them worthy of the length.

"The Cines Company with all its facilities, and devoting its best director, Guazzoni, exclusively to its long features, giving him a competent staff of artists in every department of the work, has been able to make within two years 'Quo Vadis?' which required nearly a year and was finished in the fall of 1912; 'Antony and Cleopatra' and 'Julius Caesar'—the latter to be finished in about 30 days—working hard constantly, during the time mentioned.

"'Julius Caesar' will be the last of the Roman classics by Cines and, I may say, the greatest. It will be eight or nine reels in length.

"Our own experience with 'Quo Vadis?,' 'The Last Days of Pompeii' and 'Antony and Cleopatra' proves that the public, both American and European, eagerly welcome films of this grade and importance, and will continue to do so.

"It stands to reason, without stating specific figures, that the cost of such films is enormous and increasing, and that it can only be justified by adequate returns with higher admission prices than at present obtained in America.

"European exhibitors charge variable prices, up to about six francs ($1.20 for a seat). The Gaumont Hippodrome, in Paris, seats 5,600 people and has standing room for 1,400 more. I visited the Hippodrome on a rainy evening, which was not a special occasion, and found even the standing room taken up. The Hippodrome includes many boxes of four seats each, located in the most desirable part of what would be the orchestra in American theaters. These boxes sell for 22.50 francs ($4.50). This seating capacity and these prices permitted Gaumont to pay 20,000 francs ($4,000.00), for one week's exclusive use of our 'Last Days of Pompeii' in the Hippodrome, the picture not being shown elsewhere in Paris for that week.

"I think we are rapidly reaching the time when important features can be put on in America with the dignity that they deserve. The Hippodrome has an orchestra of 45 pieces, and the music is not the least attractive part of the entertainment. We hope to be able to charge admission prices in the theater which is now being built by Messrs. Harris, Bloom and myself, in Forty-second Street, New York, which will warrant an ample orchestra and the general staging of pictures that will leave nothing further to be desired. I would like to demonstrate to American exhibitors that there is a public able and willing to pay good prices for seats in theaters devoted exclusively to moving pictures, if the theater and entertainment are worthy of it.

"It has been an up-hill fight for the past few years to convince many exhibitors of this country that their clientele will tolerate an advance in prices from five to ten cents. 'Quo Vadis?' demonstrated that a film of its character could easily bring 50 cents. 'Antony and Cleopatra' has proved that even a $1.00 price will be tolerated. A scale of prices sufficiently high in the better moving picture theaters in America will greatly redound to the advantage of the public, the exhibitor and the manufacturer.

"There is undoubtedly a large element of the public that enjoys moving pictures of a refined type, properly presented, that will not attend five and ten cent shows, but will patronize such entertainments at higher prices.

"Probably the most advanced theaters in Europe are to be found in Berlin. It is rather paradoxical that for one mark (24 cents), one can hear a concert by the Philharmonic Orchestra, one of the finest in the world, and that people in that city will pay from four to six marks admission to the moving picture theater.

"It is no longer possible for a manufacturer, who makes films such as the pretentious productions already referred to, to obtain a sufficient recompense by selling a certain number of feet at a fixed price per foot, even though that price be much higher than the market price of ordinary films. He must receive his recompense from the dealer or the exhibitor from a different basis; but, in the last analysis, the question of re-imbursement and profits of all branches depends upon the willingness of the public to patronize the box office, and this can only be brought about by satisfying the public desire with the best films, presented in the best manner.

"I have been very much impressed, since my return from Europe, by the enormous value to this industry of the publicity given to Mr. Selig's 'Adventures of Kathlyn.' To me the exploitation of films by such important papers as the Chicago Tribune will increase attendance at the moving picture theaters to an enormous extent, and exhibitors as well as manufacturers must receive a proportionate benefit. There is opening up for all of us potential results, both financial and artistic, because of this greater interest which has been aroused in the public mind, a thing that is greater than any other that has happened to the industry in years.

"I notice that the press is not only receptive, but eager to cater to the public interest in moving pictures. The prejudice which has existed many years in the minds of many people against moving pictures is being rapidly beaten down, and nothing further is required for cinematography to come into its own than the attention which the daily press and periodicals are now giving it."

Third Meeting of Amusement Protective League.

The third meeting of the Amusement Protective League was held in the West Room of the Sherman Hotel, on the afternoon of Feb. 10. During the proceedings the president, Joseph Hopp, in referring to censorship and the ventilation of picture theaters, said:

"We are not opposed to censorship. We are opposed to indecent pictures, but we want a sane, temperate and intelligent censorship. We do not like to have our pictures destroyed, mutilated or confiscated before they are given a fair trial.

"The ordinance regulating moving picture films designates certain things which must not be shown, and gives the censor reasonable freedom of discretion. But Major Funkhouser has added things to the list forbidden by the ordinance, and has judged the films arbitrarily.

"Among our troubles is the apparent contest between the building and health departments of the city. We draw plans for a building, submit them to the building department, and they are approved.

"After the building is completed, the health department inspectors come to the theater, stay a few minutes, and the next day we receive orders to tear out part of the building and put in some new ventilation or safety device."

Phil H. Solomon, of Warner's Features, moved that a photoplay exposition be held at some future date, the receipts of which shall be used to defray the expenses of the league. It was carried. Another resolution, proposed by W. F. Wredin, that a state convention be held in Springfield, some time in the coming summer, was also adopted.

A Layman's Rebuke to Chicago Censorship.

An aggrieved reader, on the matter of Chicago censorship, aired his objections in the Tribune one day last week as follows:

"One of the reasons for strict censorship of the moving pictures advanced by Major Funkhouser and his women constituents is the fact that young children have been prompted to commit crime and leave home because of them.

"It is a well-known fact that many young boys and girls have been caused to become dissatisfied with their country lives and flee to the city because of reading and hearing of the apparent splendor of life there. But would you, for this reason, in any way, censor the newspapers or the city itself for this allurement?

"It is said that the moving picture industry has children for the majority of its patrons. This is not so, and even if it were, is there any broad-minded parent that would not allow his children to read Shakespeare or Dickens, or any other of the well-noted authors whose pictures are being cut to shreds by our 'one man' censorship?"

Ventilation of Picture Theaters Gradually Improving.

The campaign of the health department for pure air in Chicago theaters is accomplishing marked reforms, according to the bulletin issued by the department on February 14.

From 175 theaters on December 31 complying in full with the ordinances concerning ventilation, the number had grown to 202 on January 31, the health bulletin declares. In addition to these, sixteen new playhouses are being constructed to meet the full demands of the ordinances and forty-three houses already built are being remodeled to meet the requirements.

According to these figures 261 theaters in a short time will be perfectly ventilated, which will mean a gain of eighty-six since the first of the year.

The health department warns the proprietors who have failed to comply with the ordinances that their attitude is "poor business." Residents of Chicago have been "hearing a very great deal about the dangers of breathing impure air," reads the warning, "and various institutions have been urging upon the people the necessity of avoiding unventilated theaters."

New Picture Theaters in Chicago.

Kusel and Harris, of Chicago, are expending about $500,000 in the building of picture theaters at the present time. The Shakespeare, 43rd and Ellis Avenue, will cost $200,000 and will be opened by the lessee, Alfred Hamburger, of the Louise Amusement Company, about the end of the month. Another new house, costing $162,500, with 1,000 seats, will be in readiness for opening some time in July, on Sheridan Road and Leland Avenue. The Marquette, Milwaukee Avenue and Wolfram Street, 750 seats, will also be opened in July at an expenditure of $95,000, including the cost of the ground. It has been leased by the Marquette Theater Company. Another new house will be opened in Wilmette some time in March. It will seat 750 people and will cost $50,000. The Wilmette Theater Company will manage it. This theater will fill a long felt want and the maids, kitchen and otherwise, of the pretty suburb will no longer be compelled to visit Evanston shows. The good housewives of Wilmette are thankful.

Big Praise for Wm. N. Selig.

The following letter was written to Wm. N. Selig by W. J. Flynn, general manager of the Associated Theaters, St. Louis, who highly values the advent of the "Kathlyn" series:

"In the rush and hustle of business, one is too prone to forget the mind that creates a medium that makes for prosperity in our line of business. Having that fact in mind, I want to congratulate you heartily on the enterprise and foresight that caused you to produce 'Kathlyn,' from its conception to the present time, and I am satisfied to its close the same broad wisdom will characterize its handling.

"You have worked it in a big and brainy way. Harold McGrath's story is gripping; that manner of exploiting it through the newspapers represents great enterprise, and its exploitation brings to the moving picture exhibitor an enormous business.

"We have been one of the beneficiaries, locally, and the newspapers have been another; and while, as a matter of course, in the natural course of events, you probably have profited too, you deserve it. The story and its handling, in every feature, has far surpassed anything we have expected of the moving picture business, and gives every man interested, as well as the general public, an insight into the permanency of the business in which we are engaged.

"If, at any time, any further ideas along this same attractive line are contemplated, remember us. We assure you that we will join in handling this high-class stuff in a satisfactory manner. We are running a half page to-day for the next series of 'Kathlyn' for one of our theaters in one of the leading dailies of this city. We want to meet your spirit of enterprise as nearly as our means and opportunities will permit."

Chicago Film Brevities.

The Chicago office of the Moving Picture World will be moved from 167 West Washington Street to 917-919 Schiller Building, about March 4.

It has been finally decided by Messrs. Hearst & Selig that the title of the weekly issued in connection with their names will be the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial. The first release will be made Friday, February 27, and thereafter on Friday, every week. The releases will be made through the General Film Company.

In the past year the Chicago censor board viewed 8,442 reels of film. Out of these 343 films were rejected in toto, and cutouts amounting to 65,000 feet were made, making in all 408,000 feet. Figuring on the basis of a production of $500 per 1,000 feet—a very low rate—the loss to manufacturers, from production alone, amounts to $204,000.

A signal effort to develop an understanding of American traditions among recent immigrants will be made Sunday, February 21, Washington's birthday, at a mass meeting in the Auditorium Theater, this city. Governor Dunne and Dr. Emil G. Hirsch will be among the speakers, and to bring the lessons to those who cannot understand the language there will be moving pictures of events in American history and patriotic music.

"The Spoilers," an eight-reel photodrama by Selig, based on Rex E. Beach's famous novel of that name, was viewed by the National Board of Censors in New York, Friday, February 13. An unusual tribute was paid the subject by the members of the board. For the first time in the history of their proceedings they applauded vigorously, and pronounced it the greatest American film yet seen by them, being thoroughly American both in story and interest.

With the growth of the moving picture business in the outlying parts of Chicago, there has been a steady improvement in the character of the buildings, both as regards their architectural attractiveness and their general convenience and seating capacity. A few years ago $20,000 to $25,000 was looked upon as about the limit in a cost way, while new buildings costing from $75,000 to $100,000 are of frequent occurrence. This extends to the smaller suburban towns. It was learned last week that plans are being prepared for a theater at 11337 Michigan Avenue, Roseland, to cost $110,000.

A three-reel production showing Theo. Roosevelt's South American trip in films was shown to the Chicago censors last week and approved without opposition. Sergeant Conway was the chief representative of Major Funkhouser.

Chief Gleason issued an order, February 9, for the police to notify all moving picture operators that they will have to obtain their 1914 licenses at once. No unlicensed operator will be permitted to operate any moving picture machine. The police will not interfere with the apprentices holding valid permits who are merely assisting the operators.

Joseph Roach, who recently married Miss Ruth Stonehouse of the Essanay eastern forces, is known in the literary world under the nom de plume of Fred Jackson. He is a fiction contributor to various magazines, in addition to writing scenarios for Essanay.

George D. Hopkinson, owner of the Hamlin Avenue Theater, 3826 West Madison Street, this city, paid us a pleasant call last week. He reported excellent business with Mutual and Universal programs. The Hamlin seats 1,500 people, and the admission is five and ten cents.

H. M. Booth, assistant manager of the Park Theater, 6916 West Clark Street, called at the World office last week and renewed his subscription. The Park seats 300 people and a program of pictures and vaudeville is offered for five and ten cents. The Mutual product and special feature attractions are used. Business is very satisfactory, Mr. Booth stated. Phillip Molinari is the owner of the Park.

Mrs. C. Rice, wife of E. B. Rice, owner and manager of the Seeley Theater, 2042 Roscoe Boulevard, this city, called in to see us the other day and to renew her subscription. The Seeley is doing very prosperous business, Mrs. Rice stated, at five cents admission. The programs consist of four reels of licensed pictures.

Don Meaney, in charge of Essanay's publicity department, tells me there have been numerous applications for the "Broncho Billy" tango song, both through the publishers and the Essanay office. Many of these applications have come from exhibitors throughout the country. The various branches of the General Film Company also carry copies in stock. The publisher is Harold Rossiter, Chicago.

The Seeburg catalogue for 1914, showing the firm's automatic instruments, is a work of art. Every exhibitor should have a copy in his possession. The "Seeburg Photo Player" is making a record, early as the new year is. Twenty-five were sold in the month of January. The Chicago offices are at 209 South State Street. A call will be profitable, from an educational standpoint alone. Charming Miss Allene Nelson gives demonstrations on the Photo Player daily, at that address, from 9 a.m. till 5 p.m.

The Balkan War pictures have crowded the Globe Theater, this city, since Sunday, February 15. Six and one-half reels in length, this subject depicts land and sea engagements, cavalry charges, the fall of Adrianople, the evacuation of Salonika, etc. Greeks, Turks, Servians, Montenegrins, Roumanians and the valorous Bulgarians are all shown in the carnage. The great battles of Istip and Kilkis and the bombardment of Port Lago are most realistic. These pictures were taken, it is said, under the direction of Frederick Villiers, the famous war correspondent. Col. John D. Loris is presenting the pictures at the Globe. For further particulars see the advertisement on another page.

SCHNEIDER GOES TO EUROPE.

Eberhard Schneider, pioneer and scientific motion picture mechanician, inventor and dealer in motion picture devices and supplies, sailed for an extended European trip on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, on Saturday, February 21. This is the first vacation that Mr. Schneider has taken since 1900. The chief purpose of his trip is to meet his fellow survivors of the naval disaster at Apia Bay, which reunion will take place at Kiel, the great German naval station, on March 16, and at which the Emperor of Germany and Prince Henry will be present.

As Mr. Schneider holds the rank of Captain at Sea, he will have entree to all the German naval societies, and he will deliver an address in the name of the American society at the reunion. It is Mr. Schneider's intention to visit Austria, Italy, Spain, Switzerland and France before his return. Upon sailing, the members of the Naval Society of North America with a band of music and in full uniform were at the dock to bid their comrade bon voyage.

Mr. Schneider declares that he will not take a picture camera with him on this trip, but that he proposes to have the time of his life from start to finish, his only regret being that his old friend, and one of the survivors of the Apia Bay affair, Mr. George Balsdon, lacked the nerve to accompany him. The latter was on board the British ship, Calliope, which escaped.

The Moving Picture World, in behalf of Mr. Schneider's many friends in the trade, wish him the best of luck on his trip and a safe return.

WILLIAM BAILEY CLOSES WITH ESSANAY.

Bill Bailey blew into New York last Sunday looking like a million dollars. This move marked the termination of a two year engagement with the Essanay Company, of Chicago. Mr. Bailey has done consistently good work in Essanay productions but especially during the past few months he has shown signs of future greatness in a number of productions, among which are "The Hour and the Man" and "Let No Man Escape."

Since coming to New York, Mr. Bailey has been made several interesting offers. Perhaps you have noticed an expert pokér player at work; he draws his cards, covers them well with his hands, holds them about two inches from his nose, looks them over cautiously, lays them down, shoves out a stack of reds and puffs nonchalantly on a cigar. That is about how Bill looks while considering the various offers he has received. Whichever company signs him as a leading man will be getting some actor. Some actor is the word.

"The Judgment of the Jungle"

In a Three-Part Gaumont Subject Miss Dagmar Engages in an Unusual Struggle With a Panther.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THIS three-part Gaumont subject is more than an "animal picture." As a framework for the introduction of a realistic struggle between a woman and a big cat, there is erected a good story of rivalry in love. Mr. Dartigny and Mr. Beauvais are unusually good actors. By their intelligent work they carry the tale interestingly along to the point of chief popular interest — the combat between the unarmed woman and the beast.

The picture is well staged. The exteriors are of a sure-enough jungle—tall, rank growth. The photography is good, and there is much and artistic use of back lights. Holkar, played by Mr. Dartigny, falls in love with Betty, portrayed by Miss Dagmar. He is inconsolable when he discovers she is engaged to Palmer.

Scene from "The Judgment of the Jungle" (Gaumont).

He tries to be a man and to face the inevitable, but miserably fails. Holkar explains to Palmer that he is not an adept with the sword, so it would be useless for him to attempt to fight a regulation duel. He proposes that the two men go unarmed to a hut on the place, where through an open window there will be lured a wild animal the presence of which in the vicinity they have certain proof, the beast to make his own selection of a victim. Although Palmer has no particular reason for indulging in this singular contest—the girl is securely his—he agrees.

Holkar proves to be a coward, and worse. As the supreme moment approaches he shoots Palmer with a revolver he had carried in violation of his own proposition and flees, leaving Palmer to his fate. The wounded man tries to get away from the beast which he hears on the roof. He is able to close a door, at which the beast frantically pushes and between the crack of which he shoves his paw. The illusion is not heightened, by the way, when from the other side of the door there is no sign of the foot.

Betty providentially comes across the note of challenge sent by Holkar and goes to the hut. She fires a pistol at one of the two beasts on the roof and then climbs in the window. Unprovidentially and strangely enough her pistol is lost out of her holster, which, of course, is very careless on her part. One of the beasts enters the hut; the fight is on. The two have it all over the floor. The big cat takes the woman's arm in his jaws; his paws go over her face, her body, as if he were clawing her to pieces. Providentially Betty reaches out for a knife lying under a table, and after a further struggle apparently quiets the beast. The fight between the two may have been just a harmless frolic between real good friends, but no one watching it on the screen will feel inclined to dispute the suggestion that the pleasure is all theirs—and then some. And Holkar? Why, later such of him as the animals don't want is found in the jungle. Which denouement not only carries out the immutable Nemesisian law of dramaturgy but should also be satisfying to the more or less bloodthirsty spectator.

"THE BLACK CAT" IS OPEN.

Located on Eighth Street, near Locust, Des Moines, Ia., is a new moving picture theater named "The Black Cat." The house was opened recently and is under the management of J. S. Woodhouse. The program of moving pictures is changed daily.

A New Star

It Blazes On the Horizon of Educational Kinematography and Its Name Is Raymond L. Ditmars—While Others Slept or Wished, He Went Ahead and Worked—What His Achievements Mean for the Educational Picture—A Complete Course in Zoology and All In Films.

By W. Stephen Bush.

IT is entirely right and proper for the curator of a Museum of Natural History to know the scientific names of the animals under his care. If the same curator, however, wants to make motion pictures of these animals it is much better if he knows them well enough to call them by their first names rather than by their scientific appellations. To illustrate: To address a big king snake as "serpens regalis coloratus" is quite a formal proceeding to which the reptile may not respond with any gladsome swishing of his tail. If, on the other hand, you know the animal well enough to accost him as "Trusty, nice old Trusty," the chances are he will do anything he can guess you want of him. He will illustrate serpentine motion, he will show at his utmost leisure how he swallows and digests a foolish little rabbit and he will give you a bona fide exhibition of his tree-climbing powers. In other words the curator with filming ambitions must have a winning way with animals besides knowing all about their genera and their species.

Now let us assume the existence of such an ideal curator and let us further assume that this same man is an expert with the motion picture camera, possessed of every facility to film the animal kingdom in a systematic way, taking up one genus after another; suppose still further, that this same curator is a thorough electrician, that he is happily at home in the art of photography, that he has a most unusual gift of humor and a delightful talent of imparting knowledge through the medium of the screen and it would seem as if we had the right man to give the world a wonderful course of zoology in motion pictures. Yes, we have with us to day the creator of a complete kinematographic course in animal lore, every inch thereof being an exhibition of the finest workmanship. The work is truly epochal and marks the greatest practical progress made in educational kinematography up to the present time. While we were talking and writing in quite laudable fashion about the need of having the educational motion picture systematized, while we were hoping and wishing for at least one complete branch of human knowledge to be illustrated and taught entirely by motion pictures, a quiet young man out in the wilds of Westchester County, even in the town of Scarsdale, turned theory into practice and converted hope into achievement.

Prof. Raymond L. Ditmars.

The first step in the revolution of modern teaching by means of the kinematograph has been taken by Raymond L. Ditmars, Curator of Reptiles and Assistant Curator of Mammals at the New York Zoological Park, author of many important scientific works and a well-known lecturer.

I asked Mr. Ditmars in his compact, but exceedingly complete studio at Scarsdale how he had kept his wonderful work under cover as it were.

"Well," said he, smiling in a quiet but contagious way, "you know I am an old newspaper man and I suppose that's how I managed."

The wonder at the truly Napoleonic achievement of Professor Ditmars grows less the more you see of him. He unites the enthusiasm of a boy with the strength and ability of a man and he fairly revels in his work. He likes to tackle the big problems and all manner of difficulties have an attraction for him. He glories in the task of exploring nature and when he catches nature in a new mood or learns of a new wrinkle in creation he feels himself amply rewarded. He has in the course of his kinematographic work discovered not a few facts that were hitherto unknown and this lends a zest to his activities that makes him "in his fond quest unconscious of the toil." To further explain this biggest bit of kinematographic news in many a moon it must also be pointed out that the curator has a most valuable ally rather than assistant in his youthful wife.

"When we are alone going about our work," said Professor Ditmars, "things go along pretty swiftly and we feel that any additional help would be more of an hindrance than a benefit."

How brave and eager and devoted young Mrs. Ditmars is in co-operating with her husband, whose work she understands so thoroughly, appeared quite strikingly when later in the evening I watched the cobra, the deadliest of snakes, give an exhibition of himself on the screen. The cobra, the lethal fangs of which cause more than twenty thousand deaths in India every year, lay in peaceful coils in the sand. Very slowly the snake was roused into a state of alarm. At first there was just a slight raise of the diamond-shaped head, then as the fear of the monster grew greater he stood erect in less than a second, the hideous strangely marked hood distended ominously, there was a momentary swaying of the lithe body and the next instant the enraged serpent hurled himself forward with the vehemence and precision of a suddenly released steel spring. One almost feared the monster might have jumped off the screen into the audience. It was then I learned that the venomous monster had thus hurled itself in the direction of Mrs. Ditmars, who had been working the camera when this picture was being taken. The cobra fell within a foot of the young woman's shoes and only the hastiest of retreats saved her from the bite of the deadly reptile.

There are specimens of the curator's work now being shown on the screen; the results of an odd negative or two which he would now and then sell to Pathe. He only sold negatives, however, that he could spare from his course without in the least impairing the full treatment and the orderly sequence of his subjects. Two of the pictures that came from this new masterhand showed insects that mimic leaves and insects that sing. They give you an idea of the professor's general workmanship and they reveal a glimpse of that observant love of animated nature without which this great achievement of a new kinematographic course in the science of zoology could never have been wrought.

Professor Ditmars plays as he works, which is always the mark of genius or of a very near approach to it.

"It was some time," he said, "before I could get these pictures showing how the insect sings. I took the katydid because he is the most curious. I could get them to sing all I wanted in the dark, but the moment the light was turned on there was silence. I gathered up a goodly chorus of the katydids, thirty or more, and went into the woods at night. The moment I turned on the light they shut up. I then trained my light on just one of them, leaving the others in darkness. Soon the chorus was in full swing and the fellow in the light right in front of my camera felt bewildered for a moment, but when he had listened to the other katydids for a minute or two he could not resist the temptation to sing with them, light or no light, and thus I caught him."

Professor Ditmars believes in introducing the element of humor into the educational pictures dealing with animals and he surely knows how to introduce it. He showed me the almost invisible world around us, the wolf spider with a body scarcely as large as a pea, an egg not larger than the size of a pinhead and the little baby spiders which in real life are just a lot of tiny moving specks. On the screen magnified from ten to twenty

